Mr. Sutcliffe: I have been asked to reply.

The Department of Trade and Industry does not collect or hold figures on the number of seized illegal fireworks.

Various agencies have powers to seize illegal fireworks: Customs—illegally imported fireworks; Health and Safety Executive—illegally stored fireworks; Trading Standards—fireworks that do not comply with the regulations. However figures for these seizures are not collected centrally. My hon. Friend may wish to contact these agencies.

Identity Cards

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the impact of the proposed identity card scheme on (a) money laundering and (b) organised crime; and if he will make a statement. [26625]

Andy Burnham: The identity cards programme is working with representatives from law enforcement agencies and Her Majesty's Revenue & Customs to fully map the impact of the proposed identity cards scheme on efforts to defeat money laundering and organised crime. This work has contributed to the development of the identity cards benefits cases, an overview of which was published on 27 June 2005.

False identities and false identity documents are standard 'tools of the trade' for organised criminal organisations. The work done with law enforcement agencies and Her Majesty's Revenue & Customs has confirmed that the identity card scheme can improve the intelligence picture available to the law enforcement agencies by providing fast, reliable access to identity and audit log data on intelligence targets and that greater certainty in establishing the identity of individuals involved in large cash transactions may have an additional deterrent effect in terms of money laundering and assist in investigations.

Mr. Khan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received on the arrangements for identity cardholders to register a change of address; and if he will make a statement. [27479]

Andy Burnham: The Identity Cards Programme Team has received a total of four letters from members of the public which mentioned updating address details on the National Identity Register. These letters were received between December 2004 and October 2005. These letters asked for clarification on the process for updating addresses on the Register and inquired whether there would be a charge for amending their record in this way.

It is intended that updates of addresses will be both easy and secure. There will be a variety of methods to update addresses on the National Identity Register. This could include over the internet, by telephone or in writing but in each case, in order to protect individuals from bogus attempts to change their address details, there would need to be a validation of identity. The Identity Cards Programme is currently investigating the most secure method of conducting such "remotely conducted" transactions, including the use of new methods involving one-time passwords, which would provide much greater assurance than traditional methods.

Illegal Immigrants (HIV)

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of individuals with HIV who have stayed illegally in the UK for longer than 12 months. [32074]

Mr. McNulty: Although it is impossible to determine accurately how many people are in the UK illegally the Home Office has published a report which included an estimate of the size of the illegal migrant population in the UK in 2001. A copy of the RDS On-line report 29/05 Sizing the unauthorised (illegal) migrant population in the United Kingdom in 2001 can be found at:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/notes/june_summaries.html#rdsolr2905.

This estimate does not separately identify those who have stayed illegally in the UK for longer than 12 months, and there is no evidence on which an estimate of the proportion of such people who are HIV positive could be based.

Immigration and Nationality Directorate

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of letters the Immigration and Nationality Directorate received in 2004–05 from the legal representatives of applicants for leave to remain received (a) an acknowledgement and (b) a response; what the average time for response was; and if he will make a statement. [31408]

Mr. McNulty: The Immigration and Nationality Directorate does not keep separate statistics on correspondence received from legal representatives.

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of replies to letters from hon. Members to the immigration and nationality directorate were sent within 20 days of receipt of the letter in the last 12 months for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [30076]

Mr. McNulty: In 2004, 34 per cent. of letters from Members on immigration and nationality (IND)-related matters were answered within 20 days. The year to date figure for 2005 is currently around 50 per cent., though for the last two months (August and September) it has exceeded 70 per cent. This improvement has been made against a backdrop of huge increases in correspondence volumes: 24,700 letters from Members in 2003; 35,800 in 2004; and 30,600 in 2005 up to the end of September (and so likely to exceed 40,000 by December).

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average length of time was in the last 12 months for a reply to be sent to an hon. Member by the immigration and nationality directorate from date of receipt of the letter; and if he will make a statement. [30077]

Mr. McNulty: Our published target is to answer 95 per cent. of letters from Members on immigration and nationality (IND)-related matters within 20 working days. The average time taken in 2004–05 was 32 days.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) (i) letters and (ii) emails were sent and (b) phone calls were made by each hon. Member and their staff to (A) the Immigration and Nationality Directorate and (B) the Minister for Immigration in the period 6 May to 31 October, ranked in descending order of total number of representations made; how many received a substantive reply in each case; and if he will make a statement. [30271]

Mr. McNulty: The available information is contained in the table which I have placed in the Library. The total number of telephone calls during this period was 18,963. A breakdown of these calls by individual Member is not available because it is not possible for the call handling equipment to identify from which Member's office a call is being made.

We are constantly striving to improve the service the Immigration and Nationality Directorate (IND) provides to Members. During October I held a series of three meetings with newly-elected Members and those who write most often on IND-related matters. These meetings were intended as an opportunity for Members to tell me how IND needs to improve its communications with them. I shall shortly be writing to all Members setting out how we intend moving forward on the areas for improvement which the meetings identified.

International Arrest Warrants

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) whether his Department is considering proposals to amend guidelines to the police on international arrest warrants; [31402]

(2) whether his Department is considering proposals to amend legislation on international arrest warrants. [31404]

Andy Burnham: The Government are currently considering a range of issues relating to the issuing of arrest warrants in international cases but has not yet concluded what changes, if any, are required.

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what representations his Department has received from the (a) Israeli Government and (b) United States Administration concerning amendments to legislation on international arrest warrants; [31403]

(2) what meetings (a) he and (b) his Department (i) has had since 11 September and (ii) is planning to have with representatives of the Israeli (A) Ministry of Law, (B) State Attorney Office and (C) Foreign Ministry regarding the arrest warrant for General Almog. [31405]

Andy Burnham: I refer my hon. Friend to my previous answer of 24 November 2005. Since the meeting referred to in that answer, Home Office officials have participated in one further meeting, with Israeli officials. The detail of that meeting is confidential. No further meetings are scheduled.

Home Office officials have had no direct contact with the United States Administration concerning amendments to legislation regarding international arrest warrants.

IRIS Project

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the evaluation of the project IRIS operational pilot. [32151]

Mr. McNulty: The evaluation of the Project IRIS operational pilot will be commercially sensitive but I will report the key findings to the House when appropriate.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the timetable is for the rollout of IRIS recognition in UK locations. [32152]

Mr. McNulty: Completion of the IRIS rollout is planned for June 2006.

Leave to Remain

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff at the Immigration and Nationality Office in Sheffield are assigned to processing applications for leave to remain under the provisions of the European Community Association Agreement. [30940]

Mr. McNulty: 39 members of staff at the Immigration and Nationality Office in Sheffield are assigned to processing such applications.

Managed Migration Routes

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which managed migration routes are being reviewed; if he will list countries which are on hold as a result of the review; and when he expects the review to be completed. [28673]

Mr. McNulty: My right hon. Friend, the Prime Minister announced a review of all managed migration routes on 27 April 2004 in his speech to the Confederation of British Industry on migration. No routes from specific countries are on hold as a result of this review. The review culminated in the five year strategy on asylum and immigration "Controlling our Borders: Making Migration Work for Britain" which was published on 7 February 2005. Our consultation on the subsequent document on the proposed points-based system for managed migration, "Selective admission: making migration work for Britain", closed on 7 November 2005 and the Government expects to publish its response in the new year.

Mobile Telephones (Child Safety)

Judy Mallaber: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made with the mobile phone industry towards protecting children from undesirable contact and unwanted contacts online by using blocking and filtering technology, since the written answer of 10 January 2005, Official Report, column 316W. [21734]

Paul Goggins: Further to my answer of 10 January 2005, Official Report, column 316W, I am able to report that following on from the self-regulatory code of practice on new forms of content, the UK mobile phone providers have appointed an independent classification body to develop the framework for classification of content available, and to investigate complaints about providers' classification decisions. The task of classification has been taken on by the Independent Mobile Classification Body, and in February 2005 a classification framework against which content providers will self-classify was completed.

Today, mobile devices are increasingly available with enhanced features, including colour screens, picture messaging, video cameras and internet browsers and can be used to access a growing variety of content. In anticipation of these products being widely adopted by consumers, including consumers under the age of 18, the mobile operators are putting in place measures that will allow parents and carers to have access to the information with which they can show their children how to use new mobile devices responsibly and the power to influence the type of content they can access.

For content that is offered on the internet, and not classified in accordance with the independent classification framework, the mobile operators continue to offer parents and carers the opportunity to apply a filter to the mobile operator's internet access service so that the internet content thus accessible is restricted. The filter will be set at a level that is intended to filter out content approximately equivalent to commercial content with a classification of 18.

Passports

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of passport photographs have been rejected as being insufficiently clear by the UK Passport Service since 1 October. [19410]

Andy Burnham: The proportion of photographs being rejected because of the photograph not being sufficiently clear is 2.6 per cent. as proportion of total applications for the period 3 October 2005 to 20 November 2005. The total number of applications that have had photograph rejections for all reasons is 12.7 per cent. in the same period.

Photograph reject rates are however showing a decline as the photo booth industry upgrades their booths and the public understand the new standards.

The UKPS is revising the guidance in the application pack and on its website and continuing to work with both the industry and their Partners such as Post Office Ltd to ensure that inconvenience to customers is kept to a minimum.

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what estimate he has made of the costs of the introduction of the high street network of offices for conducting interviews for all first-time adult applicants for passports in (a) 2005–06 and (b) 2006–07; [24472]

(2) what estimate he has made of the costs in (a) 2005–06 and (b) 2006–07 of introducing biometric passports. [24473]

Andy Burnham: The UK Passport Service will begin issuing biometric passports in 2005–06. As stated in the Corporate and Business Plans, the average unit cost for the production of passports will rise from £42.36 in 2005–06 to £57.93 in 2006–07 to cater for a range of improvement initiatives, among which is the introduction of biometrics and the introduction of offices for conducting interviews.

Although a contract for this work has been signed, the UK Passport Service is unable to release detailed costs at this time as it may prejudice our negotiating position for future procurement to incorporate the second biometric.

The UK Passport Service has not yet completed the procurement process for the introduction of the high street network of offices for conducting interviews for all first-time adult applicants for passports. It is therefore unable to release details on costs at this time as it could prejudice the contract negotiations.

Police Reform Act (Schedule 4)

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been (a) required not to consume alcohol in a designated public place and (b) forced to surrender any alcohol or container for alcohol by (i) community support officers and (ii) police officers under paragraph 5 of schedule 4 to the Police Reform Act 2002 in each of the last four years, broken down by police authority. [29361]

Paul Goggins: Information from the Home Office Court Proceedings database on the number of defendants prosecuted for contravening a community support officers requirement to surrender liquor and not to consumer liquor, by police force area, is shown in the table.

Court statistics for 2005 will be available in autumn 2006. Similar information is not available in respect of police officers.

In addition to the aforementioned, information was collected on alcohol confiscations undertaken during the nationwide 2004 summer Alcohol Misuse Enforcement Campaign (AMEC). The campaign started at the beginning of July 2004 and ended at the end of August 2004 and the results were published in a Lessons Learned document. This showed that in total the police confiscated alcohol from 9,677 people. Two-thirds of these (66 per cent.) confiscations were from alcohol exclusion zones or designated areas, and one-third (34 per cent.) were from youths. During a similar shorter two-week Christmas 2004/new year 2005 AMEC the police confiscated alcohol from 1,560 youths and 1,290 adults in a designated area. The following number of Designated Pubic Places Orders have been introduced: three in 2001; 69 in 2002; 78 in 2003; 92 in 2004; 59 so far in 2005.

Terrorist Suspects

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made in negotiations with (a) Algeria, (b) Egypt, (c) Tunisia, (d) Morocco, (e) Libya, (f) Pakistan, (g) Sri Lanka and (h) India, regarding deportation and exclusion powers relating to those suspected of terrorism. [31046]

Mr. McNulty: We have signed Memoranda of Understanding with Jordan and with Libya regulating the provision of assurances in respect of people who are being deported.

We have said that we are in negotiations with the governments of Algeria and the Lebanon. Those negotiations are continuing, and we hope to conclude them shortly.

It would be premature to comment on the state of any other negotiations or to identify the country or countries involved.

The power to exclude relates solely to cases where the person concerned is outside the United Kingdom. It is a unilateral decision, and we have not had any negotiations with other countries regarding the use of this power.

Uzbekistan

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures (a) have been and (b) will be taken to ensure Uzbek officials banned from travelling to the European Union do not enter the United Kingdom. [30870]

Mr. McNulty: A Statutory Instrument incorporating the recent European Union (EU) Common Position on

Uzbekistan is currently being prepared and will be laid before Parliament without delay. This amending Order will enable all those identified in designated EU and UN instruments as subject to restrictive travel measures to be excluded from the UK. Until travel bans are designated by Order, provision exists in the Immigration Rules for leave to be refused or cancelled on non-conducive grounds.

Details of those senior Uzbek officials subject to restrictive travel measures are being placed on appropriate databases which are available to UK immigration officials at posts overseas and ports of entry.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Benefit Expenditure

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much was spent on (a) jobseeker's allowance, (b) incapacity benefit and (c) the administration of each in (i) 1997 and (ii) the most recent year for which information is available; and how many recipients of each benefit there were at 1 January in each year. [31238]

Mr. Plaskitt [holding answer 30 November 2005]: The information regarding the amount spent on jobseeker's allowance and incapacity benefit is in the table.

Information regarding the administration cost of jobseeker's allowance and incapacity benefit is not currently available in the format requested. In accordance with the requirements of Resource Accounting and Budgeting the Department now accounts for its administration and benefit expenditure by Strategic Objective, as set out in its public service agreements (PSA) and by individual Requests for Resources (RfR's), as set out in the Departmental Estimates and Accounts. Information on administrative expenditure by strategic objective is available in the Departmental Report for 2005 (Cm 6539), which is available in the Library.

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when all Child Support Agency cases will be transferred to the new maintenance scheme. [27897]

Mr. Plaskitt: The Child Support Agency's Chief Executive, Stephen Geraghty, is currently undertaking a root and branch review of the agency. He will report to Ministers and we will make announcements shortly.

Mr. Plaskitt: The information is not available at constituency level.

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many uncleared Child Support Agency cases are awaiting processing in West Lancashire. [27833]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information is not available at constituency level.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the proportion of time staff at the Child Support Agency spent assessing levels of maintenance compared to enforcement and compliance activity in (a) 1988 and (b) the latest period for which figures are available. [30000]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty to Mr. Laws, dated 30 November 2005:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what estimate he has made of the proportion of time staff at the Child Support Agency spent assessing levels of maintenance compared to enforcement and compliance activity in (a) 1988 and (b) the latest period for which figures are available.

The Agency does not collect information concerning the amount of time spent on assessing levels of maintenance compared with time spent on enforcement and compliance activities.

However, the Agency does collect information on the number of staff working on assessing levels of maintenance compared with enforcement & compliance activities. In October 2005, of the staff working in these areas, 56% were involved in activities that contributed to assessing levels of maintenance, and 44% in activities involving enforcement and compliance.

A comparison cannot be made back to 1988, as the Agency was not in existence at that time.

I hope you find this information useful.

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the reasons are for the extension of the contract with EDS until 2010. [30022]

Mr. Timms: The realigned contract between EDS and the Department for Work and Pensions (DWP) consolidates the contractual arrangements with EDS which the Department inherited from the Department of Social Security and Employment Service of the Department for Education and Employment, with a single end date of 2010.

The realigned contract will radically simplify both parties' administration costs and deliver efficiencies and cost savings. On average, over the next five years, the Department will be spending around £520 million a year on services delivered by EDS, compared to more than £700 million a year spent since the DWP was created. EDS prices will be regularly benchmarked so that the Department continues to receive competitive rates and value for money.

The contract also allows for the Department's entire IT infrastructure to be upgraded and will provide access to modernised IT which is easier to maintain and update than bespoke services.

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many cases of (a) harassment, (b) bullying and (c) discrimination have been reported to the Child Support Agency in each of the last five years. [30027]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Mr. Stephen Geraghty. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 30 November 2005:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency, the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many cases of (a) harassment (b) bullying and (c) discrimination have been reported to the Child Support Agency in each of the last five years.

The numbers of harassment, bullying and discrimination cases formally reported to the Agency in the last five years are as follows:

	Number
2002–03	32
2004–05	22

The nature of the complaints does not allow separation of the data into the constituent elements of harassment, bullying and discrimination.

I hope you find this response helpful.

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many staff working for the Child Support Agency in each year since 2001 have been working for the agency for (a) more than five years, (b) more than two years, (c) more than a year and (d) less than a year. [30029]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Stephen Geraghty. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 30 November 2005:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency, the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

The table below provides the figures requested:

	Less than 1 year	More than 1 year	More than 2 years	More than 5 years
April 2000-March 2001	1,342	7,845	6,753	4,742

April 2004-March 2005	275	9,475	8,789	5,839

Note:

I hope you find this response helpful.

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what factors he took into account when setting the case compliance target for the Child Support Agency new scheme for 2004–05 and 2005–06; [30594]

(2) what factors he took into account when setting the accuracy target for the Child Support Agency new scheme for 2004–05 and 2005–06. [30595]

Mr. Plaskitt: The Child Support Agency's targets for 2004–05 were set in the light of available information about performance during the first year of the new scheme. For 2005–06 the previous year's targets were rolled forward pending the arrival of the agency's new chief executive and his conduct of a root and branch review of the delivery of the child support service.

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in the Gravesend constituency have received the correct level of payments from the Child Support Agency since its reorganisation in 2003; and what proportion of eligible Gravesend residents this represents. [19806]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information is not available at constituency level.

Departmental Targets

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions why a baseline year in the future has been used for the purposes of measuring performance against 2004 public service agreement target 10. [30278]

Mr. Plaskitt: The PSA 10 target we are currently working towards was set in SR2002. As 2005–06 marks the end of the existing target cycle, we have taken the opportunity to develop and improve the measurement system used to estimate fraud and error in income support and jobseeker's allowance. This has led to a methodology for estimating fraud and error significantly different from that used before and it was therefore appropriate to use a new baseline figure for 2005–06, which will be measured using this new methodology. This was announced in SR2004.

This has been done in consultation with the National Audit Office and in such a way as to estimate the impact that the changes will have on the measure.

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what data source he will use for the purposes of measuring performance against 2004 public service agreement target 6. [30287]

Mr. Timms: DWP National Statistics from the Work and Pensions Longitudinal Study (WPLS) will be used to measure PSA target 6.

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether the data required to measure 2004 public service agreement target 7 are published. [30293]

Mr. Timms: The Department for Work and Pensions (DWP) is on track to meet this public service agreement (PSA) target. PSA target 7 consists of two separate measures: the number of individuals regularly receiving a pension forecast and the number of successful pension traces undertaken. Further details of how the target is measured and reported are provided in DWP's SR2004 PSA technical note.

Data on both measures will be reported in the 2005 DWP autumn performance report due to be published in December 2005. Subsequent progress reports will also be published in the spring departmental reports and the Pension Service annual reports and accounts. These reports are available to members of the public after they have been presented to the House.

We are committed to ensuring that the data used in monitoring and reporting on our PSA targets is robust and reliable and this target together with its measurement and reporting have all been agreed with Her Majesty's Treasury.

Departmental Websites

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what websites come under his Department's responsibility; and what the (a) cost and (b) number of visitors to those sites was in the last year for which figures are available. [16024]

Mr. Timms: The following table provides a list of departmental sites. Costs have been provided where possible. The table also includes number of visitors to those sites in the financial year 2004–05.

Notes:

1. Production, management and maintenance of DWP websites are carried out by the Department's in-house e-communications team. It is not possible to quantify internal costs for each site but contracted and quantifiable costs have been included where possible.
2. Departmental sites are hosted by our IT contractors. In most cases it is not possible to separate these costs from contracted costs.
3. The complex interactive nature of the services that Jobcentre Plus and Worktrain websites provide does allow for web hosting and other costs to be accounted separately. These have been included in the table.

Disability Discrimination Act

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what publicity and advice his Department is making available to small businesses in the 2005–06 financial year on compliance with their service provider obligations under the Disability Discrimination Act 1995. [23053]

Mrs. McGuire: Between December 2005 and May 2006 the Department will carry out the next phase of its on-going publicity campaign, aimed at informing small businesses of their obligations under the DDA.

The campaign will focus in turn on each region of the UK. It will be based on partnership working with both national trade bodies, and national and regional business organisations who cover small businesses, and will aim to remind them of the need to consider making the 'reasonable adjustments' appropriate to their business, both as service providers and as employers.

This activity will be supported with regional press and radio, and national on-line, advertising to alert small businesses to the need for action and to promote the campaign website where they will find practical information and guidance. The website is currently in development and will go live on 1 December.

Habitual Residence Test

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will revise the habitual residence test to take into account the length of time claimants paid tax in the UK before moving abroad. [30711]

Mr. Plaskitt: The habitual residence test is working well preventing access to income-related benefits, such as income-based jobseeker's allowance and income support, ensuring that they are only paid to people with reasonable ties to the United Kingdom and who intend to settle here. Someone, with a right to reside in the UK, will be more likely to pass the habitual residence test if they have previously lived and worked in the UK and have returned to resume their residence here.

Someone who has paid sufficient national insurance contributions to satisfy the qualifying conditions for contributory benefits will not be subject to the habitual residence test.

Health and Safety Executive (Training Providers)

Ms Angela C. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many (a) improvement and (b) prohibition notices the Health and Safety Executive has issued in the last five years to (i) employers and (ii) learning providers, regarding the supervision of Learning and Skills Council learners and participants on the new deal scheme. [28902]

Mrs. McGuire: I regret this information could be provided only at disproportionate cost. HSE's data recording systems do not record whether the recipient of an improvement and prohibition notice was an employer or learning provider under a Learning and Skills Council or new deal scheme.

Ms Angela C. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many inspections the Health and Safety Executive has conducted in the last five years of the arrangements made by training providers for the health and safety of learners and new deal participants contracted to (a) his Department and (b) the Learning and Skills Council; and what other means are being used by the Government to verify the effectiveness of these health and safety arrangements. [28903]

Mrs. McGuire: I regret that information on how many HSE inspections involve training providers under Learning and Skills Council or new deal schemes could be provided only at disproportionate cost. HSE's data recording systems do not require inspectors to state whether an employer whose premises they have inspected is a provider under these schemes.

Since 1 April 2005 the Learning and Skills Council has been engaged in a successful partnership arrangement with HSE, the aim of helping the Council meet its targets for reducing injuries and ill-health among learners. The work programme will examine, among other things, how learners are supervised and the competence of those assessing work experience providers.

Housing Benefit

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what the standard weekly rate of earnings disregard for housing benefit is; how often this has been uprated since its introduction; and what the earnings disregard would be if the initial rate of the disregard were uprated in line with inflation from the year in which it was introduced; [28782]

(2) what representations he has received regarding an uprating of the earnings disregard for housing benefit for single parents and disabled people; and if he will make a statement. [28783]

Mr. Plaskitt: We have not had any representations about issues relating to earnings disregards in housing benefit for single parents or the disabled.

Details of the information requested about earnings disregards in housing benefit are in the table.

Housing benefit earnings disregards at introduction, currently and uprated by inflation since introduction

	Year introduced	Weekly rate when introduced	Current weekly rate	Weekly rate if uprated with inflation[1]
Single Person	1988	5.00	5.00	8.35
Couple	1988	10.00	10.00	16.75
Higher Rate[2]	1988	15.00	[2]20.00	25.10
Lone Parents[3]	1990	25.00	25.00	38.00

[1] In the final column the earnings disregards have been uprated using the retail price index (RPI) minus housing costs in the preceding September. Figures are rounded to the nearest 5p.
[2] The higher rate of disregard, which applies to carers, people with disabilities, part-time fire-fighters, lifeboat-men, auxiliary coastguards, and members of any territorial or reserve force, was increased from £15 to £20 in 2001.
[3] The weekly rate for lone parents has not increased since it was introduced in 1990. However, lone parents were entitled to the higher rate of £15 before 1990.
Note:
The standard disregard for singles and couples has not been increased since being introduced in 1988.

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to simplify the housing benefit non-dependent deduction regime. [29996]

Mr. Plaskitt: We have no current plans to reform housing benefit deductions for non-dependants.

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will take steps to improve the (a) transparency and (b) consistency of the method used to determine the local reference rent restriction on housing benefit for tenants in the private rented sector. [29997]

Mr. Plaskitt: The local reference rent is determined by independent rent officers, who use evidence of the rents that are actually charged in the private rented sector. The rent officer uses only information on rents paid by tenants not in receipt of housing benefit, to determine the local reference rent for each locality. The determination is based on the mid-point between the highest and lowest rents, which are not exceptionally high or exceptionally low, for the appropriate sizes of property within the locality. This methodology is used consistently by all rent officers.

An individual can ask for a pre-tenancy determination, through their local authority, to find out what the local reference rent would be prior to taking up a tenancy.

We have no immediate plans to change the way local reference rents are determined or applied.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the difference between the average amount of housing benefit awarded and the average costs of rent in (a) Huddersfield and (b) the UK. [30831]

Mr. Plaskitt: Information is not available for the UK or by parliamentary constituency. Information for Great Britain and Kirklees metropolitan council is in the table.

Weekly average housing benefit awarded, average eligible rent[1] and average contractual rent, by tenancy

	Great Britain	Kirklees MBC
Social sector
Average HB awarded	58.70	50.11
Average eligible rent	62.87	53.15
Private rented sector
Average contractual rent	108.07	80.70

[1] For tenants in the social rented sector it is assumed that the eligible rent (the maximum amount of rent eligible for housing benefit) is equal to contractual rent because the maximum housing benefit entitlement for these tenants is typically equal to their rent. The amount of HB awarded accounts for non dependant deductions and income brought to account so on average the amount of HB awarded will be less than the costs of rent.

Housing Benefit Management Information System Quarterly 100 per cent.case load stock-count May 2005, Private Rented Sector contractual rent figures are from Rent Officer data May 2005 and apply to deregulated cases only.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what guidance his Department issues to local authorities concerning war pensions when assessing eligibility for housing benefit. [29682]

Mr. Plaskitt: In recognition of the special nature of war disablement and war widow's and war widower's pensions, there is a statutory £10 per week disregard of these payments.

In addition, there is a total disregard of the whole of the supplementary pension awarded to "pre-1973" war widows (widows whose late husband's military service was completed before 31 March 1973 and who are not entitled to an attributable widow's pension from the Ministry of Defence).

There is also a full disregard of any mobility supplement and payment of war disablement pension based on a need for attendance.

For housing benefit and council tax benefit purposes, local authorities; who administer these benefits, have discretionary powers to operate a local scheme to disregard up to the full amount of a war disablement pension and war widow's/widower's pension not already subject to a statutory disregard. It is for each local authority to decide how much, if anything, it disregards.

From April 2004, local authorities operating a discretionary local scheme will receive a 0.2 per cent. addition to their annual subsidy, capped at 75 per cent. of the total benefit cost to the LA of the local scheme.

The rationale behind this change to the subsidy rules on discretionary local schemes is to provide recognition through the subsidy system of the existence of such schemes in local authorities. It does not relate to the extent of the disregard that the local authority applies, which remains a matter for individual local authorities.

Incapacity Benefit

Geraldine Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people are claiming incapacity benefit in each of the Lancashire constituencies. [30622]

Mrs. McGuire: The most recent available information is in the table.

Incapacity benefit and severe disablement allowance claimants in the Lancashire parliamentary constituencies; as at May 2005

Blackpool North and Fleetwood	6,600

Geraldine Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what (a) incentives and (b) support he is providing to encourage claimants of incapacity benefit back into work. [30623]

Margaret Hodge: Participants on our Pathways to Work pilots receive information and support on financial, employment and health issues, delivered by skilled personal advisers and health professionals, and can also receive help to return to work through the New Deal for Disabled People programme. People starting work through the pilots receive a return to work credit of £40 for up to 52 weeks if their wage is below £15,000 per annum.

The Pathways to Work pilots have already been successful in helping more than 17,000 people into work and early evaluation has shown an increase of eight percentage points in people leaving the incapacity benefit register within six months.

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people have been found guilty of fraudulently claiming incapacity benefit in (a) Jarrow constituency, (b) South Tyneside, (c) North East and (d) the United Kingdom in each year since 1997. [31706]

Mrs. McGuire: The information is not available.

Income Support

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many and what proportion of income support recipients were disabled in (a) May 1997 and (b) May 2005; and if he will make a statement. [25258]

Mr. Plaskitt: There is no single legal definition of disability. However, a disability premium is payable to entitled income support claimants, this information is provided in the following table.

Income support claimants with a disability premium: Great Britain

	All income support claimants	Income support claimants with a disability premium	Proportion (percentage)
May 1997	2,287,600	845,100	36.9
May 2005	2,140,500	1,115,700	52.1

Notes:

1. Caseloads are rounded to the nearest 100.
2. Percentages are given to one decimal place.
3. For comparison purposes, the 1997 figure excludes pensioners. Pensioners have not been able to claim income support since October 2003.
4. May 1997 figures have been derived by applying 5 per cent. proportions to 100 per cent. WPLS totals.

IT Projects

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many IT projects which cost over £1 million and were introduced since 1997 are in use in his Department. [26615]

Mr. Timms: Since its creation in June 2001 the Department for Work and Pensions has delivered a number of projects that involve IT and cost in excess of £1 million. The following lists those mission critical projects and programmes with a substantial IT content which have been delivered since June 2001.

Corporate Intranet

Customer Management System Phase 1

Digital Office Infrastructure

Managing Core Systems Estate

Modernising the Employment Service

Multi Function Server Replacement

Payment Modernisation Programme

Pensions Credit

Pensions Forecasting

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many of the IT projects costing over £1 million in use in his Department and introduced since 1997 have been scrutinised by the Public Accounts Committee; and if he will list them. [26620]

Mr. Timms: Since the creation of the Department for Work and Pensions in June 2001, the only IT project that has been the subject of a Public Accounts Committee scrutiny and report is the Benefit Payment Card project. The report was published on 12 November 2001.

Mental Health (Employment)

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps he is taking to tackle discrimination against people with mental health problems who are seeking work. [22067]

Mrs. McGuire: Many people with mental health conditions will be covered by the provisions in Part 2 of the Disability Discrimination Act which provide comprehensive protection against disability discrimination in recruitment and employment. These require an employer not to discriminate against disabled people for a reason related to their disability, but also to consider reasonable adjustments to job application or selection processes, and to premises, practices or procedures, if these would otherwise put a disabled person at a substantial disadvantage.

In addition, from 5 December 2005, under provisions in the Disability Discrimination Act 2005, the requirement that a mental illness must be "clinically well-recognised" before it can be regarded as an impairment under the DDA 1995 will be ended, making it easier for people with mental health illnesses to enforce their rights.

Around 40 per cent. of all people making a claim for incapacity benefits say that mental health is their main health barrier. Consequently, Pathways advisers have received specialist training in supporting customers with mental health conditions and our Condition Management programmes have a particular emphasis upon advising people on how to manage their condition in a work context.

New Deal (Accidents)

Ms Angela C. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many accidents have been recorded as occurring to new deal participants funded by his Department in each year since the new deal began, broken down by (a) fatal, (b) major and (c) those requiring over three days' absence. [28899]

Mrs. McGuire: I regret this information could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Reports sent to HSE under the Reporting of Injuries, Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations are not required to state whether an injured party was receiving training or experience under new deal schemes.

Obesity

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate the impact of obesity on the disability pensions budget in the next 10 years. [28241]

Mrs. McGuire: The information is not available from which to make such an estimate.

Poverty

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many pensioners were living in poverty in West Lancashire in each of the last 20 years for which figures are available. [27915]

Mr. Timms: The seventh annual Opportunity for all report, published recently, sets out the Government's strategy for tackling poverty and social exclusion and presents information on the indicators used to measure progress.

Information on the number of pensioners in low income is not available below regional level. The following table gives estimates for the number of pensioners in relative low income and absolute low income in the North West.

Notes:

1. Figures are provided using a three-year rolled average, as single-year estimates do not provide a robust guide to year on year changes. Hence, figures are not consistent with previously published single-year estimates and there may be differences in changes over time. Due to this, the absolute and relative figures in 1996–97 to 1998–99 will not necessarily match. In circumstances such as a change in trend, rolled-averages will show less variation than single year estimates.
2. The estimates use the same methodology as the Department for Work and Pensions publication 'Households Below Average Income' (HBAI). Income is net of income tax and council tax, and adjusted for household size and composition.
3. Numbers are rounded to the nearest 10,000.

Railways (Health and Safety)

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the (a) technical and financial contracts, (b) technical consultants used on a call-off basis and (c) financial consultants used on a call-off basis by (i) the Health and Safety Commission, (ii) the Health and Safety Executive relating to railway matters since 1 November 2003; what the nature of the assignment for each consultant was; and what the value of work done by each consultant was. [25701]

Mrs. McGuire: In addition to all the rail-related work commissioned by the Health and Safety Commission's (HSC) Health and Safety Executive (HSE) and undertaken by HSE's own internal Health and Safety Laboratory, since 1 November 2003, HSE has engaged the following external technical and financial consultants:

Name of consultant	Nature of the assignment	Value of the work (£000)
University of Newcastle	Comparison of the Hatfield and alternative UK rails using models to assess the effect of residual stress on crack growth	55,000
Bombardier	Storage of carriages at Adtranz, Crewe—Hatfield derailment	315
NRPB	Survey into the radiological impact of the normal transport of radioactive material by rail	22
Deloitte and Touche[1]	Evaluation of HSE's Control of Major Accident Hazards (COMAH) Gas, Offshore and Rail charging regimes[1]	[1]214
University College London	Analytical work in support of the HSC Working Group to examine risk to rail users from road vehicles obstructing the railways	7

[1] The rail element was a component of a larger HSE study.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment the Health and Safety Executive has made of the health and safety implications of recent rail incidents. [26071]

Derek Twigg: I have been asked to reply.

The Health and Safety Executive, the Government's regulator for rail safety, makes an assessment of all safety-related incidents to determine whether to take enforcement action and/or whether there are lessons to be learnt.

Smoking

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what research his Department has evaluated on the health and safety effects of environmental tobacco smoke on workers; what assessment he has made of the applicability of the guilty knowledge test under the Health and Safety at Work Act 1974; and if he will make a statement. [29753]

Mrs. McGuire: The Health and Safety Commission reached its view on the health and safety effects of second-hand smoke in the workplace by taking into account the report of the Department of Health's Scientific Committee on Tobacco and Health (SCOTH). In November 2004, SCOTH's updated report confirmed that second-hand smoke represents a substantial public health hazard.

The Health and Safety at Work etc Act 1974 does not provide specifically for a guilty knowledge test. While it does not ban smoking at work, it requires employers to have in place policies that manage and reduce the risks to their employees1 health to as low a level as reasonably practicable. Responsibility for deciding what this level should be rests with the employer.

PRIME MINISTER

Crown Jewels

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Prime Minister which of the (a) crowns and (b) tiaras worn by George V and Queen Mary at the Delhi Durbar in 1911 are in public ownership; and if he will make a statement. [29819]

The Prime Minister: The Imperial Crown of India worn by His Majesty King George V at the Delhi Durbar has since that occasion been on permanent public display as part of the Crown Jewels in the Jewel House of the Tower of London.

Festivals

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Prime Minister what measures his Office took to celebrate and promote the events of (a) Ramadan, (b) Diwali and (c) Chinese New Year in 2005. [31164]

The Prime Minister: My Office values and respects the diversity of its employees. Should they wish to do so, staff are supported in their desire to celebrate their traditions, including with colleagues within the Department. I also send out messages of goodwill to various communities on the occasion of their celebrations, copies of which are available on the Number 10 website.

First World War Veteran (State Funeral)

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Prime Minister if he will consider recommending the granting of a state funeral to the last person to die who served in the First World War; and if he will make a statement. [32294]

The Prime Minister: My hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under Secretary of State (Minister for Veterans) (Mr. Touhig), is currently considering an appropriate way to mark the service and sacrifices of those who served in the First World War, and an announcement will be made in due course.

Freedom of Information

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Prime Minister how many Freedom of Information applications his Office has received; how many have taken more than 20 days to process; and how many of these gave rise to complaints about the time taken. [31214]

The Prime Minister: For these purposes my Office forms part of the Cabinet Office. I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him on 28 November 2005, Official Report, columns 50–51W by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary for the Cabinet Office (Jim Murphy).

Iraq

Sir Menzies Campbell: To ask the Prime Minister when he plans to publish the paper he referred to in evidence to the Liaison Committee on 8 February setting out the way forward for the Iraqiisation of security (HC 318-i); and if he will make a statement. [28399]

The Prime Minister: The paper referred to during the evidence session was a United States report, produced by a team led by General Luck, a retired US General. It was an audit of the coalition's campaign plan in Iraq, in particular the training and development of the Iraqi Security Forces (ISF). During the evidence session with the Liaison Committee, I said that I hoped the paper would be published, but noted that it was still being considered by the US Government. Following this, the US Government decided not to publish this report. As this was a US report, this was a matter for the US Government to decide.

Labour Party Funds

Mike Penning: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list those consultants which have been in receipt of government funds that have donated funds to the Labour Party; and what the sums involved were in each case. [32368]

The Prime Minister: Information on party political donations is not held by the Government.

Race Equality Impact Assessments

Keith Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister how many Race Equality Impact Assessments his Office completed between (a) April 2004 and March 2005 and (b) April 2005 and November 2005; and how many assessments in each period resulted in a change of policy. [32833]

The Prime Minister: For these purposes my office forms part of the Cabinet Office. I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to him by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary for the Cabinet Office (Mr. Murphy) today.

Sick Leave

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Prime Minister how many of his Offices' employees who are within one year of the official retirement age are on extended sick leave. [32595]

The Prime Minister: For these purposes my Office forms part of the Cabinet Office. I have therefore asked my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary for the Cabinet Office (Mr. Murphy) to reply. A copy of the reply will be placed in the Library of the House.

Special Advisers

Lynne Jones: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make it Government policy for special advisers to give evidence to parliamentary committees if asked. [31505]

The Prime Minister: As I made clear in my evidence to the Liaison Committee on 22 November, decisions on officials, including special advisers, giving evidence to Select Committees are taken on a case by case basis in line with the guidance in "Departmental Evidence and Response to Select Committees". The guidance makes clear the presumption that Committees requests on attendance of named officials will be agreed to, but that the final decision on who is best able to represent the Minister rests with the Minister concerned. It remains the right of a Minister to suggest an alternative civil servant to that named by the Committee if he or she feels that this person is better placed to represent the Minister.

Terrorism Legislation

Grant Shapps: To ask the Prime Minister pursuant to the answer of 21 November 2005, Official Report, column 1662W, on terrorism legislation, what font size was assumed in making the calculation. [32584]

The Prime Minister: As I made clear in my previous answer, this is a publicly available document (ISBN: 0760064903).

NORTHERN IRELAND

Arson Attacks

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many arson attacks there were on schools in each education board in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [31975]

Angela E. Smith: The Education and Library Boards have advised that the number of arson attacks on controlled and maintained schools in the last five years are as follows:

Number

	2001–02	2002–03	2003–04	2004–05	2005–06[1]

North Eastern	2	2	2	1	3
South Eastern	[2]—	5	8	6	0
Southern	5	5	1	1	3
Totals	14	20	16	14	11

[1] To date.
[2] Not readily available.

The Boards do not hold information on arson attacks on voluntary grammar and grant maintained integrated schools.

Carers

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate he has made of the number of people in Northern Ireland providing unpaid care to people aged 65 years and over. [28851]

Angela E. Smith: The 2001 census showed that 185,066 people in Northern Ireland (11 per cent. of the population) were providing unpaid care. The census did not collect the age of people for whom the care was being provided.

CFCs

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many tonnes of chlorofluorocarbons have been converted into inert substances in Northern Ireland in each year from 2003. [31991]

Angela E. Smith: Until February 2004, individual district councils made their own contractual arrangements to recycle fridges and freezers to ensure that the ozone-depleting substances were recovered. Councils hold their own data for the tonnage of chlorofluorocarbons (CFCs) recovered until that point.

Since February 2004, the Department of the Environment has funded the recovery of fridges and freezers through two sequential contracts. Between 1 February 2004 and 31 October 2005, the contractor responsible for processing fridges and freezers on behalf of the Department recycled a total of 113,298 units, with a total approximated processed weight of 4,673.8 tonnes, which equates to a total weight of CFCs recovered of 13.8 tonnes.

Economy

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what he has done to promote the long-term economy of Northern Ireland. [32236]

Mr. Hanson: The Government and their social partners have produced an Economic Vision for Northern Ireland. Our clear objective is to make sure that Northern Ireland has the innovation, enterprise, skills and infrastructure to become one of the most competitive and productive UK and international regions. Key to economic success is to develop and grow the private sector to make it more in proportion to a reformed public sector characterised by quality of delivery, efficiency and fitness for purpose.

The Department of Finance and Personnel is now in the process of developing a Regional Economic Strategy which will set out the policy framework for delivering the Economic Vision.

Fireworks

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people were injured by fireworks in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement on the running of a safety advertising campaign for 2005. [21249]

Mr. Woodward: Information on the number of patients reporting to A and E departments and minor injuries units with injuries from fireworks, since 2000, over a four to five week period covering the end of October and start of November (Halloween) is detailed as follows.

	Total firework injuries
2001	136
2002	38

The Northern Ireland Office, in partnership with RoSPA, the Northern Ireland Home Accident Council and statutory bodies such as the Fire and Rescue Service, the Ambulance Service and the PSNI, has supported the promotion of firework safety publicity material for a number of years. The safety campaign for 2005 involved less publicity than previously, in particular there was no intensive advertising campaign. This was because there are effective controls on the sale and use of fireworks in NI and the significantly reduced accident statistics of recent years demonstrate that the message has got across to the public. An intensive advertising campaign was therefore not considered necessary.

Freelance Musicians

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the implications for the Ulster Orchestra of the Inland Revenue's policy that freelance musicians and singers engaged since 1998 are liable for Class 1 National Insurance contributions. [30340]

Mr. Hanson: The Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure and the Arts Council of Northern Ireland are monitoring discussions currently taking place between the Department for Culture, Media and Sport, Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs, the Arts Council of England, the Association of British Orchestras and the Musicians Union about the National Insurance liability on musicians' earnings. These discussions are still ongoing.

Human Rights Commission

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what allowance is provided to each member of the Human Rights Commission; and what additional expenses each is eligible for. [32095]

Mr. Hanson: The Chief Commissioner of the Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission receives an annual salary of £60,000. This is a full-time post. Commissioners are appointed to serve for one day per week for which an allowance is paid of £10,000 per year.

Commissioners are also eligible for additional travel and subsistence expenses when carrying out Commission business.

Income Support

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) males and (b) females aged (i) 16 to 24, (ii) 25 to 30, (iii) 30 to 39 and (iv) 40 years and over were on income support in each district in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [33084]

Mr. Hanson: The information requested is as follows.

Invest Northern Ireland

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the change has been in (a) salary, (b) expenses and (c) pension contributions of the top five earning employees of Invest Northern Ireland in the past three years. [31490]

Mr. Hanson: The top earning five employees in Invest Northern Ireland are the chief executive and the four managing directors. The changes in their salaries, pension contributions and expenses over the last three years are set out as follows.

Salary increases and bonus payments reflect the 2003 and 2004 pay settlements. Figures quoted are for the last three complete financial years, viz. 2002–03, 2003–04 and 2004–05

Managing directors (MD's) are paid on the NICS Grade 3 (Deputy Secretary) Scale. MD's are appointed on the minimum of the salary scale and annual increases and bonus payments mirror exactly the settlement for the NI Senior Civil Service. They are members of the Principal Civil Service Pension Scheme (NI) and employer's percentage contributions are fixed by the Department of Finance and Personnel.

All expenses in Invest NI are paid at the rates applicable in the NICS.

Inward Investment

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of what steps should be taken to attract foreign direct investment to Northern Ireland. [32121]

Mr. Hanson: Invest NI's marketing and sales resources are focused on those sectors and geographical markets most likely to generate projects to match the Northern Ireland business proposition and contribute to the development of an innovation-based economy.

The assessment that I have made of these steps is actual performance against agreed targets. To date Invest Northern Ireland has met all these targets. In fact, last year was Invest NI's most successful year for securing new Foreign Direct Investment.

Parking Charges

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on how many vehicles in pay and display car parks under the control of the Department for Regional Development in Northern Ireland an additional charge was made as a result of (a) non-payment and (b) under-payment of the appropriate parking charge in 2004. [32521]

Mr. Woodward: The chief executive of Road Service (Dr. Malcolm McKibbin) has been asked to write to the hon. Gentleman in response to this question.

Letter from Dr. Malcolm McKibbin to Mr. Gregory Campbell, dated 30 November 2005:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland a Parliamentary Question regarding how many vehicles in pay and display car parks under the control of the Department for Regional Development in Northern Ireland an additional charge was made as a result of either (a) non-payment and (b) under-payment of the appropriate parking charge in 2004.

I have been asked to reply as these issues fall within my responsibility as Chief Executive of Roads Service.

I should explain that in Roads Service's pay and display car parks, a fee is levied based on the length of time that the driver intends to park. If a vehicle fails to display evidence that a fee has been paid, an imposed Alternative Charge (£25) ticket is issued. However, if a fee has been paid, but is insufficient for the length of stay, an imposed Excess Charge (£20) ticket is issued.

I can advise that during 2004, Roads service issued 15,661 Alternative Charge tickets, and 5,470 Excess Charge tickets.

I hope this information is helpful.

Police

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many police recruits in Northern Ireland have dropped out of training in each of the last 10 years. [13937]

Mr. Woodward: I am advised that the number of police recruits that have dropped out of training in the last 10 years is as follows:

	Number
1996	1
1998	0
2000	0
2001	1
2002	8
2003	14
2004	17
2005 (as at 25 July 2005)	10
Total	56

I am also advised that the numbers undergoing training has expanded considerably under the Police Service of Northern Ireland, and that these statistics must be seen in that context.

Primary Schools

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) controlled and (b) maintained primary schools in Northern Ireland have closed in each of the last five years. [32129]

Angela E. Smith: There have been 12 controlled primary school closures and five maintained primary school closures in the past five years:

	Controlled primary schools	Maintained primary schools
2001–02	2	—
2002–03	2	2

In addition, 20 controlled primary schools have been amalgamated into nine new schools and 12 maintained primary schools have amalgamated into five new schools.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) controlled and (b) maintained primary schools in Northern Ireland are scheduled to close in each of the next three years. [32131]

Angela E. Smith: Approval has been given for three controlled primary school closures:

2005–06—2 schools

2006–07—1 school.

The Department has also approved the following amalgamations:

2007–08—6 maintained primary schools into 2 new schools

2008–09—4 maintained primary schools into 2 new schools and 11 controlled primary schools into 4 new schools.

Pupil Expulsions

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on what criteria decisions are taken to (a) suspend and (b) expel a pupil in a (i) controlled and (ii) maintained school in Northern Ireland. [32133]

Angela E. Smith: The Department of Education has not issued criteria to be used in the decision to suspend or expel a pupil from any school in Northern Ireland.

All schools are required by law to have a discipline policy, which sets out sanctions, including suspension or expulsion, which the school will impose for breaches of school discipline. It is for individual schools to draw up their own discipline policy, including the criteria they will use in decisions to suspend or expel a pupil from school.

Recycling

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many recycling points there are in each local authority in Northern Ireland; and how many there were in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [31972]

Angela E. Smith: EHS is not in a position to provide these details prior to 2005. Currently however there are 87 recycling points in Northern Ireland and the details for each district council area are set out in the following table.

School Crossing Patrols

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the schools in Northern Ireland that have school crossing patrols; and how many school crossing patrol staff each has. [33083]

Angela E. Smith: The number of school crossing patrols at individual schools in Northern Ireland is linked to safety considerations associated with road layout and the volume of traffic. Details have been placed in the Library.

Secondary Schools

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) controlled and (b) maintained secondary schools in Northern Ireland have closed in each of the last five years. [32130]

Angela E. Smith: There has been one controlled post-primary school closure (in 2002–03) and no maintained post-primary school closures in the past five years.

In addition, eight controlled post-primary schools have amalgamated into four schools and five maintained post-primary schools have amalgamated into two schools.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) controlled and (b) maintained secondary schools in Northern Ireland are scheduled to close in each of the next three years. [32132]

Angela E. Smith: One controlled post-primary school is scheduled to close with effect from 31 August 2006.

The Department has also received a development proposal for the amalgamation of two maintained schools, St. Malachy's High School, Antrim and St. Olcan's High School, Randalstown.

Speed Limits

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to introduce 20 miles per hour speed limits near schools in the Province; and if he will make a statement. [32103]

Mr. Woodward: The chief executive of Roads Service (Dr. Malcolm McKibbin) has been asked to write to the hon. Lady in response to this question.

Letter from Dr. Malcolm McKibbin to Mrs. Iris Robinson, dated 30 November 2005:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland a Parliamentary Question regarding what plans he has to introduce automatic 20 miles per hour speed limits at all schools in the Province.

I have been asked to reply as this issue falls within my responsibility as Chief Executive of Roads Service.

I can confirm that we have no current plans to introduce mandatory 20mph speed limits outside all schools in Northern Ireland.

Local speed limits are not considered effective when they are applied to meet conditions arising only for short periods of the day, since the restriction will be unnecessary for most of the time and may consequently not be respected when it is needed. In such circumstances specific signing and engineering measures are likely to be more effective. This is the case at schools. It is for this reason that Roads Service considers that the universal application of mandatory 20mph speed limits at all schools would not be appropriate.

We do, however, take safety at schools very seriously. Roads Service is currently rolling out a programme of safety enhancements to control driver behaviour and to manage traffic speed in the vicinity of schools, through the installation of signs, road markings and physical engineering features as part of the Department's Safer Routes to Schools Initiative (SRS).

This initiative aims to encourage parents, children and teachers to use sustainable methods of transport for their journey to and from school. The SRS programme also aims to improve the safety and health of pupils by reducing the impact of traffic around school facilities and encouraging greater physical activity among students.

This financial year there are currently 46 schools across Northern Ireland receiving SRS safety measures. It is Roads Service's objective to assist a minimum of 40 schools annually thereafter, subject to the availability of resources.

The former Minister for Regional Development, John Spellar MP, agreed in November 2004, that Roads Service should lead a review of speed management policy within Northern Ireland. This is being undertaken in co-operation with our partners in PSNI and DOE Road Safety Branch, and is mirroring a similar review being undertaken by the Department for Transport in Great Britain.

Although this is very much work in progress, further speed management issues around schools are being actively considered and I would be happy to update you when this work concludes.

I hope this information is helpful.

Teachers

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) primary and (b) secondary school teachers in Northern Ireland have taken early retirement in each of the last five years. [32128]

Angela E. Smith: The number of teachers in (a) primary and (b) secondary schools who have taken early retirement in each of the last five years is listed in the following table.

Number

	Primary schools	Secondary schools
2001–02	224	265
2002–03	236	297
2003–04	217	275

Terrorist Victims

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much funding has been made available since 2002 to support victims of terrorist violence in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement on his plans for such funding. [22996]

Angela E. Smith: Funding to support the victims of violence arising from the Troubles comes from a very wide variety of sources and the information requested by the hon. Gentleman is not readily available. However, from April 1998 to 31 March 2005 some £31 million was made available to groups and organisations whose work benefits victims. In addition my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, recently announced extra Government funding of up to £1.5 million for the Northern Ireland Memorial Fund.

With regard to the future the Interim Victims Commissioner for Northern Ireland, Mrs. Bertha McDougall, will be looking at how well the current funding arrangements in relation to services and grants paid to victims and survivors groups and individual victims and survivors are addressing need. We will consider the way ahead on these funding issues following Mrs. McDougall's report which we expect to be completed by the end of 2006.

Truancy

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the truancy levels were for each education and library board in Northern Ireland in the last year for which figures are available. [32227]

Angela E. Smith: The Department of Education does not collect the requested information. However, information on referrals of pupils to the Education Welfare Service is collected from each of the Education and Library Boards on an annual basis. Referrals can be for a variety of reasons, including truancy.

The following table shows the percentage of pupils referred to the Education Welfare Service in each Education and Library Board in Northern Ireland in 2003–04.

2003–04

Board Area	Percentage of pupils referred
Belfast	3.97
Western	2.42
North Eastern	2.34
South Eastern	2.68

Video Conferencing Units

Mark Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many video conferencing units are installed in (a) the Department and (b) each agency of the Department; what percentage of offices have these facilities in each case; and what plans there are to increase the number of such facilities. [18410]

Mr. Woodward: The following information refers to the Northern Ireland Office. It does not include figures for the 11 departments of the Northern Ireland Administration.

Northern Ireland Office core

Three video conferencing units in Belfast (shared facilities available for use by all offices).

Two video conferencing units in London (shared facilities available for use by all offices).

One video conferencing unit in British Embassy, Dublin

Agencies

35 video conferencing units in NIPS (all offices have access to facilities)

There are plans to add facilities for the Youth Justice Agency and Forensic Science.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Data Protection

John Hemming: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what guidance she has given the courts on the size of awards for compensation for breaches of the Data Protection Act 1998. [30684]

Ms Harman: The size of any award for compensation payable for damage arising from any failure to comply with the requirements of the Data Protection Act 1998 is a matter for assessment by the courts, taking into account all the relevant circumstances in individual cases.

Charles Hendry: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will take steps to ensure the Department's websites attain the W3C AAA standard of accessibility for people with visual and other disabilities; and if she will set a target date for this standard to be achieved by. [30970]

Ms Harman: My Department follows Government guidelines for UK Government websites. The guidelines currently require websites to meet Level A of the Web Content Accessibility Guidelines. They also identify a significant number of the Priority Two (AA) and Priority Three (AAA) checkpoints as best practice which Departments should aim to follow. Of the Priority Three checkpoints my Department is working to ensure that the following checkpoints in particular are adhered to by all DCA websites:

ensuring that there is sufficient contrast between foreground and background colours (P3 Checkpoint 2.2);

use of access-keys (P3 Checkpoint 9.5); the provision of a site map (P3 Checkpoint 13.3); the provision of skip navigation (P3 Checkpoint 13.6); the provision of search facilities (P3 Checkpoint 13.7);

the speech-enablement of your website (P3 Checkpoint 14.2); use of consistent presentation across all pages (P3 Checkpoint 14.3).

Human Rights Act

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what guidance she has issued on whether privately-run (a) healthcare facilities, (b) prisons, (c) care homes and (d) schools are covered by section 6 of the Human Rights Act 1998. [31641]

Ms Harman: Following the recommendation of the Joint Committee on Human Rights in its Seventh Report of Session 2003–04, the Government issued guidance to local authorities on the use of contractual conditions to ensure that services delivered on behalf of the local authority are provided in a way that takes account of the Human Rights Act 1998.

Legal Aid

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many (a) women and (b) men received legal aid in respect of care and custody proceedings in each of the last three years for which information is available. [31020]

Bridget Prentice: I will reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Substantive answer from Bridget Prentice to Andrew Turner:

The total number of certificates issued in care and custody proceedings, broken by down by gender in 2002–03, 2003–04 and 2004–05 is given as follows.

	Female	Male	Not recorded
2002–03	45,050	36,427	2,120
2003–04	44,335	35,399	2,159
2004–05	43,413	34,580	2,510

These figures are inclusive certificates granted to both children and adults.

Life Sentences

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many people who pleaded guilty to murder and received life sentences are appealing against the sentence. [32472]

Ms Harman: Information on people who pleaded guilty to murder and received life sentences now appealing against the sentence is not held centrally and could be produced only at disproportion cost.

Marked Registers

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will list the constituencies which have (a) all and (b) part of their marked registers from the 2005 general election missing; and if she will make a statement. [32655]

Ms Harman: The information is as follows:

(a) The only constituency in England and Wales where all of the marked register for the May 2005 general election appear to be missing is Woking.

(b) The Government are aware that reports have been made about missing pages from the marked registers of the following May 2005 general election constituencies:

National Security Appeals Panel

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many public hearings the National Security Appeals Panel has held since inception. [31366]

Ms Harman: The National Security Appeals Panel has heard three cases in public since its inception. A fourth case was heard in private but was retrospectively made public at the hearing stage.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what steps the National Security Appeals Panel has taken to publicise its functions. [31367]

Ms Harman: Since April 2005 the Information Tribunal website has included a section for the National Security Appeals Panel which includes copies of previous judgments, regulations and legislation.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the (a) staffing level and (b) cost of the National Security Appeals Panel has been in each calendar year since inception. [31368]

Ms Harman: The National Security Appeals Panel is included in the budget for the information tribunal and is not separately identified. Between inception and 2004 secretariat functions to the information tribunal were provided as part of the responsibilities of one member of staff in the information rights division. Staffing levels were increased in preparation for the coming into force of the Freedom of Information Act 2000. The information tribunal currently has three full time members of staff who are all based in Leicester.

The costs incurred by sittings of the National Security Appeals Panel can be broken down for each year as follows:

2002–03	3617.77
2003–04	3074.48
2005–06	9807.17

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many cases have been decided by the National Security Appeals Panel in each calendar year since its inception under (a) section 28 of the Data Protection Act 1998 and (b) section 60 of the Freedom of Information Act 2000; and if she will list the parties to each case in which all proceedings are complete. [31369]

Ms Harman: Under section 28 of the Data Protection Act 1998 there have been five cases in which all proceedings are complete. For each year the number of decisions and the parties in the cases are as follows:

2001—One case:

Norman Baker v. Secretary of State for the Home Department

2002—One case:

Mohammed El Fayed v. Secretary of State for the Home Department and Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs

2003—Three cases:

Phillip Hilton v. Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs.

Tony Gosling v. Secretary Of State for the Home Department

Peter Hitchens v. Secretary Of State for the Home Department

No decisions have yet been made by the panel under the Freedom of Information Act 2000.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs whether the judgements have been published in each case decided by the National Security Appeals Panel in each calendar year since its inception under (a) section 28 of the Data Protection Act 1998 and (b) section 60 of the Freedom of Information Act 2000. [31398]

Ms Harman: The five cases decided by the panel under the Data Protection Act 1998 where all proceedings are complete are published on the National Security Appeals Panel section of the information tribunal website.

There have been no decisions under section 60 of the Freedom of Information Act 2000.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Ethiopia

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the situation in Ethiopia. [32078]

Ian Pearson: We remain concerned about the internal situation in Ethiopia. The tragic events in Addis Ababa and other towns at the beginning of November, which resulted in deaths and injuries, have further deepened the political and social divisions in the community, as well as damaging Ethiopia's international reputation. The people of Ethiopia need reassurance of a peaceful, just and democratic future. To this end, in our capacity as presidency of the EU, we have called on the Ethiopian Government and opposition parties to undertake a series of measures aimed at ensuring a return to peaceful dialogue, and restoring confidence in the democracy building process.

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Ethiopian Government on the imprisonment of opposition politicians. [32079]

Ian Pearson: My noble Friend, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office Minister for Africa (Lord Triesman of Tottenham) summoned the Ethiopian Chargé d'Affaires on 1 November to register our concerns about the situation in Ethiopia, including the issue of detainees. On 6 November, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for International Development also raised the issue when he spoke to Prime Minister Meles. Also on 6 November, in our capacity as EU presidency, we issued a statement on the situation in Ethiopia, which included reference to our concerns regarding detainees. Our ambassador in Ethiopia has also raised our concerns with Prime Minister Meles, the Ethiopian Foreign Minister and other Government Ministers.

We continue to call for the immediate release of all political detainees, for those individuals not charged under due process to be released immediately, and for access to those detained for their families, legal counsel and representatives of the International Committee of the Red Cross or other appropriate representatives of the international community.

Gaza-Egyptian Border

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of progress in opening the Gaza-Egyptian border following disengagement. [32738]

Dr. Howells: The Gaza-Egypt border opened on 25 November. This is a significant step forward for the Palestinians. My right hon. Friend, the Foreign Secretary, made a statement on the day of the opening:

"Today is a day of great significance in the long search for peace in the Middle East. The deployment of General Pietro Pistolese and his team at Rafah will allow the border between Gaza and Egypt to be re-opened following Israel's withdrawal. This is the first time that the Palestinians have had control over one of their own borders. The re-opening of this border will have a real impact on the lives of Gazans: it will improve the economic prospects of the Palestinian people and allow them greater freedom of movement.

This EU mission demonstrates the importance the international community places on securing peace in the Middle East. I pay tribute to Jim Wolfensohn's remarkable work in helping the parties build on Israel's courageous disengagement. The efforts of Condoleezza Rice and Javier Solana in securing the deal have also been invaluable. EU Member States and the European Commission have worked rapidly to set up the mission. Egypt has offered vital support. I want to assure General Pistolese and his team of our continued support as they undertake this important EU contribution to a sustainable peace. The EU will continue to work in support of the other aspects of the agreement on movement and access and of Jim Wolfensohn's efforts."

Iran

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of Iran following its threat not to continue with the construction of the Iran to India gas pipeline as a result of India's recent vote at the International Atomic Energy Agency. [32267]

Dr. Howells: According to media reports, both Indian and Iranian officials have reiterated their commitment to existing agreements on this pipeline, and a routine meeting of the India/Iran working group on the project was held in late October. We have not made representations to the Iranian Government.

Iraq

Mr. Jim C[illegible]ngham: To ask the Secretary of State for Forei[illegible]mmonwealth Affairs how many of the deta[illegible]by multinational forces in Iraq are women; [illegible]ill make a statement. [32736]

Dr. Ho[illegible] There are no women currently in British military detention in Iraq. The United States Government have told us that they currently have approximately 11 females in detention in Iraq. The number varies with new detentions and the continuous process of review and release.

Middle East

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the role of economic initiatives in aiding the development of the roadmap for peace in the Middle East. [32739]

Dr. Howells: The UK fully supports the efforts of Quartet Special Envoy James Wolfensohn to ensure that maximum benefit is derived from Israel's withdrawal from Gaza and part of the West Bank. This should promote growing confidence and trust between the parties and should pave the way for renewed implementation of the Roadmap.

A series of UK-led events will take place in December. My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer (Gordon Brown), will host G7 Finance Ministers and European Finance Ministers meetings to discuss how donors can best support the work of James Wolfensohn. The UK will also host an investors' conference to discuss the role the private sector can play in reviving the Palestinian economy. In a separate event, key donors to the Palestinians will meet on 13 and 14 December to give their input to the Palestinian Three-Year Development Plan, to put the Palestinian economy on a sound footing and to pave the way for a Pledging Conference in the spring.

Nuclear Proliferation

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what research he has commissioned on the effect of the UK's nuclear weapons status on nuclear proliferation. [32345]

Dr. Howells: The UK Government have not commissioned research into this specific area.

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking (a) bilaterally and (b) multilaterally to ensure that progress is made on international agreement on non-proliferation. [32347]

Dr. Howells: We are disappointed that, it was not possible this year to reach a substantive outcome at the Non-Proliferation Treaty Review Conference or to include non-proliferation language at the UN World Summit. We remain committed to achieving progress and to revitalising the global disarmament and non-proliferation machinery. Multilaterally, we continue to take an active role in the Conference on Disarmament, the International Atomic Energy Agency, the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty Organisation and the Nuclear Suppliers' Group, as well as participating in the Proliferation Security Initiative. We were co-sponsors of United Nations Security Council Resolution 1540 and continue to further the aims of that resolution. During our presidency of the EU we have worked to implement the EU's Weapons of Mass Destruction (WMD) Strategy.

The UK has been working in smaller groups, for example as one of the EU3 in negotiations aimed at persuading Iran to forgo certain nuclear activities in light of its non-compliance with international obligations. We are closely involved with the US in closing down the AQ Khan network and continue to support Libya's dismantlement of its WMD programme. As a member of the G8 we have committed $750 million over a period of 10 years to the Global Partnership which seeks to address the threat posed by the Cold War legacy of WMD related materials. Counter-proliferation is on the agenda of numerous bilateral exchanges with a wide range of countries.

Shared Representation

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs in which countries the UK has shared representation; and what assessment he has made of the further potential for sharing representation. [32478]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: Wherever appropriate, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office shares office premises overseas with EU partners and, occasionally, with others. We are alert to opportunities to do so. We are already co-located with the following partners:

Germany—Almaty, Ashgabat, Dar es Salaam, Pyongyang, Quito, Reykjavik

France—Almaty, Ashgabat

Italy—Minsk

The Netherlands—Dar es Salaam, Chisinau

European Commission—Dar es Salaam.

Syria

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment the Government have made of compliance by Syria with United Nations Security Council Resolutions (a) 1559 and (b) 1595. [32737]

Dr. Howells: Syria completed the withdrawal of its troops from Lebanon on 26 April 2005, in compliance with United Nations Security Council Resolution (UNSCR) 1559. A United Nations (UN) verification team concluded that there are no Syrian military forces and is no visible or significant Syrian intelligence presence or activity in Lebanon, although the possibility remains of an ongoing influence of Syrian intelligence in Lebanon.

We are concerned by the reference in Special Envoy Larsen's report on 25 October 2005 of the illegal transfer of arms and people across the Syrian-Lebanese border. We urge Syria to refrain from interfering in Lebanese affairs and to work with Lebanon to ensure the full implementation of UNSCR 1559.

Syria's lack of substantive co-operation has hindered the UN International Independent Investigation Commission mandated by UNSCR 1595. As a result, the UN Security Council unanimously adopted UNSCR 1636, which requires Syria to improve its co-operation and allows for sanctions against those individuals accused by the ongoing investigation. We note the UN announcement on 25 November that agreement has been reached between Mr. Mehlis and the Syrian Government over the venue for the questioning of five Syrian interviewees. UNSCR 1636 requests Mr. Mehlis to report on progress to the UN Security Council by 15 December 2005.

Torture

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the impact of the use in England and Wales of intelligence obtained by torture upon (a) the United Kingdom's international standing and reputation and (b) the effectiveness of British foreign policy. [29109]

Mr. Straw: The Government, including the intelligence and security agencies, never uses torture for any purposes, including to obtain information. Nor would we instigate others to do so. Where we are helping other countries to develop their own counter-terrorism capability, we ensure that our training or other assistance promotes human rights compliance. Our rejection of the use of torture is well known by our liaison partners.

I am unaware of any adverse impact on the UK's international standing and reputation and the success of British foreign policy from this approach.

Uganda

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the international community regarding the implications of the issuing of warrants by the International Criminal Court for the arrest of the leaders of the Lords Resistance Army of Uganda. [33102]

Ian Pearson: We work closely with other members of the international community regarding the long-running conflict on Northern Uganda. Our dialogue includes discussion of the recent historic step by the International Criminal Court (ICC) to issue its first arrest warrants for five Lord's Resistance Army commanders. The UK is a strong supporter of the work of the ICC and together with our EU partners, we have called on all those involved to work to facilitate the arrest of the individuals subject to the warrants.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the impact of the issuing of warrants against leaders of the Lord's Resistance Army by the International Criminal Court on the policy of amnesty previously advanced by the Ugandan authorities. [33103]

Ian Pearson: The recent historic decision by the International Criminal Court (ICC) to issue its first arrest warrants for five Lord's Resistance Army (LRA) commanders is an important step towards ending impunity for the most horrific crimes committed in this brutal conflict. We are pressing governments in the region to take action against those subject to arrest warrants.

The Government of Uganda has assured us that their amnesty policy remains in place for all those LRA members not subject to ICC arrest warrants. There are various programmes in northern Uganda actively encouraging these LRA members to take advantage of the amnesty and rehabilitation and reintegration programmes.

United States (Prince of Wales's Visit)

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will place in the Library the guest list for the cocktail party held as part of the official visit of HRH the Prince of Wales at the New York museum of Modern Art; [31868]

(2) if he will place in the Library the guest list for the party hosted by the British ambassador at his residence in Washington DC, held as part of the official visit of HRH the Prince of Wales to the United States of America. [31869]

Mr. Douglas Alexander [holding answers 28 November 2005]: A copy of the guest lists will be placed in the Library of the House.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Avian Influenza

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to her written statement of 15 November 2005, Official Report, column 48WS, on avian influenza (epidemiology report), what species or sub-species the mesias from the quarantine facility in Essex were from; and whether that species or sub-species is indigenous to Taiwan. [30748]

Mr. Bradshaw: The species of mesia was "Leiothrix argentauris." This species is indigenous to Taiwan.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether the pooling of samples of different species and different origins delayed the determination of the source of the H5N1 avian flu virus detected from samples taken from dead birds in the quarantine facility in Essex. [30749]

Mr. Bradshaw: The pooling of samples for virus isolation does not cause any delays.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment her Department has made of the reasons for the presence of H5N1 infection in mesia birds from two cages separated by five other cages and for the absence of infection in the birds of other species in the intervening cages. [30973]

Mr. Bradshaw: The two cages housing the mesias were not separated by five other cages.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many Surinam caiques were sampled by her Department's staff from the quarantine facility in Essex in which the avian influenza virus H5N1 was isolated. [31065]

Mr. Bradshaw: One caique from Surinam was examined for the presence of avian influenza virus, including the H5N1 strain. No virus was detected.

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what assessment she made of the merits of requiring all sales of birds to be recorded before introducing the ban on sales at bird fairs; [31861]

(2) for what reasons she has prohibited the sale of birds at bird fairs. [31859]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 28 November 2005]: Following a veterinary risk assessment and discussions with stakeholders, a precautionary approach to gatherings which involve the sale of birds was taken as these increase the risk of dissemination of infection and present a high risk. This is because when ownership changes hands, birds will be spread over a wider area in comparison to gatherings where birds are merely exhibited and returned to the premises of origin. Therefore sales from exhibitions, shows, fairs or other gatherings are not allowed. Recording sales would not help to prevent the spread of avian influenza in the event of a disease outbreak.

We are able to licence gatherings if following a veterinary risk assessment, they can be classified as presenting a low risk of transmission of avian influenza.

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the dates on which inspectors visited the bird quarantine centre in Fambridge, Essex during (a) each of the last three years and (b) the quarantine period of the mesias which died in quarantine. [32875]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 28 November 2005]: The information is as follows.

(a) The premises were inspected by SVS as part of the annual licensing process in November 2002, December 2003, and on 20 December 2004. In addition the premises would have been visited by an LVI at least three times during all quarantine periods at the premises.

(b) An LVI visited the premises on 18 September, 29 September and 20 October. In addition a pre-quarantine visit was undertaken on 7 September 2005.

Chlorofluorocarbons

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) how much chlorofluorocarbon has been (a) recovered and (b) released into the environment from (i) refrigerators and (ii) other sources in the UK in each year since 1997; [30996]

(2) what data the Environment Agency collects on (a) chlorofluorocarbons (CFCs) recovery levels and (b) the quality of CFCs released; [31003]

(3) what the average chlorofluorocarbon recovery levels were in each year since 2000. [31002]

Mr. Bradshaw: The following information is available relating to recovery of chlorofluorocarbons (CFC) from all equipment:

427 tonnes in 2004.

It is not possible to calculate how much CFC has been lost in the UK since 1997, or the quality of any CFCs released, as the quantity of CFCs in use in various applications over this period is not known.

The average quantity of controlled substances recovered from the refrigerant and blowing agent that was subsequently destroyed in England and Wales for 2003 was approximately 236g per fridge. It is not possible to state what percentage of potential CFC available for recovery that the destroyed amount represents. One of the reasons for this is CFC loss during a product's service life and further loss that may occur in storage and transit.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many recycling operations are recovering chlorofluorocarbons. [30997]

Mr. Bradshaw: A number of facilities hold waste management licences for the treatment of waste refrigerators. Not all licensed facilities will be operational. Typically, there are a dozen specialist facilities recovering CFCs from domestic refrigerators.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many investigations the Environment Agency is carrying out into the (a) mishandling and (b) failure to recover chlorofluorocarbons. [31001]

Mr. Bradshaw: Licensed fridge treatment sites are regularly inspected by the Environment Agency. Operators of licensed facilities that do not comply with their licence conditions face enforcement action in line with the Environment Agency's Enforcement and Prosecution Policy. Over the past two years, the Environment Agency has successfully prosecuted several site operators. One prosecution in July 2004, resulted in a four-month prison sentence, others have resulted in substantial fines. The Environment Agency does not comment on investigations that are currently on-going.

Cuckmere Valley

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much has been spent to date by the Environment Agency on its plans to alter the nature of the Cuckmere Valley; what the budget is for the preparatory stage of this project; and if she will make a statement. [33697]

Mr. Morley: I understand the Environment Agency has spent £394,000 out of a budget for preparatory work of £444,000. These figures include an allowance for agency internal staff costs.

The preparatory stage should be completed in April 2006 after which the Regional Flood Defence Committee will consider the appropriate way forward for future flood risk management. The agency will then undertake wider consultation on options with the intention of reaching agreement for the future management of the estuary, identifying necessary future works and possible funding routes to implement these.

Existing flood defences are reaching the end of their life and are increasingly ineffective against sea level rise. The Environment Agency spends between £30,000 and £50,000 per annum maintaining the defences in this area and ensuring that the river can adequately discharge into the sea.

Flood Prevention

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will visit Shrewsbury to discuss the need for further flood prevention measures. [30993]

Mr. Morley: I am always keen to see how Government policy and funding can contribute constructively to effective flood risk management in practice. I visited Shrewsbury in 2000 with the Prime Minister and on other occasions. I am interested in the flood risk problems there and in finding solutions to them as far as possible.

I understand the Environment Agency recently invested £3.5 million as part of an overall £6 million flood risk management improvement project in Shrewsbury, is considering carefully the case for further investment which is however problematic in some areas, and has explained the position to people affected by flood risk.

The agency has distributed its draft fluvial severn strategy to a broad range of consultees, including Members of Parliament for the affected areas, for comment prior to finalisation in 2006. This considers a number of options for all flood prone areas along the River Severn and, together with the agency's River Severn catchment flood management plan, will provide the agency with a framework for the management of flood risk. Given all avenues either have been or are being explored and the limited scope for further works in the immediate future, I see little point in raising people's hopes by another Ministerial visit at this time.

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps she is taking to prevent flooding in the Underdale area of Shrewsbury. [30825]

Mr. Morley: Following completion of the Environment Agency's £3.5 million Frankwell flood alleviation scheme, the scope for further flood risk improvement works in Shrewsbury in the immediate future is limited by benefit cost issues and the relative priority of these works against the need for investment in other locations.

I understand the agency assessed Underdale Road for inclusion in trials of "temporary" defences (that is flood defences which would remain permanently at hand, to be raised temporarily during periods of heightened flood risk). However the benefits from such works proved insufficient in relation to justification of costs in the region of £460,000.

The agency's draft fluvial severn strategy considers a number of options for all flood prone areas along the River Severn and, together with the agency's River Severn catchment flood management plan, will provide the agency with a framework for the management of flood risk in the longer term.

Greenhouse Gas Emissions

Mr. Binley: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will produce an annual report on greenhouse gas emissions and present it to Parliament. [33176]

Mr. Morley: If passed, the Private Member's Bill entitled Climate Change and Sustainable Energy would require such a report to be made to Parliament by the Prime Minister.

The Bill successfully received its Second Reading on 11 November and has been sent to Standing Committee. During that debate, the Minister for Energy indicated that the Government would support the relevant clause subject to it being amended to the effect that producing such a report would be the responsibility of the Secretary of State.

DEFRA produces an annual inventory of the UK's greenhouse gas emissions and various other reports to comply with our international obligations both to the EU and the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change (UNFCCC).

Mr. Binley: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will introduce legislation creating legally-binding targets for the reduction of greenhouse gas emissions. [33179]

Mr. Morley: The UK already has a legally binding target to reduce its greenhouse gas emissions by 12.5 per cent. during the 2008–12 period under the Kyoto protocol.

Mobile Phones/Printer Cartridges

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what research has been conducted (a) by and (b) for her Department relating to the recycling and reuse of (i) mobile phones and (ii) printer cartridges. [27889]

Mr. Bradshaw: No research has been conducted by or for the Department relating specifically to the recycling and reuse of mobile phones or printer cartridges.

Quad Bikers

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what complaints her Department has received on the inappropriate and illegal use of walking trails by quad bikers. [33194]

Jim Knight: I am not aware of any specific complaints about the inappropriate and illegal use of walking trails by quad bikers.

However, we have received a significant number of representations regarding the illegal use of other motorised vehicles on rights of way and off road land.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what action her Department has taken to enforce laws regarding proper trail and land use by quad bikers. [33195]

Jim Knight: We have received a significant number of representations regarding the antisocial and illegal off-road use of motorised vehicles.

There already exists a range of statutory powers that, when used as part of a co-ordinated strategy, can prove effective in dealing with the inappropriate use of motor vehicles off-road. The Government will shortly be issuing guidance to help the police and local authorities tackle motor vehicle misuse. The guidance will set out the range of powers already available and will draw on existing best practice examples of police and local authorities working in successful partnerships.

Copies of this guidance will be placed in the Library of the House.

Refrigerators

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what target her Department has set for the amount of chlorofluorocarbons that should be recovered from refrigerators in each year; [30995]

(2) how many refrigerators were recovered with their reservoir of chlorofluorocarbons gas (a) empty and (b) intact in each of the last 10 years. [30994]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Government do not set a target for the amount of CFG that should be recovered from refrigerators in each year because it is not possible to know in advance how many refrigerators will be presented for treatment, the proportion that contained CFCs when manufactured, or the proportion of CFCs that will have been lost in use, storage or transit.

The recovery facilities do not record whether or not each fridge presented for treatment has a full charge of CFG in its coolant circuit. This is because the operator of the facility will not always know how much CFG an individual fridge contained when it was manufactured, and CFG recovery is measured over a large batch of units and it is not practical to record recovery on a fridge by fridge basis.

Sustainable Development

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what progress has been made under the UK's presidency in relation to the sustainable development agenda. [30270]

Mr. Morley: Defra is seeking to promote sustainable development through the full range of its business by ensuring that all its dossiers fully address environmental, economic and social impacts. Our approach is underpinned by the need to make progress on Better Regulation. The European Commission's proposal for a Review of the EU Sustainable Development Strategy—a UK priority—will not be published until mid-December but we will be supporting the forthcoming Austrian Presidency to achieve their aim of completing the review by June 2006.

Timber

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps are being taken to reduce the amount of illegal timber entering the United Kingdom. [33942]

Mr. Morley: The UK is taking a range of steps to reduce the amount of illegal timber entering the United Kingdom.

The European Commission published its Forest Law Enforcement Governance and Trade (FLEGT) Action Plan in May 2003. This describes a package of measures to tackle illegal logging, including proposals that the EU enters into partnership agreements with timber producing countries to establish a licensing system designed to identify products and license them for export to the EU.

The UK is delighted that the proposal for a licensing system received political agreement at the EU Agriculture and Fisheries Council on 24 October 2005, under the UK's Presidency of the European Union. This will be adopted in December 2005. The UK, with other EU partners, is already discussing possible agreements with timber producing countries, including Ghana and Malaysia. It is hoped that these agreements will be finalised soon. This will mean that the amount of illegal timber entering the United Kingdom from these countries will reduce.

The FLEGT Action Plan also proposes that the Commission look at other options to tackle illegal logging, including using Government procurement and introducing legislation to prevent the importation of illegally logged timber at a member state or EU level. Government awaits the European Commission's report, which will allow us to take this work forward, including the options for action at the UK level.

Veterinary Laboratories Agency

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many diagnoses made by the Veterinary Laboratories Agency in Weybridge were found to be incorrect in (a) each of the last three years and (b) this year to date; and what these figures represent as a percentage of overall diagnoses. [31857]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 28 November 2005]: Diagnoses are a matter of veterinary judgment, usually made on the basis of a combination of clinical signs and test results. In some cases post mortem finding are also available. The following figures give the total number of tests completed and the number of complaints recorded that relate to test results. Some errors in test results are detected by the VLA ISO17025 UKAS quality system after reporting (eg during audit). These are notified to customers but do not necessarily result in a complaint. Estimates of these are also provided.

	Number of tests reported	Number of complaints received regarding test results	Number of incorrect test results notified to customers	Incorrect test results as percentage of total
April 2002-March 2003	3,359,922	4	<25	<0.001

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many diagnoses made by the Veterinary Laboratories Agency in Weybridge were contested in (a) each of the last three years and (b) this year to date; and what these figures represent as a percentage of overall diagnoses. [31858]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 28 November 2005]: Diagnoses are a matter of veterinary judgment, usually made on the basis of a combination of clinical signs and test results. In some cases post mortem finding are also available. The following figures give the total number of tests completed and the number of complaints recorded that relate to test results. Instances when customers contact the VLA to discuss a test result or diagnosis but make no complaint are not recorded in a manor that permits analysis. In some of these cases it may be that customers are questioning a result or diagnosis but are content with the explanation given and make no complaint.

Ms Buck: The Department had no trace of receiving the letter from the hon. Member for Brent, East dated 22 March at the time but a copy was obtained from her office on 30 November. The subject matter is one for which Ministers at HM Treasury have responsibility and they will be replying to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will amend regulations to prevent the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency from providing names and addresses of vehicle owners to private companies and individuals. [33695]

Dr. Ladyman: I will be making a written statement on Friday 2 December.

Integrated Kent Franchise

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to announce a decision on the Integrated Kent Franchise. [33462]

Derek Twigg: I refer the hon. Member to the written statement made to the House by my right hon. M5 Traffic Flows

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will conduct a full evaluation of traffic flows at Junction 12 on the M5, including (a) queuing on the slip road and (b) related use of the B4008. [33150]

Dr. Ladyman [holding answer 30 November 2005]: A study of the operation of Junction 12 on the M5 is due to be completed by May 2006. The study will incorporate a survey to evaluate traffic flows at the junction, including use of the B4008. This initial survey is programmed for completion during January 2006.

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the costs of maintenance on the rail network have been in each winter since 1999–2000, broken down by region. [32646]

Derek Twigg: Network Rail is responsible for the operation and maintenance of the rail network. Network Rail will respond directly to the hon. Member.

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what subsidy the Government have given to the railway industry in each year since 1997. [34154]

Derek Twigg: Details of historic Government support to the rail industry are set out in table 6.2a of the latest edition of National Rail Trends, copies of which are in the Library of the House.

TREASURY

Bio-fuels

Mr. Drew: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on his policy on duty rates on fuel from pure vegetable oil in relation to duty rates on conventional fuels. [33791]

John Healey: A reduced rate of duty for biodiesel was introduced in July 2002 in recognition of its environmental benefits and its higher production costs than conventional diesel. Fuel produced from vegetable oil is eligible for this lower rate (currently 27.10 pence per litre) if it meets the legal definition of biodiesel for tax purposes set out in section 2AA of the Hydrocarbon Oil Duties Act 1979.

Child Trust Fund

Mr. Davey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what research his Department has carried out into the income levels of eligible families who have opened child trust fund accounts relative to eligible families who have not. [33612]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Parents have up to a year from the issue of the Child Trust voucher in which to open an account for their child and this period has yet to expire for the first vouchers issued. The income level of eligible families who do not open accounts is something that the Government will want to look at alongside other research. This includes qualitative research with parents in lower income households to make sure that the materials sent to parents are likely to appeal to the target audience.

Mr. Davey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many child trust fund accounts have been opened in England, broken down by ethnicity of the child. [33613]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: This information is not available. Information on the global number of Child Trust Fund accounts opened is available at:

http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/child_trust_funds/child-trust-funds.htm

Mr. Davey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many child trust fund accounts have been opened since the programme began, broken down by region. [33614]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: This information could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

The latest quarterly Child Trust Fund statistics were published on 30 November 2005 at:

http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/child_trust_funds/child-trust-funds.htm

Jim Sheridan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many households in Paisley and Renfrewshire North have opened child trust fund accounts. [34308]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Child trust fund information at constituency level would be available only at disproportionate cost. UK-wide information on the number of child trust fund vouchers issued and the number of accounts opened are published on the HMRC website at http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/child_trust_funds/child-trust-funds.htm. Data showing activity to 20 November was published on the 30 November 2005.

Corporation Tax (Lancashire)

Mr. Evans: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much corporation tax was raised from businesses in Lancashire in each year since 1997. [34068]

Dawn Primarolo: The information is not available to estimate the amount of corporation tax raised from businesses in Lancashire in each year since 1997.

Endowment Mortgages

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on endowment mortgage complaints that are upheld by the Financial Ombudsman Service and rejected by insurance companies. [33672]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: For the last full financial year (ending 31 March 2005), the Financial Ombudsman Service received 69,737 mortgage endowment complaints. In the same period, the ombudsman service resolved 48,018 of these cases, of which 47.3 per cent. were upheld (either wholly or in part) in the consumer's favour.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many complaints about endowment mortgages were made to the Financial Ombudsman Service in each of the last five years; and how many were upheld. [33673]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Financial Ombudsman Service brought together eight separate dispute resolution schemes covering the financial services sector and assumed its powers under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 on 1 December 2001. The following table shows the number of mortgage endowment cases received by the ombudsman service in each full financial year since year ending 31 March 2001 and shows the percentage breakdown of resolved cases upheld (either wholly or in part) in the consumers favour.

Year ending	Mortgage endowment complaints received	Percentage of resolved cases upheld
2003–04	51,917	32.5
2002–03	13,750	45.8
2001–02	14,595	n/a
2000–01	9,067	n/a

n/a = Not available.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many complaints about endowment mortgages were upheld by the Financial Ombudsman Service but were then rejected by the insurance company in each of the last five years. [33762]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Once an ombudsman has made a final decision it is binding on the firm, if the consumer accepts it. Where a final decision has been issued and a firm has failed to comply with an award made by an ombudsman, the ombudsman's decision is then enforceable in court. No records are available on the number of enforcement actions of this nature that are taken.

EU Accounts

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the recent auditing of the EU accounts. [33426]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: As always, we are studying the European Court of Auditors Report on the 2004 EC Budget carefully as we attach a great deal of importance to financial management. It is disappointing that, for the eleventh year in succession, the European Court of Auditors has been unable to give a positive statement of assurance on the EC Budget for 2004. It is encouraging, however, that there have been noticeable improvements since 2003 with pre-accession expenditure once again being cleared, as it was in 2002, and, for the first time, certain areas of agricultural expenditure also gaining clearance. This has meant that around 35 percent. of EC Budget expenditure was cleared in 2004 compared with only 6 percent. in 2003. The council, led by the UK presidency, has for the first time taken action, agreeing conclusions on 8 November 2005 that will contribute to bringing about a step change in financial management and control.

Illegal Drugs

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer in how many deaths in Sandwell illegal drugs were the primary cause in each year since 1997. [33281]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell to Mr. John Spellar, dated 1 December 2005:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking in how many deaths in Sandwell, illegal drugs were the primary cause in each year since 1997. (33281)

Figures readily available from death certification relate to deaths due to drug poisoning, not the total number that were attributable to drug use. These figures are produced from a special database which contains deaths where the underlying cause was drug poisoning. Deaths that may be caused indirectly by drug use, for example HIV infection or road traffic accidents, are not included. Death registration data are not the best source of information on these "indirect" deaths, because information on the role of drug use in the death may not be provided on the death certificate.

The most recent year for which figures are available is 2003. There were 12 deaths certified as due to drug poisoning[1] and involving drugs controlled under the Misuse of Drugs Act to residents of Sandwell[2] in the seven years 1997 to 2003.3 A further breakdown by year is not possible because of the small numbers of deaths involved.

[1] Defined using the following codes from the International Classification of Diseases, Tenth Revision for 2001–2003: F11-F16, F18-F19, X40-X44, X60-X64, Y10-Y14, X85 and the following codes from the International Classification of Diseases, Ninth Revision for 1997–2000: 292, 304, 305.2–305.9, E850-E858, E950.0-E950.5, E962.0 and E980.0-E980.5.

Low-income Families

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to encourage saving among families on low incomes. [33715]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: In addition to tax-relief on savings offered to all adults, the Government are using the Saving Gateway to explore how matching can encourage families on lower incomes to start saving. As announced in Budget 2005, the second Saving Gateway is now up and running and accounts will run for 18 months. Evidence gathered through this pilot will be used to inform the development of matching as a central pillar in the Government's strategy for promoting saving and asset-ownership.

Additionally, the Government have introduced the child trust fund, a groundbreaking initiative designed to strengthen the saving habit of future generations. Every child born on or after 1 September 2002 receives a £250 voucher from the Government to invest in a long-term savings and investment account with families on lower incomes receiving £500. Family and friends can add up to £1,200 a year to each account and there is no tax for them to pay on any interest or gains made on this money.

Milton Keynes Development

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much his Department has spent since 1975 on land purchase and infrastructure to enable the development of Milton Keynes; and what payments have been returned to his Department through (a) the Milton Keynes Development Corporation, (b) the Commission for New Towns and (c) English Partnerships in that period. [28193]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested will take some time to collate, I will write to my hon. Friend in due course and a copy will be published in the Official Report.

National Insurance (Freelance Musicians)

Lynne Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he consulted (a) the Musicians' Union, (b) the Association of British Orchestras, (c) individual major orchestras, (d) the Arts Council for (i) England, (ii) Scotland, (iii) Wales and (iv) Northern Ireland and (e) Ministers in the Department for Culture, Media and Sport on requirements for freelance self-employed musicians and the orchestras and ensembles that engage them to pay Class 1 national insurance contributions. [33623]

Dawn Primarolo: The changes were introduced on 17 July 1998 following a press release by the Social Security Minister, John Denham on 15 July 1998. At the time responsibility for national insurance liability for entertainers which included actors, singers or musicians fell to the Department for Work and Pensions, or as it was known then the Department of Social Security. The Department of Social Security consulted interested parties before the changes were introduced.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when (a) the Musicians' Union, (b) the Association of British Orchestras, (c) individual major orchestras and (d) the Arts Council for (i) England, (ii) Scotland, (iii) Wales and (iv) Northern Ireland were informed of requirements for freelance self-employed musicians and the orchestras and ensembles that engage them to pay Class 1 national insurance contributions. [33624]

Dawn Primarolo: The Department of Social Security, which was then responsible for policy on national insurance contributions issued a press release on 15 July 1998 to announce the revised national insurance arrangements for actors and musicians and changes to legislation from the 17 July 1998.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps were taken between 1988 and 2004 to recover extra revenues from orchestras and ensembles resulting from the 1998 requirements for freelance self-employed musicians and the orchestras and ensembles that engage them to pay Class 1 national insurance contributions. [33625]

Dawn Primarolo: When the regulations were introduced in 1998, employers (including orchestras) engaging entertainers covered by the regulations were expected to comply voluntarily with their obligation to pay Class 1 national insurance contributions.

HMRC ensures employers' operation of their statutory obligations through its employer compliance programme. Employers are selected for visits on the basis of risk profiling. The potential widespread failure of orchestras to deduct Class 1 national insurance contributions did not become evident until 2004, when HMRC undertook customer support activity in the orchestra sector.

Nigeria

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much he expects the Government to be paid by Nigeria under the debt settlement agreed at the Paris Club in October; and what proportion this represents of 2006 UK overseas development assistance to Nigeria, excluding debt cancellation. [34179]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: On 20 October 2005, the Paris Club of official creditors agreed with Nigeria to write off approximately $18 billion, or 60 per cent., of Nigeria's debt to those creditors. Nigeria will use part of its oil windfall to pay the remaining $12.4 billion of debts to creditors. As a result of this deal, at least $1 billion a year will be freed in Nigeria, which the authorities intend to use for poverty reduction including employing an extra 120,000 teachers and putting 3.5 million children into school.

As part of the deal, the UK will cancel approximately £2.8 billion and receive payments of £1.66 billion. As the debts owed to the UK are denominated in a mix of currencies, these numbers may shift with exchange rates. DFID is supporting Nigeria by scaling up its assistance from £70 million in 2005–06 to £100 million in 2007–08 and encouraging the international community to increase its support to the country.

Pensioners

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps the Government are taking to reduce the tax burden on old-age pensioners. [33713]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Around half of pensioners pay no income tax.

For those pensioners who do pay tax, individuals over 65 benefit from the more generous age-related personal allowances up to an income of £19,500. In 2005–06, these allowances are £7,090 for those aged 65 to 74 and £7,220 for those aged 75 and over.

These allowances mean that no pensioner aged 65 or over will be required to pay tax on income of less than £136 a week in 2005–06.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he will answer questions 9840 and 13874 on tax credits from the hon. Member for Yeovil due for reply before the summer recess. [33940]

Dawn Primarolo: I have done so.

Terrorism

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the bank accounts which have been frozen since 11 September 2001 on the grounds of terrorist associations. [33651]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Since 11 September 2001, 58 accounts have been frozen in respect of individuals and entities suspected of involvement in terrorism. The aggregate value of accounts frozen is just under £400,000.

A consolidated list of individuals and entities subject to UK financial sanctions is available from the Bank of England website at:

http://www.bankofengland.co.uk/publications/financialsanctions/current/index.htm

Freezing action also prevents the flow of funds to listed individuals and entities asset freezing is part of the Government's overall strategy to create a hostile environment for terrorism and safeguard financial systems. A value cannot easily be put on those wider effects.

VAT

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what proportion of average household expenditure is (a) taxable at the standard rate of VAT, (b) taxable at the reduced rate of VAT, (c) taxable at the zero rate of VAT and (d) exempt from VAT; and what the equivalent figure was in (i) 2001, (ii) 2002, (iii) 2003 and (iv) 2004; [33647]

(2) what changes in the rate of value added tax have been introduced in each year since 1 January 1995; and what the rate of value added tax was in each year. [33648]

Dawn Primarolo: Estimates of the proportions of household expenditure on goods and services subject to different VAT rates are available up to 2003. These estimates and changes in VAT rates and principal goods and services covered by different rates are published by HM Revenue and Customs in the VAT Factsheet which can be found at www.uktradeinfo.co.uk

Vehicle Excise Duty

Norman Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will widen the vehicle excise duty bands to encourage use of more efficient vehicles. [33662]

John Healey: The Chancellor considers relevant economic, social and environmental factors when deciding taxation policy. Any changes will be announced in the context of the Budget.

WALES

Departmental Entertainment

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what expenditure was incurred by the Wales Office on entertaining in each year since 2002–03. [31921]

Mr. Hain: The expenses incurred by the Wales Office on entertainment for the following years were:

2002–03	6,313
2003–04	4,804
2004–05	4,785

Figures for financial year 2005–06 will be available in April 2006.

Departmental Estate

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what (a) land and (b) property his Department (i) owns and (ii) rents in each constituency; and if he will make a statement. [33256]

Mr. Hain: The Wales Office owns the land and property at Gwydyr House, Whitehall in London—constituency Westminster. The Department also leases office space at Discovery House, Scott Harbour in Cardiff Bay—constituency Cardiff South and Penarth.

Departmental Expenditure

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much his Department and its agencies have spent on (a) the design and production of new logos and (b) employing external (i) public relations and (ii) graphic design agencies in each year since 2000, broken down by project. [33203]

Mr. Hain: The Wales Office was established on 1 July 1999. The only expenditure during the financial year 2000–01 was when the Department spent (a) £2,728 on designing of the Wales Office Logo; (b) (i) Nil; and (b) (ii) £13,566 on developing its website.

Departmental Research

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what research projects commissioned by his Department are being undertaken; and what the publication arrangements are in each case. [32988]

Mr. Hain: None.

Homelessness (Cardiff)

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many individuals in Cardiff were homeless in each year since 1995; and if he will make a statement. [33769]

Mr. Hain: Information is not available in the form requested. The number of unintentionally homeless households in each year was:

	Number
1995	533
1996	318
1997	292
1998	586
1999	350
2000	356
2001	679
2002	925
2004	834

Extra priority needs categories were added in 2001, resulting in an increase in the figures from that year.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Magazine Distribution

10. Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the recent Office of Fair Trading report on magazine distribution arrangements. [33384]

Mr. Sutcliffe: In response to a request from parties in the industry, the Office of Fair Trading is in the process of providing an opinion on the compatibility with competition law of distribution agreements for newspapers and magazines. A provisional opinion was published in May 2005. A final opinion is likely to issue in the early part of 2006.

Energy Prices

11. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the effect of energy prices on high energy users. [33385]

Alan Johnson: The high spot prices for gas in the past weeks have meant very tough times for high energy users such as the chemicals industry, paper and steel. Some have responded by curtailing production or switching to alternative fuels.

Prices for small and medium-sized businesses, and domestic consumers, despite increases over the past year, are still some of the most competitive in Europe.

Science Cities Initiative

12. Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what funding he proposes to allocate from the science budget for the Government's science cities initiative. [33386]

Barry Gardiner: There are no plans to allocate dedicated funding for science cities from the science budget. However, existing funding streams for science and innovation can potentially support science cities, including the Higher Education Innovation Fund, worth £100 million per annum, supporting universities' collaboration with business; and the Science Research Infrastructure Fund, which provides capital funding of £500 million per annum to renew university infrastructure. These funding streams already require universities to develop their implementation strategies in light of regional priorities. In addition, the Regional Development Agencies, who lead on the development of science cities, have their own science and innovation funding programmes, from which science cities can be supported. The Government will continue to work with the RDAs to consider how local, regional and national policies can best work together to support science cities.

WTO Meeting

13. Ann McKechin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on negotiations with the USA in preparation for the World Trade Organisation ministerial conference in Hong Kong. [33387]

Ian Pearson: The Government are in regular contact with the United States at all levels, official and ministerial, on a range of trade issues, including prospects for progress at the forthcoming ministerial conference in Hong Kong.

18. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the EU negotiating position for the forthcoming World Trade Organisation ministerial conference in Hong Kong. [33392]

Ian Pearson: The European Union will adopt a constructive and active approach to the negotiations at the forthcoming WTO ministerial conference in Hong Kong.

The parameters of the EU's negotiating position are laid out in a succession of council conclusions.

Commission for Equality and Human Rights

16. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the creation of the new Commission for Equality and Human Rights. [33390]

Meg Munn: The Commission for Equality and Human Rights will be established through the Equality Bill, which is currently making good progress through Parliament. Work is under way looking at the practical issues before the Commission opens its doors in October 2007

Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the staffing implications of the establishment of the new Commission for Equality and Human Rights. [33388]

Meg Munn: The staffing arrangements of the Commission will be clarified as the organisational structure is developed. This detailed work will start shortly and will be developed in close consultation with key stakeholders, including the existing Commissions and their staff.

Unscrupulous Lenders

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action he is taking to protect vulnerable people from unscrupulous lenders. [33389]

Mr. Sutcliffe: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Glasgow North West earlier today.

SMEs (Insurance)

17. Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the impact of the level of insurance premiums on small and medium-sized businesses. [33391]

Barry Gardiner: I have not made a recent assessment. In Northern Ireland, the Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment's last assessment of insurance costs for firms there showed a 16.1 per cent. fall in the cost of premiums in 2004.

Cyber-Security

Mark Pritchard: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to provide incentives for the private sector to improve its cyber security. [33376]

Barry Gardiner: None. This is an essential aspect of doing business in the information age and there is no case for offering incentives.

Fireworks

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he (a) has taken and (b) plans to take to heighten public awareness of (i) the dangers of fireworks and (ii) the effects of fireworks on animals; and if he will make a statement. [33546]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Department produces a number of resources for stakeholders and intermediaries to use in raising awareness of the dangers of fireworks; a safety toolkit for fire brigades, trading standards and safety practitioners, educational resources for teachers and safety leaflets for the general public, for retailers and for the organisers of public displays. The Department has also worked with The Blue Cross (a pet charity) to publish a leaflet giving advice on reducing the effects of fireworks on animals. In the run-up to 5 November, these resources were supported by a PR campaign, which secured coverage in the press, radio and broadcast media. DTI TV fillers were also given airtime by all the main broadcasters. We will review this publicity activity in the light of the fireworks injury statistics in order to plan future fireworks awareness activity.

Illegal Logging

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what measures are being taken to reduce the importing of illegally logged wood. [32754]

Mr. Morley: I have been asked to reply.

The UK is working to reduce the importation of illegally logged wood through domestic, EU and international action. This action includes, at the domestic level, implementing a progressive timber procurement policy where central Government seeks to procure timber and timber products that are legal and sustainable. This is having an impact on the wider UK timber market.

At the EU level, the UK was delighted that the EU Forestry Law Enforcement Governance and Trade (FLEGT) dossier received political agreement at the EU Agriculture and Fisheries Council on 24 October 2005, under the UK's presidency of the European Union. This will allow the EU to enter into agreements with developing countries that export timber. These agreements will provide assistance to tackle illegal logging and back this assistance with a licensing scheme where the EU commits to only import timber licensed as being legal from those countries.

At the international level, the UK, with other EU partners, is in discussion with a range of timber producing countries, including the Russian Federation, Ghana and Malaysia about action they could take to tackle illegal logging. The UK is also working with other major timber consuming countries. This included getting G8 countries to commit to a range of actions to tackle illegal logging at the G8 Environment and Development ministerial on 17–18 March 2005, part of the UK's G8 presidency.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he plans to introduce legislation to prevent the importing into the United Kingdom of wood illegally logged elsewhere. [32755]

Mr. Morley: I have been asked to reply.

The European Commission published its Forest Law Enforcement Governance and Trade (FLEGT) Action Plan in May 2003. This describes a package of measures to tackle illegal logging, including proposals that the EU enters into partnership agreements with timber producing countries to establish a licensing system designed to identify products and license them for export to the EU.

The UK is delighted that the proposal for a licensing system received political agreement at the EU Agriculture and Fisheries Council on 24 October 2005, under the UK's presidency of the European Union. Government believes that as a first step to address illegal logging, it is necessary to build consensus with producing countries and make sure that we do not discriminate against legitimate trade. The EU FLEGT licensing scheme, with its innovative approach of bilateral trade agreements and development assistance for improving forest governance, will achieve this in the first instance.

The FLEGT Action Plan also proposes that the Commission look at other options to tackle illegal logging, including using Government procurement and introducing legislation to prevent the importation of illegally logged timber at a Member State or EU level. Government awaits this European Commission's report, which will allow us to take this work forward, including the options for action at the UK level.

Independent Schools

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the recent Office of Fair Trading report on independent schools. [33374]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Office of Fair Trading is the United Kingdom's independent competition regulator. It has a duty to investigate and address anti-competitive conduct and enforce competition law. It has investigated the exchange of information between independent schools about the fees they charge. Its provisional findings are that 50 schools have breached Chapter One of the Competition Act which prohibits anti-competitive agreements. This is a matter for the Office if Fair Trading. The Government have no substantive role in individual cases.

Ministerial Travel

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much has been spent in each year from 1 May 1997 on ministerial travel, broken down by (a) provision and running costs of vehicular transport, (b) first class travel by rail, (c) standard class travel by rail, (d) first class travel by air, (e) club or equivalent class travel by air and (f) economy class travel by air. [27796]

Alan Johnson: All ministerial travel is undertaken in accordance with the rules set out in the 'Ministerial Code and Travel by Ministers', copies of which are available in the Libraries of the House.

My hon. Friend and Parliamentary Secretary at the Cabinet Office has asked Roy Burke, chief executive of the Government Car and Despatch Agency (GCDA) to write to the hon. Member with details of the costs of ministerial vehicles provided to Departments in 2004–05. Copies of his letter will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

For information for the financial years 2000–01 to 2003–04 I refer the hon. Member to the letters from the chief executive of the GCDA to the hon. Member for Buckingham (John Bercow) dated 10 January 2005 and to the then hon. Member for Arundel and South Downs dated 13 September 2003. Copies of these letters are available in the Libraries of the House.

A breakdown of costs of domestic ministerial travel by rail, air and car, except for vehicles provided by the GCDA, is available for April 2004 to March 2005 and includes the cost of private office staff travelling with the Minister.

Air	12,000
Car	2,000

In respect of overseas travel by Ministers, since 1999 the Government have published an annual list of all visits overseas undertaken by Cabinet Ministers costing £500 or more during each financial year. The Government have also published on an annual basis the cost of all Ministers' visits overseas. Copies of the lists are available in the Libraries of the House. These report information for the financial years 1995–96 to 2004–05. Information for 2005–06 will be published as soon as it is ready after the end of the current financial year.

MINISTER FOR WOMEN

Legislation Implementation

22. Mr. Fraser: To ask the Minister for Women and Equality what measures will be taken to ensure small businesses have the necessary information and time to adapt to provisions in the Equality Bill and the equality provisions of the Work and Families Bill. [33396]

Meg Munn: Government will provide high quality guidance and information on relevant provisions in both Bills, including on the introduction of the CEHR, provisions protecting against discrimination on grounds of religion, belief and sexual orientation, and new work and families measures. Small business will be involved in any further consultation, including on additional paternity leave and pay.

Women's Pensions

23. Dr. Starkey: To ask the Minister for Women and Equality what recent discussions she has had with the Department for Work and Pensions on women's pensions. [33397]

Meg Munn: I had a constructive meeting with the Department for Work and Pensions and am pleased that fair outcomes for women is one of their principles for reform.

Now that the Pensions Commission have reported, we will build on our previous discussions to tackle pension inequalities.

Women Entrepreneurs

24. Dr. Blackman-Woods: To ask the Minister for Women and Equality what steps the Government is taking to encourage women to start their own businesses. [33398]

Meg Munn: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for North West Norfolk some moments ago.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Minister for Women and Equality what measures the Government has in place to encourage more women entrepreneurs. [33395]

Meg Munn: Giving more women the option of starting a business provides clear economic and social benefits. The Government are working closely with the Women's Enterprise Panel and all nine Regional Development Agencies to improve business support services to female entrepreneurs. Our strong commitment to and strategy for encouraging women's enterprise is clearly stated in 'Promoting Female Entrepreneurship'.

Pregnancy Discrimination

25. Mr. Burstow: To ask the Minister for Women and Equality what steps the Government are taking to tackle pregnancy discrimination in the workplace. [33399]

Meg Munn: Employers who discriminate against women because of their pregnancy or maternity leave are breaking the law and damaging their own businesses. In October this year we amended the Sex Discrimination Act so that it is clear to all that treating women in this way is sex discrimination. measures in the work and families package will offer further practical steps to addressing pregnancy discrimination.

Gender Pay Gap

26. Ann McKechin: To ask the Minister for Women and Equality what steps the Government are taking to reduce the gender pay gap in the small and medium-sized business sector. [33400]

Meg Munn: Action to date includes sponsoring the Equal Opportunities Commission to design an equal pay review kit specially for SMEs. We will build on this progress once Women and Work Commission report, and I am pleased that a Commissioner was brought in for her particular expertise on SMEs.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Andrew Cunningham (Statement)

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether Mr. Andrew Cunningham's statement at a recent conference on the drinks industry, the liberalisation of licensing laws and the "nanny state" reflects Government policy. [33463]

James Purnell: Mr Cunningham's statement as reported in the media was part of a presentation given by him on licensing reform on behalf of the Department to a regional conference, hosted by the British Institute of Innkeeping for its members, at Cheltenham Racecourse on 29 October 2002. Mr Cunningham's comments then about the reform of licensing law were an explanation of current Government policy. His comments about "nanny staters" were not a statement of policy. They were a personal observation made in response to a debate within the industry about, in particular, the merits of transferring the control of alcohol licensing from the licensing justices to local authorities. Mr Cunningham made the observation that if the industry allowed such an issue to divide them or to dilute their support for licensing reform, then opponents of reform could be expected to exploit that division. In referring generally to opponents of reform, Mr. Cunningham had used the expression "nanny staters" in his speaking notes which were subsequently handed to representatives of the trade press attending and he subsequently apologised for this use of injudicious language. Mr Cunningham did not refer to any Members of Parliament or any other individuals during the course of the conference.

Drinking Age

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment the Government have made of the potential impact on crime and disorder of reducing the legal drinking age to 16 years. [32497]

James Purnell: The licensing White Paper, "Time for Reform" set out the reasons for the Government's view that the legal age for purchasing and drinking alcohol should not be lowered. This included the danger of too early an exposure to alcohol in unsupervised circumstances.

Licensing

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what factors will be examined by her Department when assessing the impact of the Licensing Act 2003 on the 10 named scrutiny local authority areas; and when she expects to publish the results. [32386]

James Purnell [holding answer 28 November 2005]: The Scrutiny Council initiative is one strand of the Government's wider monitoring and evaluation programme to measure the impact of the Licensing Act 2003 against the four licensing objectives:

prevention of crime and disorder;

prevention of public nuisance;

public safety; and protection of children from harm.

The initiative will be active for about six months and will deliver real time indicators of how the new regime is operating. It will also provide evidence to support the initial review of the statutory Guidance, due by the end of February 2006, and full Guidance review due around autumn 2006.

The following local authorities have been invited to become Scrutiny Councils:

Birmingham City Council

Blackpool Borough Council

Brighton and Hove City Council

Bristol City Council

Cardiff County Council

Havering London Borough Council

Manchester City Council

Newcastle Upon Tyne City Council

Nottingham City Council

Taunton Deane District Council

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what advice the Government have given to (a) local authorities and (b) the police on planning enforcement for licensed premises opening at times permitted by their licensing consent when their planning consent does not permit them to open. [32482]

James Purnell: Guidance issued to licensing authorities under section 182 of the Licensing Act 2003, which was also circulated to every Chief Constable of police, includes advice on the integration of planning and licensing regimes. It emphasises that applications for premises licences should normally be made by businesses with planning consent; should not be a re-run of the planning application; and should not cut across decisions taken by the local authority planning committee or following appeals against decisions taken by that committee. The Guidance also notes that the giving of a temporary event notice does not relieve the premises users from any requirements under planning law for appropriate planning permission where it is required. The enforcement of planning law is a matter for individual local authorities.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport on what dates since July 2003 her Department's Licensing Advisory Group has met; at which of these meetings the establishment of a central database of personal licence holders was discussed; and if she will make a statement. [28393]

James Purnell: The Licensing Advisory Group has met on approximately a monthly basis since July 2003. Issues around the Licensing Act 2003 and its implementation have been fully discussed during these meetings and did include the issue of the establishment of a central database of personal licence holders. However, these meetings are held under the Chatham House rule with no formal agenda or minutes taken of the discussions by the Group so it is not possible to be specific about when this particular issue was discussed.

In 2004 the Group met on 15 January, 18 February, 15 April, 16 June, 13 July, 17 August, 15 September, 26 October, 25 November and 15 December. In 2005 it met on 19 January, 16 February, 15 March, 19 April, 16 May, 22 June, 27 July, 24 August, 28 September and 22 November.

The establishment of a central licensing register is a matter which continues to be considered and discussed between the Government and representatives of the licensing authorities.

National Sports Foundation

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when the Government expects to announce the (a) size, (b) location, (c) names of senior management, (d) budget and (e) operating procedures for the National Sports Foundation announced in the 2005 budget. [33430]

Mr. Caborn: The Government, along with Sport England and the national governing bodies for football, cricket, tennis, rugby union and rugby league, are continuing to discuss and examine options on how most effectively to deliver the National Sports Foundation. A further announcement will be made shortly.

Physical Education

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what definition she uses of high quality physical education and school sport as required by 2004 public service agreement target number one. [29202]

Mr. Caborn: The document "High Quality PE and Sport for Young People" (DfES/DCMS, March 2004) provides a detailed description of the outcomes of high quality physical education and school sport For the purposes of the joint DCMS/DfES PE and school sport public service agreement target, high quality PE and school sport produces young people with the skills, understanding, desire and commitment to continue to improve and achieve in a range of PE, sport and health-enhancing physical activities, in line with their abilities.

A further document, "Do you have high quality PE and sport in your school?" (DfES/DCMS, January 2005), helps teachers to use the pupil outcomes of high quality to carry out self-evaluation of the quality of PE and sport they provide. Copies of these documents have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Public Service Agreements

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether she uses (a) averages over several years and (b) a straight comparison between two specific years for the purposes of measuring performance against 2004 public service agreement target 4. [30290]

James Purnell: The public service agreement target 4 performance measurement will focus on the change from one year to the next. In addition a cumulative average is used for evaluation purposes. In each case, the comparison is with the performance of the service sector as a whole.

Regional Casinos

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made of the impact of regional casinos on problem gambling. [33607]

Mr. Caborn: The Government have taken a cautious approach to the development of new casinos, so that their impact in terms of problem gambling can be properly assessed. That is why the Gambling Act 2005 allows for the establishment of only one regional casino, eight large and eight small casinos. We will ask the Gambling Commission to advise on whether the introduction of these new types of casino has led to an increase in problem gambling no earlier than three years after the award of the first casino premises licence.

Television Licences

Anne Moffat: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many households in East Lothian are exempt from requiring a television licence under the exemption scheme for people over the age of 75 years. [34005]

James Purnell: People aged 75 or over are not exempt from the television licensing requirements but are entitled to a free licence. TV Licensing, who administer the concession as agents for the BBC, are not able to provide geographical breakdowns of the number of free licences issued. However, the number of households with at least one person aged 75 or over claiming the winter fuel payment in the East Lothian constituency in 2004–05 was 4,745, according to Department for Work and Pensions records.

DEFENCE

Afghanistan

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the rules of engagement of the latest NATO deployment into Southern Afghanistan. [32475]

Mr. Ingram: It has been the practice of successive Governments not to comment in detail on the Rules of Engagement under which our armed forces operate.

Army Vehicle Repairs

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the Army Base Repair Organisation Bovington site contract servicing of individual sections of a vehicle will be carried out off-site by other contractors. [33582]

Mr. Ingram: Wherever appropriate and cost effective, ABRO Bovington will undertake servicing of all major sections of vehicles. There may however, be times where it is necessary to carry out work through off-site contractors, particularly if capability or capacity is being created or upgraded to deliver new tasks.

Some specialist tasks, notably on sub-assemblies will continue to be carried out using specialist off-site contractors.

Astute-class Submarines

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) when he expects to confirm the total number of Astute-class submarines to be built; [32171]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 30 November 2005]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 20 July 2005, Official Report, column 1760W.

Orders for the procurement of future Astute boats are being considered and announcements will be made at the appropriate time.

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the additional capabilities originally intended for the second tranche of Astute-class submarines which have been brought forward into the first tranche; and what the reasons were for this change. [33049]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 30 November 2005]: We are currently considering a number of possible technology enhancements for later Astute-class submarines, which it may be possible to fit into the earlier Astute-class submarines, but no decisions on this have been taken.

I will place a copy of the GEMS return for 2004–05 and the first six months of 2005–06 in the Library. The data on this return is broken down by requests for resources and includes resources within departmental expenditure limits, within annually managed expenditure and outside departmental expenditure limits.

Mr. Ingram: Defence Ministers, members of the armed forces and the Ministry of Defence officials, like other Crown servants, are required to comply with rules on the acceptance of outside business appointments if they wish to take up other employment—whether in the defence industry or elsewhere—within two years of their retirement or resignation. It is not possible to determine whether those personnel that have joined companies in the defence industry have taken up specific employment in the arms trade.

Information on the number of former Defence Ministers and senior MOD personnel who have taken up appointments with outside companies after leaving office is contained in Annual Reports that have been produced since 1996 by The Prime Minister's Advisory Committee on Business Appointments. Copies of these reports are available in the Library of the House.

Mr. Ingram: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence has received no direct request. The Northern Ireland Secretary was asked by the Irish authorities to provide relevant material held by HMG on the Dundalk bombing of 1975 and, in fulfilling this request, he consulted my right hon. Friend.

European Rapid Reaction Force

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what role he expects British forces to play in delivering combat logistics for the European rapid reaction force. [32709]

John Reid: There is no European rapid reaction force. Member states make national forces available for particular EU-led operations voluntarily and on a case-by-case basis.

The EU Battlegroups initiative is delivering national and multinational units for very rapid reaction operations. Each Battlegroup is self-sufficient in support elements, including in combat logistics.

Fixed-wing Aircraft

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) which fixed-wing aircraft types will be available for service at sea in (a) 2012, (b) 2013 and (c) 2014 on present plans; [32613]

Work and dialogue continue with a view to strengthening the relationship. However, there are some difficulties arising from an on-going legal action brought against the command by the GSPSA concerning a disputed backdated pay claim; the case is currently subject to action in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Ingram: No apologies have been given to the Iraqi authorities by officials in the Department with regard to any aspect of the events of 19 September. Some progress has been made in reforming elements of the Basra police which are implicated in alleged human rights abuses. Discussions are continuing. I am aware of two reported deaths of individuals in Iraqi custody in Basra. One occurred in April this year and the other in September. These are being pursued with the Iraqi authorities but it will be for them to decide which details are appropriate for public release when they have completed their investigations.

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for what reasons the joint combat aircraft was initially intended to be capable of operating from Invincible-class aircraft carriers; and why this requirement has now been dropped. [33050]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 30 November 2005]: The joint combat aircraft (JCA) was originally conceived in 1996 (as the future carrier borne aircraft) with a view to replacing the Harriers on the Invincible-class carriers. Following the strategic defence review in 1998, when the decision was made to build two large replacement carriers, it was decided to design and develop the JCA to operate from the new platforms.

Mr. Ingram: Since my last discussion with the hon. Mirugi Kariuki MP, Assistant Minister for Provincial Administration and Internal Security, in February, detailed negotiations about adjusting the restrictions currently placed on where the British Army can conduct its training have been led by the British high commissioner in Nairobi. In the meantime, the Memorandum of Understanding between the Governments of Kenya and the United Kingdom which expired in December 2004 has been extended.

A copy of the current report (TSP10) is available in the Library of the House.

Mr. Ingram: Both armoured and non-armoured vehicles are available for use in Iraq, Northern Ireland and Afghanistan. The choice of vehicle for a particular task on an operation will depend on the Commander's assessment of the current threat level and nature of the task. This policy has not changed since 2000.

Warships

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the running costs for each of the classes of vessel in service with the Royal Navy were in the last year for which figures are available; what the costs were in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [32501]

Mr. Ingram: We do not manage costs on the basis of individual types of ships and the information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Business Rates Revaluation (Gravesham)

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the impact of business rates revaluation on businesses in Gravesham; and if he will make a statement. [33635]

Mr. Woolas: The assessment of the impact of revaluation on businesses in England was integral to the setting of the non-domestic rating multiplier for 2005–06 and the transitional arrangements. This assessment was done at a higher level than that of individual businesses.

Correspondence

Clare Short: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Birmingham, Ladywood, dated 30 September, on behalf of Trevor Errington, Leader of the chief engineers and planning officers group support team. [33101]

Mr. David Miliband: I replied to my right hon. Friend on 27 November 2005.

Council Elections

Mr. Kemp: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister from which (a) organisations and (b) individuals he has received representations (i) opposing and (ii) supporting a move to whole council elections for local authorities as outlined in the consultation document vibrant local leadership. [27365]

Mr. Woolas: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has received nine representations in support of a move to whole council elections—one county council, six parish councils and one member of the public plus the elected mayor of Bedford borough council. Of the other respondents to the vibrant local leadership document who mentioned a change in election cycles, two parish councils were ambivalent, as was one borough council and one borough council opposed the move.

Pursuant to my answer of 30 November 2005, seven local authorities are in the process of or have formally requested a change to whole council elections and the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is now aware of two more local authorities that are considering changing their cycle: Waveney and Wokingham.

Firefighters (Life Insurance)

Mr. Kemp: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what recent representations he has received regarding the availability of life insurance for firefighters; and whether all firefighters are covered by insurance in all of their duties. [32870]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has received a number of letters from Members of this House on personal insurance for firefighters in addition to the nine previous questions tabled in this and earlier parliamentary sessions. In addition, the Office of the deputy Prime Minister has received correspondence from Fire and Rescue Authorities and the Fire Brigades Union.

Government do not provide insurance cover for firefighters. Any personal insurance is a matter of personal choice and should be seen in the context of the compensation scheme for firefighters. Firefighter pay, pension and injury arrangements reflect the nature of the job and the risks that may be incurred.

Housing

Anne Main: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to the evidence from his officials to the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister: Housing, Planning, Local Government and the Regions Committee on 17 October, if he will place in the Library the performance data for the last five years which his Department has collected in relation to monitoring local authorities' delivery of empty homes strategies; and if he will make a statement. [27463]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 15 November 2005]: The information requested has been made available in the Library of the House.

The information relates to best value performance indicator 64 which measures the number of private sector dwellings that are returned to occupation or demolished each year as a direct result of action by the local authority. The information made available in the Library of the House relates to local authority returns for best value performance indicator 64 for 2001–02, 2002–03 and 2003–04.

The data provided in column 1 of the table (2001–02) is a percentage of private sector dwellings vacant for more than six months where the local authority has intervened leading to reoccupation or demolition.

The data reflected in the remaining two columns (2002–03 and 2003–04) is the number of private sector vacant dwellings returned to occupation, or demolished in those years following intervention from local authorities.

The difference in the way the data for this performance indicator is presented, reflects a change in the best value performance indicator (BVPI) itself and the how it is defined.

Data for best value performance indicator 64 is not available before 2001–02 and none of the other performance indicators, relating to housing before 2001–02, are comparable with best value performance indicator 64.

Local Government Finance

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether his Department has made a written submission to the Lyons Inquiry on local government finance. [31786]

Mr. Woolas: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 12 September 2005, Official Report, column 2431W.

Anne Main: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much additional funding will be allocated in 2005–06 to each council to cover costs of (a) licensing, (b) asylum-seekers, (c) pensions and (d) disposal of electrical equipment; and what formula is used to calculate these figures. [32067]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Government are working with the Local Government Association to consider the extent to which the areas referred to in the question create pressures on local authorities, and the steps which can be taken to address those pressures. The Government are committed to ensuring that local authorities can continue to deliver effective services without imposing excessive increases in council tax.

Primary Care Trusts

David Howarth: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what guidance his Department has given to local authorities on the action to be taken when a primary care trust fails to pay (a) sums it owes to a social services authority under an agreement under section 31 of the Health Act 1999 and (b) its business rates; and if he will make a statement. [33467]

Mr. Woolas: The information is as follows:

(a) None.

(b) None

Supporting People Programme

Mr. Bone: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the funding level for the supporting people programme in (a) England, (b) Wellingborough local authority and (c) East Northamptonshire local authority was in each of the last three years; and what funding is planned for 2005–06 in each case. [33602]

Mr. Woolas: The supporting people programme funding is only allocated to top tier authorities. The following table which indicates the level of funding for the supporting people programme in England and Northamptonshire, covers Wellingborough and East Northamptonshire, since 2002–03. This also includes funding for 2005–06.

Wirral, South (Funding)

Ben Chapman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what funding streams are available to tackle areas of deprivation in Wirral South. [32723]

Mr. Woolas: European Objective One funding is available for the whole of the Merseyside region. Within this there is an allocation of resources aimed at tackling issues of deprivation in specific areas due to their classification as among the most deprived parts of Merseyside. Three of these areas fall within Wirral South. Single Regeneration Funding is available to support Wirral South businesses. The Local Authority and its partners also target mainstream funding to support areas of deprivation in Wirral South.

Ben Chapman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what programmes the Neighbourhood Renewal Fund has funded in Wirral South. [32724]

Mr. Woolas: The purpose of the Neighbourhood Renewal Fund is to provide support to local authorities in England's most deprived districts, to enable them, in collaboration with their Local Strategic Partnerships, to improve services in their most deprived areas. The neighbourhood renewal programme agreed by the Wirral Council Strategic Partnership provides support to the most deprived wards of the area, all of which are among the 3 per cent. most deprived wards in England. Wirral, South constituency therefore does not directly receive any Neighbourhood Renewal Fund support.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Direct Budgetary Support

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much EU aid money has been granted for direct budgetary support in each year since 1999, broken down by country recipient. [32444]

Hilary Benn: The European Commission has provided the following details of aid money committed since 1999 to budgetary support including general budget support, assistance directed at specific sectors, and budgetary assistance to mitigate the impact of export earnings shortfalls.

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much money the UK has granted to multi-lateral institutions for direct budgetary support in each year since 1999. [32850]

Hilary Benn: The UK does not earmark its contributions to multilateral institutions for the purpose of direct budgetary support. However, our general contributions to the European Commission, the World Bank and regional development banks are used, among other things, to finance policy based lending where resources are transferred directly to the developing country's budget. This quick-disbursing assistance is used to support policy reforms and institutional changes, either at the macro-level or in a sector or sub-sector. It helps countries implement their poverty reduction strategies and promote economic growth.

HIV/AIDS

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps the Government has taken during its G8 and EU presidencies to tackle HIV and AIDS in developing countries. [32985]

Mr. Thomas: As president of the G8 and the EU, the UK is showing leadership in the global fight against AIDS through a strong commitment to prevention and treatment.

Gleneagles secured an important agreement

"to develop and implement a package for HIV prevention, treatment and care, with the aim of as close as possible to universal access to treatment for all those who need it by 2010"

The universal access commitment was also agreed at the Millennium Summit in September. The UK convened a follow-up meeting, bringing together officials from the G8, developing countries, civil society, together with the Joint United Nations Programme for AIDS (UNAIDS), the World Health Organisation (WHO), the World Bank and UNICEF to start mapping out how to deliver against the commitment.

The UNAIDS have now set up a Global Steering Committee (GSC), co-chaired by the UK and UNAIDS. The GSC will meet for the first time in Washington DC on 9–10 January 2006 and is expected to report to the High level UN General Assembly Special Session in mid 2006.

The UK also hosted the third and final Replenishment Conference for the Global Fund to fight AIDS, TB and Malaria on 5 and 6 September. The UN Secretary General, Kofi Annan, chaired the Conference. My right hon. Friend, Hilary Benn was able to confirm the UK's earlier announcement of a doubling of our support for the Global Fund in 2006 and 2007 to £100 million in each of these two years. The UK's pledge amounted to 10 per cent. of the US$3.7 billion pledged to the Global Fund for the two-year period by international donors, far exceeding our 'fair share'. The amount pledged by 29 donors represents more than half of the Global Fund's total resource needs for the two-year period.

The conference included a session on the global architecture within which the Global Fund operates. These discussions built on the 'Three Ones' principles and the UK co-hosted 'Making the Money Work' meeting, which had established a Global Task Team (GTT) to improve AIDS co-ordination among multilateral and international donors. As a result of the GTT, the UK expects fundamental improvements in how the UN and international donors such as the Global Fund work together to support countries develop and lead effective responses to AIDS. To support this work, the UK doubled our contributions to the UNAIDS for the next two years.

EU Ministers, meeting in London on 30 November under the UK presidency, also confirmed their commitment to increased prevention by issuing a statement on a vision for an AIDS free generation, the first pan-European pledge of its kind. The statement backs efforts to give people around the world better access to condoms and effective information. It advocates a comprehensive and evidenced based approach to HIV prevention including sexual and reproductive health information and services, harm reduction programmes for injecting drug users and reliable access to sexual and reproductive health commodities.

Iraq

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many consultants his Department employs in Iraq; and how much each was paid in the last year for which figures are available. [32662]

Hilary Benn: DFID primarily employs consultants through contracts with consultancy companies. The following table therefore lists the number of consultants DFID currently employs in Iraq under each consultancy programme, and how much DFID has paid each for consultancy programme over the last 12 months, where this number exceeds £100,000. The amount paid includes not only consultants' fees, but also travel costs and expenses, and project management support from the UK and from locally-engaged staff.

In addition, the Global Conflict Prevention Pool (GCPP), funded jointly by DFID, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, and the Ministry of Defence, has approved £43.6 million for reconstruction projects since the end of the conflict. I shall arrange for the document entitled 'Iraq Global Conflict Prevention Pool Projects, 2003–05' to be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Montserrat

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will make a statement on the development of the private sector on the island of Montserrat; and if he will list private foreign investments initiated in the last three years. [33674]

Mr. Thomas: We share the view of the Government of Montserrat (GoM) that development of the private sector is vital to Montserrat's economic recovery. A Private Sector Development Strategy has been agreed by the GoM; and design of a new Private Sector Development Project is nearly complete. This three year

DFID-funded project will create an appropriate environment for development of the sector through the provision of business support services, including access to finance and the promotion of inward investment. It will complement ongoing DFID support for tourism development.

The GoM also intends to set up a Montserrat Development Corporation, for which initial funding will be provided by DFID. The key roles of the corporation will be the promotion and co-ordination of private sector development activities and delivery of a project to establish a new capital town at Little Bay. We expect the corporation to be operational next year.

There has already been interest in investing, and in some cases re-investing, in Montserrat. Proposals under consideration include a water bottling factory, an ash slates factory, a geothermal energy project and establishment of a medical college.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps his Department is taking to encourage holiday companies to introduce package holidays to Montserrat. [33678]

Mr. Thomas: A National Tourism Strategy and Plan was approved by the Government of Montserrat in May 2003. DFID is providing £1.6 million for three year Tourism Development Project, based on the strategy. This will develop and market Montserrat tourism products, and re-introduce Montserrat to the regional and international tourism markets. Although Montserrat is not suited to mass tourism, a combination of the resumption of fixed wing air services last July and marketing activities supported by the tourism project could help to encourage specialist holiday companies to offer package holidays to the island.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps his Department is taking to encourage the tourist industry of scuba diving on the island of Montserrat. [33679]

Mr. Thomas: The development of tourism is seen by the Government of Montserrat and DFID as a key element in Montserrat's economic recovery. DFID is providing £1.6 million for a Tourism Development Project to re-develop and market Montserrat's tourism products. Among other things, the project will assist the private sector in establishing a market for diving through effective marketing and promotions. In addition, it will enhance the image of Montserrat as a destination for diving, while conserving the reef and marine environment through the establishment of diving sites and moorings.

Mosquito Nets (Africa)

Mr. Borrow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what aid his Department is providing to assist in the purchase of mosquito nets in Africa; and if he will list the aid provided to each country for this purpose. [26142]

Hilary Benn: DFID provides considerable amounts of aid to Africa as non-earmarked Poverty Reduction Budgetary Support (PRBS) or sector support. Consequently, it is not possible to provide a precise figure for the amount of aid DFID has provided towards specific programme components such as mosquito nets.

In addition, DFID supports a number of specific programmes which distribute insecticide treated mosquito nets as part of countries' comprehensive malaria control plans. In Tanzania, for example, DFID provided £8.4 million between 2003 and 2004 and has committed a further £10.3 million up until 2007 for delivery of insecticide treated nets.

DFID also channels funds through multilateral bodies such as the Global Fund to fight AIDS, TB and Malaria (GFATM) and UNICEF. In July 2005, DFID announced a doubling of its contribution to GFATM to £200 million for 2006–07, bringing our total pledge to the GFATM to £359 million through to 2008. DFID's contribution to the Global Fund is not earmarked, but so far around one third of GFATM funds have been spent on malaria interventions including mosquito nets.

Uganda

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the humanitarian situation in northern Uganda; and if he will make a statement. [33187]

Hilary Benn: The humanitarian situation in northern Uganda is extremely serious. 1.4 million people are living in camps for internally displaced people as a result of the conflict involving the Lord's Resistance Army (LRA). Those displaced are dependent on food aid and other humanitarian assistance. Mortality rates in the camps are high. 63 per cent. of the population in the North live below the poverty line, compared to 38 per cent. in Uganda as a whole. Although the conflict is characterised by low levels of engagement, there is a constant threat of child abduction and people live in fear of their lives.

In our discussions with the Government of Uganda, the UK emphasises the importance of adequate protection for civilians in the North and meeting humanitarian needs. We are providing substantial assistance to help address the humanitarian situation. In 2004–05 we made available £11 million to improve access to food and essential social services. So far in 2005–06, we have already committed £3 million to the World Food Programme (WFP) and are currently conducting a further assessment of need with the intention of providing additional resources to WFP and other humanitarian agencies in the next few months. As a result of recent LRA attacks, many humanitarian agencies have been forced to curtail their movement outside major towns. The WFP, however, continues to deliver essential emergency food aid as normal under heavy military escort.

United States Hurricane

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the cost was of the ration packs delivered as hurricane disaster relief and impounded by US authorities; what the cost was of their delivery; what steps are being taken to retrieve them; from which Government reserves they came; what discussions he has had with logistical staff from the Ministry of Defence on the impact of the despatch on army supplies; and if he will make a statement. [33741]

Hilary Benn: The ration packs were supplied by the Ministry of Defence and DFID had no direct involvement in the arrangements. The provision of these supplies does not impact on future humanitarian responses and therefore there has not been a need for DFID to discuss their impact on army supplies with the Ministry of Defence.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Adoption

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many children were placed for adoption in Northern Ireland in each year since 1990, broken down by age. [33073]

Mr. Woodward: Information on how many children were placed for adoption in Northern Ireland is not available centrally.

Adult Illiteracy

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what criteria are used to assess illiteracy in adults in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [33082]

Mr. Hanson: In the absence of my hon. Friend, the Member for Basildon (Angela E. Smith), I have been asked to reply.

Research to date has focused on measuring levels of literacy and at present no data is available which specifically identifies the levels of illiteracy.

The International Adult Literacy Survey (IALS,) which was carried out in 1996, indicated that 24 per cent. of the adult population in Northern Ireland performed at the lowest levels of literacy, level 1. It defines literacy as,

> 'using printed and written information to function in society, to achieve one's goals and to develop one's knowledge and potential'.

Since the launch of the Essential Skills for Living Strategy in October 2002, the Department has met, and exceeded, its interim target to support 25,000 adults to improve their levels of literacy and numeracy.

All-Ireland Free Travel Scheme

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when discussions will be concluded between the Department of Regional Development in Northern Ireland and the Department of Social and Family Affairs in the Republic of Ireland on the technical details of the all-Ireland free travel scheme; when the implementation and introduction of the scheme will be announced; and when the new scheme will start. [33538]

Mr. Woodward: DRD officials are still considering with their Republic of Ireland counterparts the operational and resource issues related to extension of all-Ireland free travel for pensioners. I am not yet able to say when it will be completed or when a scheme could be implemented.

Bankruptcies

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many bankruptcies there have been in Northern Ireland in each of the last 10 years. [32232]

Mr. Hanson: In the absence of my hon. Friend, the Member for Basildon (Angela E. Smith), I have been asked to reply.

The following table shows the number of bankruptcies in Northern Ireland in each of the last 10 financial years.

1996	408
1997	371
1998	417
1999	405
2000	395
2001	331
2002	280
2003	350
2004[1]	582
Total	4,224

[1] The increase in the figures for years ending 31 March 2004 and 31 March 2005 are due mainly to an increase in the numbers of consumer (non-trader) bankruptcies which has been brought about by a rise in credit card debt and increased personal lending.

Blue Badge Thefts

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many incidents of the theft of disabled persons' blue badges have been reported in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years. [33080]

Mr. Woodward: The chief executive of Roads Service (Dr. Malcolm McKibbin) has been asked to write to the hon. Gentleman in response to this question.

Letter from Dr. Malcolm McKibbin to Mr. Peter Robinson, dated 1 December 2005:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland a Parliamentary Question about how many incidents of theft of disabled persons' blue badges have been reported in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years.

I have been asked to reply as the issue raised falls within my responsibility as Chief Executive of Roads Service.

I must advise that Roads Service holds records in respect of blue badge applications for a 3 year period. As Roads Service receives approximately 2000 applications per month, the specific information you requested is not readily available and could only be compiled for the last 3 years at disproportionate costs.

However, to try to be of some assistance we have compiled information for the period January to October 2005, and can advise that during this period Roads Service received 88 applications for replacement blue badges where badge holders have stated theft was involved. This represents around 3% of the applications over the same period. Of these 29 were purely the theft of a blue badge and in 59 cases the blue badge was lost/stolen as part of an associated theft e.g. stolen handbag or stolen car.

I hope this information is helpful.

Bullying

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many instances of school bullying in (a) primary and (b) post-primary schools have been recorded in the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [32099]

Mr. Hanson: In the absence of my hon. Friend, the Member for Basildon (Angela E. Smith), I have been asked to reply.

The Department of Education does not collect the information requested.

Information about the scale and nature of bullying in Northern Ireland schools is contained in a research report published in October 2002. A research briefing summary is available on the Department's website at www.deni.gov.uk/rb8_2002.pdf.

The Department has recently commissioned updated research into bullying, in all its forms, and the results will also be published in due course.

Consumer Debt

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the average level of consumer debt in Northern Ireland was in the last period for which figures are available; what assessment he has made of the differential with other parts of the UK; and if he will make a statement. [32104]

Mr. Hanson: In the absence of my hon. Friend, the Member for Basildon (Angela E. Smith), I have been asked to reply.

Research commissioned by the General Consumer Council for Northern Ireland in February 2004 estimated that overall consumer debt, including mortgages, averaged £15,300 per respondent. Excluding mortgages, the average debt was £2,300 per respondent. This was based on a representative sample of 1,020 Northern Ireland consumers.

At present, there are no directly comparable figures for the rest of the UK. Further research is under way and, when completed, will allow more detailed comparisons of consumer debt within the UK to be made.

Doctors and Nurses

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) doctors and (b) nurses there were per head of population in (i) Northern Ireland and (ii) each Health Board in each year since 1995. [33089]

Mr. Woodward: The information requested is provided in the following tables.

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many family planning clinics there were in Northern Ireland in each year since 1990; and how many women were seen by them in each year, broken down by health board. [33088]

Mr. Woodward: Information on the number of family planning clinics is not available centrally. Freelance Musicians

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will take steps to ensure that the policy of the Inland Revenue on liability for national insurance contributions does not lead to the loss of full-time jobs in the Ulster Orchestra. [30342]

Mr. Hanson: In the absence of my hon. Friend the hon. Member for Basildon (Angela E. Smith), I have been asked to reply.

The Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure and the Arts Council of Northern Ireland are monitoring discussions currently taking place between the Department for Culture, Media and Sport, Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs, the Arts Council of England, the Association of British Orchestras and the Musicians Union about the national insurance liability on musicians' earnings. These discussions are ongoing and at an early stage.

Fugitives from Justice

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many fugitives from justice meet the criteria for release under the Government's plans. [31993]

Mr. Hain: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Lagan Valley (Mr. Donaldson) on 21 November 2005, Official Report, column 1643W.

Hip Replacements

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many hip replacement operations were performed in each of the last five years, broken down by health board. [33075]

Hospitality Budgets

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the total hospitality budget is for his Department's Ministers for 2005–06, including alcohol, food, staff in attendance and other related costs. [32088]

Mr. Woodward: The total hospitality budget for the Northern Ireland Ministers, for 2005–06, is £17,000. This figure includes alcohol, food and other related costs. The Minister's staff in attendance budget is not included as it forms part of the total staffing budget and we cannot identify the service specifically for Ministers.

The NIO provides for ministerial hospitality where the function is in the direct interests of the Northern Ireland Office. The level of hospitality must be defined, and a broad outline of cost and numbers attending must be provided on all occasions before authorisation. Expenditure should be kept as low as possible, compatible with the occasion and the standing of the guests.

Inward Investment

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what his assessment is of the effect on foreign direct investment of corporation tax differentials between Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland. [32120]

Mr. Hanson: In the absence of my hon. Friend, the Member for Basildon (Angela E. Smith), I have been asked to reply.

Care should be exercised in contrasting corporation tax rates with those, for example, in the Republic of Ireland. Comparing the headline rate fails to take account of differences in tax allowances. For example, the C.D. Howe Institute estimate the effective corporate tax rate to be 21.7 per cent. in the United Kingdom, compared to 13.7 per cent. for the Republic of Ireland.

However, in relation to the attraction of foreign direct investment, corporation tax is only one element in the decision-making process. Invest Northern Ireland tailors its marketing efforts towards foreign direct investment projects where Northern Ireland is likely to have the most competitive solution.

If corporation tax is the main deciding factor or driving force behind a project, it becomes considerably more difficult for Northern Ireland to secure such projects.

Mental Health Bill

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what discussions he has had with his Cabinet colleagues on the extension of the draft Mental Health Bill to Northern Ireland; and if he will list the parts of that Bill which he expects to extend to Northern Ireland. [33236]

Mr. Woodward: Officials have been liaising with their colleagues in England on the draft Mental Health Bill on those parts that extend to Northern Ireland. These are section 214, "the Transfer and Return of Patients", sections 363 to 366, "Notification of Speaker in relation to Member of Parliament" and schedule 12, "Member of Parliament Liable to Compulsory Provision: Interpretation".

At present, the mental health legislation extant in Northern Ireland is the Mental Health (Northern Ireland) Order 1986. New legislation will be introduced following the current Review of Mental Health and Learning Disability.

Ministerial Travel

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much was spent in each year from 1 May 1997 on ministerial travel, broken down by (a) provision and running costs of vehicular transport, (b) first class travel by rail, (c) standard class travel by rail, (d) first class travel by air, (e) club or equivalent class travel by air and (f) economy class travel by air. [27682]

Mr. Woodward: All ministerial travel is undertaken in accordance with the rules set out in the ministerial code and travel by Ministers, copies of which are available in the Libraries of the House.

In respect of ministerial cars provided by the Government Car and Despatch Agency (GCDA); my hon. Friend, the Parliamentary Secretary at the Cabinet Office (Mr. Jim Murphy) has asked Roy Burke, chief executive of the GCDA, to write to the hon. Member with details of the costs of ministerial vehicles provided to Departments in 2004–05. Copies of his letter will be placed in the Library.

For information for the financial years 2000–01 to 2003–04 I refer the hon. Member to the letters from the chief executive of the GCDA to the hon. Member for Buckingham (John Bercow) dated 10 January 2005 and to the then hon. Member for Arundel and South Downs (Howard Flight) dated 13 September 2003. Copies of these letters are available in the Library.

In respect to domestic ministerial travel, we are unable to provide the information in the format requested by the hon. Member. We cannot identify travel by class for both rail and air nor can we separately identify costs solely for the Ministers. The following table provides the total ministerial team (Ministers and their support staff) rail and air expenditure for the years for which the information is available.

The Government have also published on an annual basis the cost of all Ministers' visits overseas. Copies of the lists are available in the Libraries of the House. These report information for the financial years 1995–06 to 2004–05. Information for 2005–06 will be published as soon as it is ready after the end of the current financial year.

Mr. Woodward: The information requested is provided in the following tables. The statistics for 1997 and 1998 are provided by sub-divisional command rather than district command unit as they are only available in this format.

NHS (Elderly Staff)

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many employees aged over 70 years are working in the national health service in Northern Ireland. [33090]

Mr. Woodward: There were 12 (7.29 WTE) members of staff employed within the NI HPSS who were aged over 70 as at 30 September 2005.

Northern Ireland Assembly (Land Use Powers)

Dr. McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what powers the Northern Ireland Assembly would have to (a) amend and (b) to delete (i) green belt designations, (ii) areas of outstanding natural beauty designations and (iii) sites of special scientific interest after area plans have been adopted. [30766]

Angela E. Smith: The Northern Ireland Executive would be responsible for the implementation of Northern Ireland legislation governing planning matters and conservation designations.

Green belts, but not areas of outstanding natural beauty or areas of special scientific interest, are established through the area plan process. In the case of green belt designations any amendment or deletion must be carried out through the statutory process to alter an area plan, as set out in the Planning (Northern Ireland) Order 1991.

The Nature Conservation and Amenity Lands (Northern Ireland) Order 1985 (as amended), under which areas of outstanding natural beauty are designated, also allows the Department to amend or delete these areas. Similarly, there are provisions in the Environment (Northern Ireland) Order 2002, under which areas of special scientific interest are declared, which empower the Department to amend or delete such areas where their scientific interest has been lost.

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many nursing vacancies there are in each health board area; and how many nurses are employed in each of the hospitals in Northern Ireland. [33065]

Parole

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what methods are used in Northern Ireland for tracking prisoners on parole; and if he will make a statement. [31982]

Mr. Woodward: The term "parole" in Northern Ireland is taken to refer to home and resettlement leave.

The Northern Ireland Prison Service is not directly involved with tracking prisoners on parole. However, the PSNI are provided with details of successful applicants for home leave including their addresses and any conditions attached to granting of leave, such as alcohol and/or curfew restrictions. In addition, prisoners may be required to undergo drugs and alcohol testing before leaving and on return to prison. They may also be required to report during release to the Probation Service, who are fully informed regarding home leave conditions. Prisoners may also be required to attend a "checkpoint" meeting with staff during home leave and keep a diary.

Certain prisoners, including life sentence prisoners, may be accompanied on periods of home leave particularly during the early stages. Where they are permitted overnight stays, there will be hostel supervision.

Young offenders are required to meet their Probation Officer during home leave. A member of Opportunity Youth may also call unannounced at the home address to check that conditions of temporary release, such as no alcohol, are being adhered to. Young Offenders not subject to custody probation orders are required to report to a local police station during home leave.

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what criteria are applied in Northern Ireland when considering whether a prisoner is eligible for parole; and if he will make a statement. [31983]

Mr. Woodward: The term "parole" in Northern Ireland refers to home and resettlement leave.

On 1 March 2004 the Prison Service introduced a new home leave scheme which provides quotas of home and resettlement leave for determinate sentence and life sentence prisoners.

Determinate sentence prisoners sentenced on or after that date may now avail of leave only during the last 12 months of sentence. The number of days' leave granted depends on the length of sentence and continuous custody. All applications by determinate sentence prisoners are considered by the Home Leave Board of the prison establishment concerned and are subject to a satisfactory risk assessment. Each prisoner must provide the board with reasons why home leave is requested and indicate how he will use home leave constructively. Victim issues are also taken into consideration.

The same considerations apply to life sentence prisoners.

Police

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people are employed by each district command unit to collate and produce Police Service of Northern Ireland statistical information. [31936]

Mr. Woodward: The Police Service of Northern Ireland does not employ staff in any DCU with the specific remit of statistical collation.

Statistics relating to the main crime types (as outlined by the Home Office counting rules) are automatically generated by computerised crime recording. It is the responsibility of PSNI's central statistics unit to collate and present statistics relating to these matters of crime, security, drugs and certain roads policing offences.

PSNI Headquarters Departments also gather information from DCU's and Branches relating to matters of strategic importance, for example issues contained in the policing plan.

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) female and (b) male Police Service of Northern Ireland officers were recruited in each year for which figures are available, broken down by (i) Protestants, (ii) Catholics and (iii) others. [31940]

Mr. Woodward: I am advised that the breakdown of officers recruited by PSNI are as follows.

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what guidance his Department has given the Police Service of Northern Ireland on the (a) purchase and (b) hire of police road vehicles. [31953]

Mr. Woodward: Under the terms of the Management Statement issued by the Department to the Chief Constable in respect of the grant made available for police purposes, the Chief Constable is responsible for ensuring that efficient financial systems and procedures are in place. The Department has not given PSNI any specific guidance on (a) the purchase, (b) the hire of police road vehicles, however PSNI have a service level agreement (SLA) with the NIO Procurement Unit under which advice and guidance can be provided on procurement issues as required.

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many police vehicles in each district command unit were (a) purchased and (b) hired in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [33069]

Mr. Woodward: The purchase and hire of vehicles is conducted by Transport Services Branch, not at DCU level. The total figures for vehicle purchase and hire are set out as follows:

	Vehicles purchased	Hire of vehicles
2002–03	346	27

Prescriptions

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) paid for and (b) free prescriptions were issued in each health board area in Northern Ireland in each of the last 10 years. [33071]

Mr. Woodward: As prescription forms may include several different items, which may each attract a separate charge, the questioner's term "prescriptions" is therefore interpreted as prescription items.

(a) The number of prescription items for which the full prescription charge was paid at the point of dispensing by board, from 1997 to 2004 is given in the table.

Based upon sample analyses, it is estimated that at the NI level a further 5 per cent. of prescription items are covered by pre-payment certificates (PPCs), which allow the patient to obtain as many prescription items as necessary during the four or 12 month validity of the certificate for a set fee.

Total items paid[1] for at point of dispensing by health and social services board—1997 to 2004

[1] Figures exclude items covered by pre-payment certificate—estimated to be 5 per cent. at the Northern Ireland level.

(b) It is estimated that at the NI level about 89 per cent. of health service prescription items are dispensed free of charge to patients. As this is an estimate these figures could not be presented by board in the following table. Therefore, the table only shows items which the patient did not pay the prescription charge (£6.40 in 2004–05) directly to the pharmacist. A further estimated 5 per cent. of all items are covered by pre-payment certificates previously purchased by the patient.

Prisons

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the cost has been in each prison in Northern Ireland in the last five years of providing (a) educational facilities, (b) dental services, (c) medical services, including costs involved in transporting inmates to and from hospital, (d) clothing and (e) food; and if he will make a statement. [32092]

Mr. Woodward: The aggregate resource costs for the whole of the last five financial years, from 2000–01 to 2004–05 are:

£000

	Education facilities	Dental services	Medical services	Clothing	Food
Maghaberry	9,013	479	13,189	104	2,442
Magilligan	6,846	364	4,208	87	1,356

Magilligan Prison

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether the Government has commissioned an economic assessment of the impact on the North West of Northern Ireland of (a) closing Magilligan Prison and (b) the potential alternatives for the site. [32832]

Mr. Woodward: Yes, the Prison Service commissioned an assessment of the socio-economic impact of the location of the second adult prison. The report will very shortly be finalised.

The economic assessment considered the location of the new prison in its current location and at three other geographical areas with Northern Ireland. These included:

1. The Ballymena area (including Antrim);
2. Lisburn
3. Portadown/Craigavon/Dunngannon.

Public Bodies

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many public bodies in Northern Ireland have paid travel and subsistence expenses in the past five years for non-executive directors and board members who live outside the UK and Ireland. [29171]

Mr. Hanson: In the absence of my hon. Friend, the Member for Basildon (Angela E. Smith), I have been asked to reply.

One public body in Northern Ireland has paid travel and subsistence expenses in the past five years for a non-executive director or board member living outside the UK and Ireland.

Sentencing

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish the conclusions of the Review of Minimum Terms and Life Sentence Cases. [32685]

Mr. Hanson: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave on 16 November 2005, Official Report, column 1331W.

Smoking

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment has been made by his Department of the medical effects of smoking by pregnant women on the health of an unborn child. [33085]

Mr. Woodward: Smoking is a critical women's health issue for both mother and child. Smoking in pregnancy is associated with many problems both for the foetus and newly born baby, including miscarriage, placenta damage, pre-term delivery, low birthweight, perinatal death and sudden infant death syndrome.

The Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety published a five year tobacco action plan in 2003. The plan identified pregnant women as a key target group.

Stun Guns

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people he has authorised to have stun guns. [31944]

Mr. Woodward: One person has been authorised by the Secretary of State to possess Taser guns for demonstration to the Police Service Northern Ireland.

Translink

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether Translink takes into account pupils not using bus services as a result of their participation in extra-curricular activities when determining the number of bus journeys undertaken by children qualifying for the free school transport system in an academic year for the purposes of calculating the amount to be charged to the education and library boards in Northern Ireland for the service. [32217]

Mr. Hanson: In the absence of my hon. Friend, the Member for Basildon (Angela E. Smith), I have been asked to reply.

Translink does not take account of pupils attending extra-curricular activities when calculating the cost of a sessional ticket, as it is assumed that such pupils will use their sessional ticket to travel home on a later service. Pupils can use their sessional tickets on Translink services until 18.30 hours on any given school day. A sessional ticket cost is, therefore, calculated on the basis that pupils will avail of the Translink service both to and from home on each school day.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Child Support Agency

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many non-resident parents in Scotland are paying the £5 flat rate of child support per week in the latest period for which figures are available; and in how many cases these payments are being deducted from social security payments by the Child Support Agency; [31122]

(2) how many Scottish Child Support Agency claims operating under the old scheme of calculation due to transfer to the new scheme, but where the transfer had not yet taken place, there were in each month since March 2003; [31138]

(3) how many potential child support cases in Scotland are awaiting processing at the point of entry for benefit cases via the Jobcentre Plus interface; [31145]

(4) what his estimate is of the number of non-resident parents for Scottish Child Support Agency claims who (a) make maintenance payments under the Child Support Agency (CSA) rules, (b) cannot be traced to pay under the CSA, (c) are assessed to have a zero liability due to low income, (d) are assessed to make payments but do not do so regularly, (e) have made alternative maintenance arrangements outside the CSA and (f) make no payments and are not referred to the CSA; [31150]

(5) what his estimate is of the number of Scottish Child Support Agency claims (a) received and (b) cleared in each month between January 2004 and October 2005; [31151]

(6) what the Child Support Agency's Scottish caseload has been in each quarter from 1997 to the third quarter of 2005; and if he will make a statement. [31152]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information requested is not available.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the (a) latest accuracy rates and (b) accuracy targets are for (i) new and (ii) old Child Support Agency cases; and if he will make a statement. [21447]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty to Mr. David Laws, dated 1 December 2005:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency, the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what the (a) latest accuracy rates and (b) accuracy targets are for (i) new and (ii) old Child Support Agency cases; and if he will make a statement.

The compliance targets and performance rates to September 2005 are presented in the table below.

Percentage

	Target	Performance at September 2005
New scheme accuracy	90	83
Old scheme accuracy	82	80

Note:
Accuracy is measured cumulatively month-on-month throughout the year.

I hope you find this helpful.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he expects to report on housing benefit reform and the effects of the local housing allowance pilots. [33770]

Mr. Plaskitt: I refer my right hon. Friend to the written answer I gave the hon. Member for Wycombe (Mr. Goodman) on 24 November 2005, Official Report, column 2254W.

Pensions

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the cost to business of the decision to allow into the Pension Protection Fund (PPF) the schemes of companies which had experienced an insolvency event before the PPF was launched. [30645]

Mr. Timms: The indicative view from the PPF is that the impact on levies and thus the cost to business is minimal.

Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will bring forward further measures to restore pensions lost through scheme wind-ups prior to 5 April. [32516]

Mr. Timms: The Government have set up the Financial Assistance Scheme to help some people who have lost out on their defined benefit pension because their pension scheme is winding up underfunded and the employer is insolvent or no longer exists. It will apply to schemes which started to wind-up before 6 April 2005 when the Pension Protection Fund came in.

The scheme will be reviewed alongside other spending priorities in the forthcoming comprehensive spending review

Remploy

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many Remploy employees in management grades are disabled. [21713]

Mrs. McGuire: There are 220 people employed by Remploy in management grades that have declared themselves as disabled.

Source:
Remploy

Retirement Age

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether he plans to increase the compulsory minimum retirement age for members of stakeholder pension plans. [33572]

Mr. Timms: The normal minimum age at which a member may draw benefits from a stakeholder pension plan will increase from 50 to 55 by 6 April 2010, in line with the new simplified tax rules for pension schemes that take effect from 6 April 2006.

HEALTH

Avian Influenza

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment she has made of which human population cohorts are most at risk from co-infection of the H5N1 and a human host adapted influenza virus; [24012]

(2) what steps she is taking to reduce the risk of co-infection by the H5N1 and a human host adapted influenza virus to those assessed as most at risk. [24016]

Caroline Flint: H5N1 is currently an avian influenza virus and mainly affects birds. There have been infrequent cases in some people who are closely exposed to infected poultry. As of 15 November 2005, there have been 125 cases of the H5N1 strain of avian influenza in people in South East Asia, 64 of whom have died. There is concern that the virus could evolve into a strain which readily infects people and is easily transmissible between people, resulting in a pandemic virus. This is why we are planning for a possible human flu pandemic.

People in close contact with infected poultry, or infected material from poultry, could be most at risk of co-infection with the H5N1 virus and a human influenza virus. This could include poultry farm workers, veterinarians and others directly involved in animal disease control.

In the event of an outbreak of H5N1 in United Kingdom poultry, those groups at high risk of exposure would be offered antiviral drugs to prevent the development of infection, and seasonal flu vaccination to prevent the risk of re-assortment with human flu virus.

Bed Occupancy (Dacorum)

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average bed occupancy rate was at NHS units in Dacorum in each year since 1997. [29902]

Caroline Flint: The average bed occupancy rate at national health service units in Dacorum in each year since 1997 is shown in the table.

Occupancy rate, beds provided by West Hertfordshire Hospitals NHS Trust and Dacorum PCT, 1997–98 to 2004–05

	Percentage occupancy
1997–98	77.1
1998–99	80.1
1999–2000	81.6
2000–01	85.6
2001–02	86.1
2002–03	87.0
2003–04	79.5
2004–05	79.0

Notes:
1. Beds provided by West Hertfordshire Hospitals NHS Trust and Dacorum PCT have been used in the table.
2. West Hertfordshire Hospitals NHS Trust was formed on 1 April 2000 following the merger of St. Albans and Hemel Hempstead NHS Trust and Mount Vernon and Watford NHS Trust.

Blood Transfusion Service

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the total cost of the blood transfusion service in England has been in each of the last three years. [20168]

Caroline Flint: The National Blood Service[1] was responsible for the supply of blood in England and North Wales. The expenditure for the National Blood Service (NBS) for the last three years was:

Breast Cancer

Dr. Blackman-Woods: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what priority is being given by the Government to (a) the treatment, (b) research into and (c) the financing of measures concerned with inflammatory breast cancer. [15061]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department is taking action in several areas to improve the treatment of all breast cancers, including inflammatory breast cancer.

Five of the newer breast cancer drugs have already been appraised by the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) for use in the national health service. It is estimated that around 7,500 women could benefit from these new drugs a year;

A number of other breast cancer drugs are currently being considered by NICE including hormonal therapies which are commonly used for inflammatory breast cancer;

Service guidance to all professionals on breast cancer was published by NICE in August 2002. The document aims to help shape and improve the delivery of healthcare for women with breast cancer;

NICE is also developing guidelines on the clinical management of breast cancer. This will help clinicians give the optimal care and treatment to breast cancer patients.

Cancer is a top Government priority. In the NHS cancer plan, published September 2000, the Department confirmed its commitment to increasing investment in cancer research. The Government's total expenditure on cancer research was estimated to be £190 million in 2000–01. By 2004–05, it will be spending an additional £20 million a year on the NHS infrastructure for cancer research.

We are already putting record amounts of new investment into the NHS—between 2003 and 2008 NHS expenditure in England will increase on average by 7.5 per cent. each year. It is for primary care trusts (PCTs) to decide how best to spend these resources taking into account local circumstances.

PCTs have many competing priorities but cancer is a national and local priority. Every PCT will have a sizeable number of people in their area who will be diagnosed with the disease, live with the disease and who die from the disease each year. PCTs will need to ensure they allocate sufficient resource to meet their local contribution to tackling cancer care or other areas.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps she is taking to improve the accuracy of mammography screening; [28427]

(2) whether she plans to introduce a system which would allow for all mammography x-rays to be checked twice for signs of malignancy; [28428]

(3) what plans she has to increase the availability of mammography screening for younger women. [28429]

Ms Rosie Winterton: To improve the accuracy of mammography screening we have upgraded the national health service breast screening programme (NHSBSP) by offering two-view mammography, two x-rays of each breast, at all screening rounds. Over 95 per cent. of breast screening units have now implemented two-views, resulting in a 31 per cent. increase in the number of cancers detected annually since April 2001, when roll out began.

The quality assurance process ensures that the high quality standards of the NHSBSP are not only maintained, but continue to rise year on year. As part of this continuous improvement to the service, the NHSBSP, with the Department and Cancer Research UK funding, is about to begin a major study looking at the use of computer aided reading of mammograms in addition to a human reader. This study is expected to report in two years time.

The Department is also funding, along with the Medical Research Council and Cancer Research UK, the UK Coordinating Committee on Cancer Research randomised controlled trial of the effect on breast cancer mortality of annual mammographic screening of women starting at age 40, the age trial. The main aim of the study is to evaluate the effect of annual mammographic screening of women starting at ages 40 to 41 on mortality from breast cancer, thus giving a definitive answer to the outstanding question of whether population screening below 50 is beneficial or not. As the trial is primarily looking at mortality benefits, full results are not expected before spring 2006.

Dr. Ann David

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will ask Essex police to reopen its investigation into deaths of patients of Dr. Ann David at Basildon Hospital. [30949]

Ms Rosie Winterton: [holding answer 22 November 2005]: It would not be appropriate for the Secretary of State for Health to ask Essex police to reopen its investigation into deaths of patients of Dr. Ann David at Basildon Hospital. However, the Basildon and Thurrock Hospitals National Health Service Foundation Trust is in contact with Essex police, who are currently considering whether to reopen their investigations into the deaths of a number of patients.

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will establish an inquiry into patients' deaths at Basildon Hospital, consequent upon the General Medical Council removing the name of Ann David from the Register; and if she will make a statement. [30950]

Ms Rosie Winterton: [holding answer 22 November 2005]: The Essex Strategic Health Authority will consider whether to hold an inquiry at the conclusion of the police investigations and other procedures.

Dentistry

Sir Paul Beresford: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures she has taken to encourage patients to keep dental appointments; and what research her Department (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the effects of abolishing the capacity of dentists to impose a charge on patients for missed appointments to support the abolition of the option for general dental practitioners to make a small patient charge for missed appointments. [24559]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 3 November 2005]: The Department has agreed that advice should be available to the national health service and dentists about how appointments are managed to minimise missed appointments, without financial penalty to patients.

We do not think that the level of missed appointments would seriously undermine a dentist's ability to carry out the level of weighted activity agreed in the contract.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) hospital and (b community dentists have been employed in each year since 1997, broken down by strategic health authority area. [26008]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Details of the total number of hospital and community dentists employed in each strategic health authority area since 1997 are shown in the following table.

Health Protection Agency

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the Department will make a statement on (a) the evidence given by and (b) recommendations made by representatives of the Health Protection Agency (HPA) to the Royal Commission on Environmental Pollution. [32286]

Caroline Flint: The Department will be contributing to the Government response to the Royal Commission on Environmental Pollution's report on "Crop Spraying and the Health of Residents and Bystanders" which is being coordinated by the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs. Officials in the Department have been discussing with the Health Protection Agency (HPA) issues of common interest with respect to the report.

The Government response may contain direct reference to statements made by the HPA. The Government are committed to respond to the report within a year of publication.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the survey that the Health Protection Agency carried out on laboratories, referred to in its oral evidence given to the Royal Commission on Environmental Protection; and whether the survey will be published. [32300]

Caroline Flint: The Department will be contributing to the Government response to the Royal Commission on Environmental Pollution's report on "Crop Spraying and the Health of Residents and Bystanders", which is being coordinated by the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs. Officials in the Department have been discussing with the Health Protection Agency issues of common interest with respect to the report.

The Government response may contain direct reference to statements made by the Health Protection Agency (HPA). The Government are committed to respond to the report within a year of publication. The Department cannot comment on whether the HPA's survey will be published.

Community Pharmacies (Uxbridge)

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many community pharmacies in Uxbridge constituency have (a) opened and (b) closed since 1997. [29769]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information on the number of community pharmacies by constituency is not centrally collected. However, information prior to 2002 is available by health authority (HA), and from 2002, by primary care trust (PCT).

The Uxbridge constituency is currently served by Hillingdon PCT. It previously sat within Hillingdon HA.

Table one shows the number of community pharmacies by HA prior to 2002.

Table 1: By health authority 1997 to 2002

	Total number of pharmacies in Hillingdon HA	Opened	Closed
1997–98	63	0	0
1999–2000	62	0	0

Table two shows the number of community pharmacies by PCI from 2002 onwards.

Table 2: By primary care trust 2002–04

	Total number of pharmacies in Hillingdon PCT	Opened	Closed

Data on pharmacy numbers:
From October 2002, PCTs took over responsibility for community pharmacies from health authorities. Therefore, data on the number of pharmacies in England with NHS contracts is broken down to health authority level until 2001–02, and PCT level from 2002–03 level onwards. The change from HAs to PCTs may have resulted in some boundary changes that is reflected in the data.
Information on the number of community pharmacies is collected from PCTs via the annual PHS1 data collection. The latest data available on General Pharmaceutical Services (1993–94 to 2003–04) was published in January 2005 on the website www.publication.doh.gov.uk/public/sb0505.htm.
Data for 2004–05 is not yet available.

Influenza

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the take-up of the pneumococcal vaccine has been in (a) all those aged over 80 years and (b) all those aged over 65 years since 1997–98; and if she will make a statement. [28708]

Caroline Flint: As of 31 March 2005, around 81.0 per cent. of people aged 80 years and over had been vaccinated with pneumococcal vaccine. As of the 31 March 2005, around 48.1 percent., of people aged 65 years and over had been vaccinated with pneumococcal vaccine. It should be noted that up until this date only those 75 years and over had been offered the vaccine routinely.

The policy to vaccinate those aged 65 years and over was introduced on 1 April 2005. Data on the number of people aged 65 years and over who were vaccinated from 1 April 2005 to 1 April 2006 will be collected from autumn 2006.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment has been made of the stocks of influenza vaccine in the NHS. [28992]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 15 November 2005]: There are 14 million doses of seasonal flu vaccine available this year, more than previous years, and enough to vaccinate all over 65s and those in at risk groups specified in the chief medical officer's letter of 25 July. We are aware that demand for the vaccine is higher than many surgeries were expecting at this stage in the vaccination campaign and are providing additional vaccine general practitioners from our contingency stock. In addition to this, we have obtained a further 800,000 doses which will be delivered in January.

Mixed Sex Wards

Mr. Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Shrewsbury and Atcham (Daniel Kawczynski) of 4 July 2005, Official Report, column 224W, on mixed sex wards, what criteria were used in setting the target at 95 percent. of trusts. [18563]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The target to eliminate mixed sex accommodation in 95 percent., of national health service trusts was established following a review of health authorities' target dates for meeting three objectives to eliminate mixed-sex accommodation.

The outcomes of this review were published in 1998 by my Noble Friend, Baroness Jay, and indicated that 95 per cent. of health authorities' forecast that they would achieve compliance by December 2002. This was adopted as the target for the NHS.

Northian and Broad Oak Surgeries

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations she has received regarding the development of Northian and Broad Oak surgeries; and if she will make a statement. [32142]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 28 November 2005]: Since June 2005, the Department has received seven letters and a parcel of 1,500 plus campaign letters.

The campaign letters have been forwarded to Bexhill and Rother primary care trust (PCT) which commissions services from the surgeries. This is because the modernisation of primary health care premises is determined locally by consultation between PCTs and general practitioner practices in conjunction with their strategic health authorities (SHAs).

Nationally, the Government are committed to improving the infrastructure of primary care by modernising service delivery, access and choice in the national health service. Increased funding has been made available to PCTs to implement these service improvements.

However, PCTs have to prioritise the planning, development and improvement of services to meet the needs of local people. With their specialised knowledge of the local community, they are effectively able to manage and improve local services.

Surrey and Sussex SHA advise that Bexhill and Rother PCT is working with partners at the surgeries to support their expansion plans within the funding that the PCT can make available.

Nutrition and Health Claims Directive

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the process will be for submitting claims to the Community Register under the proposed EU nutrition and health claims made on foods proposal; when her Department will begin the consultation process on the proposal; and if she will make a statement. [31947]

Caroline Flint: Under the proposed regulation on nutrition and health claims made on foods, member states must submit to the European Commission a list of certain health claims, notably those related to functions of the body, by one year after the regulation has been adopted. The proposal is not expected to be adopted until the second half of next year. The Food Standards Agency has been exploring possible bases for compiling the list with various interested parties and will consider how best to involve stakeholders further.

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions her Department has had with other EU member states about the process for submitting claims to the Community Register under the proposed EU regulation on nutrition and health claims made on foods; what the outcome of these discussions was; and if she will make a statement. [31948]

Caroline Flint: The proposed regulation is still under negotiation and not expected to be adopted until the second half of next year. Member states' lists will not have to be submitted to the Commission for a further year. No formal discussions have been held with other member states although informal soundings of some countries have shown they are starting to explore the issues involved in drawing up and submitting their lists.

Mrs. Villiers: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the Department has conducted cost impact assessments in relation to the proposed EU directive on nutrition and health claims. [30228]

Caroline Flint: An initial regulatory impact assessment (RIA) was placed in the Library with the explanatory memorandum for this proposed European Union regulation in August 2003. It has since been revised by the Food Standards Agency to reflect progress in the negotiations on the proposed measure and information received from stakeholders. The partial RIA was copied to the Chairs of the European Scrutiny Committees of both Houses in April 2005.

Obesity

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 19 July 2005, Official Report, column 1677W, on obesity, if she will place in the Library her Department's assessment of local delivery plans. [18807]

Caroline Flint: The local development plans (LDPs) including financial plans, with all strategic health authorities (SHAs) were signed off and agreed in August. As the LDPs are owned by primary care trusts and SHAs, it is usual practice for them to publish their own LDP once agreed with the Department.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research she has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the effect of obesity on the number of visits patients make to general practitioners regarding (i) their weight and (ii) other health complaints. [30240]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 22 November 2005]: No research has been commissioned on the effect of obesity on the number of visits patients make to general practitioners regarding their weight and other health complaints. However, the National Audit Office report, "Tackling Obesity in England", published in 2001, estimated that there were over 500,000 consultations recorded in 1998 at a cost of £6.8 million. As part of its enquiry into obesity, the Health Select Committee estimated that this figure had risen to £12–15 million by 2002.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what estimate she has made of the number of deaths where obesity was a contributory factor in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available; [30242]

(2) if she will estimate the number of deaths where obesity is a contributory factor for the next 10 years. [30243]

Caroline Flint [holding answers 22 November 2005]: The National Audit Office, in their report "Tackling Obesity in England", estimated there were about 31,100 deaths in England attributable to obesity in 1998. The Health Select Committee updated this estimate to 34,100 in their 2004 report on obesity.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of NHS expenditure on treating conditions for which obesity is a contributory factor in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [30244]

Caroline Flint: [holding answer 22 November 2005]: Information on the amount spent by the national health service on treating conditions for which obesity is a contributory factor is not held centrally. However, the National Audit Office report, "Tackling Obesity in England", published in 2001, estimated that the direct cost to the NHS of treating obesity and its consequences in 1998 was £480 million. As part of its inquiry into obesity, the Health Select Committee estimated that in 2002 the direct cost to the NHS was between £990 million and £1,225 million.

Organ Donation

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations she has received on moving towards a presumption of consent for organ donation. [25842]

Ms Rosie Winterton: This issue was debated extensively during the passage of the Human Tissue Act 2004. The Government have looked at the evidence but believes a system of presumed consent to organ donation to be contrary to the fundamental premise of the 2004 Act, which is that consent must be the basis for the donation of human organs after death. Nor do they believe that it would be effective in increasing the number of organs available for transplantation.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action is being taken by her Department to improve organ donation rates. [25843]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Action to improve donation rates includes providing more than £10 million since 2001 to UK Transplant to run hospital-based schemes such as live donor co-ordinators and non-heartbeating schemes, to increase the number of donors; and around £150,000 in section 64 funding each year to a number of charities to promote the organ donor register and to promote organ donation more widely. UK Transplant's recent year-long campaign to mark the 10th anniversary of the organ donor register resulted in one million additional registrations. Currently, almost 13 million people have registered, agreeing to help others after their death.

Patient and Public Involvement

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the terms of reference of the Department's strategic review of patient and public involvement in health; and when she expects it to be completed. [24264]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 3 November 2005]: A summary of the terms of reference is as follows:

> "We propose to carry out a strategic review of PPI to understand fully the need for PPI and accountability. The review being an umbrella title for a range of activities that will take place between now and the launch of the health and care outside hospitals (HCOH) White Paper, to draw together evidence on good practice in PPI and consideration of how it can be strengthened further. The review will draw evidence from desk research mapping the current configuration and interaction of various parts of the PPI structure, the HCOH deliberative consultation, and a targeted engagement exercise that will run alongside the consultation to check out and explore ideas and their implications for PPI as they emerge.[1]"

The review is taking place alongside the your health, your care, your say consultation and the work of the having my say policy taskforce, which will make wider recommendations on how national health service and social care services need to respond to the views and choices of its users. The work of the policy taskforce will help shape a new White Paper to be published at the turn of the year on improving community health and social care.

Pesticides

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what division in her Department is responsible for health aspects of pesticide use; what research programmes have been undertaken in the last five years; and which personnel have been involved. [32285]

Caroline Flint: The Department works closely with other Government Departments and agencies on matters related to the health aspects of pesticides use. The Health Protection—toxicology and radiation branch has responsibility for advice to the Secretary of State on these health aspects. Various personnel in this branch have been involved in provision of this advice.

In the last five years, the Department has, in conjunction with Imperial College and the Chairman of the Advisory Committee on Pesticides, initiated research using the hospital episode statistics database for England concerning admitted cases of pesticide poisoning. The Department is also undertaking an anonymised retrospective review of data held by the pesticides incident appraisal panel of likely and confirmed cases of irritancy.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will assess the merits of introducing a preventative treatment programme for premature babies based on the revised recommendations from the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation. [30162]

Caroline Flint: The advice from the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation on preventative treatment for respiratory syncytial virus is currently being considered by the Department.

Prostate Cancer

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will ensure that revisions to the prostate cancer risk management programme are discussed by the prostate cancer advisory group; [28001]

(2) when she will publish her Department's evaluation of the prostate cancer risk management programme; [28002]

(3) what estimate she has made of the proportion of general practitioners who are aware of the prostate cancer risk management programme. [28003]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 11 November 2005]: The Department is committed to evaluating the prostate cancer risk management programmes (PCRMP). The primary care resource packs, issued to all general practitioners (GPs) in England in September 2002, were developed by the Cancer Research UK primary care education research group, Oxford, in collaboration with NHS cancer screening programmes and the Department.

The Cancer Research UK primary care education research group is now in the process of evaluating the use of the packs. This evaluation includes:

- a national survey of 400 GPs to describe their current practice and attitudes regarding public service agreement (PSA) testing for prostate cancer, as well as their views of the PCRMP policy and information pack;
- a population survey of 900 men aged 40 to 75 designed to look at the impact of the PCRMP patient information sheet on men's knowledge and attitudes regarding prostate cancer and the PSA test, their future intentions regarding having a PSA test, and what factors influence these intentions;
- a series of focus groups and interviews are being conducted with a sample of men from the population survey to gather more in-depth information on their views on PSA testing, and to explore how best to assist informed decision-making on this topic.

The evaluation is being jointly funded by the Department via NHS cancer screening programmes and Cancer Research UK, and results are expected to be published in peer reviewed journals in spring 2006. The results of the evaluation will inform the revision of the pack, which will be relaunched next summer, and will be discussed by the prostate cancer advisory group.

Public Service Agreement

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether 2004 public service agreement target 6 refers to problem drug users who have been through treatment programmes in a specific year. [29891]

Caroline Flint: The 2004 public service agreement target six refers to problem drug users who have been through treatment programmes in a specific financial year.

Respiratory Syncytial Virus

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the number of babies who will be affected by the revised recommendations from the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation on preventative treatment for respiratory syncytial virus. [30163]

Caroline Flint: It has been estimated by the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation that the revised recommendations would mean that around 2,000 babies would receive treatment. The Department will review these estimates.

Skin Cancer

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps her Department is taking to increase public awareness of the danger of skin cancer caused by excess exposure to sunlight. [16084]

Ms Rosie Winterton: SunSmart, run by Cancer Research UK, was launched in 2003 as the national skin cancer prevention and sun protection campaign. It was commissioned by the Department and the other United Kingdom health departments to highlight the risks and dangers associated with exposure to sunlight and to offer information and advice. SunSmart's activities include raising public and professional awareness of the dangers of skin cancer and excess sunlight through media briefings, support for health promotion activities, and through the SunSmart website. This year, SunSmart has particularly campaigned on raising awareness of the dangers of skin cancer amongst children and young people and has helped schools in developing their own sun protection policies through school guidelines produced by SunSmart.

Smoking

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment her Department has made of the proportion of the population who want a complete ban on smoking in work places and all enclosed public spaces. [30874]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 22 November 2005]: The results of the consultation on the smoke-free elements of the Health Bill were published on 24 November 2005, and are available on the Department's website at: www.dh.gov.uk/assetRoot/04/12/36/21/04123621.pdf.

Copies are also available in the Library.

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she will publish the (a) minutes of the meetings of the (i) Scientific Committee on Tobacco and Health and (ii) its Technical Advisory Group on the effects of second-hand smoke and (b) the conclusions reached at each meeting. [32946]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 29 November 2005]: We have received a Freedom of Information request from the Tobacco Manufacturers' Association for the minutes of these meetings and departmental Officials are currently working on this.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Serious Fraud Office

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Solicitor-General pursuant to the answer of 22 November 2005, Official Report, column 1885W, on the Serious Fraud Office (SFO), if he will place in the Library briefing provided to the Attorney-General by the SFO relating to difficulties it has faced in (a) investigating and (b) prosecuting overseas corruption offences in such cases where legal proceedings are (i) not commenced and (ii) completed. [33543]

The Solicitor-General: I will not provide such case briefing material but earlier this year the Attorney-General commissioned a paper from the SFO setting out the policy and legislative changes that they thought would most assist them in the investigation and prosecution of overseas corruption offences. Work is continuing on the options identified and it is hoped that it will be possible to place some of the proposals in the public domain in the near future.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Afghanistan

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much money has been committed to the Afghan drug-control strategy in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [32791]

Dr. Howells: The UK has spent the following amounts on the Afghan counter narcotics (CN) strategy over the last four years:

Financial year	Amount spent (£)
2001–02	31,000
2002–03	1,599,036
2003–04	16,500,931
2004–05	24,442,350

In this financial year, the UK is spending in the region of £100 million on all CN activity, £50 million of which is for Alternative Livelihoods.

On 5 September, I announced new UK funding for Afghan CN activity in a joint press conference with Afghan CN Minister Qaderi. In total, we will provide more than £270 million over the next three financial years. This is a funding increase of £115 million. £130 million of this funding will be provided by the Department for International Development with the rest coming from other Government Departments including the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, Ministry of Defence and the Home Office.

The funding will be spent on CN activity supporting the Government of Afghanistan in delivering their National Drugs Control Strategy. In the next three years we will focus on the following three key priorities, which we judge will make the greatest impact on tackling the drugs trade. First, targeting the trafficker and the top end of the drugs trade. Second, strengthening and diversifying legal rural livelihood opportunities. And third, developing strong and effective CN institutions. In line with these priorities, we will spend over 50 per cent. of the £270 million budget on law enforcement, interdiction and criminal justice activity.

Bribery

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many complaints of bribery have been made against British-based companies since the OECD convention on bribery came into force; how many investigations have been undertaken; and how many prosecutions have been undertaken. [32570]

Ian Pearson: Part 12 of the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001 extended the jurisdiction of the UK judicial system to acts of bribery committed wholly overseas by UK nationals or companies incorporated in the UK. Since the Act came into force in February 2002 approximately 60 allegations of foreign bribery have been reported to UK law enforcement agencies. Of these about 20 are under consideration for formal investigation. So far no charges have yet been brought under the provisions of the Act.

Caribbean Countries

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what impact EU external action has had on funding for the Caribbean countries; and what progress has been made on the proposed EU sugar reforms. [30265]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: At the EU Agriculture and Fisheries Council on 24 November, EU Minister agreed to reform the EU Sugar Regime. These major reforms will bring the regime into line with other sectors of the common agricultural policy which have already been through reform. They will produce significant economic benefits and put the EU in a stronger position ahead of the World Trade Organisation negotiations in Hong Kong in December. The reforms will also benefit producers in some of the world's poorest countries, which have had to compete with dumped EU sugar exports. This will open up new opportunities for them on world and regional markets.

We recognise the negative short-term impacts that the EU reforms will have on some African, Caribbean and Pacific (ACP) sugar producers with preferential access to the EU market. However, a smaller price cut and longer adjustment period than originally proposed will give the ACP a better opportunity to adjust to the reforms. The EU will also provide transitional assistance to help them improve their efficiency in the sugar sector where feasible or diversify into more profitable sectors.

The Commission similarly implemented an assistance scheme for ACP banana producers in 1999 after the last reform of the EU banana regime. We are working closely with the European Commission to improve the efficiency with which funds are allocated to those who need it.

EC funding for Caribbean countries is provided principally through the European Development Fund (EDF). The EU in February this year agreed that the overall funding for the EDF, which also covers African and Pacific countries, should increase in the next EDF period. A precise figure has yet to be agreed.

Chagos Islands

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much in legal fees the Government has incurred in the Chagos Islands case in respect of (a) the judicial review decided on 3 November 2000, (b) the group litigation decided by the Court of Appeal in July 2004 and (c) the judicial review concerning the Orders in Council dated June 2004. [32514]

Mr. Douglas Alexander [holding answer 28 November 2005]: There have been three separate legal cases concerning the Chagos Islands, British Indian Ocean Territory. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, has paid the following sums in respect of legal fees incurred in defending those cases:

R (Bancoult) v. Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs and another £175,268.44—Secretary of State's legal fees; £280,000—applicant's legal fees paid by the Secretary of State following judgment in favour of the applicant.

Chagos Islanders v. (1) The Attorney-General; (2) Her Majesty's British Indian Ocean Territory Commissioner £752,362.78—Secretary of State's legal fees.

R (Bancoult) v. Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs

£247,724.19—Secretary of State's legal fees. The case is ongoing and further legal fees will be incurred.

China

Sammy Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action the Government are taking in respect of the persecution of Christians in China. [32727]

Ian Pearson: We regularly raise concerns about freedom of religious belief in China with the Chinese Government. We did so at the last UK China Human Rights Dialogue in June. Freedom of religion was a focus of the last EU China Human Rights Dialogue in October. We include cases of Christians among individual cases of concern raised within these dialogues. Ministers regularly raise human rights with Chinese interlocutors.

Sammy Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps the Government are taking to address human rights concerns in China. [32728]

Ian Pearson: We raise our concerns with the Chinese government regularly, including through the UK China Human Rights Dialogue, ministerial engagement and EU mechanisms such as the EU China Human Rights Dialogue and EU demarches.

Democratic Republic of the Congo

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the United Kingdom's relations with the Democratic Republic of the Congo. [32800]

Ian Pearson: The UK remains committed to working towards long-term peace and stability in the Democratic Republic of Congo (DRC). We support the transitional government process and continue to exert pressure on the Government to hold credible elections within the June 2006 deadline. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for International Development (Hilary Benn) reinforced this message during his recent visit to the DRC.

The UK is one of the largest bilateral donors to the DRC. We have a £55 million package of bilateral development assistance this year, with a focus on ending conflict and supporting the transition process to start to move towards long-term development. Other support includes justice reform to end the culture of impunity, delivery of health and education services, infrastructure rehabilitation, media and work on the transparent management of natural resources. We work closely with non-governmental organisations, the UN, the EC, World Bank and other bilateral partners.

Diego Garcia

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what permission is required from (a) his Department and (b) the UK diplomatic representative of the British Indian Ocean

Territory for (i) US military missions and (ii) landing of US military or civilian aircraft on the island of Diego Garcia. [32180]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The 1976 Exchange of Notes, the Diego Garcia Agreement, between the Government and the Government of the United States of America concerning a United States Navy Support Facility on Diego Garcia, British Indian Ocean Territory, states in paragraph 3 that:

> "Both Governments shall consult periodically on joint objectives, policies and activities in the area. As regards the use of the facility in normal circumstances, the US Commanding Officer and the Officer in Charge of the United Kingdom Service element shall inform each other of intended movements of ships and aircraft. In other circumstances the use of the facility shall be a matter for the joint decision of the two Governments."

The Diego Garcia Agreement is published by Her Majesty's Stationery Office in the United Kingdom Treaty Series, No. 19 (1976).

Ecuador

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the political situation in Ecuador since April. [32446]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: Former President Gutierrez was dismissed by Congress in April following demonstrations in Quito in protest at interference by Gutierrez in the judiciary. Gutierrez had controversially dismissed the Supreme Court. Congress appointed the Vice-President, Alfredo Palacio, to replace him. President Palacio has called for a popular consultation on possible political reforms. His Government is in discussion with political parties in Congress, and with representative social organisations, on the possible format and timing of a popular referendum. There is no agreement so far. The appointment of new judges to a new Supreme Court is expected shortly.

With our European partners, we are monitoring the situation in Ecuador closely.

EU Directives

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which EU directives he expects will be converted into regulations in accordance with the policy set out in COM (2005) 535. [32898]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The Commission made a series of proposals for simplifying existing European legislation in its Communication COM (2005) 535. We have welcomed these proposals as a practical contribution to the common efforts of the Commission and UK Presidency to pursue the European better regulation agenda—an agenda crucial to European competitiveness. The Commission Communication includes proposals to substitute directives with regulations, where this fits with simplification goals and principles of subsidiarity and proportionality. The choice of legal instrument will be decided on a case by case basis, with negotiations on the individual dossiers beginning in 2006.

EU Reform

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on recent progress in the reform of the European Union's institutions. [32419]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The Government's focus during the UK presidency of the EU is on taking forward a wider debate about the future direction of the EU rather than looking once again at its institutional architecture. The EU needs to find new ways to meet better the challenge of globalisation. In that context the UK will continue to advocate positive reforms of the EU institutions where it makes sense.

European Parliament

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place in the Library a copy of the rules of procedure governing the conference of Presidents of the European Parliament. [32195]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The rules governing the conference of Presidents, who are the heads of the political groups in the European Parliament, are contained within the rules of procedure of the European Parliament, specifically rules 23, 24, 28 and 200. A copy of these rules is already in the Library of the House.

European Union (Opt-outs)

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 16 November 2005, Official Report, column 1266W, on European Union (opt-outs), in which areas where the UK had an option not to participate the Government have joined in specific policy developments since 1997. [32002]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The UK retains the right to opt in to EU measures on visas, asylum, immigration and other policies related to the free movement of persons (Title IV TEC), as set out in the 1999 treaty of Amsterdam. We opt in to such measures when it is in our interests to co-operate with our EU partners and where they are not incompatible with our right to operate and retain our own frontier controls. The UK has opted in to all proposals and measures on judicial co-operation in civil matters.

In reference to immigration and asylum, I refer the hon. Member to the answer that my right hon. Friend, the Member for Kilmarnock and Loudoun (Mr. Browne) gave to the right hon. Member for Wells (Mr. Heathcoat-Amory), on 7 March, 2005, Official Report, column 1596W. Since that question was answered, the UK has opted into three further immigration and asylum proposals: a proposal for a council decision establishing a European fund for the Integration of third-country nationals and two proposals for decisions of the European Parliament and Council establishing a European refugee fund and a European return fund.

India

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on India's compliance with the Nuclear Suppliers Group rules. [32447]

Dr. Howells: India is not a member of the Nuclear Suppliers Group, and therefore is not bound by the rules of the group. India has taken action in recent years to conform to international non-proliferation norms, for example the adoption of new export control legislation in April this year. The commitments made by India in its joint statement with the US on 18 July include adhering to the guidelines of the Nuclear Suppliers Group.

Iran

David Lepper: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of Iran regarding (a) the provisions of the 1991 Memorandum of the Supreme Revolutionary Council of Iran regarding expulsion of Baha'is from university and (b) access to education for Baha'is in Iran. [32081]

Dr. Howells: During the UK's presidency of the EU, we have pressed the Iranian authorities on several occasions to address the problems faced by the Baha'i community. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary did so when he first met Iran's new Foreign Minister, Manuchehr Mottaki, in September. The access of Baha'is in Iran to higher education is of particular concern. In 1993 the special representative of the UN Commission on Human Rights reported the existence of a 1991 memorandum from the Supreme Revolutionary Council of Iran that informed all authorities to deny Baha'i students access to university. The Baha'i International Community continue to report that Baha'i students are not able to access higher education unless they deny their faith or accept that it is recorded incorrectly on official university forms. The UK co-sponsored a resolution on human rights in Iran that was adopted by the United Nations General Assembly Third Committee on 18 November. The resolution expresses serious concern at, among other things, the > "increased discrimination against the Baha'is, including . . . the denial of access to higher education."

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he has raised Iranian help to Iraqi insurgents with the government of Iran. [32653]

Dr. Howells: We continue to investigate extremist Shia groups in Iraq and their reported links to Iran. Ministers and officials have discussed these links with the Iranian authorities on many occasions. Senior officials did so most recently on 15 November. We have pressed Iran to do more to live up to its public commitments to fight terrorism, improve border security, and not to interfere in Iraq's internal affairs.

Iraq

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the use of private military companies in Iraq. [32785]

Dr. Howells: The Government do not employ private companies in Iraq for military purposes. However, we do employ two companies for security purposes: ArmorGroup, which provide static guarding of our compounds in Baghdad and Basra; and Control Risks Group, which provides mobile security.

Israel

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations the Government have made to Israel on withdrawal from the Occupied Territories. [33031]

Dr. Howells: We welcome Israel's recent withdrawal from the Gaza Strip and part of the West Bank. We believe the next step should be for both sides to meet their Roadmap commitments. The Roadmap is the best way to achieve a lasting and just settlement of two viable states living side by side in peace and security with their neighbours.

Latin America (Trade Disputes)

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the trade dispute between Venezuela and Mexico. [32445]

Ian Pearson: We consider this to be a bilateral issue between the two Governments.

Liberia

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met the President of Liberia; and what was discussed. [32387]

Ian Pearson: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and the new President of Liberia, Mrs. Ellen Johnson-Sirleaf, have not met.

Nuclear Proliferation

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps have been taken by the Government to ensure the non-proliferation of nuclear weapons in the last five years. [32346]

Dr. Howells: The UK continues to regard the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty as the cornerstone of the nuclear non-proliferation regime and has played an active role over the past five years of the treaty review cycle. We have promoted strengthening of the treaty and have addressed the challenges it faces, by implementing the decisions of past review conferences, and taking forward work in the International Atomic Energy Agency and the Nuclear Suppliers' Group. We played an active role in the adoption of UN Security Council Resolution (UNSCR) 1540 and continue to do so in the 1540 Committee.

The UK takes part in the Proliferation Security Initiative (PSI), which contributes to fulfilling the requirement of UNSCR 1540 to take co-operative action to prevent illicit trafficking in nuclear, chemical or biological weapons, their means of delivery and related materials. The UK secured important counter-proliferation amendments to the Convention on the Suppression of Unlawful Acts at Sea.

The UK has been active on specific country issues. Working with the US, the UK was able to convince Libya in December 2003 to abandon its weapons of mass destruction programmes, which led to the uncovering and dismantlement of the international proliferation network run by AQ Khan and his associates. With France and Germany, supported by the office of the EU high representative, we have been working for two years to reach a long term arrangement which will give the international community objective guarantees regarding the exclusively peaceful nature of Iran's nuclear programme. While not directly involved in the 6 Party Talks on North Korea's nuclear programme, the UK has regularly expressed its support for the process as the best available means to reach a solution based on negotiation.

Security Personnel

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many security personnel (a) are employed overseas by his Department and (b) were so employed in the 2004–05 financial year; and how many are (i) in-house and (ii) contract staff in each case. [32336]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: In the financial year 2004–05, approximately 500 contract staff were employed under the overseas security contracts paid by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office in London. In addition there were 37 UK based security managers employed in our overseas missions.

Figures for those missions who have guarding contracts with local security companies are not available centrally and would only be available at disproportionate cost.

Sick Leave

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many of his Department's employees who are within one year of the official retirement age are on extended sick leave. [32599]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: There are three employees over the age of 59 in the Foreign and Commonwealth Officer who are on extended sick leave.

Terrorism (Human Rights)

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps the UK has taken at EU level to ensure full respect for European human rights law in the event of the detention by a non-EU state of a person suspected of a terrorist act or intent within any state of the EU. [31961]

Ian Pearson: All EU member states are parties to the European convention on human rights and, as such, are obliged to secure to everyone within their jurisdiction the rights and freedoms set out in the convention. Individuals claiming to be the victim of a violation of a convention right by one of the parties are entitled to make an application to the European Court of Human Rights. The EU has consistently stressed the importance of respect for human rights in the fight against terrorism.

Uzbekistan

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answers of 24 November 2005, Official Report, columns 2247–48W, on Uzbekistan, to the hon. Member for Hammersmith and Fulham (Mr. Hands), when EU Ministers plan to review the exemption of Islam Karimov and his family from the list of Uzbek officials banned from travelling to the European Union; what discussions he has had with German authorities regarding the visit of Uzbek Interior Minister Almatov; and whether Mr. Almatov is still in Germany. [33768]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The measures announced by the General Affairs and External Relations Council on 3 October in relation to Uzbekistan came into force on 14 November. They clearly demonstrate the profound concern of the European Union (EU) about the situation in Uzbekistan and the EU's strong condemnation of the refusal of the Uzbek authorities to allow an independent international inquiry into the events in Andizhan in May.

The Council decided to implement these measures for an initial period of one year. In the meantime, the Council will keep under constant review the measures it has implemented in the light of any significant changes to the current situation, in particular any that demonstrate the willingness of the Uzbek authorities to adhere to the principles of respect for human rights, rule of law and fundamental freedoms.

The German authorities consulted us before Almatov's visa was issued and we agreed with their assessment that Almatov qualified for an exemption as a case of urgent humanitarian need. Our embassy in Berlin remains in contact with the German authorities with regard to this case.

The details of Almatov's presence are a matter for the Germans.

West Papua

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the Government's policy is with regard to West Papua; if he will make representations regarding alleged human rights abuses there; what steps he is taking to ensure that this part of Indonesia is subject to international scrutiny; and what discussions his Department has had with those organisations that wish to secede from Indonesia. [32292]

Ian Pearson: We support the territorial integrity of Indonesia. We encourage the Indonesian Government to engage in dialogue with Papuan representatives and to proceed with full implementation of the 2001 Special Autonomy legislation. We are encouraged by the formation of the Papuan People's Council (MRP) in November 2005. The MRP is made up of native Papuans and will act as an advisory panel to the devolved Papuan legislature (DPRP), advising on a range of issues that affect native Papuans.

We also welcome the high priority that the President of Indonesia, Susilo Bambang Yudhoyono, has attached to the resolution of conflict in Papua and his commitment, on 17 August, to resolve the issue of Papua in a peaceful, just and dignified manner by emphasising dialogue. As part of this, President Yudhoyono met a delegation of Papuan leaders on 9 August. He has stated that he will implement the Special Autonomy law. We and other members of the international community encourage him to do so. We hope that the MRP can work together with the local and central Government to bring about solutions to Papua's problems.

We are concerned about reports of human rights abuses in Papua, and we raise these with the Government of Indonesia.

Staff from our embassy in Jakarta make periodic visits to Papua to discuss the situation with local Papuan organisations, human rights organisations, church leaders, academics and non-governmental organisations.

Zimbabwe

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what issues he has raised with the Zimbabwe High Commission in the last 12 months; and what result was achieved in each case. [30549]

Ian Pearson: Over the last 12 months, the Zimbabwean ambassador has been summoned three times by Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) Ministers. My noble Friend the Minister for Africa (Lord Triesman of Tottenham), formally protested about Operation Murambatsvina on 13 June, while my hon. Friend, the former Minister for Africa (Mr. Mullin) protested against the pre-election crackdown on the media and the opposition on 22 February. My right hon. Friend the former Minister for Europe (Mr. MacShane) also summoned the Zimbabwean ambassador in November 2004, to express concern at British journalists denied access to cover the England cricket tour of Zimbabwe. FCO officials have also maintained a dialogue with other Zimbabwe embassy staff, ensuring our concerns on the manipulated elections, the crackdown on urban poor and the continued lack of respect for good governance, human rights and the rule of law, are clear and understood.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many warrants were issued from Dartford magistrates court for the arrest of non-attendees resident in Gravesham in the last year for which figures are available. [32641]

Ms Harman: The information is as follows:

Child Care Lawyers

Mr. Hands: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will make a statement on the duty of care that child care lawyers have to the children of their clients. [32077]

Bridget Prentice: Lawyers dealing with public law Children Act work may be representing the parents or other carers of children subject to a section 31 application.

In contract law, the lawyer's obligations are to his/her client to deliver the relevant service. A duty of care indicates a liability, including for damages in negligence (as opposed to contract).

Professional conduct obligations are a matter for the Law Society. The Professional Conduct Rules are set out in the Guide to the Professional Conduct of Solicitors published by the Law Society.

The Law Society's Good Practice in ChildCare Cases says

> "Solicitors must ensure that the principle that a child's interests are paramount is reflected in the conduct of the case itself. Solicitors acting for local authorities, for parents and other adult parties, or for the child or children's guardian, giving instructions on the child's behalf, all have a duty to act on the instructions of their particular client. Each client may have a different view on the child's interests. However, all solicitors can, and should, adopt a child-focused approach by ensuring that the presentation of their client's case takes into account the needs of the child throughout."

Criminal Offences

Simon Hughes: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will list criminal offences created in legislation sponsored by the Department since May 1997, broken down by Act. [26705]

Franchise (Mobile Homes)

Mr. Kemp: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what eligibility UK nationals with rights of residency in a mobile home for nine out of 12 months a year and a full-time address elsewhere in the UK have to vote in (a) general elections and (b) local elections in the UK in the constituency where the mobile home is located. [32869]

Ms Harman: A UK national must be resident at an address within an electoral area to be included in the relevant register of electors. Residence is not defined in law but it has been ruled by the courts to entail a considerable degree of permanence. In practice, Electoral Registration Officers (EROs) normally require someone to be resident at an address for four to six months of the year in order for them to be included in the electoral register. Provided the mobile home was permanently sited in a particular location for at least six months of each year and the elector could satisfy the ERO responsible for the electoral area where it was sited that he or she was resident in that mobile home during that period it is likely that the elector would be included in the relevant electoral registers and would therefore be entitled to vote there in any general or local election.

Vehicle Details

Norman Baker: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what guidance her Department has provided to (a) the Department for Transport and (b) the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency (DVLA) in respect of the provision upon request by DVLA of vehicle owner details to private individuals and companies. [33696]

Ms Harman: None. The Department for Constitutional Affairs' website provides information on the Data Protection Act 1998, with particular emphasis on the needs of the general public. It is the task of the Information Commissioner, as the independent regulator established under the terms of the Data Protection Act 1998, to issue guidance on the operation of the Act, to designate best practices for data controllers, and to consider particular data processing circumstances that raise compliance issues.

Voter Registration

Mr. Bone: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will introduce individual voter registration. [28304]

Ms Harman: The Electoral Administration Bill, currently before Parliament, includes provision for the collection of personal identifiers such as individual signatures and dates of birth at the point at which a person registers to vote.

In order that the effect of this policy may be tested in order to obtain evidence as to whether it should be implemented or not, the Bill provides for personal identifiers to be first piloted at a local level, with the results to be evaluated by the Electoral Commission.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers were placed in each local authority area in Essex in each year since 1997. [29743]

Mr. McNulty: Information in respect of the number of persons dispersed to an area during a given year is not available and could be produced only at disproportionate cost.

Information on the number of asylum seekers supported directly by NASS is published quarterly. The next publication covering the third quarter of 2005 (July to September) was made available on 22 November on the Home Office Research Development and Statistics Directorate website at:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.hml

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum-seekers deported from the UK in (a) 2000, (b) 2001, (c) 2002, (d) 2003, (e) 2004 and (f) 2005 were due to sit examinations for (i) GCSEs or (ii) A-levels in the year they were deported; and if he will make a statement. [29998]

Mr. McNulty: No information is available to the Home Office on asylum seekers who were due to sit GCSE or A-level exams in their year of removal.

Information on the removals of asylum applicants is published quarterly on the Home Office RDS website:

www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html

[1] Minors defined as under 18 on the date of their removal.

[2] For those where no date of birth is available.

Notes:

1. This is based on provisional management information.
2. The figures have been rounded to the nearest five and totals may not sum.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers have been returned to EU member states under the provisions of the Dublin II Regulation since it came into force on 1 September 2003. [31459]

Mr. McNulty: A total of approximately 2,600 failed asylum seekers (including dependants) have been returned under the provisions of the Dublin II Regulations between 1 September 2003 and 30 September 2005. These totals are based on internal management information. The regular asylum statistics are available from the Library of the House and on the Home Office Research Development and Statistics Directorate website at:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

Community Support Officers

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) whether he plans to increase the number of police community support officers working in (a) Battle, (b) Etchingham, (c) Ticehurst and (d) Hurst Green in East Sussex; [32694]

(2) whether he plans to increase the number of community support police officers in Bexhill-on-Sea; and how many are working in the town. [32696]

Hazel Blears: We are making funding available to help increase the number of community support officers (CSOs) in England and Wales to 24,000 by 2008. This investment will help deliver our commitment that by 2008 every area in England and Wales will have access to a dedicated, visible, accessible and responsive neighbourhood policing team.

CSOs are employed by police authorities, and their deployment is an operational matter for the Chief Constable. At 30 June 2005 Sussex police had 237 CSOs of whom the Hastings and Rother Division, which includes Bexhill, had 36.

Countryside Alliance Protests

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were arrested under the Prevention of Terrorism Act during the Countryside Alliance protests in Parliament Square on 15 September 2004. [30476]

Hazel Blears: According to police records, no arrests were made on 15 September 2004 under the Terrorism Act 2000.

County Councils Legislation

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will introduce legislation to extend the provisions of the Kent County Council Act 2001 and the Medway Council Act 2001 to the whole of England and Wales; and if he will make a statement; [32334]

(2) what measures he is taking to tackle the sale of counterfeit goods at car boot sales; and if he will make a statement. [32333]

Hazel Blears: The Kent County Council Act 2001 and the Medway Council Act 2001 (the Kent Acts) provide for the regulation of traders in both second-hand goods and occasional sales. The Act required both councils to submit jointly a report to the Home Secretary on the working of the provisions of the Acts. When I laid their report before Parliament in December 2004 I undertook to consult further on the case for extending the legislation throughout England and Wales.

The consultation paper which I plan to launch shortly will seek views on the best way forward. While focusing predominantly on the issues around the registration of traders in second-hand goods, the consultation will also seek views on the regulation of occasional sales, such as car boot sales.

Criminal Records Bureau Checks

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Criminal Records Bureau checks in Wales have given incorrect or inappropriate information on criminal records to individuals applying for an enhanced disclosure award broken down by regions of Wales. [30781]

Andy Burnham: The information sought by the hon. member for Bridgend is not available in the format requested.

The Criminal Records Bureau (CRB) does operate a procedure for applicants to contest, or dispute the information provided on their Disclosure. If, upon investigation the CRB finds that a conviction(s) do not relate to the person for whom the Disclosure was issued, they will re-issue a corrected Disclosure free of charge. Prior to the launch of the CRB, had an applicant applied for a position which required a police check under the previous arrangements, details of any alleged convictions would have been passed only to the prospective employer and not to the applicant. Applicants now have the opportunity to contest any conviction details.

Crime Statistics

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the total level of violent crime recorded by the police in North Kent was in each of the last two years for which figures are available. [32633]

Hazel Blears: The available information relates to the number of offences recorded in the North Kent basic command unit (BCU) and is given in the table.

Number of offences recorded in the North Kent basic command unit, 2004–05

Offence type	2003–04	2004–05
Violence against the person	2,812	3,387
Sexual offences[1]	141	184
Robbery	288	355
Violent crime	3,241	3,926

[1] The Sexual Offences Act 2003, introduced in May 2004, altered the definition and coverage of sexual offences.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average number of crimes per day was in the Essex police force area in each of the last five years. [31393]

Hazel Blears: The published data relate to the number of crimes recorded by the Essex police in terms of financial years and is given in the table.

The introduction of the National Crime Recording Standard in April 2002 had the effect of increasing the total number of offences recorded in Essex by an estimated 21 per cent. in the first year. This means that figures for the financial year 2002–03 and later are not directly comparable with those for earlier years.

Table :1 offences recorded by the police in Essex—2000–01 and 2001–02

Period	Total no. of recorded offences
2001–02	113,150

Note:
The data in this table is prior to the introduction of the National Crime Recording Standard. These figures are not directly comparable with those for later years.

Table 2: offences recorded by the police in Essex 2002–03 to 2004–05

Period	Total no. of recorded offences
2002–03	136,181
2003–04	144,512
2004–05	134,789

Note:
The data in this table takes account of the introduction of the National Crime Recording Standard in April 2002. These figures are not directly comparable with those for earlier years.

Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent assessment he has made of the work of the Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority; and if he will make a statement. [32805]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority (CICA) is a non-departmental public body, which is responsible for all first and reviewed decisions on applications made under the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme. Appeals against decisions of the Authority are considered by an independent tribunal, the Criminal Injuries Compensation Appeals Panel. There is no onward right of appeal to the Secretary of State. The Home Secretary has policy responsibility for the Compensation Scheme, and the general working of CICA is kept under review by the Home Office on a continuing basis.

Criminal Justice Act

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made towards implementing conditional cautioning under Part 3 of the Criminal Justice Act 2003; and if he will make a statement. [32883]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Conditional Cautions scheme has been implemented in six Early Implementation Areas to test its application and adaptation from policy to local frontline delivery.

This began in one police basic command unit in each area, with the intention of growing the scheme across the wider police force area once the pathfinder phase was complete. Lancashire is the first force to use the scheme across their police force. The evaluation report from these Early Implementation Areas is due to be published in early 2006 but initial indications suggest that overall use of the scheme is positive. Victim satisfaction with the scheme is reportedly high and practitioners in the areas see benefit in rolling the scheme out more widely.

Offenders questioned as part of the evaluation have also considered the scheme a success. The strategy for national rollout of Conditional Cautions is currently being planned, taking into consideration the evidence of the Early Implementation Areas. Initial rollout across one basic command unit per criminal justice area is expected to be completed within 18 months.

Custodial Sentences (Women)

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what offences custodial sentences were imposed on women in the last 12 months for which information is available. [32314]

Fiona Mactaggart: This information is provided in the latest Home Office sentencing statistics publication: Sentencing Statistics 2004, HOSB 15/05 England and Wales (Chapter two. Table 2.10, Number of persons sentenced to immediate custody by sex and offence group). This publication is available in the House Library.

DNA Profiles

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people under 18 years have DNA profiles stored in the police national database without having been charged or cautioned for any offence. [24974]

Hazel Blears: At the 31 October 2005 there were 3,466,792 subject sample profiles loaded to the National DNA Database. Of these 741,605 related to people who were under 18 at the time the sample was taken.

We cannot currently determine how many of the people sampled were not subsequently charged or cautioned. Technical changes to the link between the Police National Computer and the National DNA Database to enable this information to be captured are under consideration by the Police Information Technology Organisation (PITO).

Electronic Monitoring Contract

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment has been made of the electronic monitoring contract; and if he will make a statement. [32794]

Fiona Mactaggart: New contracts with two electronic monitoring service providers came into operation on one April 2005 covering England and Wales. Monthly auditing by Home Office officials indicates that the service providers' compliance with contractual obligations is generally satisfactory.

The National Audit Office has been conducting a study of electronic monitoring in England and Wales this year, and its report is expected at about the end of the year.

Holding Cells (Medical Practitioners)

Jon Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what monitoring is carried out of the length of time taken by medical practitioners contracted to visit prisoners to arrive at the holding cells where the prisoner is awaiting police questioning; [28515]

(2) what assessment he has made of the amount of police time spent awaiting medical practitioners contracted to visit prisoners in holding cells prior to questioning. [20335]

Hazel Blears: Monitoring the length of time taken by medical practitioners to visit detainees at a police station awaiting questioning is a local matter for the individual police force concerned. To help minimise the impact of any potential delay and to help improve the response times for accessing healthcare treatment, the Code of Practice on Detention, Treatment and Questioning of Persons by Police Officers (Code C) issued under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 was amended in April 2003 to allow the use of a healthcare professional. This means the ability to use a clinically qualified person working within the scope of practice as determined by their relevant professional body.

Guidance was also issued at that time to chief officers to assist them in setting up local protocols to encourage partnership working with healthcare agencies.

Horses (Protective Headgear)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) males and (b) females have been (i) charged with and (ii) convicted of offences under section 1 of the Horses (Protective Headgear for Young Riders) Act 1990 in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement on the operation of the Act. [29298]

Fiona Mactaggart: Statistics on the number of persons charged with a crime are not centrally collected.

Data collected on the Home Office Court Proceedings database for offences under these sections of the Horses (Protective Headgear for Young Riders) Act 1990 form part of a miscellaneous group, which cannot be separately identified.

Hunting with Dogs

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been arrested for breaching the law banning hunting with dogs since it was introduced. [32986]

Hazel Blears: The Hunting Act 2004 came into force on 1 February 2005. The summary offences introduced under the Act are non-notifiable and as a result are not covered by the Home Office statistical collection on arrests for notifiable (recorded crime) offences.

Imitation Firearms

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many incidents involving imitation firearms occurred in the Essex police force area in each of the last five years. [31392]

Hazel Blears: The available information is given in the tables.

Table 1: Offences involving imitation firearms recorded by Essex police, 1999–2000 to 2001–02

	Number of offences
1999–2000	4
2000–01	3
2001–02[1]	11

[1] Figures for some crime categories may have been inflated by some police forces implementing the principles of the National Crime Recording Standard in advance of national implementation.

Table 2: Offences involving imitation firearms recorded by Essex police, 2002–03 and 2003–04

	Number of offences
2003–04	14

[1] The National Crime Recording Standard was introduced on 1 April 2002. Figures before and after this date are not directly comparable.

Independent Police Complaints Commission

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many complaints have been (a) made and (b) upheld against the Independent Police Complaints Commission since its inception; and if he will make a statement; [32549]

(2) how many staff were employed at the Independent Police Complaints Commission on (a) 1 May and (b) 1 November; and if he will make a statement; [32550]

(3) how many (a) management, (b) administrative and support staff and (c) investigative and casework staff at the Independent Police Complaints Commission are (i) temporary, (ii) casual and (iii) agency; what percentage of the total number of staff each category represents; and if he will make a statement; [32561]

(4) how many permanent full-time equivalent staff (a) joined and (b) left the Independent Police Complaints Commission in each month since its inception; and if he will make a statement; [32583]

(5) what steps the Independent Police Complaints Commission has taken to ensure that future information requests under the Freedom of Information Act 2000 are responded to within the required 20 days; and if he will make a statement. [32548]

Hazel Blears: The Independent Police Complaints Commission (IPCC) is responsible for the management of the police complaints system. I will ensure that the Chairman receives copies of the questions and replies to you directly. Copies of the letters containing the IPCC's response will be placed in the House Libraries.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the number of non-recorded complaints against the police in the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement. [32552]

Hazel Blears: The non-recording of the complaints against the police is contained in the police complaints procedure for which the Independent Police Complaints Commission (IPCC) have responsibility in their role as the guardians of the police complaints system. Non-recording of complaints is a matter for the appropriate authority and the IPCC and is not a matter on which I should make an assessment.

National Criminal Justice Board

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the National Criminal Justice Board in providing direction for the criminal justice system. [16474]

Fiona Mactaggart: The National Criminal Justice Board (NCJB) provides effective, joint leadership for the Criminal Justice System. It has developed a vision and clear set of goals for Criminal Justice Reform and oversees delivery, primarily through the 42 local criminal justice boards. Under its leadership the Criminal Justice System is currently well on course to meet all its Public Service Agreement targets.

National Policing Improvement Agency

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the (a) funding, (b) staffing and (c) work of the National Policing Improvement Agency. [26652]

Hazel Blears: An Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO)-led Programme Team has been established to deliver the National Policing Improvement Agency (NPIA). Delivery of the programme is still in its early stages. The agency is scheduled to be fully operational from 1 April 2007 subject to legislation. Its purpose is to drive improvements in policing. I have yet to determine the exact staffing levels, but these will be considerably lower than the current functions it will replace. Similarly, I am considering the specific funding provision for the NPIA which will be within the current budgets of the existing organisations.

New Technology (Crime Prevention)

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list police forces which are carrying out pilots on (a) wireless technology to combat crime and (b) hand-held computing devices. [32546]

Hazel Blears: Information is not held centrally on all the initiatives conducted by individual forces on either wireless technology or hand-held computing devices. The Police Information Technology Organisation is currently working with four forces, and one as a reserve, on trialling the use of wireless technology and hand-held devices.

Non-reported Crime

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of non-reported crimes in the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement. [32553]

Hazel Blears: The British Crime Survey (BCS) collects information on whether victims report crimes to the police.

Based on the 2004–05 BCS, 58 per cent. of comparable crimes had not been reported to the police. This figure is the same as that for BCS interviews in 2003–04. Comparable crimes are vandalism, domestic burglary, vehicle related theft, bicycle theft, theft from the person, robbery, common assault and wounding.

Whether crimes are reported to the police varies considerably by type of offence. Thefts of vehicles are most likely to be reported (95 per cent.). Domestic burglaries in which something was stolen had the second highest reporting rate (77 per cent.). Reporting rates are relatively low for crimes such as common assault, theft from the person and vandalism (34 per cent., 32 per cent. and 32 per cent. in 2004–05).

The majority of crimes that go unreported are relatively minor offences. The more serious offences in the comparable subset—wounding, robbery, theft of vehicles and burglary with loss—only accounted for 16 per cent. of incidents that were not reported in 2004–05).

O'Connor Report

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the definition is of proactive capability as used in the O'Connor Report published by HM Inspector of Constabulary in the context of policing protective services. [32853]

Hazel Blears: The Protective Services Review examined to what extent forces have the necessary capability (i.e. access to the specialist skills and assets) and capacity to deal with serious and organised crime, terrorism, major crimes and other significant events without impacting on other policing services.

One of the key components was an assessment of the degree to which each force is practised and prepared for these types of incidents, its investment in seeking proactive intelligence, and the extent to which it is engaged in enforcement and preventative activity, such as murder suppression. As such, proactive capability cannot be defined in numerical terms, instead the litmus test is

"is a force able to do more than just react to incidents?"

Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary (HMIC) concluded that many forces, but particularly the smaller ones, had low levels of readiness and were only able to react to these incidents as they occurred as opposed to predicting and preventing them. Additional work is now being carried out to determine what proportions of a force's strength might need to be dedicated to this sort of activity to provide an effective service, however this work is still in the early stages.

Philip Lawrence

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make inquiries into the reasons why the widow of Mr. Philip Lawrence was asked questions by the Probation Service regarding the possible release of the person convicted of his killing; and if he will make a statement. [30494]

Fiona Mactaggart: It is not appropriate to discuss the details of an individual's contact with the National Probation Service, particularly where it would involve the disclosure of personal information. However, set out are details of the National Probation Service Victim Contact Scheme in operation across England and Wales.

The National Probation Service has a statutory duty to operate a Victim Contact Scheme. The scheme operates for all victims where the offender has been sentenced to 12 months or more for a sexual or violent offence.

The purpose of the scheme is to provide a point of contact with the probation service through which victims are able to express any concerns or anxieties about the offender and, if they wish, be kept informed about key stages in an offender's sentence.

Victims are also offered the opportunity to express their views on the offender's conditions of release. The victim's views on licence conditions will usually be set out in a written report from the victim contact officer to those responsible for making decisions about an offender's release.

Participation in the scheme is entirely voluntary and victims may choose to take up the offer of contact at any point during an offender's sentence. The probation service's work with victims is an important contribution to community safety and helps to address issues of risk to the public, as well as providing support to victims.

Police

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received on the proposed changes to the structure of North Yorkshire police force. [25429]

Hazel Blears: I wrote to all members on 9 November with an update on the progress of the police force structures review. This letter included a regional summary of options. The Home Secretary made a written ministerial statement with an overview of the national picture on 11 November. The review process is ongoing and the onus is on police forces and authorities to develop their proposals for submission to the Home Secretary on 23 December. Consultation is a vital part of the process and police forces and authorities are consulting with their local communities and stakeholders on their proposals.

Mr. Dunne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the evidential basis was for the minimum force size of 4,000 officers or 6,000 personnel in the Closing the Gap efficiency criteria for strategic police forces. [27594]

Hazel Blears: Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary's (HMIC) report, Closing the Gap, found that forces with over 4,000 officers or 6,000 staff tended to meet the standard for protective services in that they demonstrated good reactive capability with a clear measure of proactive capacity. Protective services were assessed against national standards identified and agreed with the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) on intelligence (what is known about an issue), prevention (what is being done to stop this) and enforcement/resolution (what ability is there to intervene effectively).

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his policy is on the routine arming of police officers; and if he will make a statement. [32652]

Hazel Blears: The Government believe that police officers should not generally be armed. The fact that officers are not routinely armed gives a character to our policing that we should not readily give up. Where an operational need arises specialist armed officers should be available to be deployed. The use of firearms by the police should always be as a last resort.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which police forces have diving units; how many divers each force has; when (a) diving suits and (b) equipment was last replaced in each unit; and if he will make a statement. [32675]

Hazel Blears: Data are provided in the following tables and has only been provided for forces with figures. Figures are provided for officers and staff whose main function is recorded as 'Underwater-Operational'. This includes members predominantly employed in an Underwater Search Unit, but not including those employed in Marine Units.

Figures for members predominantly employed in Marine or boat patrol are given separately. It should be noted while this function may include diving, it is not possible to specify how many of these officers are employed specifically in diving.

Figures regarding diving equipment are not collected centrally.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to reduce the number of fatalities caused by police cars. [32762]

Hazel Blears: Both the Government and the police recognise that effective police pursuit of offenders, response to emergencies and conduct of other business, must take full account of the risk to the public. The Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) launched in 2004 new Guidance for the Management of Police Pursuits to help achieve this. There is continuing work to ensure that the correct training is provided, that there are adequate management controls, and that robust risk assessments are in place to ensure that safety is maintained at all times. Operational measures also exist to avoid pursuits or curtail them.

We are co-operating fully with the Independent Police Complaints Commission (IPCC), which announced on 17 July a review of road traffic incidents involving police vehicles that result in a fatality or serious injury. The review, which is due to report its findings by November 2006, will aim to identify any lessons that can be learned for police policy and operational practice.

Ian Lucas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list police authorities in England and Wales which the North Wales police paid for using their officers in the last three years for which figures are available; and how much North Wales police paid to each authority in each year. [32982]

Hazel Blears: North Wales police inform me that payments to police authorities for the provision of mutual aid have been made as set out in the following table:

North Wales police: mutual aid payments 2002–03 to 2004–05

	Authority	Amount (£)
2002–03	Merseyside	816
2003–04	Merseyside	21,459
	West Mercia	16,478
	Dyfed Powys	825
2004–05	—	Nil

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the functions of the Police Bureaucracy Adviser are; and if he will make a statement. [33596]

Hazel Blears: The National Bureaucracy Adviser provides practical assistance to forces in the timely and effective implementation of their work on reducing bureaucratic burdens on police officers in order to increase the capacity of officers to undertake frontline duties. This includes visiting forces to spread good practice; challenge, where necessary, existing practices; and drive force-led reductions in bureaucracy.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the extent to which the level of formula grant will need to be adjusted as a result of the proposed police officer pension funding changes from April 2006; and what representations he has received from police authorities on this issue. [32893]

Hazel Blears: From 2006–07 a specific pension grant will be created and used to 'top up' any deficits on the pension accounts of police authorities in England and Wales. In the first two years of the new system of financing, this central pension budget will be funded by a reduction in police grant based on the sum of each authority's estimate of its net pension requirement after accounting for income from employees and employers contributions.

The transfers in 2006–07 and 2007–08 from general grant will be £313 million and £328 million respectively. The change in financing of police pensions will have no net impact on the level of funding made available to the police in England and Wales.

Representations from the police have been fully taken into account in determining this process.

Prisoners

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people leaving prison entered employment, education or training through the Custody to Work initiative in the latest year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [32789]

Fiona Mactaggart: Information on the numbers of prisoners leaving custody in 2004–05 and entering employment, training or education (ETE) is as follows. The outcomes include those who attended FRESHSTART appointments at Jobcentre Plus, whereby prisoners who do not have a job or training place to go to on release are linked into employment, training and benefits advice and support immediately after release.

In recording outcomes there is no differentiation made between those attained through the Custody to Work initiative or any other.

Discharges	85,685
Info Recorded	83,991
ETE outcomes (inc FRESHSTART)	41,146
ETE outcomes (inc FRESHSTART) as percentage of total discharges	48

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many prisoners have left prison in each of the last eight years; and how many left prison without accommodation; [31822]

(2) if he will make a statement on the number of prisoners leaving prison without accommodation; [31823]

(3) what steps he is taking to strengthen data collection on prisoners' accommodation status on leaving prison; and if he will make a statement. [31824]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Prison Service Accommodation Key Performance Indicator has been in place since 2003. The number of prisoners discharged from custody, and the number of those without accommodation to go to are given in the table.

The level of recording has increased from 76 per cent. in 2003–04 to 95 per cent. in 2005–06 year-to-date. The Prison Service Custody to Work co-ordinators continue to work with establishments to ensure that accurate data is entered onto the Local Inmate Data System (LIDS).

	Discharged	Discharged without accommodation
2003–04	87,449	39,764
2004–05	85,685	18,797
2005–06 (Year to Date)	50,004	6,435

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners received special family visits in each of the last three years. [32884]

Fiona Mactaggart: There are no collated figures available on the number of prisoners receiving special family visits. Such visits, which can vary in kind, are organised by individual prisons taking account of local needs.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made towards the introduction of targets for prisons in the area of family ties; and if he will make a statement. [32885]

Fiona Mactaggart: There is an existing Prison Performance Standard on Family Life which contains key baselines against which prisons are audited. There are no current plans to introduce targets.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the costs per minute to prisoners are of calls from prison to (a) local, (b) national, (c) international and (d) mobile lines. [32886]

Fiona Mactaggart: The rate for national and local calls within the UK is identical at 11p per minute (10p minimum charge for 55 seconds plus 1p for each 5.5 seconds or part thereof).

Calls to Mobiles within the UK are charged at the following rates:

	Pence
Monday to Friday 08.01–18.00	63.0
Monday to Thursday 18.01–08.00	37.5
Friday 18.01–24.00	37.5
00.01 Saturday to 24.00 Sunday	19.0

International calls are charged at the rates in the following table:

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many girls under the age of 18 years in prison in England and Wales are reported (a) to suffer from mental problems and (b) to self-harm. [30327]

Fiona Mactaggart: The information available about the prevalence of mental health problems for girls and young women is recorded in the Office for National Statistics Survey "Psychiatric Morbidity among Young Offenders in England and Wales." A copy is in the Library. The following table shows the number of reported incidents of self-harm involving female juveniles (those aged 15 to 17 inclusive) in 2003, 2004 and in 2005 to July.

Female juveniles

	Number of incidents	Number of Individuals[2]
2003	462	67
2004	585	73
2005[1]	469	56

[1] January to July 2005 only.
[2] Based on the 90 per cent. of recorded incidents where the individual is identifiable.

Prisons

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisons have a policy on (a) HIV/AIDS and (b) hepatitis C; and what percentage of the total number of prisons this represents. [29829]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Health Services for Prisoners Standard of May 2004 requires all establishments to have effective arrangements for the prevention, control and management of communicable diseases. We will be considering findings of the Prison Reform Trust and the National AIDS Trust just published work on "HIV and Hepatitis in UK Prisons: addressing prisoners' healthcare needs" in due course.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the incidence of hepatitis C among (a) male and (b) female prisoners. [29830]

Fiona Mactaggart: Information about the number of prisoners with hepatitis C is not collected centrally. The then Public Health Laboratory Service (PHLS) undertook an unlinked, anonymous survey of the prevalence of blood borne viruses among prisoners in England in 1997–98. This indicated that 9 per cent. of adult men, 11 per cent. of women and 0.6 per cent. of male young offenders had evidence of previous exposure to hepatitis C.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures are being taken to encourage prisons without a policy on (a) HIV/AIDS and (b) hepatitis C to adopt one; and what assessment he has made of the merits of giving prisoners access to free (i) condoms and (ii) needles. [31438]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Health Services for Prisoners Standard of May 2004 requires all establishments to have effective arrangements for the prevention, control and management of communicable diseases. We will be considering findings of the Prison Reform Trust and the National AIDS Trust just published work on "HIV and Hepatitis in UK Prisons: addressing prisoners' healthcare needs" in due course.

Prison doctors were advised in 1995 that they should make condoms available to individual prisoners, on application, if in their clinical judgment, there is a risk of transmission of HIV infection during sexual activity.

The Prison Service is planning to issue, in early 2006, revised guidance and instructions which aim to clarify the policy on condoms so that it can be applied more evenly across the prison estate.

The Prison Service has no present plans to introduce a needle exchange scheme. It continues to monitor developments in the field both at home and abroad, including existing practice in the community here, policy and practice in custodial settings abroad and the effectiveness of needle exchange schemes over other harm minimisation measures.

Schedule 1 Offenders

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Schedule 1 offenders in the community have received or are receiving treatment under sex offender treatment programmes. [32780]

Paul Goggins: The majority of sex offender treatment programmes in the community are run by the National Probation Service. Accredited sex offender treatment programmes began to be implemented in 2001 and by October 2003 all Probation Areas were running an accredited programme. By 2005 1,100 individuals had completed treatment, and at any one time an estimated 1,800 sex offenders will be attending treatment programmes on a weekly basis.

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the (a) average length and (b) variance has been in 2005 of (i) the time between release from prison of Schedule 1 offenders and their embarkation on a sex offenders treatment programme and (ii) the duration of such a sex offender's treatment programme. [32784]

Fiona Mactaggart: The information requested on average length and variance between release and start of treatment is not collected centrally. Offenders who are subject to licence conditions to address their offending behaviour are required to commence work as soon as possible. However, for sex offenders there is often a period of preparatory work and assessment, before commencement on a treatment programme is possible.

The duration of sex offender treatment programmes in the community is between 12 months and two years depending on risk and treatment need identified.

Terrorism

Mr. Hurd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the requests for an extension of the maximum pre-charge detention period for suspected terrorists by the Security Services, referred to by the Prime Minister on 5 August and by the Minister of State for Crime, Security and Communities on 12 October. [30335]

Hazel Blears: The Government's position on the maximum pre-charge detention period in terrorism cases, having assessed all the evidence, was set out in the Terrorism Bill. As my right hon. Friend, the Home Secretary, made clear at Third Reading of that Bill on 10 November 2005, Official Report, column 493, the Government accepts the decision of the House of Commons in this matter.

Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received about allowing the questioning of suspected terrorists after charge. [30339]

Hazel Blears: The issue was raised during the passage of the Terrorism Bill through the House of Commons. Beyond that, we have received no representations on this subject.

Victim Support

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what funding is to be allocated to Victim Support in each of the next three years; and if he will make a statement. [32808]

Fiona Mactaggart: The grant in aid to Victim Support in 2005–06 is £30 million. Funding for 2006–07 and 2007–08 will be announced in due course.

Young Offenders

Dr. Vis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many children were put into bed and breakfast accommodation on release from custody in (a) 2004 and (b) 2005 to date. [33098]

Fiona Mactaggart: The information is not collected in the form requested. Figures collected by the Youth Justice Board show that in 2004, and in the first nine months of 2005, 86 per cent. of young people who left custody went to satisfactory accommodation. (Bed and breakfast accommodation is not considered satisfactory.) The figures are set out in the following table:

Accommodation of young people leaving custody

	Young people subject to a custodial sentence transferred to the community	Assessed as living in satisfactory accommodation
2004	5,269	4,520
2005[1]	3,902	3,351

[1] January to September.

Youth Offending Teams

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the national performance targets are for youth offending teams; and what the performance of Torbay Youth Offending Team has been against those targets. [32059]

Fiona Mactaggart: The following table shows performance against Key Performance Indicators (KPI) for Torbay Youth Offending Team and the outturn for England and Wales for the period April 2004 to March 2005:

Torbay: Performance

[2] Recidivism rate of the 2002 cohort after 24 months.
[3] Torbay had no acute mental health referrals in the period so there is no data for this KPI.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Access to Learning

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many people have started work-based learning in each year since 2000, broken down by programme. [31264]

Phil Hope: Full year figures for the numbers starting work-based learning (WBL) broken down by programme are published annually in a Statistical First Release (SFR) produced by the Learning and Skills Council (LSC) in consultation with Department for Education and Skills (DfES) statisticians.

The most recent version, entitled 'Further Education, Work Based Learning for Young People and Adult and Community Learning—Learner Numbers in England 2003/04', was published on 14 December 2004. Table 5 contains figures for WBL starts broken down by programme for every year between 2000/01 and 2003/04. The SFR can be downloaded from both the DfES and LSC websites:

Revised and updated figures for 2004/05 are due to be published on 8 December 2005.

Apprenticeships

Mr. Anthony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many Government-funded apprentices there were in (a) Great Yarmouth and (b) Norfolk in each year since 1996–97. [28040]

Phil Hope: Figures for those participating in apprenticeships funded by the Learning and Skills Council (LSC) derive from the individual learner record (ILR). This was collated for the first time in 2001/02 (as an interim ILR) and comparable figures are only available for the three years from then. National figures for 2004/05 are scheduled for publication on 8 December 2005.

The following table shows the average number in learning[1] for Government-funded apprentices whose home address is in the parliamentary constituency of Great Yarmouth and the local LSC area of Norfolk for each year 2001/02 to 2003/04.

[1] Learner numbers for apprenticeships are monitored monthly. The monthly total changes due to new starts and completions; the number presented is the average number of learners from August to July.

Basic Skills Agency

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 16 November 2005, Official Report, column 1280W, on the Basic Skills Agency, what steps she is taking to promote the Basic Skills Agency Quality Mark in schools. [33206]

Jacqui Smith: The main responsibility for promoting the Quality Mark to schools rests with the Basic Skills Agency's partner local authorities. Most local authorities (LAs) make the link between the Quality Mark and the school improvement agenda and self evaluation requirements. Some LAs use working for the Quality Mark award as part of the exit strategy from a period of additional support provided through the Primary National Strategy Leadership Programme or Intensifying Support Project. Local authorities also advertise the award through their own networks and communications with schools, including head teacher meetings and governor conferences. Many authorities also ensure that all their advisers are aware of the Quality Mark award and can suggest it to schools that they think will benefit when they are on school visits. The Agency publishes termly in "The Times Educational Supplement" the names of the schools who have gained the award and also produces print and website information about the Quality Mark.

Bournemouth Schools

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many schools in Bournemouth local education authority stayed within budget in the 2004–05 financial year. [33424]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested is contained within the following table:

	Total
Number of local authority maintained schools reported on section 52 outturn during FY 2004–05[1]	40
Number of schools within their revenue budget for 2004–05[2,3]	26
Number of schools over their revenue budget for 2004–05[2,4]	14

[1] Included in the above table are all local authority maintained nursery, primary, secondary and special schools reported by Bournemouth local authority on their 2004–05 section 52 outturn statement (table B). The data are still being validated by the Department and they are likely to change.

[2] For the purposes of this table, a school is defined as operating within its revenue budget during 2004–05 if its revenue expenditure for the year does not exceed its revenue income.

[3] Of the 26 schools who were under budget for 2004–05:

2 (both primary schools) started the year with a deficit revenue balance and remained in deficit at the end of the year;

2 (1 primary and 1 secondary school) went from having a deficit revenue balance at the start of the year to being in surplus at the end of the year;

21 (15 primary, 5 secondary and 1 special school) started the year with a surplus revenue balance and ended the year further in surplus;

1 (secondary school) started the year with no revenue balance and ended the year in surplus.

[4] Of the 14 schools who were over budget for 2004–05:

9 (8 primary and 1 special school) had sufficient surplus revenue balances at the start of the year that they still remained in surplus at the end of the year;

1 (primary school) went from having a surplus revenue balance at the start of the year to being in deficit at the end of the year;

4 (all secondary schools) started the year with a deficit revenue balance and ended the year further in deficit.

Bullying

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much has been spent on anti-bullying initiatives in (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in each year since 1997. [31596]

Jacqui Smith: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to the hon. Member for Kingston and Surbiton (Mr. Davey) on 14 November 2005, Official Report, columns 928–29W, which sets out this information.

We do not hold figures which separate primary and secondary school funding information.

Child Care

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of people are eligible to use registered childcare paid for by pre-tax salary under the nursery/childcare vouchers scheme. [33301]

Dawn Primarolo: I have been asked to reply.

If an employer offers employer supported childcare or childcare vouchers, an employee is entitled to the first £50 a week tax and NIC free, so long as all the conditions are met. Employers can provide this help to their employees either on top or instead of salary.

We do not have information about the percentage of employees that have taken advantage of the exemptions.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what financial support her Department provides for (a) the University for Industry, (b) learndirect centres and (c) learndirect hubs; what role her Department (i) has and (ii) had in the governance and establishment of each; and what policy her Department has adopted in relation to the legal status of each. [33428]

Phil Hope: The latest year for which the figures are available is 2004/05. Of the £218 million provided to Ufi in 2004/05, £107.2 million went to learndirect centres and £27.8 million went to hubs. Since August 2004, the Department has given the Learning and Skills Council responsibility for funding Ufi's infrastructure and learndirect provision in England. Each year the LSC and Ufi reach agreement on the targets to be achieved, the funding to be paid, the methodology for use of the funds and the values which Ufi will use for the funding it passes to hub operators and learndirect centres.

On governance, in 1999, the Department established a company structure which Ufi then cleared with the Charity Commissioners. This led to the setting up of Ufi Charitable Trust (a company limited by guarantee registered as a charity) and Ufi Ltd. (a trading subsidiary, limited by shares wholly owned by the parent company). The Department and Ufi agreed the hub and centre structure for the delivery of learndirect learning as this was considered the appropriate structure at that time for ensuring that learndirect provision was responsive to local and regional skills need. The hubs and learning centres are a mix of private companies and other organisations.

Education White Paper

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when she proposes to create the capital fund referred to in paragraph 2.35 of the Education White Paper, Higher Standards, Better Schools for all. [32327]

Jacqui Smith: Further information about the operation of the fund will be announced in due course.

Examination Results

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many 16 to 19-year-lds achieved five A*-C passes or the equivalent in 2004. [30818]

Jacqui Smith: The following table shows numbers and proportions of 16 to 19-year-olds qualified to at least Level 2 (equivalent to five A*-C GCSEs) by the end of 2003/04.

Attained L2+ by end 2003/04

Age in 2004	Number[1]	Proportion (percentage)
16	345,800	53.7
17	387,800	61.4
18	406,500	65.7
19	411,700	67.0

[1] Rounded to nearest 100.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) which GCSEs count as qualifications in (a) literacy and (b) numeracy; [30819]

(2) what percentage of (a) 15 and (b) 16 to 19-year-olds achieved a Level 2 qualification in literacy and numeracy in 2004. [30820]

Jacqui Smith: The answer to this question is based on the approach taken during this year's Achievement and Attainment Tables English and maths pilot.

For the 2005 Achievement and Attainment Tables pilot the following rules have been applied:

For the English and maths indicators, to demonstrate achievement in GCSE maths, any maths GCSE qualification will be recognised. To demonstrate achievement in GCSE English, any English GCSE qualification will be recognised, except English Literature.

Results in all educational establishments by the end of 2003/04[1]

[4] To demonstrate functional English through Key Skills and Basic Skills, only Key Skills qualifications in communication and Basic Skills qualifications in literacy are recognised.
[5] To demonstrate functional mathematics through Key Skills and Basic Skills, only Key Skills qualifications in application of number and Basic Skills qualifications in numeracy are recognised.

Examination Standards

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what action she is taking to ensure maintenance of standards in (a) GCSE and (b) A level examinations. [33112]

Jacqui Smith: The Qualifications and Curriculum Authority (QCA) is the body with statutory responsibility for ensuring that the standards of GCSE and A level qualifications are maintained over time. QCA has a rolling programme of standards reviews, which began in 1997. The reports are available on the QCA website. This includes the report of the Independent Committee on Examination Standards chaired by Barry McGaw, Dec04, which found that no examination system at the school or other level is so tightly or carefully managed.

Failing Schools

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what new powers will be required by local education authorities to enable them to intervene in failing schools in the manner envisaged in the Schools White Paper. [31880]

Jacqui Smith: Local authorities already have a range of powers to enable them to intervene when a school is judged by Ofsted to be failing. These include appointing additional governors, appointing an interim executive board and removing the school's delegated budget. We intend to create an addition power to enable local authorities to force a weak school to join a federation with a stronger school. We also intend to strengthen local authorities' existing powers to issue warning notices to schools that are badly under-performing, but which have not yet failed an inspection—we want local authorities to intervene early to ensure a school's weaknesses are addressed at an earlier stage to prevent formal school failure. If a school failed satisfactorily to comply with the warning notice, the local authority would be able to use the powers of intervention described above.

We are also proposing a new duty on local authorities to consider radical options to secure school improvement at an early stage; and to reconsider action if the school fails to make adequate progress. We have already reduced the numbers of schools in special measures by over half since 1998, and significantly reduced the average time a school spends in special measures. We now need to ensure local authorities take swifter and more decisive action to address school failure so that all children can achieve their full potential.

Falling School Rolls

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment the Department has made of the effects of falling school rolls in (a) England and (b) Cheltenham constituency; and if she will make a statement. [32782]

Jacqui Smith: The Department's national forecasts indicate that primary school rolls will fall by 129,000 between 2004/05 and 2007/08 with secondary rolls falling by 133,000 between 2004/05 and 2007/08.

Local authority forecast data is at authority level and we do not have forecasts for the Cheltenham constituency. Gloucestershire local authority's 2004 forecasts indicate that primary rolls will increase by 964 between 2004/05 and 2007/08 and secondary rolls will increase by 2,212 between 2004/05 and 2010/11.

We have developed a toolkit offering practical advice to help local authorities manage the challenges and opportunities presented by falling primary rolls. The toolkit is available at www.teachernet.gov.uk/falling rolls.

Independent Schools

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of pupils aged under 11 years attended independent schools in England in each of the last five years, broken down by local authority area. [32678]

Jacqui Smith: The requested information has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many independent schools taking pupils under the age of 11 years have opened in England in each of the last five years, broken down by local authority area. [32679]

Jacqui Smith: The following table shows the number of independent schools, which in part or in full cater for pupils with an age range below 12, opening in each of the last five calendar years in England, by local authority. Independent special schools are included.

Investors in People

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many and what proportion of (a) primary schools and (b) secondary schools are (i) accredited as Investors in People and (ii) have been awarded a Charter Mark. [32912]

Jacqui Smith: On the basis of information provided by Investors in People UK (IIPUK) 7,511 out of 22,343 primary schools in the United Kingdom are recognised as Investors in People. Approximately 33.6 per cent. of all UK primary schools are recognised as Investors in People.

2,632 out of 4,230 secondary schools in the United Kingdom are recognised as Investors in People. Approximately 62 per cent. of all UK secondary schools are recognised as Investors in People.

On the basis of information provided by the Cabinet Office 36 out of 22,343 primary schools in the United Kingdom have achieved the Charter Mark. Approximately 0.16 per cent. of all UK primary schools have achieved the Charter Mark.

56 out of 4,230 secondary schools in the United Kingdom have achieved the Charter Mark. Approximately 1.3 per cent.

Key Stage Grades

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what grade was necessary for a pupil to achieve a level 4 at key stage 2 in (a) reading, (b) writing, (c) mathematics and (d) science in each year since 1995. [29540]

Jacqui Smith: The marks required for a pupil to reach the level 4 threshold in each subject, tested at the end of Key Stage 2, is decided each year by a process, known as level-setting, designed to ensure that the level 4 standard is the same as the previous year's. The level thresholds are published each year on the QCA website. The exact number of marks varies from year to year according to the difficulty of the subject papers. The national curriculum tests have evolved over the years to reflect the curriculum, for example in 1998 mental maths was included in the key stage maths test.

The following table shows the marks required for a pupil to be awarded a level 4 at Key Stage 2.

	English overall	Reading	Writing	Math	Science
1995	[1]n/a	[2]n/a	[2]n/a	31	37
1996	57	[2]n/a	[2]n/a	41	45
1997	52	21	31	40	41
1998	51	20	31	[3]52	42
1999	48	17	31	52	42
2000	49	18	31	50	43
2001	50	19	31	49	39
2002	49	18	31	49	40
2003	44	19	[4]25	45	40
2004	41	18	23	48	39
2005	42	17	25	48	42

[1] In 1995 the overall level was not calculated using a single level threshold. Writing and reading were combined in a two-way table (see following table) to provide an overall level.

[2] In 1996 there were no separate mark allocations for reading and writing, therefore the level threshold was set for English overall.

[3] In 1998, a mental mathematics element was introduced into the mathematics test. This increased the total number of marks available and therefore the level thresholds were intentionally raised in 1998.

[4] In 2003, the model of English writing assessment was changed in order to normalise the distribution. The old model meant that most pupils achieved high marks, which was felt to be an inappropriate way of discriminating between levels. The new model of assessment means that the majority of the pupils are around the middle of the mark range. In order to maintain standards between the two models, the thresholds were intentionally lowered in 2003.

Learning and Skills Council

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many staff employed by the Learning and Skills Council have previously worked in administrative posts in the offender learning sector; [24963]

(2) how many staff employed by the Learning and Skills Council have previously worked in the offender learning sector. [24965]

Bill Rammell: The Learning and Skills Council is responsible for the planning and funding of the Offenders' Learning and Skills Service. The LSC is working in close partnership with the National Offender Management Service, the Prison and Probation Services, Youth Justice Board and Jobcentre Plus and other organisations to deliver our vision that offenders in custody and in the community should, according to need, have access to opportunities which enable them to gain the skills and qualifications they need to hold down a job and to play a positive role in society, so that they are less likely to reoffend. Information about its staff is an operational matter for the LSC. Mark Haysom has written to the hon. Member with further information. A copy of his reply has been placed in the Library.

Letter from Mark Haysom to Mr. Stephen O'Brien, dated 30 November 2005:

I write in response to your recent Parliamentary Question where you asked the Secretary of State for Education and Skills:

a) how many staff employed by the Learning Skills Council (LSC) have previously worked in administrative posts in the offender learning sector.

b) how many staff employed by the LSC have previously worked in the offender learning sector.

All we can state is that the Offender Learning function when transferred will be adequately resourced. In preparation for the transfer the LSC has appointed in each of its 9 regions and at the national office, dedicated senior postholders with recent experience in the offender learning sector. These Learning and Skills Advisors work closely with the Heads of Learning and Skills employed in every prison in England.

I trust this is what you require as we have no further information to disclose.

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make an assessment of the impact of funding decisions by Learning and Skills Councils on adult education provision in (a) 2004–05 and (b) 2005–06. [33479]

Phil Hope: The Learning and Skills Council will publish the Statistical First Release for 2004/05 on 8 December (as pre-announced in the Schedule for the Publication of National Statistics) which will show numbers of learners in LSC funded provision. Similar information for 2005/06 will be published in December next year.

This Government has significantly increased funding for further education (FE) in recent years. Total funding has increased by £1 billion in 2005/06 when compared to 2002/03 which represents a 25 per cent. increase. In 2005/06 total funding for FE has increased by 4.4 per cent. compared to 2004/05. This level of funding will enable us to meet our key priorities for 2005/06 to meet the needs of young people, those lacking literacy, numeracy and English language skills and those seeking a first full Level 2 qualification.

Funding for non-vocational learning opportunities for adults, delivered mainly through local authority adult education services, has also increased. In 2004/05 we provided over £207 million to the Learning and Skills Council (LSC) in support of this learning. This has risen to £210 million in 2005/06. The Government is committed to safeguarding the availability of a wide range of learning for personal and community development (previously termed adult and community learning).

Learning Difficulties (Schools)

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many schools for children with learning difficulties have received a (a) grade 1, (b) grade 2, (c) grade 3, (d) grade 4 and (e) grade 5 rating by Ofsted inspectors in their most recent inspection. [32763]

Jacqui Smith: This is a matter for Ofsted. HM Chief Inspector, David Bell has written to my hon. Friend and a copy of his reply will be placed in the Library.

Letter from David Bell, dated 29 November 2005:

Your recent parliamentary question has been passed to me, as her Majesty's Chief Inspector, for reply.

The table attached shows an analysis of the overall effectiveness judgments for special schools inspected between January 2000 and July 2005. Most special schools (89 per cent.) were inspected in this period. Although all the schools include children with statements of special education need, not all cater solely or mainly for children defined as having learning difficulties; some will include children with physical or sensory disabilities. In addition to the breakdown you asked for, I have also included, for reference, the numbers of schools that were graded 6 or 7 for overall effectiveness.

Overall effectiveness of special schools—January 2000 to July 2005

Special Schools	Number
Highly effective (grade 1)	41
Very effective (grade 2)	297
Effective (grade 3)	501
Fairly effective (grade 4)	196
Ineffective (grade 5)	34
Very ineffective (grade 6)	15
Very poor (grade 7)	5

Note:

1. Where schools have been inspected twice during the period 2000 to 2005, only data from the most recent inspection is included.
2. The framework for inspection changed in September 2003, so the figures contain judgments made under two inspection frameworks.
3. The table includes 101 schools which have closed since they were inspected.

Local Education Authority Employees

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many individuals are employed by local education authorities; and how many of these are (a) on schools' payrolls and (b) not on schools' payrolls. [33145]

Jacqui Smith: The Department collects data on the school work force in England, but not the number of persons employed by local authorities. The latest information available (January 2005) shows that there were 431,900 full-time equivalent teachers and 268,600 full-time equivalent members of support staff working in maintained nurseries and schools in England. These figures include persons employed by local authorities, directly by those maintained schools which employ their own staff, and by third parties.

Local Education Authority Schools (Newcastle)

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will estimate the number of secondary school age children resident in Newcastle who were educated at local education authority sector schools in (a) Northumberland, (b) North Tyneside and (c) Gateshead in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [32326]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested has been provided in the following table.

Local Education Partnerships

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether a future (a) foundation school and (b) trust school whose land and buildings are under a local education partnership arrangement will have the right (i) to negotiate and (ii) to terminate such an arrangement. [32413]

Jacqui Smith: Schools which acquire new foundation or trust status will take on all legal benefits and obligations of the predecessor schools, including where they have received investment through Building Schools for the Future. The new foundation or trust school will inherit any existing contracts agreed by the previous governing body. It will not be able to opt out of contracts it inherits, but will be able to renegotiate existing contracts, including termination, with its private sector provider, where the contractual provisions enable this. Where the authority has entered into a contract on behalf of the school it will require the authority's cooperation.

Management Allowances

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much was spent on management allowances in each of the last three years for which figures are available. [33355]

Jacqui Smith: The estimated costs of management allowances in England and Wales for the last three years are £770 million in 2002–03, £894 million in 2003–04, and £905 million in 2004–05. These include on costs (employers' contributions for pensions and national insurance).

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many teachers are in receipt of management allowances. [33356]

Jacqui Smith: During 2004–05 an estimated 193,000 full-time equivalent classroom teachers were receiving management allowances in England and Wales.

Public Service Worker Skills

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what criteria were used in making the decision explicity to include improving the skills of workers delivering public services in the Learning and Skills Council's Priorities for Success; and whether this excludes workers delivering private services. [28766]

Bill Rammell: Strengthening the skills of the workforce that delivers public services is central to the Government's public service reforms. This was recognised by the Learning and Skills Council in December 2004 in its Annual Statement of Priorities for 2005–06. This was reinforced in "Priorities for Success", issued in October this year, which sets out its funding priorities for the next two years. The detailed rationale behind these funding priorities is a matter for the LSC and Mark Haysom, the Council's chief executive, has written to the hon. Member setting out the detail. A copy of his letter has been placed in the House Library.

Letter from Mark Haysom dated 30 November 2005:

Improving the Skills of Workers Delivering Public Services

I am writing in response to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, asking what criteria were used in making the decision explicitly to include improving the skills of workers delivering public services in the Learning and Skills Council's Priorities for Success; and whether this excludes workers delivering private services.

The LSC's Annual Statement of Priorities identifies the key actions to be taken by the LSC in creating a more highly skilled and productive workforce. In 2004, one in five establishments (20%) reported that they employed staff that they considered not fully proficient and over 1.5 million workers are considered to be not fully proficient by their employers, representing 7% cent of the total workforce in England.

This continues to be one of the biggest challenges for employers, and the actions within the Annual Statement of Priorities are aimed at addressing these issues in all businesses, whether private, public or voluntary. Our work with the public services sector includes workers employed directly in the sector and employees of private organisations sub contracted to the sector, for example in cleaning and catering.

Improving the skills of workers delivering public services is a separate priority within the Annual Statement because the challenges they face are substantial in comparison with other sectors. In addition, the impact of better investment in skills on the improved delivery of services to the public, and of better targeted joint investment from the public purse are correspondingly significant.

Our work with the sector on skills needs has identified that whilst the public sector workforce contains more Level 2 and above qualified workers than the private sector, 21% of employees are still without a first full Level 2. Based on 2003/04 Labour Force Survey data, over a million public service workers across a range of sub sectors have therefore not reached the minimum threshold for employability.

In addition, a NIACE Skills for Life survey identified that 72% of healthcare staff have numeracy skills below Level 2 and 56% have literacy skills below Level 2. Skills for Life therefore remain a key barrier to upskilling the sector workforce and increasing the number of people with employability skills.

Finally the LSC intends to enable the sector to attract and retain apprentices and new entrants in the workforce. The sector is characterised by an aged and aging demographic profile that does not match the profile of the communities that it serves. Currently, however, levels of participation in Apprenticeships are low compared to other sectors, with less than 10% of all Apprentices readily identifiable as working in public services.

It is our intention, working across Government, to secure a joint investment plan for meeting skills needs in the sector. We will progress this work in conjunction with our range of activities detailed in the Annual Statement of Priorities that support employers and employees in any business, including the roll out of the National Employer Training Programme (NETP) which will better equip us to meet the skills needs of all employers by offering them real choice and flexibility in the training available to them.

I hope that this information is helpful, and demonstrates the LSC's commitment to both targeted action with public services and to our broader work to address the skills needs of employees in all sectors.

Qualifications (Newcastle)

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of working age people were (a) qualified to (i) graduate level, (ii) level 4, (iii) level 2 and (b) without qualification in Newcastle-upon-Tyne Central in each year from 1992. [32328]

Phil Hope: The table shows analysis of the level of highest qualification held by the working age population in the parliamentary constituency of Newcastle-upon-Tyne Central at (a) qualified to (i) graduate level, (ii) level 4, (iii) level 2 and (b) without qualification. Data comes from the local labour force survey. Data at parliamentary constituency level is not available prior to 1999.

Race Equality Impact Assessments

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many Race Equality Impact Assessments her Department completed between (a) April 2004 and March 2005 and (b) April 2005 and November 2005; and how many assessments in each period resulted in a change of policy. [32825]

Jacqui Smith: The Department for Education and Skills' commitment not to discriminate unfairly on any grounds is set out clearly in our recently revised equality and diversity policy, which recognises that everyone should have an equal opportunity to meet their aspirations, realise their full potential and improve their life chances.

This means that equality and diversity is the responsibility of everyone in the Department and is an ever evolving commitment mainstreamed within the normal course of business. It is therefore not possible to identify the number of Race Equality Impact Assessments (REIAs) which have been undertaken within specified periods as this information is not held centrally and it would involve disproportionate cost to collect.

Under the Race Relations Amendment Act we as a Department are required to publish a triennial Race Equality Scheme and an associated annual action plan. The Race Equality Scheme was published in May 2005 and annex 1 of the publication details a summary of impact assessments.

We continue to be proactive in this area by working with our major programme boards to build a stronger evidence based strategy to address race equality challenges and to ensure that all staff continue to be aware of their responsibilities.

School Finance

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of (a) capital and (b) revenue investment in schools which have received private sector investment in the last five years is accounted for by private sector investment of each type. [32113]

Jacqui Smith: The proportion of (a) capital and (b) revenue investment, in schools which have received private sector investment in the last five years, which is accounted for by private sector investment of each type, is set out as follows.

Except as noted, virtually all capital investment in schools over the period 2000–01 to 2005–06 is estimated to be publicly funded. While no records are kept centrally on local initiatives to generate private sector funding, these are believed to be small scale. Regarding the Academy programme, where the first school opened in 2002, private sector sponsors contribute up to around £2 million towards an average cost of £25 million. Sponsors of Voluntary Aided Schools contribute 10 per cent. towards capital costs.

The proportion of revenue funding from private sources to all maintained schools and academies for the period 2000–01 to 2005–06 has been relatively constant. Accordingly, although data collection in its current form only commenced in 2002–03, and figures have yet to be compiled for the current year, it is most likely that private funding will be less than 3 per cent. throughout this period. This is made up of income provided to the schools from foundation, diocese or other trust funds, business sponsorship, fund-raising activities, and voluntary contributions from parents.

School Nursing

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps her Department is taking to encourage school nurses to develop their work in (a) the classroom and (b) health promotion. [24429]

Jacqui Smith: The recently published Schools White Paper recognises the value of school nursing and notes that school nurses can play a critical role in supporting schools to promote good health. School nurses are already active partners in helping schools achieve Healthy School status. We have recently produced a new guide for schools detailing the criteria for Healthy School status. The guide recognises the importance of schools involving professionals from appropriate external agencies such as school nurses to support and improve personal, social and health education (PHSE) delivery. DfES is also supporting with Department of Health, the PSHE certificate for both teachers and school and community nurses.

In addition, officials from my Department have been working closely with the Department of Health on work to increase the capacity of school nurses both in terms of numbers and the development of their child-centred public health role in line with the Choosing Health commitments. We intend to publish two documents arising from this work:

"Looking for a School Nurse?"—modelled on an earlier document published by the DfES (on school bursars). This guide is aimed at head-teachers, setting out both the advantages, and some of the practical considerations, that head-teachers would need to be aware of in terms of having a school nurse either on-site or assigned to a school or cluster of schools; and

An update of the "School Nurse Development Pack" (first published by DH in 2001) to outline the principles of a modern role and to enable school nurses to expand their knowledge, skills and competencies.

School Sport

Mr. Michael Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 2 November 2005, Official Report, column 1197W, on school sport, how many secondary schools have disposed of a sports pitch in the last five years. [32363]

Jacqui Smith: The number of approved applications to dispose of an area of school playing field capable of forming at least a small sports pitch in England in each of the last five years is as follows:

	Number
2000/01	28
2001/02	29
2002/03	19
2004/05	11

The numbers of above applications that involve the loss of an area of land capable of forming at least a small sports pitch at a secondary school or special school in England in each of the last five years is as follows:

	Number
2000/01	15
2001/02	14
2002/03	15
2004/05	7

Of the total 59 approved applications at secondary and special schools, 21 concerned redundant playing fields at closed schools that were not wanted by any other local schools.

Science A-levels

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many pupils gained an A-Level in (a) chemistry, (b) physics and (c) mathematics or further mathematics in each year since 1990. [32625]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested on 16 to 18[1]-year-olds passing GCE A Levels 1993–2005[1] can be found in the following table.

[1] Age at the start of the academic year.

Special Educational Needs

James Duddridge: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether children with special educational needs have a statutory right to express a preference for a place at an academy over a school maintained by a local authority. [32979]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 29 November 2005]: Parents have a right to make representations to the local authority (LA) for an academy (an independent school) to be named in their child's statement of special educational needs. When this happens and the LA proposes to name the academy, under the terms of the academy's funding agreement it must consent to being named except > "where admitting the child would be incompatible with the efficient education of other children and no reasonable steps may be made to secure compatibility".

An academy's independent status, does not affect parents' rights to appeal to the SEN and disability tribunal.

Specialist Schools

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) if she will list the subjects in which specialist schools may select by aptitude.; [33210]

(2) how many and what proportion of specialist schools select a portion of their pupils by aptitude in a subject. [33230]

Jacqui Smith: Specialist schools are bound by the School Admissions Code of Practice. Under legislation there is provision for schools with a specialism to select up to 10 per cent. of students by aptitude in the relevant subjects. Modern foreign languages, performing or visual arts (including music), physical education, design and technology and information technology are prescribed subjects for this purpose. The Government informed the Education Select Committee in November 2004 that regulations would be amended to prohibit new selection in design and technology and information technology while allowing schools already using such selection to continue to do so. A consultation on these proposed regulations closed on 18 October.

We believe relatively few specialists select by aptitude—our figures suggest that less than 6 per cent. of schools that were specialist in summer 2001 did so.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of specialist schools she estimates will adopt trust status under the proposals in the White Paper, Higher Standards, Better Schools for All. [33228]

Jacqui Smith: It will be for individual schools to decide whether to change category to become trust schools. The Government has not set targets for the number of trust schools.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many schools are specialist schools; and how many she estimates will become specialist by the beginning of the academic year 2006–07. [33231]

Jacqui Smith: There are currently 2,380 designated specialist schools out of 3,385 maintained secondary schools in England. By September 2006 we expect over 80 per cent. of maintained secondary schools in England to have a specialist designation subject to applicant schools meeting the required standards of the Specialist Schools Programme.

Student Numbers

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many students in year 7 and above attend each middle and secondary schools in Newcastle upon Tyne, including independent schools in each year since 2000–01; and how many of these were in sixth forms at each school. [32316]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 28 November 2005]: The available information requested is shown in the table.

Teachers

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average salary of (a) state school and (b) city academy teachers was in 2004–05. [31430]

Jacqui Smith: In March 2004, the latest information available, it is provisionally estimated that the average salary of full-time regular teachers in maintained sector schools was £31,680.

No reliable figures are available to estimate the average salary of teachers employed in city academies that were open in March 2004.

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what proportion of black and minority ethnic teachers (a) retired and (b) resigned from each London secondary school in each year since 1997; [33310]

(2) what percentage of teachers in each secondary school in each London borough were of a black and minority ethnic background in each year since 1997. [33311]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Information on the minority ethnic background of teachers is not available at school level or by phase of education. Information at local authority level for January 2005 was published in SFR41/2005 on 28 September 2005. A copy of this publication has been placed in the House of Commons Library. Alternatively it is available at the following URL: http://www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/DB/SFR/s000603/index.shtml

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate she has made of the number of teachers in receipt of management allowances who will not qualify for a teaching and learning responsibility payment; and if she will make a statement. [33354]

Jacqui Smith: Following reviews of their staffing structures, it will be for individual schools to determine whether teachers currently holding Management Allowances meet the criteria for Teaching and Learning Responsibility payments. Reviewing staffing structures will build on work force reform to help ensure that teachers focus on teaching and leading teaching and learning.

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what percentage of teachers had remained in the profession after (a) two, (b) five and (c) 10 years in the last period for which figures are available; [31372]

(2) what assessment she has made of the teacher retention rate in state schools in England. [31383]

Jacqui Smith: The latest information available relates to March 2004. It shows that an estimated 80 per cent. of full and part-time regular qualified teachers were still in service in 2004 after entering the maintained sector service for the first time between two and three years previously. The equivalent figure for those entering between five and six years earlier was 74 per cent; and for those entering between 10 and 11 years earlier, 60 per cent.

Many teachers take a break from service at some stage and return later, and many take a break fairly early in their career. Figures show that in 2003–04, 26 per cent. of all entrants were returning to service, and of these over a third had accrued less than five years service before their break. In addition to those on a break, an unknown number will be in teaching service outside of the English maintained sector.

In January 2005 the full-time equivalent number of teachers in service was 32,700 higher than in 1997. There are now more teachers in service than in any year since 1981.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) parents and (b) pupils have been prosecuted for attacks on teaching staff in each of the last 10 years; and if she will make a statement. [32664]

Jacqui Smith: The requested information is not collected centrally.

Vocational Training

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment she has made of the effects on industry of vocational training in (a) Tamworth and (b) Staffordshire. [32029]

Phil Hope: The Department is committed to ensuring that everyone has the skills he or she needs to be employable and personally fulfilled. Our 14–19 and Skills White Papers set out our strategies for ensuring that education and training meets the needs of employers.

The Staffordshire Learning and Skills Council (LSC) is responsible for the effective planning and funding of learning to raise the skills of the workforce and the potential workforce. It engages through the year with providers and employers to ensure that provision matches employer skills demands.

Progress has already been made in improving the availability and quality of relevant vocational skills training to support local employers and local people:

The LSC funded National Employer Skills Survey 2003 (NESS 2003) showed that Staffordshire was in line with the West Midlands and England in having just 4 per cent. of employers reporting skill shortage vacancies.

NESS 2003 also showed that Staffordshire LSC had a lower proportion of employers reporting "hard to fill" vacancies at 14 per cent. compared to West Midlands (16 per cent.) and England (17 per cent.).

With regard to barriers to developing staff, just 13 per cent. of Staffordshire LSC employers quoted a lack of suitable courses compared to 18 per cent. nationally.

The data for NESS 2005 is due to be released before the end of December and Staffordshire LSC plans to monitor progress as soon as the data is validated and made available.

Separate information for Tamworth is not available.

Westgate College, Newcastle

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many and what percentage of students achieved five or more A* to C grade GCSEs at Westgate College, Newcastle in (a) the three years before Newcastle city council announced that it was to be closed and replaced by a city academy and (b) 2005. [32317]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 28 November 2005]: The information for the three years prior to the announcement in November 2004 are given in the following table. Figures for 2005 are not available at school level until the publication of the School and College Achievement and Attainment Tables in January 2006.

Number and proportion of 15-year-olds[1] achieving 5+ A-C grades at GCSE and equivalent[2] at West Gate Community College[3]*

	Number of 15-year-olds achieving 5+ A-C at GCSE and equivalent*	Percentage of 15-year-olds achieving 5+ A-C at GCSE and equivalent*
2004	75	32
2003	54	21
2002	31	14

[2] Figures are for GCSE and equivalent qualifications for 2004. All previous years are for GCSE/GNVQ only.
[3] Newcastle city council issued a press release on 17 November 2004 stating the intention for an Academy to replace West Gate Community College.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

British Overseas Territories

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development when he last visited each British Overseas Territory; and whether he has plans for future visits. [33671]

Mr. Thomas: I visited Montserrat in June of last year. I have no immediate plans for any further visits to the Overseas Territories.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will make a statement on his Department's plans further to improve transport links that would encourage tourism in each of the overseas territories. [33766]

Mr. Thomas: A new airport financed jointly by DFID and the European Union, became operational in Montserrat earlier this year. Last March, I announced plans for an airport in St. Helena, subject to satisfactory contract bids and a rigorous environmental assessment.

Cayman Islands

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what actions are being taken by his Department to limit the effect of natural disasters on the Cayman Islands. [33754]

Mr. Thomas: We are supporting a project, which includes an adviser based in the Caribbean, aimed at improving and strengthening disaster preparedness in all UK Overseas Territories in the region. In the particular case of the Cayman Islands, we also funded a study of the impact of Hurricane Ivan to help learn from the Cayman Islands' experience of handling the emergency.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much financial assistance was directed to the Cayman Islands after they were struck by Hurricane Ivan in September 2004. [33763]

Mr. Thomas: Her Majesty's Government's assistance totalled approximately £250,000, provided in response to the immediate humanitarian need. This included the cost of deploying naval vessels in the immediate aftermath of the hurricane and the provision of essential water and medical supplies, plus help with the costs of a contingent from the Bermuda Regiment to help with the clean-up operation. We also offered advice to the Cayman Islands authorities in handling the emergency and we have since funded a review of the hurricane's impact.

Damages

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for South Holland and The Deepings (Mr. Hayes) of 15 November 2005, Official Report, columns 1077–78W, on damages, why (a) compensation was paid to pensioners for arrears of payment, (b) interest and a penalty payment was made to the Inland Revenue and (c) compensation was paid to a member of staff for personal effects; and if he will make a statement. [32000]

Hilary Benn: Compensation was paid to pensioners to recompense them for the reduced pensions they received. Incorrect exchange rates were used in the calculation of their pensions, which resulted in them being paid lower rates of pension than they were due. Besides paying the arrears, DFID paid compensation for their losses.

Payment of interest and a penalty were made, as required by the Inland Revenue, for backdated national insurance contributions that had not been paid correctly by DFID.

Compensation was paid to a member of staff for the loss of personal effects which had been placed in store at DFID expense, under the terms of the employment contract while she was working in one of our offices overseas. An administrative error resulted in invoices never being received by DFID, leading the storage company sub-contracted by DFID's freight contractor eventually to sell the effects to cover their costs. DFID's payment was a contribution to the total loss, with the bulk of the compensation paid by our freight contractor.

Departmental Consultants/Special Advisers

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many (a) consultants and (b) special advisers were employed by his Department in each year since 1997; what the cost of each was in each year; and if he will make a statement. [27424]

Hilary Benn: For details of the consultancy contracts awarded by DFID since 1997 to assist with international development, I refer the hon. Member to the response I have given to the hon. Member for St. Ives (Andrew George) on 28 November 2005, Official Report, column 55W.

Since 2003, the Government have published on an annual basis, the names and overall cost of special advisers and the number in each pay band. For the most recent information I refer the hon. Member to the statement made by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 21 July 2005, Official Report, columns 158–62WS.

Information on the numbers of special advisers prior to 2003 was provided at regular intervals and this information is available in the Libraries of the House.

Direct Budgetary Support

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much money the UK has granted for non-poverty reduction direct budgetary support in each year since 1999, broken down by country recipient. [32443]

Mr. Thomas: The following table gives details of DFID spending on direct budget support to UK overseas territories since 1999, with the objectives of maximising economic growth, meeting basic needs on the way to self-sufficiency and supporting good governance.

Low-paid Home Workers

Colin Burgon: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what financial support his Department has given to organisations assisting low paid home workers in developing countries in the last two years. [32665]

Mr. Thomas: For the period 2004–06, DFID is providing £500,000 to support HomeWorkers Worldwide to build the capacity of regional organisation in Latin America, South Asia and Eastern Europe who are working to improve the economic and social conditions of poor women home based workers. This builds on support given to the organisation between 2001–04 to map home based work and establish independent organisations of home based workers in 13 countries.

Home based workers also benefit from many other programmes aimed at improving the livelihoods and labour conditions of poor workers. Examples include: DFID's support to the technical assistance programme of the International Labour Organisation; and support to the work of the Ethical Trading Initiative whose corporate, trade union and NGO members are collaborating in a project to develop guidelines for ethical trading where homeworkers are included in the supply chains of corporate members.

Montserrat

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what progress his Department has made towards the goal set out in its publication Montserrat: Country Policy Plan 2004–05 to 2006–07 to achieve improved public information and publicity. [33756]

Mr. Thomas: A number of initiatives are being implemented by the Government of Montserrat to facilitate public access to information. These include the development of websites for Government News and Information, the Tourism Department, the Economic Development Unit, the Government Radio Station and the Montserrat Volcano Observatory. An e-Government Strategy has been drafted, which will further enhance the public availability of Montserrat Government information. Information and Communication Technology has been identified as a priority area for funding from Montserrat's 9th European Development Fund allocation.

St. Helena

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what rules govern the application for land purchase licences by those holding official Government positions in St. Helena, with particular reference to potential conflicts of interest. [34079]

Mr. Thomas: For officials holding 'islander' status, there are no restrictions apart from the general prohibition in Order 84 of the St. Helena Public Service Orders. This forbids the abuse of office to further personal interests. For officials who do not hold 'islander' status, there are requirements for: (a) a licence from the Governor in Council, under the Immigrants Landholding (Restriction) Ordinance; and (b) concurrent permission of the Governor and the Secretary of State, in accordance with Order 81 of St. Helena Public Service Orders.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development pursuant to the answer of 21 November 2005, Official Report, column 1600W, on St. Helena, what evidence he assessed from (a) Dr. Philip Ashmole and (b) the St. Helena conservation officer Vince Williams before reaching his conclusion that the giant earwig is extinct. [34084]

Mr. Thomas: I refer the hon. member for Lewes to the response which I gave on of 21 November 2005, Official Report, column 1600W, in which was explained that the giant earwig is believed to be extinct, not that it is extinct. My understanding is that this is the view currently held by professional entomologists, who are familiar with this species and its habitat. We have frequent contact with Dr. Ashmole and with environmental officials in the Government of St. Helena.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development pursuant to the answer of 21 November 2005, Official Report, column 1599W, on St. Helena, for what reason a public inquiry has been ruled out. [34086]

Mr. Thomas: I understand that legislation in St. Helena does not provide for a public inquiry process. Submissions for planning approval are subject to a period of public consultation. This will apply when an application is made in respect of the airport.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the estimated cost is of the proposed airport on St. Helena; and what percentage of this cost will be met by (a) his Department, (b) other UK funds, (c) public funds in St. Helena and (d) other sources. [34087]

Mr. Thomas: Our estimates have not been published, as to do so could commercially prejudice current procurement processes. Our intention is that the full cost of building the airport will be funded by DFID, subject to acceptable contract bids and a rigorous environmental impact assessment.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment was made of the potential to operate feeder services from Ascension Island to St. Helena in deciding the optimum size of the proposed airport at St. Helena. [34113]

Mr. Thomas: This was considered but rejected as part of last year's feasibility study of future access options for St. Helena. Wideawake Airfield in Ascension Island is a military facility, where civilian operations are limited.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development pursuant to the answer of 21 November 2005, Official Report, column 1600W, on St. Helena, if he will instruct the Government of St. Helena to withdraw the requirement for members of the Planning and Development Board to sign the Official Secrets Act on the grounds of disproportionality. [34116]

Mr. Thomas: The Planning and Development Board occasionally considers material which is commercially or otherwise sensitive. The St. Helena Government have advised that the Official Secrets Act is currently the only mechanism for protecting such material within its existing legislation. We will not, therefore, be requesting the Government of St. Helena to withdraw the requirement.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development pursuant to the answer of 29 November 2005, Official Report, column 359W, what proportion of the funding for the airstrip on St. Helena will be provided by his Department. [34409]

Mr. Thomas: The Government's intention is to fund the full cost of building the airport, subject to acceptable contract bids and a rigorous environmental impact assessment.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will make a statement on the progress of the building of the new airport in St. Helena. [33765]

Mr. Thomas: A notice has been published in the Official Journal of the European Union, seeking capability statements from suitably qualified contractors. We expect to issue an invitation to tender as early as possible in 2006, with construction starting in 2007. Work on environmental and social impact assessments, the outcome of which will be reflected in the airport "design, build and operate" contract, is well under way.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Colchester Borough Council

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whose complaint gave rise to the decision by the National Audit Office on the Objection to the Accounts for year ended 31 March 2004 of Colchester borough council; what estimate he has made of the costs of investigating this complaint; and to whom the costs will fall. [33995]

Mr. Woolas: This is an operational matter for the Audit Commission. I will ask the chief executive to write to the hon. Member and to ensure the answer is made available in the Library of the House.

Departmental Estate

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what (a) land and (b) property his Department (i) owns and (ii) rents in each constituency; and if he will make a statement. [33259]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The information is as follows:

This answer does not include buildings occupied by Government offices, who carry out functions on behalf of 10 Government Departments.

Firelink

Mr. Drew: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what inter-operability will exist at local level between the emergency services following the decision of his Department to contract O2 to undertake the provision of Firelink. [33782]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is committed to procuring a wide area radio system which meets the requirements for inter-operability and resilience of voice communications in line with the 2002 agreement between the chief officers' associations of the fire and rescue service, police and ambulance service. This provides for major incident multi-service inter-operability at strategic and tactical command levels. Both Firelink tenderers have demonstrated the capability to provide multi-service inter-operability.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has announced a preferred bidder, however a final decision has not yet been made about letting the Firelink contract.

Fire Services

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what estimate the Government have made of the number of (a) job losses and (b) redundancies that will result from the abolition of local fire control rooms. [33173]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister estimates that around 1,000 staff (full-time equivalents) will be employed in the new control centres, subject to decisions by the employers. Currently according to figures supplied by Fire and Rescue Authorities 1,435 people are involved in providing control services, not all of whom are full-time. Some of the functions currently carried out by control room staff will remain elsewhere in Fire and Rescue Services. The number of job losses will depend on decisions made by the employers.

It is not possible to say whether there will be redundancies and if so how many. This will depend on a number of factors including how many staff choose to transfer to the new control centres, how many leave existing control rooms or retire before the creation of the new centres, and how many are redeployed.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he expects each regional fire control centre to be operational; and if he will make a statement. [32661]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The current FiReControl timetable schedules all regional controls to be rolled out in 2008 and 2009. A new timetable will be drawn up shortly, when contracts have been awarded for the provision of infrastructure services.

The first three regions (south west, north east and east Midlands) will go live simultaneously and the remainder will become operational in the following order:

South East,

West Midlands,

North West,

East of England,

Yorkshire and Humberside,

London.

Local Government

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the Government's plans for unitary local government; and whether the Government intend to propose (a) unitary districts and (b) unitary counties. [31787]

Mr. Woolas: We are considering the arguments for changes to the local government structure in county areas. We have no decisions thus far.

Public Service Agreements

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what method he will use to consolidate the data needed to assess 2004 public service agreement target number 1. [29950]

Jim Fitzpatrick: This is very clearly set out in the PSA 1 technical note published by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister in November 2004, and available on both the ODPM's website and on HM Treasury's website. It sets out the data sources for each of the floor targets that underpin our PSA 1 target and the frequency of data updates.

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister why an 11-year average starting in 1999 is used to measure performance against 2004 public service agreement target number 3. [29952]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The 11-year period was chosen to provide consistency across Government with the time scales for other "healthier nation" targets, as set out in the 1999 White Paper "Saving lives: Our healthier nation".

Social Services Funding

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Wigan (Mr. Turner) of 24 November 2005, Official Report, column 2238W, on social services funding, if he will extend the table to include the relevant data for Wirral local authority. [34139]

Mr. Woolas: The information is as follows.

Departmental Tendering Policy

Martin Horwood: To ask the Leader of the House what his policy is on including (a) ethical and (b) environmental factors in tenders for services. [33338]

Nigel Griffiths: In tendering for services, the Office of the Leader of the House has regard to the rules and general principles of community law deriving from the EC Treaty that apply to all procurement by public bodies.

The general principles of Community law are: non-discrimination, equal treatment, transparency, proportionality and mutual recognition.

Members' Salaries

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Leader of the House how many different salary levels may be paid to hon. Members, including those for Select and Standing Committee Chairmen; and how many hon. Members are in each band. [34264]

Nigel Griffiths: 641 hon. Members are entitled to the full parliamentary salary of £59,095. (This excludes the five Sinn Fein Members who do not receive a salary). In addition, 31 Select Committee Chairmen are paid £13,107 per year and, since 1 November 2005, 30 Members of the Chairmen's Panel are paid according to length of service on the Panel as follows:

one to three years: £7,340 (three hon. Members)

three to five years: £9,960 (five hon. Members)

Over five years: £13,107 (10 hon. Members)

Members of the Chairmen's Panel who are also Select Committee Chairmen only receive the Select Committee Chairmen's salary.

These figures exclude those Members paid salaries out of the ministerial and other Salaries Act 1975.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what (a) land and (b) property her Department (i) owns and (ii) rents in each constituency; and if she will make a statement. [33263]

Departmental Tendering Policy

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what her policy is on including (a) ethical and (b) environmental factors in tenders for services. [33328]

Mr. Lammy: DCMS Terms and Conditions for Services include the subjects of 'Prevention of Corruption' and 'Discrimination'. It is already the policy in DCMS for all catering to make use of Fair Trade goods and provisions wherever possible.

The Department requires bidders to complete a pre-qualification questionnaire which incorporates questions about their environmental capabilities. This is assessed prior to selection of candidates to participate in the tendering process.

DCMS alongside other Government Departments is developing a sustainable development strategy. Part of that strategy will be to take guidance from the OGC/ DEFRA Joint Note on Environmental Issues in Purchasing. DCMS has also been taking guidance from the list of "Quick Win" environmentally friendly products supplied by OGC Buying Solutions and the toolkits currently being devised by DEFRA.

Licensing

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many and what proportion of licensed premises have applied for a variation extending their licensing hours under the Licensing Act 2003. [32498]

James Purnell: We do not hold the information in the form requested. However, initial feedback from licensing authorities suggests that around 40 per cent. of premises in England and Wales that converted their old licences, also applied for variations including, but not exclusively, extensions to hours. This would equate to about 57,000 premises.

From an ongoing survey of licensing authorities in England and Wales in relation to pubs, bars and nightclubs, we estimate that two-thirds (about 54,000) will have secured licences for a variety of hours beyond 11 pm and that about 80 per cent. of these (or about 43,000) will have terminal hours of 1 am or earlier.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what estimate the Government have made of the average cost to (a) village halls and community centres and (b) sports clubs of applying for a full premises licence and personal licences under the Licensing Act 2003. [32500]

James Purnell: We do not hold the information in the form requested. Under the Licensing Act 2003, premises apply for a one-off premises licence and then pay an annual charge for their licence thereafter. The charge is based on the rateable value of the property. The current fee structure for these two payments is as follows:

Rateable value bands	Main application fee	Main annual charge
A	100	70
B	190	180
C	315	295
E	635	350

The fee relating to an application for a personal licence has been set at £37 to be paid every 10 years. This would not be paid by sports clubs that hold club premises certificates.

The regulatory impact assessment that accompanies the fees regulations states that non commercial premises such as village and community halls and sports clubs tend to fall in fee bands A and B which should not place an undue or disproportionate burden on the premises affected. In addition, no fee is payable by a village hall or community centre if it intends only to put on entertainment. The Licensing Act 2003 also brings deregulatory benefits, reducing the number of administrative licensing processes under the previous arrangements by almost tenfold. This benefits village halls, community centres and sports clubs by removing the need to apply for several licences and permissions and allows them to offer a wider range of activities to their users and members under a single licence. Once the new licence is obtained, there will be no more form filling for committees unless the hall or sports club wish to change their licence.

As part of our arrangements for monitoring the impact of the Licensing Act 2003, an Independent Licensing Fees Review Panel has been established to consider the impact of fees on a wide range of stakeholders, including village and community halls and sports clubs. The panel will deliver an interim report shortly, followed by a Final report in autumn 2006 detailing findings and where appropriate making recommendations for the development of the licensing fees regime. We will consider carefully the evidence from these exercises and any recommendations to help community and village halls and sports clubs operate within the new regime.

TREASURY

Bank Accounts (Foreign Nationals)

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what role his Department has in monitoring bank accounts held in the UK by foreign politically exposed persons which are thought to hold funds derived from corrupt activities or theft of state assets; [34010]

(2) pursuant to the answer of 22 November 2005, Official Report, column 1911W, on overseas public assets, whether his Department has undertaken analysis based on financial reporting of the amount of money circulating in the UK financial system which is derived from the illicit acquisition of foreign states' public assets. [34018]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: As part of its objective to promote efficient, stable, and fair financial markets the Treasury has lead responsibility for ensuring that the UK's anti-money laundering controls meet the requisite international standards, and are effective in their operation. Treasury approved guidance available to the financial services sector highlights the importance of a risk-based approach to politically exposed persons. The Financial Services Authority ensures that financial service providers are compliant with the obligations placed on them

The analysis of financial reporting on customer relationships and transactions involving politically exposed persons that are perceived to be suspicious is carried out by NCIS. Channels of communication exist for law enforcement and Government Departments to receive, and comment or act upon the products of NCIS analysis.

Corporation Tax

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much corporation tax was raised from business in Northamptonshire in each year since 1997. [34434]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information is not available to estimate the amount of corporation tax raised from business in Northamptonshire in each year since 1997.

Correspondence

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the Paymaster General will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for West Worcestershire of 5 October. [34238]

Dawn Primarolo: I have replied to the hon. Member.

Council Tax

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether the Valuation Office Agency's Automated Value Model computer database will be used by the Northern Ireland Valuation and Lands Agency for the purpose of its rates revaluation. [33161]

Mr. Hanson: In the absence of my hon. Friend the hon. Member for Basildon (Angela E. Smith), I have been asked to reply.

The Valuation and Lands Agency is not using the Valuation Office Agency's Automated Valuation Model computer database nor any valuation models constructed by Valuation Office Agency to value properties in Northern Ireland in connection with its rates revaluation. It has constructed its own regional valuation models to apply to its own local property database.

Departmental Expenditure

Martin Horwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much the Department and its agencies have spent on (a) the design and production of new logos and (b) employing external (i) public relations and (ii) graphic design agencies in each year since 2000, broken down by project. [33226]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given to the hon. Member for Twickenham (Dr. Cable) on 18 October 2005, Official Report, column 932W, which set out the total spending on rebranding by the Chancellor's Departments and their agencies in the last five financial years. Further analysis of spending on rebranding into the headings requested and by project, and analysis by project of any spending under those headings for purposes other than rebranding, could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

National Insurance

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much revenue was obtained from national insurance contributions in each of the last three years. [34095]

Dawn Primarolo: National insurance contribution receipts are published in Table PSF6 of Public Sector Finances. A link to the most recent publication is given as follows.

http://www.statistics.gov.uk/pdfdir/psf1105.pdf

Office of National Statistics

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact of making the Office for National Statistics independent on its staff working at the Titchfield office. [34117]

John Healey: I refer the hon. Member to the Chancellor's written answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Gillingham (Paul Clark) on 28 November 2005, Official Report, column 79W.

Private Pensions

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the net cost of tax relief on private pensions was in the last year for which figures are available; what proportion of UK gross domestic product that figure represents; and what the projected figures are in each case for (a) 2010, (b) 2020, (c) 2030, (d) 2040 and (e) 2050. [34865]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Latest estimates of cost of tax relief on contributions to occupational pension schemes are included in table 7.9 of the HMRC website: http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/pensions/7_9_sep05.pdf.

Latest figures for UK gross domestic product, for comparison, can be obtained from the HMT website: http://www.hm-treasury.gov.uk./economic_data_and tools/gdp_deflators/data_gdp_fig.cfm.

Tax Credits

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what guarantees were (a) sought from and (b) given by EDS in respect of the tax credits IT project within one month of the introduction of the new tax credits system in 2003; and if he will make a statement; [19286]

(2) what written undertakings and assurances were sought from EDS by (a) his Department and (b) the Inland Revenue prior to the new tax credits system going live in 2003; when these assurances were (i) sought and (ii) given; and if he will make a statement. [19299]

Dawn Primarolo: Before the IT system supporting tax credits went into live running on 7 April 2003, the Inland Revenue received assurances and commitments from EDS that the IT system would be available and performing as expected, and would be fit for the purpose of supporting tax credits.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the late change requests to the tax credits IT project made between April 2002 and April 2003, including those made by the Inland Revenue project board and policy board. [19288]

Dawn Primarolo: In a large-scale project of this sort there are inevitably many change requests as specific issues arise. The information is not available in the form requested.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer for how many months the IT project for the Inland Revenue's new 2003 tax credits system was assessed as red light before April 2003; and if he will make a statement. [19290]

Dawn Primarolo: IR classified this project as having a red risk status from July 2001. This classification reflected the large and complicated nature of the project and the necessity for project risks to be properly managed. OGC's review of the project indicated that risks were being well managed.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the dates since the beginning of 2002 on which his Ministers met (a) EDS and (b) revenue officials to discuss the IT problems with the new tax credits system. [23572]

Dawn Primarolo: Treasury ministers held regular meetings to discuss tax credits issues with Inland Revenue and HMRC officials in the period from January 2002. There were no meetings between Ministers and EDS to discuss tax credits.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what the legal status of additional wife/wives/husband(s) is in relation to applications for tax credits; [26587]

(2) if he will set out the criteria for additional wife/wives/husband(s) in relation to applications for tax credits. [26588]

Dawn Primarolo: Where a man and a woman are married under a law which permits polygamy, and either of them has an additional spouse, the Tax Credits (Polygamous Marriages) Regulations 2003 allow them to claim tax credits as a polygamous unit. It is only those in legal polygamous unions who are covered by these regulations and there is no provision for those in less formal arrangements to claim as a polygamous unit.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer in how many cases where action was taken to prevent automatic recovery where a claimant disputed an overpayment of tax credits automatic recovery ceased within (a) one, (b) two, (c) three, (d) four, (e) five and (f) six weeks of the overpayment being disputed in the last year for which figures are available. [29317]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 17 November]: New procedures to allow HM Revenue and Customs to suspend the recovery of disputed tax credits overpayments were introduced on 7 November 2005. The Tax Credit Office will now take action to prevent recovery until it has looked into the case and made a decision.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when a Minister in his Department (a) last met and (b) next expects to meet representatives from the voluntary sector to discuss tax credits. [30005]

Dawn Primarolo: Treasury Ministers meet representatives from the voluntary sector on a regular basis to discuss a wide range of issues.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer in how many tax credit cases the claimant received an award notice stating that the claimant had no qualifying children but that an award of maximum child tax credit had been made in (a) 2003–04, (b) 2004–05 and (c) 2005–06 to date. [31525]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Revenue and Customs do not know of any instances where maximum child tax credit payments had been made and there were no qualifying children shown on award notices.

If the right hon. Gentleman has a specific case in mind, then I will investigate it if he will write to me with the details.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer in how many cases in Scotland where tax credit overpayments have been disputed (a) they have been written off, (b) additional tax credits have been awarded to deal with hardship and (c) claimants in receipt of additional tax credits due to hardship have also (i) disputed their overpayment and (ii) had it written off in (A) 2003–04, (B) 2004–05 and (C) 2005–06 to date. [33018]

Dawn Primarolo: The information is not available in the format requested.

I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Yeovil on 21 November 2005, Official Report, column 331W.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer in how many cases in Scotland HM Revenue and Customs and its predecessors applied to the Appeals Service under section 32(1) and (2) of, and Schedule 2 to, the Tax Credits Act 2002 for a summons against an individual for failing to provide information or evidence or failing to comply with a requirement regarding a final notice in (a) 2003–04, (b) 2004–05 and (c) 2005–06 to date. [33019]

Dawn Primarolo: To the end of October HMRC has made one application in 2005–06 for a summons against an individual under section 32(1) and (2) of, and Schedule 2 to, the Tax Credits Act 2002. No such applications were made in 2003–04 or 2004–05.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the total number of overpayments is in Scotland due to official errors in the new tax credit system; and what their value was in each year since April 2003. [33023]

Dawn Primarolo: Estimates for 2003–04 of the numbers of in-work families with tax credits awards, including information on overpayments and underpayments by constituency, based on final family circumstances and incomes for 2003–04 are published in "Child and Working Tax Credits. Finalised Awards. 2003–04 Geographical Analysis." This publication and provisional estimates for the number of in-work families by constituency with tax credit awards as at selected dates in 2004–05 are available on the HMRC website at: http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/personal-tax-credits/cwtc-geog-stats.htm

Estimates of numbers of overpayments or underpayments for 2004–05 awards at 5 April 2005 will not be available until after family circumstances and incomes for 2004–05 have been finalised.

A breakdown of the causes of these overpayments is not available.

Chris Ruane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the value of unclaimed income-related tax credit, in each of the past five years, broken down by tax credit. [33294]

Dawn Primarolo: Estimates of the value of unclaimed Working Families' Tax Credit entitlements for 2000–01, 2001–02 and 2002–03 are available on the HMRC website at http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/wftc/takeup_rates.htm (table 2 of each annual publication). Analysis of the value of unclaimed tax credit entitlements for 2003–04 is ongoing and we expect this work to be completed towards the end of 2005–06.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he will give a full reply to the letter of the right hon. Member for Birkenhead regarding the tax credits of his constituents, Mr. and Mrs. Holland, sent on 1 November. [33771]

Dawn Primarolo: I replied to my right hon. Friend on 30 November 2005.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many separate payments are included in the aggregate settlement agreed with Electronic Data Systems on tax credits; and when these payments fall due; [33948]

(2) whether the aggregate settlement with Electronic Data Systems (EDS) on tax credits involves changes to the payments made to EDS by HM Revenue and Customs. [33949]

Dawn Primarolo: The settlement agreement reached between HM Revenue and Customs and EDS is commercial-in-confidence as is normal with settlements of this sort.

Tax Yields

Chris Huhne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will estimate the extra annual yield in 2005–06 had the (a) landfill tax, (b) vehicle excise duty, (c) air passenger duty and (d) fuel duty been raised in line with (i) the GDP deflator and (ii) GDP, (A) since its introduction and (B) since 1996–97; and what the (1) rate would be and (2) percentage difference between that rate and the current rate is in each case; [33123]

(2) if he will estimate the extra annual yield in 2005–06 had the (a) climate change levy and (b) aggregates tax been raised in line with (i) the GDP deflator and (ii) GDP since its introduction; and what the (A) rate would be and (B) percentage difference between that rate and the current rate is in each case. [33124]

John Healey: Reliable estimates of the extra yield or rates in 2005–06 are not available for vehicle excise duty, air passenger duty and fuel duty due to changes in the structure of these rates from their introduction and again from 1996–97. Reliable estimates of the extra yield in 2005–06 are not available for landfill tax because the actual standard rate of landfill tax differs markedly from the scenarios outlined in the question and disentangling behavioural effects would be very difficult and highly uncertain. Estimates for climate change levy and aggregates levy are shown in the following tables.

	Estimated extra yield in 2005–06

Venture Capital Trusts

Jim Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of (a) the number and (b) the total asset size of venture capital trusts. [34399]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: There were 98 venture capital trusts managing funds as at September 2005, as published on the National Statistics pages of the HMRC Website (http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/venture/8_6_sep05.pdf).

Venture capital trusts have raised a total of over £2.2 billion since the scheme's inception but we do not have an estimate for the current value of total assets for these funds.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Correspondence

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for West Worcestershire of 26 September. [34240]

Mrs. McGuire: I replied to the hon. Member on 11 October 2005. I am arranging for a copy to be sent to him.

Pensioner Poverty

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many pensioners have been assessed as living in poverty in (a) Jarrow constituency, (b) South Tyneside, (c) the North East and (d) the United Kingdom in each year since 1997. [33279]

Mr. Timms: The seventh annual 'Opportunity for all' report (Cm 6673) sets out the Government's strategy for tackling poverty and social exclusion and reports progress against a range of indicators.

Information on the number of pensioners in low income is not available below regional level. The following table gives estimates for the number of pensioners in relative low income and absolute low income in the North East and in Great Britain.

Number of pensioners living in households with incomes below 60 per cent. of GB median income in the North East (in millions) based on three-year rolling averages

	Relative low income		Absolute low income (1996–97 terms)
	Before housing costs	After housing costs	Before housing costs	After housing costs
1996–97 to 1998–99	0.10	0.14	0.10	0.13
1997–98 to 1999–2000	0.11	0.13	0.09	0.11
1998–99 to 2000–01	0.12	0.13	0.09	0.09

2001–02 to 2003–04	0.10	0.10	0.04	0.04

Number of pensioners living in households with incomes below 60 per cent. of GB median income in Great Britain (in millions) based on single-year estimates.

1996–97	2.2	2.8	2.2	2.8
1997–98	2.3	2.7	2.2	2.6
1998–99	2.4	2.7	2.1	2.4
1999–2000	2.3	2.6	1.9	2.0
2000–01	2.2	2.5	1.6	1.6
2001–02	2.3	2.4	1.5	1.2
2002–03	2.3	2.3	1.2	1.0

Notes:
1. Figures for the North East are provided using a three-year rolled average, as single-year estimates do not provide a robust guide to year-on-year changes. Figures are therefore not the same as previously published single-year estimates and there may be differences in changes over time. Due to this, the absolute and relative figures in 1996–97 to 1998–99 will not necessarily match. In circumstances such as a change in trend, rolled averages will show less variation than single year estimates.
2. Regional three-year rolled average figures are rounded to the nearest 10,000.
3. The estimates use the same income measures as the Department for Work and Pensions publication 'Households Below Average Income' (HBAI). Income is net of income tax and council tax, and adjusted for household size and composition.

TRANSPORT

Driving (Sleep Disorders)

Mrs. Riordan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what research his Department has undertaken into the medical status of individuals involved in sleep-related traffic accidents; [32573]

(2) what estimate he has made of the number of road accidents caused by excessive sleepiness due to (a) obstructive sleep apnoea and (b) other sleep disorders in each of the last three years; [32578]

(3) what estimate he has made of the number of adults with (a) diagnosed and (b) undiagnosed obstructive sleep disorder who hold a driving licence. [32579]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department has not undertaken research into the medical status of individuals involved in sleep-related traffic accidents. However it held an expert workshop into the medical causes of daytime sleepiness in 2002. Following that event, it has strengthened advice provided to doctors. A question on sleep disorders is now included in the medical report form that must accompany any application, and re-application (from the age of 45 years), for a vocational (i.e. heavy goods vehicle or bus/coach) driving licence.

There is no information on the number of accidents resulting from specific sleep disorders and we have no estimate of the number of adults with sleep disorders who hold a driving licence. Research for the Department for Transport has established that sleepiness is a principal factor in 10 per cent. of all road accidents and 15–20 per cent. of all accidents on motorways.

Mrs. Riordan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what guidance his Department provides to (a) licensing category Group 1 drivers and (b) licensing category Group 2 drivers to increase drivers' awareness of obstructive sleep apnoea (i) at the time of initial applications for a driving licence and (ii) on renewal of a licence. [32575]

Dr. Ladyman: The Group 1 and Group 2 driving licence application forms require applicants to declare a history of obstructive sleep apnoea (OSA) and this is reiterated in DVLA's information booklet on forms completion. Following normal medical investigations, drivers who are issued a licence, in the knowledge of OSA syndrome, are sent information pointing out the dangers of driving while drowsy and the need to report any deterioration to DVLA. Information is also provided to their general practitioner. This process is repeated at licence renewal.

DVLA has produced an information leaflet about the danger of tiredness and driving for use in sleep clinics.

All medical practitioners have access to the DVLA handbook "At a Glance Guide to the Current Medical Standards of Fitness to Drive". The most up-to-date version can be found on DVLA's website at www.dvla.gov.uk and includes information on obstructive sleep apnoea.

Mrs. Riordan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many doctors have approached the Driver Vehicle Licensing Agency on behalf of patients with diagnosed symptomatic sleep disorders in the last five years. [32576]

Dr. Ladyman: These data are not available.

Mrs. Riordan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many drivers have informed the Driver Vehicle Licensing Agency of diagnosed symptomatic sleep disorders in the last five years. [32577]

Dr. Ladyman: Data are available only in relation to the number of DVLA inquiries about Obstructive Sleep Apnoea (OSA). The following figures show separately the number of cases where OSA was the only medical condition, and where OSA combined with another relevant medical condition was declared.

	Number
2000
Sleep Apnoea only	666
Sleep Apnoea with another relevant notifiable condition	527
2001
Sleep Apnoea only	1,097
Sleep Apnoea with another relevant notifiable condition	616
2002
Sleep Apnoea only	2,059
Sleep Apnoea with another relevant notifiable condition	881
2003
Sleep Apnoea only	1,724
Sleep Apnoea with another relevant notifiable condition	701
2004
Sleep Apnoea only	3,483
Sleep Apnoea with another relevant notifiable condition	1,137

Growth Areas Directorate

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the Department has a growth areas directorate. [34077]

Dr. Ladyman: A team of officials in the Department's regional and local transport delivery directorate is responsible for overseeing the delivery of transport infrastructure in the growth areas. They have close working relations with the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister, which has lead responsibility for the sustainable communities plan agenda.

Public Transport Usage (London)

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of how many commuters travelled on public transport in London in each month since January 2002. [27154]

Ms Buck: Overall responsibility for transport in London rests with the Mayor and Transport for London (TfL). TfL have provided information on London Buses, London Underground and the Docklands Light Railway, which has been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Rail Regional Planning Assessments

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the (a) original and (b) expected completion dates of the rail regional planning assessments are. [32439]

Derek Twigg: The original completion dates of the rail Regional Planning Assessments (RPA) were published by the SRA in October 2003. At that time it was anticipated that the programme would be complete by December 2005. I am currently considering the drafts of the North East England RPA and Eastern RPA with a view to publication shortly. An updated programme will be published after the publication of these first two RPAs.

Roads

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what role the regional assemblies have in prioritising the construction of new road building schemes of national importance in their region. [34071]

Dr. Ladyman: Regional assemblies are consulted on major road schemes on the strategic road network within their regions, including schemes on routes of national importance, before decisions are taken on whether to add such schemes to the Highway's Agency's targeted programme of trunk road improvements.

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the Department expects to publish the results of the Demonstration of Interoperable Road user End-to-end Charging and Telematics Systems project. [34092]

Dr. Ladyman: We expect to publish results from the DIRECTS (Demonstration of Interoperable Road user End-to-end Charging and Telematics Systems) project, assuming data capture and analysis continue to go well, in the 4th quarter of 2006.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what guidance and best practice manuals his Department has produced for local authorities' highway departments on (a) speed cameras and (b) traffic-calming measures. [33171]

Dr. Ladyman: The information is as follows.

(a) General guidance on the use of speed cameras was originally contained in Circular Roads 1/92 and 1/95. The Department has since introduced strict criteria to govern the deployment of cameras operating within the National Safety Camera Programme. These are contained in a Handbook of Rules that has been issued to every Safety Camera partnership in England and Wales. A copy is available in the House Library.

(b) The Department's Traffic Calming Bibliography, Traffic Advisory Leaflet 2/05 published in January this year, lists the main items of published advice and research into the design, use and effectiveness of traffic calming measures. Copies of this leaflet are available in the House Library.

In addition, a Local Transport Note on Traffic Calming is being drafted. This will summarise existing information on the design and effectiveness of traffic calming measures. The Department plans to publish this Local Transport Note early next year.

Road Traffic (London)

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the average speed travelled by private cars in London in (a) 1999–2000 and (b) 2004–05. [31883]

Dr. Ladyman: Estimates are available for average traffic speeds in London and are derived from speed surveys conducted on a three-year cycle by Transport for London. These surveys measure the average speed of all traffic. Speeds by individual vehicle class such as cars are not available.

Average traffic speeds for the periods 1997–2000 and 2003–06 are as follows:

Average traffic speeds in London 1997–2006

Miles per hour

	Central area	Inner area	Outer area	All areas
Morning peak period
1997–2000	10.0	12.0	18.2	15.9
2003–06	10.6	11.7	—	—
Daytime off-peak period
1997–2000	10.0	14.8	21.9	18.5
2003–06	10.5	14.1	—	—
Evening peak period
1997–2000	10.2	11.4	19.1	16.2
2003–06	10.6	12.3	—	—

The 2003–06 cycle is not complete and the outer area survey information is not yet available.

School Buses

David Mundell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent assessment he has made of the effectiveness of safety provisions in legislation covering the use of buses transporting children to school with particular reference to safety of buses (a) with more than 16 seats and (b) carrying older pupils. [32906]

Dr. Ladyman: Government statistics distinguish accidents involving mini-buses from those involving larger passenger vehicles but are unable to differentiate those accidents involving buses from those involving coaches. Similarly, the statistics do not differentiate between organised school transport and regular bus services carrying children to school.

With respect to children (12 to 15), and making no distinction for the time of day at which the accident occurred, there was an average of 0.4 fatalities and 20 serious injuries per year for the period 1994–98. In 2004 there was one fatality and 18 serious injuries. These figures reduce slightly if we consider the peak time of day for school transport. Considering only the period 7 am to 10 am and 3 pm to 6 pm during weekdays, serious injuries reduce to 15.

The figures are lower for the younger age group (0 to 11) where the 1994–98 average was 0.2 fatalities and 14 serious injuries. In 2004 the figures for this group were 0 fatalities and nine serious injuries, reducing to eight during the peak school transport period.

Buses and coaches are the safest mode of personal/passenger road transport, when considering the number killed and seriously injured (KSI) with respect to the number of kilometres travelled. Figures for 2003 indicate that the rate of KSI per billion kilometres travelled was 10 for bus and coach travel compared with 27 for passenger cars, 534 for cyclists and 443 for pedestrians.

The Government is committed to improving child road safety. In 2000 it set itself a challenging target to reduce, by 2010, the KSI child casualties (0 to 15 years) to 50 per cent. of the 1994 to 1998 average. The data indicate that in 2004 there were 3,905 KSI child casualties. This represents a reduction of 43 per cent. on the baseline and we are therefore well on track to meet or exceed our target.

Seat Belts

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many copies were issued of the consultation document published by his Department in 2004 on changes to seat belt wearing regulations; if he will place responses in the Library; and if he will make a statement; [34259]

(2) if he will list the (a) organisations and (b) individuals who were sent a copy of the consultation document published by his Department in 2004 on changes to seat belt wearing regulations; and if he will make a statement; [34260]

(3) if he will list the (a) organisations and (b) individuals who requested a copy of the consultation document published by his Department in 2004 on changes to seat belt wearing regulations; and if he will make a statement. [34261]

Dr. Ladyman: This consultation document concerns seat belt wearing in buses and coaches. It was published in September 2004, and 278 copies were then issued by the Department.

The consultation document is available on-line at: www.dft.gov.uk/stellent/groups/dft_rdsafety/documents/divisionhomepage/039143.hcsp

The Department's decision following consultation, including a Summary of Responses, was published on 19 July 2005 and has been placed in the Library. It is also on the Department's website.

A list of the consultees is available at annex B to the consultation document. No records are available for those who subsequently requested a copy of the document or downloaded it from the website.

Regulations are in preparation to come into force in 2006 (subject to parliamentary approval) to require seated passengers aged three years and above to use seat belts where they are available in the larger buses and coaches. Seat belt wearing is already a requirement in vehicles below 2,450 kgs unladen weight (roughly 16 seats) where they are installed.

Tintwistle Bypass

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he made of traffic levels on the (a) M62 and (b) A628 Mottram in Longdendale, Hollingworth and Tintwistle bypass immediately after the opening of the bypass. [34408]

Dr. Ladyman: The Highways Agency has estimated the traffic levels on the M62, between Junctions 22 to 23, and A628 Mottram in Longdendale, Hollingworth and Tintwistle bypass immediately after opening of the bypass in 2010. These are shown in the following table:

Route	Annual average daily traffic (AADT) per day
M62
Junction 22 to 23	111,350
A628 Mottram in Longdendale, Hollingworth and Tintwistle
Bypass around Mottram in Longdendale	42,600
Bypass around Hollingworth and Tintwistle	20,800

Transport Staff (Abuse)

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the answer of 22 November 2005, Official Report, column 1867W, on transport staff (abuse), when his Department expects to have in place a reliable method of monitoring levels of violence on buses; and when his Department expects to resume recording this information. [33465]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 1 December 2005]: The Department for Transport is working with the Safer Travel on Buses Panel to identify a workable method of collecting and reporting reliable data on crime on buses. Once a method is fully worked up we will be in a position to say when we will resume reporting information.

PRIME MINISTER

Iraq

Tim Loughton: To ask the Prime Minister pursuant to the answer to question 33139, on how many occasions and in what locations he has visited UK military personnel in hospital who have been wounded in Iraq. [34410]

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Prime Minister on how many occasions he has visited wounded soldiers since May; and in which locations. [33403]

The Prime Minister: I have nothing further to add to the answer I gave the hon. Member for East Worthing and Shoreham (Tim Loughton) on 29 November 2005, Official Report, column 289W.

Ministers' Salaries

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Prime Minister how many salary bands there are for Ministers; and how many Ministers are in each band. [34263]

The Prime Minister: The number and level of salaries available for ministerial posts are set out in the Ministerial and Other Salaries Act 1975, as amended.

Official Residences

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the Ministers who have occupied each of the three flats in Admiralty House in each year since May 1997. [17494]

The Prime Minister: The three flats in Admiralty House are currently occupied by: the Deputy Prime Minister; the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs; and the Leader of the House of Commons and Lord Privy Seal. With the exception of the Leader of the House of Commons, who took up residence in 2002, the other Ministers have been in residence since 1997. Other Ministers who occupied the flats since 1997 were the then Defence Secretary (1997–79) and the then Northern Ireland Secretary and later Minister for the Cabinet Office (2000–01).

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list Departments which pay council tax for Ministers who reside in official residences; and which Ministers do not have a personal council tax liability for official residences. [17508]

Mike Penning: To ask the Prime Minister which hon. Members are currently resident in publicly-owned grace and favour properties for which the Government are responsible; and at what cost to the public purse. [32369]

The Prime Minister: I, the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, and the Leader of the House of Commons and Lord Privy Seal declare our official residences as our main residence and are responsible for paying council tax on them. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister and HM Treasury pay the council tax on the official residences allocated to their Ministers, because their Ministers primary residences (on which they pay council tax) are elsewhere. In addition, as my right hon. Friend the Member for Sheffield, Brightside (Mr. Blunkett) made clear to me when he stepped down from office, he would make the necessary arrangements to move out of the official residence as quickly as possible.

The running costs of official residences are the responsibility of the relevant Department. For information on the costs of my residence, I refer the hon. Members to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Southend, West (Mr. Amess) on 21 July 2005, Official Report, column 1934W.

Shrewsbury Livestock Market

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Prime Minister if he will visit Shrewsbury for the opening of the new livestock market. [33363]

The Prime Minister: I have no current plans to do so.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Adoption and Children Act

Mr. Drew: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs for what reasons the British Association of Play Therapists was not included in consultations in relation to the Adoption and Children Act 2002, with particular reference to the role to be played by adoption support agencies. [33038]

Maria Eagle: I have been asked to reply.

The British Association of Play Therapists was not excluded from consultations in relation to the Adoption and Children Act 2002 (the 2002 Act). These were full public consultations, open to all. Five consultation documents on the adoption and special guardianship regulations and guidance to be made under the 2002 Act were published for full public consultation in 2003–04: "Arranging Adoptions and Assessing Prospective Adopters; Adoption Reports and Adoptions with a Foreign Element, Access to Information; Adoption Support and Adoption Support Agencies and Care Planning and Special Guardianship". The "Adoption Support and Adoption Support Agencies" document set out the Government's proposals in relation to adoption support agencies (ASAs) and included draft Regulations and National Minimum Standards for ASAs. All of these consultation documents were fully accessible to the public on the Department for Education and Skills website, and consultation responses were invited from anyone who wished to express a view.

DEFENCE

Aircraft Carriers

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will ensure that the future aircraft carriers are in service before the retirement of the current aircraft carriers. [30823]

Mr. Ingram: The in-service dates for our new aircraft carriers will not be fixed until the main investment decision is taken. It is therefore too soon to know whether there will be implications for the planned out of service dates for the Invincible class carriers.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on (a) progress on the Royal Navy's future aircraft carrier (CVF) programme and (b) French involvement in the CVF programme. [32558]

Mr. Ingram: The Government remain committed to providing this important capability for our armed forces. Work is continuing to mature the design, address risks and refine costs to the point at which the main investment decision can sensibly be taken and we can commit to manufacture within defined time, cost and performance parameters.

Given that both we and France are embarking on major, complex carrier procurement projects, we are examining areas of mutual benefit and opportunities to deliver economies. It is for industry to put forward proposals which will be judged on their merits and in light of national policies. It has been agreed with France that for co-operation to work, it must deliver cost savings and must do so without delaying UK or French programmes.

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what criteria the Prime Minister used in making the statement to the press that Swan Hunters should be permitted to bid for inclusion in the CVF programme. [32881]

Mr. Ingram: The Government have always said that the development of an optimum shipbuild strategy for the CVF programme will be made by all alliance participants based on cost effectiveness and best long-term value for money while taking into account the capability, capacity and resources of the United Kingdom industry. No company is ruled out, but we are not prepared to give guarantees of work that could be placed with particular shipyards, as each will need to demonstrate the capability and competitiveness required to meet our needs.

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for what reason the internal planning assumption for the entry into service of the first future aircraft carrier has been classified as commercially sensitive. [33052]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 30 November 2005]: As for all projects, the in-service dates for the future aircraft carriers will only be set following the main investment decision and once they have been approved by Ministers. This decision has not yet been taken, and will only be taken when we know with confidence the risks, the costs and the associated contractual framework involved in building the carriers.

Defence Documents

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library a copy of (a) the voluntary code of conduct for European defence equipment sales and (b) the EU's Military Requirements Catalogue. [32708]

John Reid: I will place a copy of the voluntary code of conduct for European defence procurement in the Library of the House.

I am unable to place a copy of the EU's Military Requirements Catalogue in the Library. This is a classified EU document and therefore any decision to place it in the public domain must be made collectively.

However, I will place in the Library a copy of the Council Conclusions agreed by Ministers on 21 November, which sets out the aims of the Catalogue.

Departmental Contracts (Direct Mail)

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many contracts for direct mail were signed by his Department by (a) 2005–06 to date and (b) 2004–05; and what the value was in each case. [27663]

Mr. Ingram: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Estate

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what (a) land and (b) property his Department (i) owns and (ii) rents in each constituency; and if he will make a statement. [33264]

Mr. Touhig: Details of the land and property owned by the Ministry of Defence are listed in the National Assets Register, a copy of which is held within the Library of the House and can also be found at www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/mediastore/otherfiles/217.pdf.

Details of land and property rented by the Ministry of Defence are not held centrally. To provide the information in the format requested would incur disproportionate cost.

Departmental Expenditure

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much the Department and its agencies have spent on (a) the design and production of new logos and (b) employing external (i) public relations and (ii) graphic design agencies in each year since 2000, broken down by project. [33215]

Mr. Touhig: The Ministry of Defence's expenditure on External Assistance, of which consultants employed to manage PR is part, is available in the Library of the House for years 1995–96 to 2004–05. Although this is broken down by various categories, the MOD does not centrally record expenditure on external PR and other related agencies, or other costs associated with the design and production of new logos. This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Procurement

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) which procurements have been cancelled by his Department since 1997; and what (a) losses were incurred and (b) the reasons were for cancellation in each case; [32192]

(2) if he will list defence procurements that have seen capability reductions against the initial Memorandum of Understanding; and what (a) capability modifications and (b) cost savings resulted in each case. [32201]

Mr. Ingram: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Staff

Helen Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what restrictions there were on his Department's officials seeking employment with companies in the defence sector while they remain employed by the Ministry. [32356]

Mr. Ingram: Members of the armed forces and Ministry of Defence officials, like other Crown servants, are required to comply with rules on the acceptance of outside business appointments if they wish to take up other employment—whether in the defence industry or elsewhere—within two years of their retirement or resignation. The rules provide for the scrutiny of applications and for the imposition of a waiting period or other conditions where there might be cause for concern. The rules for the home civil service are set out in Section 4.3 Annex B of the civil service management code, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House. Corresponding requirements also apply to members of the armed forces.

Helen Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many people working in his Department are on secondment from arms (a) manufacturers and (b) traders. [32357]

Mr. Ingram: There are currently 20 staff seconded in to the Ministry of Defence from private industry. Information available on these staff is as follows:

Company	Number of staff
BAE Systems	3
Partnerships UK	1
Thales	1
Rolls Royce	1
Alstom	1
Qinetiq	1
DSTL	2
Paradigm	1
DML	3
Halcrow Group	3
Baptie Group	2
Grant Thornton	1

Due to the size and scope of these companies it is not possible to determine whether they have come from the arms manufacturing or trading divisions within them.

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many of his Department's employees who are within one year of the official retirement age are on extended sick leave. [32603]

Mr. Touhig: As at 25 November 2005, 50[1] Ministry of Defence civilian employees[2] were within one year of their official retirement age and on extended sick leave[3].

[1] Number has been rounded to the nearest 10.

[2] This includes all permanent and casual staff, but excludes Trading Fund, Locally Engaged Civilian and Royal Fleet Auxiliary personnel.

[3] Extended sick leave is defined as a continuing period of sickness absence in excess of 28 days (four weeks), which is the point at which a referral should be made to occupational health.

HMS Intrepid

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to dispose of HMS Intrepid; and if he will make a statement. [28355]

Mr. Ingram: It is intended to either dismantle Intrepid, or sell it on for re-use. The Disposal Services Agency (DSA) invited tenders for the dismantling of Intrepid in 2004, however none of the proposals received were deemed suitable. The DSA continues to work on identifying suitable facilities for dismantling, both in the UK and overseas. In parallel any potential opportunities for sale are being explored.

Iraq

Annette Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many medical staff serving with British armed forces in Iraq have been (a) injured and (b) killed since March 2003; and if he will make a statement. [31415]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 24 November 2005]: No serving Royal Army Medical Corps personnel have died or been killed while on Operation Telic. Three Royal Army Medical Corps personnel have been injured as a result of hostile action. No Royal Naval Medical Service personnel and no Royal Air Force Medical Service personnel have been killed or injured as a result of hostile action.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many servicemen have received treatment for mental health problems since serving in Iraq during the current conflict; and where they have been treated. [33140]

Mr. Touhig [holding answer 29 November 2005]: Currently available statistics show that between January 2003 and September 2005, 1,333 UK service personnel who deployed on operation Telic subsequently received treatment for mental health conditions. This represents around 1.5 per cent. of total UK service personnel deployed to the region during the same period. Out-patient treatment takes place at 13 MOD Departments of community mental health (DCMH) located throughout the UK and three satellite centres in Cyprus, Germany and Gibraltar. In-patient treatment, when required, has been provided by The Priory Group since April 2004.

Due to data capture problems, we have been unable to include figures from DCMH Cyprus for the period June to September 2005. This will be rectified in future, but the numbers will be very small and should not significantly affect the total.

Joint Strike Fighter

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his latest estimate is of when the Joint Strike Fighter will be operative; and what the cost of the Joint Strike Fighter will be. [32455]

Mr. Ingram: I refer the hon. Member to my answers of 23 November 2005, Official Report, column 2054W, to the hon. Member for New Forest, East (Dr. Lewis). The UK's procurement cost is likely to be up to £10 billion, depending on the eventual number of aircraft required. In service support costs will be determined by whatever through life support strategy we decide to adopt.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on progress on introducing the joint strike fighter. [32559]

Mr. Ingram: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 21 November 2005, Official Report, column 567W, and 26 October 2005, Official Report, column 378W, to the hon. Members for Romford (Andrew Rosindell) and Congleton (Ann Winterton) respectively.

Landing Ships Dock (Auxiliary)

Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what the total value is of the computer systems for the four Alternative Landing Ships Logistic which are under construction; [32043]

(2) what proportion of the contract value of the Alternative Landing Ships Logistic being built by Swan Hunters has been placed with companies in the north east; and if he will list the (a) United Kingdom and (b) overseas subcontractors that have received orders of £500,000 and above; [32044]

(3) from which country the computer systems for the four Alternative Landing Ships Logistic which are under construction were procured. [32052]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence contractual relationship is with Swan Hunter, the Lead Yard Supplier for the Landing Ship Dock (Auxiliary) programme and therefore its arrangements with sub-contractors are a matter for the company.

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Defence Procurement Agency personnel are working on the Landing Ships Dock (Auxiliary) at the Swan Hunter yard; and in what roles. [32713]

Mr. Ingram: The Defence Procurement Agency employs a team of seven site surveillance engineers within the Swan Hunter shipyard which is in line with the Department's normal approach to ship build contracts. The team monitors the company's progress and performance in the build of each ship, including fabrication and commissioning activities and ensuring the vessels comply with the statutory authorities and classification societies standards.

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he has asked BAE Systems to second personnel to work on the Landing Ships Dock (Auxiliary) at the Swan Hunter yard. [32714]

Mr. Ingram: The secondment of BAE Systems personnel to work on the Landing Ship Dock (Auxiliary) Project was a commercial arrangement between BAE Systems and Swan Hunter.

Lynx Helicopters

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many of the current Lynx fleet he expects to be used as donors for the Future Lynx project; and when he expects this process to begin. [32699]

Mr. Ingram: The Future Lynx is our preferred procurement option to meet the Surface Combatant Maritime Rotorcraft and Battlefield Reconnaissance Helicopter requirements. This is, however, subject to continuing negotiations with the company, and the main investment decision has not yet been taken. If we decide to proceed with Future Lynx, the intention is that parts would be removed from existing Lynx helicopters as they are progressively withdrawn from service, but until we can assess the condition of the parts it is not possible to say how many will be used.

Neuron Programme

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions his Department has had with its French counterpart on the Neuron programme; and whether it is his policy that the United Kingdom will participate in the programme. [32710]

Mr. Ingram: There have been no formal discussions with France about Neuron. It is not our policy to join the Neuron programme.

Noise-induced Hearing Loss

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether his Department keeps a record of hearing tests carried out on service and ex-service personnel and their results. [26859]

Mr. Touhig [holding answer 10 November 2005]: Records of hearing tests and their results are held as part of an individual's personal medical record. The medical records of serving personnel are held at their unit medical centre, whereas the medical records of individuals who have left the services are held by each service at individual central locations. The Ministry of Defence does not, however, hold records of hearing tests which take place after an individual has left the services. The MOD does not hold a central database of hearing test results.

Postal Services

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the subsidised mail allowance for service personnel serving abroad; and what is the average time taken to deliver mail to troops serving in Iraq. [32636]

Mr. Ingram: Postcards, letters and small packets, up to a maximum weight of 2 kg, can be sent by airmail to any member of HM forces or otherwise entitled persons serving abroad, at a concessionary rate, which is subsidised by the Ministry of Defence. For example, a 2 kg packet can be sent by airmail to a British forces post office address at a cost of £7.16, whereas to send the same packet by the standard Royal Mail airmail tariff to a civilian address in Germany would cost £10.59, and, to a civilian address in world zone 1 (i.e. outside Europe) would cost £37.31.

BFPO mail for Iraq is normally despatched six times per week by RAF aircraft. Typically, a letter posted in the United Kingdom could take one to two days to reach the BFPO sorting office in London, and a further two days to reach the British forces post office deployed in Iraq. Final receipt by the addressee is of course dependent on the operational activities of the addressee's unit, and the difficulty of effecting delivery from the forces post office, via the addressee's unit, to the named individual.

RAF Bases

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) whether the number of military aircraft using RAF Northolt in a year is restricted; [33055]

(2) pursuant to the answer of 21 October 2005, Official Report, column 1250W, on RAF Northolt, how many (a) civil and (b) military aircraft landed and departed from RAF Northolt outside the hours of 8.00 am to 10.00 pm in (i) 2002, (ii) 2003 and (iii) 2004; [33273]

(3) pursuant to the answer of 21 October 2005, Official Report, column 1250W, on RAF Northolt, what process is used to authorise increases in the number of civilian aircraft that land and take off from RAF Northolt; who authorises such increases; and whether an increase has been authorised for 2006. [33277]

Mr. Ingram: Authority for the number of civil commercial aircraft movements at RAF Northolt rests with the Ministry of Defence. Flying activity at RAF Northolt is restricted to the minimum required to meet operational and training requirements.

Information on the number of civil and military aircraft that have landed and departed outside the hours of 8.00 am and 10.00 pm is not held in the format requested and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

There is no formal process for increasing the number of civil commercial aircraft movements at RAF Northolt. However, the hon. Member was informed by my right hon. Friend the then Minister of State for the Armed Forces (John Reid), on 30 June 1998, Official Report, columns 272–73, that any changes to the number of civil commercial aircraft movements would be subject to full consultation with the local authority and interested parties.

No increase in the number of civil commercial flights at Northolt in 2006 has been authorised.

Reservists

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many reservists in the armed forces are teachers. [33143]

Mr. Touhig: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Security Passes

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many people, excluding employees, have passes, other than day passes, giving access to his Department's headquarters; and by which companies these people are employed. [24607]

Mr. Touhig: Currently 4,585 people, representing the companies listed, hold passes allowing access to the Ministry of Defence's headquarters.

Royal Highland Fusiliers

Mrs. Humble: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many self-harm incidents have been recorded among members of the Royal Highland Fusiliers (a) at Fort George Barracks, Inverness and (b) on overseas duty in Cyprus in the past two years. [25296]

Mr. Touhig: The Ministry of Defence does not have centrally-held data of self-harm within the Services.

Medical records are confidential and not all individuals seek medical assistance. Thus not all cases of self-harm are reported, although those that are reported to the chain of command are investigated.

No incidents of self-harm were investigated among members of the Royal Highland Fusiliers at Fort George: three incidents have been investigated in Cyprus during the period 31 October 2003 to 31 October 2005.

Shipbuilding

Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of fabrication work on the vessels (a) Largs Bay and (b) Lyme Bay has been carried out overseas. [32069]

Mr. Ingram: I refer my hon. Friend to my noble Friend (Lord Bach) the then Defence Procurement Minister's letter of 26 July 2002 (reference D/MIN (DP)WB/1/1). Ship fabrication work undertaken overseas constitutes less than 0.5 per cent. of the overall contract value. Since my noble Friend's letter no other fabrication work has been placed overseas.

Type-23 Frigates

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has for a successor to the Type-23 frigates. [33051]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 30 November 2005]: The future surface combatant project is looking at how the capability currently provided by the Type 22 and Type 23 frigates will be delivered after the end of their service lives. This project is still in its concept phase and no decisions have been taken.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Civil Servants

Dr. McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many employees have been dismissed by each of the Northern Ireland Departments in each of the past five years. [30191]

Mr. Hanson: In the absence of my hon. Friend the Member for Basildon (Angela E. Smith), I have been asked to reply.

The following table reflects the number of dismissals on grounds of inefficiency (capability and/or attendance) and discipline (conduct) from Northern Ireland Departments, including their agencies. Agencies have been included to give a more representative picture of the number of dismissals.

	DE	DCAL	DARD	DETI	DFP	OFM DFM	DSD	DEL	DHSSPS	DRD	DOE
2001	1	—	15	2	1	0	11	1	2	9	—
2002	2	1	15	2	2	0	35	3	—	5	—
2003	1	—	12	2	1	2	26	8	6	7	6
2004	2	1	15	4	0	0	46	4	4	17	5
2005	2	1	13	2	6	0	41	3	3	12	3
Total	8	3	70	12	10	2	159	19	15	50	14

Additionally, the Northern Ireland Office dismissed two employees in 2004.

Departmental Estate

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which buildin, s and sites used by his Department and related agencies (a) have ceased to be used in the last year and (b) will be closed under current plans for relocation. [31731]

Mr. Hain: The property portfolio of the Northern Ireland Office and its agencies has not reduced in the last year. The Youth Justice Agency's Juvenile Justice Centre in Rathgael is planned for closure in the 2006–07 fiscal year, and will be relocated to a different area of the current site. The FSNI currently occupies part of a PSNI site and has long-term plans to relocate from its current location. The PSNI would continue to use the site and neither the site or the buildings would be closed due to this future relocation.

NIO staff in two rented buildings will be transferred to a building leased from DFP within the Stormont Estate.

Departmental Staff

Dr. McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many new staff started employment in the (a) Office of the First and Deputy First Minister, (b) Department for Social Development, (c) Department of Education, (d) Department of the Environment, (e) Department for Agriculture and Rural Development and (f) Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety during 2004; and how many of these were (i) Protestant and (ii) Roman Catholic. [31076]

Mr. Hanson: In the absence of my hon. Friend the Member for Basildon (Angela E. Smith), I have been asked to reply.

The following table provides details of appointments for the year 1 April 2004 to 31 March 2005 and includes industrial and non-industrial, permanent and temporary.

Department including Agencies	New staff (Catholic)	New staff (Protestant)	Non determined
OFMDFM	4	5	0

DHSSPS	55	76	1

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many staff in his Department are registered as being disabled, broken down by grade; and what the equivalent figures were for each of the last five years for which figures are available. [33064]

Mr. Woodward: The following table details the number of staff in the Northern Ireland Office, broken down by grade, who have advised the Department that they have a disability.

Enumeration Districts

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the enumeration districts which were in the top five per cent. measured by (a) reduction in population and (b) change of population in the last (i) 10, (ii) 20 and (iii) 30 years for which information is available. [32483]

Mr. Hanson: In the absence of my hon. Friend the Member for Basildon (Angela E. Smith), I have been asked to reply.

The boundaries of enumeration districts, the area within which each census enumerator delivers census forms, are specific to each census reflecting changes in ward boundaries over time. It is not possible to track population changes at enumeration district level directly from available census outputs.

Unsolved Murders

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what discussions he has had with the Police Service of Northern Ireland about the potential impact the Northern Ireland (Offences) Bill will have on continued investigations into unsolved murder cases in Northern Ireland. [32809]

Mr. Hain: NIO Officials have been in discussion with the PSNI on the scheme provided for by the Northern Ireland (Offences) Bill, including its interaction with the operation of the PSNI Historic Enquiries Team (MET). The HET have also been briefed on the scheme. The scheme that the Bill provides for has been designed to take the HET Review into account.

Valuation and Lands Agency

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the estimated cost to the Valuation and Lands Agency is of conducting the domestic rates revaluation in Northern Ireland. [30706]

Mr. Hanson: In the absence of my hon. Friend the Member for Basildon (Angela E. Smith), I have been asked to reply.

The Valuation and Lands Agency's running costs are made up of salary costs, general administrative expenditure, capital costs and charges levied on a notional basis by other Government Departments and agencies for services provided. On this basis the cost to the Valuation and Lands Agency of carrying out the revaluation is estimated at £11 million.

This estimate does not include any costs associated with the handling of contacts or challenges in the post-publication period.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what guidance the Valuation and Lands Agency has issued to its staff on the personal safety of inspectors conducting a valuation of a property in Northern Ireland. [30709]

Mr. Hanson: In the absence of my hon. Friend the Member for Basildon (Angela E. Smith), I have been asked to reply.

The Valuation and Lands Agency provides information and training relating to the personal safety to all staff who may need to carry out property inspections.

Regular risk assessments are carried out in respect of staff working in the field. These assessments are carried out by trained risk assessors and the outcomes and recommendations are incorporated into guidance and policy.

In May 2005 the agency issued an updated (draft) Health and Safety in the Field Policy document to staff, incorporating best practice guidance from a number of sources, including the Suzie Lamplugh Trust. This policy was formally adopted in October 2005, following final consultations with trade union side.

MINISTER FOR WOMEN

Senior Board Members

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister for Women and Equality what estimate she has made of the number of women in senior board positions in businesses in (a) Southend, (b) Essex, (c) Hertfordshire, (d) Greater London and (e) England and Wales in each of the last 10 years. [33652]

Meg Munn: Over 2 million companies are registered on the Companies House register for England and Wales. A full response to this question would require manual scrutiny of business documents for all these companies and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The Female FTSE 100 Index provides a diversity measurement for women being recruited to senior board positions in the UK. Figures for 2005 were published last week and revealed an increase in the number of women on the boards of FTSE 100 companies. 78 companies have women on their boards, which reflects an increase of 13 per cent. since 2004. Women now make up 10.5 per cent. of board members, compared to 5.8 per cent. in 2000.

HEALTH

Abortion

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of whether the exemptions under the Freedom of Information Act 2000 apply to files held by her Department relating to (a) the Abortion (Amendment) Bill, 1979–80 Session, (b) the Abortion (Amendment) Bill 1987–88 Session and (c) the Unborn Children (Protection) Bills in sessions (i) 1984–85, (ii) 1985–86 and (iii) 1987–88; and if she will make a statement. [30506]

Caroline Flint: No assessment has been made on whether any exemptions under the Freedom of Information Act 2000 would apply to these files.

Advisory Committee on Topic Selection

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the (a) remit and (b) membership of the Advisory Committee on Topic Selection is; and how often the Committee meets. [31929]

Jane Kennedy: The terms of reference of the Advisory Committee for Topic Selection are:

On the basis of the criteria agreed by Ministers, assess the requirement for guidance in respect of clinical issues identified by the National Horizon Scanning Centre, by the National Co-ordinating Centre Health Technology Assessment, by the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) and other sources of internal and external advice.

To advise Ministers whether referral to NICE is the most appropriate means of meeting those requirements.

Where referral to the NICE is recommended, to advise further whether:

(a) guidance should take the form of a technology appraisal, a clinical guideline, or some other combination or form of guidance;

(b) (in the case of technology appraisals of new technologies) whether guidance should issue at around the expected time of launch, or whether the appraisal should be deferred for a period.

The Advisory Committee for Topic Selection is chaired by a senior Department official and is made up of representatives of the professions—medical, nursing, primary care and allied healthcare; patient groups—the Consumers Association, Royal National Institute for Deaf People, The Pain Society and Diabetes UK;

the national health service—a mental health trust, an acute trust, a strategic health authority and a primary care trust; industry—the Association of British Pharmaceutical Industries and the Association of British Healthcare Industries;

the Director of the Health Technology Assessment Programme and the Chairman of the Technology Assessment Services Collaboration; and representatives of key policy areas within the Department.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the length of time taken was to select each drug that has been referred for each of the stages of her Department's topic selection process for drugs and treatments referred to the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence. [31930]

Jane Kennedy: This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The Department and the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) are currently reviewing the current arrangements for selecting topics for NICE'S work programme. We expect to be able to say more about this later in the year.

The typical timescale for referral of appraisal topics to NICE for consultation on their remit and scope is in the region of 9–12 months from consideration by the Advisory Committee on Topic Selection.

Alzheimer's Disease

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what her policy is on the availability of drugs for the treatment of Alzheimer's disease; [29784]

(2) what representations she has received from (a) patients and (b) carers on the availability of drugs for the treatment of Alzheimer's disease; and if she will make a statement. [29785]

Jane Kennedy [holding answer 21 November 2005]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for North-West Leicestershire (David Taylor) on 28 November 2005, Official Report, column 244W.

Avian Influenza

Derek Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health why the UK is not using the generic drug available for avian influenza; and what recent discussions she has had within the World Trade Organisation on the availability of that drug. [30617]

Caroline Flint: There has been some confusion between seasonal flu, avian flu and pandemic flu. Avian influenza is a disease which mainly affects birds. Seasonal flu refers to the virus that circulates in the human population and causes widespread illness each winter. Pandemic flu will only occur after an avian virus has mutated into a strain to which large numbers of the population have not been exposed and which can spread easily between humans.

We have purchased 14.6 million courses of oseltamivir (Tamiflu) to treat the 25 per cent. of the population that may fall ill during a pandemic. Deliveries will be complete by September 2006 and we have produced guidance to inform local national health service planning for the distribution and storage of these medicines.

Roche, the company that has manufacturing license for Tamiflu, recently announced that it is exploring sub-licensing other manufacturers to produce Tamiflu.

Blindness

Mr. Bacon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made towards delivering the objectives set out in the Vision 2020 programme for eliminating avoidable blindness. [30896]

Ms Rosie Winterton: We are committed to the principles of Vision 2020 for the elimination of avoidable blindness.

We allocated £73 million to drive down the maximum waiting time for cataract operations to three months. This was achieved in January 2005, four years ahead of the NHS Plan target.

Primary care trusts (PCTs) are expected to deliver the national commitment that by 2006, a minimum of 80 per cent. of people with diabetes will be offered screening for the early detection, and treatment if needed, of diabetic retinopathy as part of a systematic programme that meets national standards, rising to 100 per cent. coverage of those at risk by end of 2007. This is reflected in the delivery strategy for the diabetes national service framework.

The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence issued its guidance on photodynamic therapy on 24 September 2003. All PCTs are funding photodynamic therapy treatment for patients with both the wholly classic and predominantly classic forms of age-related macular degeneration.

The Department established the eye care services steering group in December 2002 comprising representatives of key stakeholders across the profession, national health service and voluntary sector, including Vision 2020 UK, to deliver proposals for eye care services in England which were consistent with and which supported the Vision 2020 programme.

The group has developed evidence-based pathways for four key conditions: cataracts, age-related macular degeneration, glaucoma and low vision services.

The report of the eye care services steering group, along with the four pathways, were issued to the NHS as commissioning guidance in May 2004. The Department has allocated £4 million to eight pilot sites to test out the pathways in glaucoma, age-related macular degeneration and low vision services.

Mr. Bacon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps the Department is taking to facilitate the use by opticians of cameras which photograph the back of the eye; and if she will make a statement about diabetes retinopathy screening. [30902]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Primary care trusts are responsible for implementing diabetic retinopathy screening to national standards as set out in "Improvement, Expansion and Reform: the next three years", the planning and performance framework for 2003 to 2006 and diabetes national service framework delivery strategy. It is for local health services to decide how they want the programme to be delivered locally. Optometrists have played an important role on the national diabetic retinopathy screening project advisory group set up to steer the development of the programme.

Body Mass Index

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average body mass index was in (a) England, (b) each region and (c) each strategic health authority in the latest year for which figures are available. [32023]

Caroline Flint: The data are not available in the exact format as requested. The information that is available is shown in the table which provides the mean body mass index (BMI) for England, each Government office region (GOR) and strategic health authority (SHA).

Cancer

Lynda Waltho: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress her Department has made in reducing deaths from cancer since 1997. [30646]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The 2002–04 monitoring data for the Our Healthier Nation mortality targets shows that since 1995–97 cancer mortality in people under 75 in England has fallen by 13.9 per cent.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cancer drugs have been approved by the European Medicines Evaluation Agency in each of the last five years. [19864]

Jane Kennedy: The following anti-cancer drugs were approved by the European Commission by way of Centralised Procedures administered by the European Medicines Evaluation Agency.

Five, between October 2000 and September 2001:

DepoCyte (cytarabine) for the treatment of lymphomatous meningitis.

MabCampath (alemtuzumab) for the treatment of chronic lymphocytic leukaemia.

Panretin (alitretinoin) for the treatment of cutaneous lesions in AIDS-related Kaposi's Sarcoma.

Targretin (bexarotene) for the treatment of cutaneous T-cell lymphoma.

Xeloda (capecitabine) for treatment of patients following surgery for colon cancer.

Three, between October 2001 and September 2002:

Children's Diet

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the average daily calorie intake was of children under 16 years in the last year for which figures are available; [30275]

(2) what the average daily calorie intake was for children (a) five years ago, (b) 10 years ago, (c) 20 years ago and (d) 30 years ago. [30276]

Caroline Flint: The most recent information available on the average daily energy (calorie) intake of children is shown in the following table and is taken from the 1992–93 national diet and nutrition survey of children aged 1½ to 4½ years and the 1997 national diet and nutrition survey of young people aged four to 18 years which is shown in the table. There is no earlier or more recent comparable data available.

Average daily energy intake (kcal) by sex and age

	Energy Intake (kcal/day)
Age (years)	Male	Female
1½–4½	1,172	1,108
4–6	1,520	1,397
7–10	1,777	1,598
11–14	1,968	1,672
15–18	2,285	1,622

Notes:
1. Data from Gregory J, Collins DL, Davies PSW, Hughes JM & Clarke PC. "National Diet and Nutrition Survey: Children aged 1½ to 4½ years. Volume 1: Report of the diet and nutrition survey". HMSO (London: 1995).
2. Data from Gregory J, Lowe S, Bates CJ, Prentice A, Jackson LV, Smithers G, Wenlock R & Farron M. "National Diet and Nutrition Survey: young people aged 4 to 18 years. Volume 1: Report of the diet and nutrition survey" (2000). TSO (London: 2000).

This lack of trend data was the major driver behind the Food Standards Agency's decision to set up a new rolling programme of national diet and nutrition surveys. The rolling programme will cover all ages from 1½ years upwards and will provide more frequent data for children and other age groups, so strengthening the ability to track changes over time. The first results from the rolling programme should be available from 2008–09.

Consultants/Advisers

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how much has been spent by the Shropshire and Staffordshire strategic health authority on management consultants in each of the last five years; [29380]

(2) what projects in the Shropshire and Staffordshire strategic health authority (a) have required and (b) will require the assistance of external management consultants in 2005. [29381]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not held centrally.

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list departmental projects conducted by consultants in each year since 2000; what the cost was in each case; and what the total cost of employing consultants was in each year. [29073]

Jane Kennedy: The information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) consultants and (b) special advisers were employed by her Department in each year since 1997; what the cost of each was in each year; and if she will make a statement. [27411]

Jane Kennedy: There is no centrally held data on the number of consultants within the Department.

Obtaining the information requested would incur disproportionate costs to the Department. With regards to part (b) I refer to the hon. Member to the response provided by the Parliamentary Secretary (Jim Murphy) at the Cabinet Office sent on 16 November.

Information on the numbers of special advisers prior to 2003 was provided at regular intervals and this information will be available in the Library.

Dentistry

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she intends to publish the likely values for units of dental activity under the new general dental services contract. [26004]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Under the national health service dental reforms being introduced from April 2006, units of dental activity (UDA) refer to courses of treatment that are weighted to reflect their relative complexity. The proposed weightings for different courses of treatments, that is the number of UDA to which they correspond, were set out in the draft general dental services (GDS) and personal dental services (PDS) contract regulations, which were published in August 2005. The final version of these proposed regulations will be laid before Parliament shortly.

UDA do not have a fixed price attached to them. It is for primary care trusts (PCTs) and dentists to agree annual contract values and to agree the number of UDA that the dentist is expected to carry out over the course of the year in return for this contract value. The cost of a UDA will therefore be locally determined.

From the end of November, GDS dentists began to receive information showing their level of activity, expressed in terms of UDA, during the reference period, 1 October 2004 to 30 September 2005, and their NHS earnings during the same period. PCTs and dentists will use this as the basis for agreeing new annual contract values and the number of UDA that the dentist is expected to carry out over the course of the year in return for this annual contract value. GDS dentists will be guaranteed an annual contract value based on their reference period earnings, uplifted to reflect 2006–07 pay and prices, provided the dentists agree with their PCT an annual level of UDA equivalent to 95 per cent. of their activity during the reference period.

PDS dentists are due to receive similar information from PCTs at the end of November. PDS dentists will be guaranteed an annual contract value worth at least that of their current PDS agreement, uplifted to 2006–07 pay and prices, in return for carrying out annually an appropriate level of UDA agreed with their PCT.

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many new personal dental service contracts were agreed for the Rochdale primary care trust in financial year 2005–06. [30580]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Since the beginning of the 2005–06 financial year the Secretary of State has approved one personal dental service contract application in the Rochdale primary care trust area. This is for the Castlemere community centre, Tweedale street.

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dentists have been recruited in the Rochdale primary care trust area in the last five years. [30581]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is shown in the table.

Number of dentists who have joined the general dental services (GDS) or personal dental services (PDS) in Rochdale primary care trust, as at 30 September each year 2001–05

	Complete new entrant[1]

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to relocate staff in her Department and related agencies into London and the South East. [31769]

Jane Kennedy: Neither the Department nor either of its two executive agencies, NHS Purchasing and Supplies Agency and Medicines and Healthcare Products Regulatory Agency, have any plans to relocate any groups of staff into London and the South East.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the cost to the NHS in the last five years of complications relating to a poor diet, with particular reference to (a) food poisoning, (b) heart disease, (c) stroke, (d) diabetes, (e) cancer and (f) tooth decay. [32072]

Caroline Flint: This information is not collected centrally in the form requested.

Doctors and Nurses

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) doctors and (b) nurses are working in the NHS in (i) Oxfordshire and (ii) Banbury constituency; and what the equivalent figures were in 1997. [30644]

Epilepsy

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment her Department has made of the work force development requirements to meet (a) the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence epilepsy standards and (b) the National Service Framework for long-term medical conditions in respect of epilepsy. [31640]

Jane Kennedy: The Long Term Conditions Care Group Workforce Team, hosted by Skills for Health, has identified a range of work force issues and is working with the Department and other stakeholders to support local planning and develop solutions for local implementation.

Food Additives

Jeremy Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment her Department has made of the impact of food additives being listed by name instead of by E numbers on food products, with particular reference to nursery and child care facilities. [30945]

Caroline Flint: Policy responsibility for food labelling lies with the Food Standards Agency. The law requires that additives be identified by a category name, which describes the function performed by the additive in the food, followed by either the specific name of the additive and/or its E number. The Government have not commissioned any research into the usage of specific names instead of E numbers or the impact of such labelling.

Formula Milk

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what controls her Department imposes on the contents of formula milk products sold in England. [29595]

Caroline Flint: The Food Standards Agency has the policy lead on the Infant Formula and Follow-on Formula Regulations (1995) which control the content of infant formula products in the United Kingdom. The regulations, which implement European Commission directive 91/321/EEC, lay down strict rules regarding the composition of infant formula. The directive and the implementing national measure also contain rules on the labelling, advertising and promotion of infant formula to ensure that this information does not negatively impact on the promotion of breastfeeding. The regulations are enforced in England by local authorities.

GM Food

Colin Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if her Department will obtain an analysis of the recent research by the Institute of Higher Nervous Activity and Neurophysiology of the Russian Academy of Sciences conducted by Irina Ermakova on GM-fed rats. [29431]

Caroline Flint: A short report of the research was published on the website of a Russian environmental organisation in October 2005. This report describes a small scale study on rats fed an unspecified variety of genetically modified soya flour. The Food Standards Agency is seeking advice from the Advisory Committee on Novel Food and Processes on what conclusions may be drawn from this research.

Hemel Hempstead Hospital

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many letters she has received from members of the public in Hemel Hempstead constituency about the closure of the (a) acute accident and emergency unit, (b) wards, (c) stroke unit and (d) cardiac unit at Hemel Hempstead hospital; and if she will make a statement; [30180]

(2) how many letters she has received from members of the public in Hemel Hempstead constituency inviting her to visit the Hemel Hempstead hospital; and if she will make a statement; [30181]

(3) how many letters she has received from members of the public in Hemel Hempstead constituency about (a) the proposed closure of the children's ward and (b) the closure of the intensive care unit at Hemel Hempstead hospital; and if she will make a statement. [30259]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer (30259) 21 November 2005]: The information is not collected in the format requested. However, the number of letters received from members of the public about Hemel Hempstead hospital in the period 1 June to 16 November 2005 is approximately around 800. This figure does not include campaign slips of which there were approximately 3,500.

Hemicrania Continua

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking to improve the standard of care offered to those suffering from hemicrania continua; what treatments are available for the condition; and what steps she is taking to ensure the most clinically appropriate treatment for the condition is offered to patients throughout England. [31013]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The national service framework (NSF) for long-term conditions, published in March 2005, specifically focuses on improving the health and social care for people with neurological conditions, including those suffering from hemicrania continua. People with these conditions will get faster diagnosis, more rapid treatment and a comprehensive package of care under the NSF.

There are a range of drugs, and clinical interventions, which can be used to alleviate the symptoms of hemicrania continua. It is for health professionals to decide, on an individual basis, the most appropriate treatment.

HIV

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the overall cost to (a) the NHS and (b) other public funds of an untreated case of HIV infection. [31007]

Caroline Flint: We have made no estimate of the overall cost to the public purse of leaving a case of HIV infection untreated.

Our estimate of the cost to the national health service of drug treatment for an individual with HIV ranges from approximately £12,000 to £18,000–19,000 per year depending on disease stage. The average cost is £14,000, per person per year. The treatment is lifelong.

Hospitals (Catering)

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which outside companies provide catering services to NHS hospitals. [33132]

Jane Kennedy: The table shows the external catering companies that are identified in the estates related information collection as providers of whole or part catering services to national health service hospitals.

Joint Planning Group

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the (a) remit and (b) membership of the Joint Planning Group is; and how often the group meets. [31928]

Jane Kennedy: The terms of reference of the Joint Planning Group are to:

Consider topics recommended by the Advisory Committee for Topic Selection and advise Ministers on

(a) the strategic and policy significance of topics from a Health Departments' and national health service perspective; and

(b) the resource and implementation consequences for the NHS of the proposed topics;

Assess the proposed work programme in relation to National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence's overall capacity; and Advise Ministers of the priority to be given to individual topics proposed within the work programme.

Guide the process of topic selection by advising the Advisory Committee for Topic Selection and any ad hoc specialty mapping groups of the intended broad balance of the future work programme; and give any additional guidance that may be required.

The group is chaired jointly by a Deputy Chief Medical Officer from the Department and the Chairman of the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence. Membership comprises the Chief and Deputy Chief Executive of the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence;

senior officials from the Department's Medicines Pharmacy and Industry, Finance, Delivery and Quality Groups;

the Departments national clinical directors

one primary care trust representative and one representative from a strategic health authority.

Mental Health

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects to be in a position to publish the Mental Health Bill. [32014]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Mental Health Bill will be introduced when the legislative timetable permits.

MRSA

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of MRSA have been identified in hospitals within Coventry South in each year since March 2003. [31424]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 28 November 2005]: The information requested is not available centrally on an individual hospital basis. The information in the following table shows the number of meticillin-resistant Staphylococcus aureus (MRSA) reports and the rate per 1,000 bed days for the university hospitals Coventry and Warwickshire NHS trust for the periods shown.

University Hospitals Coventry and Warwickshire NHS trust

	Number of MRSA bacteraemia reports	MRSA rate per 1,000 bed days
April 2003 to March 2004	79	0.19
April 2004 to March 2005[1]	55	0.13

[1] The MRSA rate for 2004–05 per 1,000 bed days is provisional, as final 2004–05 activity data for the trust is not yet available.

National Diet and Nutrition Survey

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment her Department has made of the results of the national diet and nutrition survey of 2000; what impact the survey results have had on her public health and nutrition policy; and what plans her Department has to evaluate the nutritional status of people aged (a) under 19 and (b) over 64 years. [29553]

Caroline Flint: The findings of the 2000–01 national diet and nutrition survey of adults aged 19 to 64 years show a mixed picture of the diet and nutritional health of this age group. On average, adults in Britain were getting sufficient nutrients from their diets. There were some positive dietary changes since the previous survey of this group in 1986–87, notably the fall in average intake of fat, which is now close to the recommended amount. However, intakes of saturated fat, non-milk extrinsic sugar and salt are still higher than the recommended levels. Young adults in particular had low consumption of fruit and vegetables and low intakes of some vitamins and minerals.

The survey findings have informed the development of Government's priorities for action on diet and nutrition set out in "Choosing A Better Diet: a food and health action plan" to reduce the consumption of fat, salt and sugar and increase the consumption of fruit and vegetables. It has also informed the development of specific targets in the Food Standards Agency's (FSA) Strategic Plan for 2005 to 2010. These include targets to reduce population intakes of salt and saturated fat.

The FSA is setting up a new rolling programme of national diet and nutrition surveys. The survey will cover all age groups including people under 19 years and over 64 years, providing data to supersede earlier surveys of these age groups. The first results from the rolling programme should become available by 2008–09.

NICE

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State (1) for Health when the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence single technology appraisal for Velcade will commence; and when guidance will be published. [33034]

(2) whether the statutory timeframe for primary care trusts to implement National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence guidance issued under the single technology appraisal will be less than three months. [33035]

Jane Kennedy: I announced on 3 November that proposed changes to enable the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) to produce faster guidance on life-saving drugs would go ahead immediately. Preparatory work on the appraisal of Velcade has commenced and I understand that NICE will publish a time scale for completion of this work in due course.

The existing direction to primary care trusts and national health service trusts concerning arrangements for the funding of technology appraisal guidance from NICE, does not differentiate between appraisals conducted using the existing appraisal process and those conducted using the new single technology appraisal processes.

Susan Kramer: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the average time taken by the National Institute of Health and Clinical Excellence to appraise pharmaceuticals under the early referrals process has been since it was established; [31463]

(2) if she will issue interim guidance to primary care trusts on the prescription of bortezomib (Velcade) for use as a myeloma treatment. [31465]

Jane Kennedy: I announced on 3 November that proposed changes to enable the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) to produce faster guidance on life-saving drugs would go ahead immediately. It is not possible to give an average for the length of appraisals conducted under this new process because none have yet been completed.

In 1999, the Department issued Health Service Circular 1999/176, which asks national health service bodies to continue with local arrangements for the managed introduction of new technologies where guidance from NICE has not yet been issued. These arrangements should include an assessment of the available evidence.

Obesity Clinics

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 14 November 2005, Official Report, columns 970–71W on obesity clinics, if she will list the services provided at each of the clinics; and what the (a) average waiting time, (b) the number of people waiting and (c) number of finished consultant episodes were in each year since inception. [31044]

Caroline Flint: The information requested is not collected centrally, as data is only collected at trust level and not specialist clinic level.

Ophthalmic Practices

Derek Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on her plans to reduce the number of ophthalmic practices that deliver NHS eye examinations. [31481]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 24 November 2005]: There are no plans to reduce the number of ophthalmic practices delivering eye examinations funded by the national health service.

Pesticides

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress the working group within her Department has made in producing a module of toxicology for use by general practitioners in relation to the Royal Commission on Environmental Pollution report, with particular reference to the impact on the health of residents and bystanders of crop spraying of pesticides. [32298]

Caroline Flint: Meetings between the Department and the Royal College of General Practitioners (RCGP) have been held and it has been agreed that a working group comprising representatives of the RCGP and senior clinical toxicologists should be set up. The terms of reference of the working group will include reporting on the need to provide improved training in toxicology as part of the RCGP training syllabus. If this is agreed and considered feasible, a draft module in toxicology will be defined. It is expected that the group will report during 2006.

Prescriptions (Pre-payment Certificates)

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many pre-payment certificates for prescriptions have been issued in Lancashire in each of the last 12 months. [21896]

Jane Kennedy [pursuant to the reply, 27 October 2005, Official Report, c. 507W]: I regret my previous reply was incorrect. It should read:

Information on the number of pre-payment certificates (PPCs) issued for Lancashire is not separately identifiable. However, the number of PPCs issued for England, by month for each of the last 12 months is as follows:

Month/year	Number of PPCs issued for England
October 2004	87,443
November 2004	93,823
December 2004	77,050
January 2005	95,299
February 2005	91,868
March 2005	127,400
April 2005	84,821
May 2005	90,624
June 2005	97,744
July 2005	88,624
August 2005	92,221
September 2005	93,500

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many pre-payment certificates for prescriptions have been issued in London in each of the last 12 months. [16905]

Jane Kennedy [pursuant to the reply, 17 October 2005, Official Report, c. 777W]: I regret my previous reply was incorrect. It should read:

Information on the number of pre-payment certificates (PPCs) issued for London is not separately identifiable. However, the number of PPCs issued for England, by month for each of the last 12 months is as follows.

Public Service Agreements

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) why her Department has used three year averages to measure performance against 2004 public service agreement target number one; [29203]

(2) why her Department has used three year averages to measure performance against 2004 public service agreement target number two. [29204]

Caroline Flint: Three-year rolling average rates are generally used for monitoring purposes, in preference to single year rates, in order to produce a smoothed trend from the data and to ensure the underlying trend is captured rather than year-on-year fluctuations. The resulting trend is more statistically robust than that produced by using single year rates. This approach has been successfully used in monitoring many of the national targets from current and previous public health strategies, for example, Our Healthier Nation (1999) and Health of the Nation (1992).

The Department's public service agreement targets, agreed as part of the 2004 spending review, are published on the Department's website and full technical details for each target, including target dates and how they are measured are included in the associated technical notes. The full website address containing the relevant details is: http://www.dh.gov.uk/AboutUs/HowDHWorks/ServiceStandardsAndCommitments/DHPublicServiceAgreement/fs/en.

Respiratory Syncytial Virus

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the Government have set a time scale for bringing the guidelines for preventative treatment against respiratory syncytial virus up to EU recommended standards. [30158]

Caroline Flint: The Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation (JCVI) recently reviewed all the available evidence on the use of palivizumab for the prevention of respiratory syncytial virus (RSV). The minutes to this meeting (22 June 2005) are available on the Department's website: www.advisorybodies.doh.gov.uk/JCVI/minutes.htm.

Any recommendation on immunisation made by the Department will be based on the advice of JCVI.

SANELINE

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking for the continued provision of the services provided by SANELINE. [31069]

Ms. Rosie Winterton: SANE, in common with other voluntary and community sector organisations, is eligible to apply for funding from Government funding streams aimed at the voluntary and community sector—including the Department's section 64 general scheme of grants, or to tender for specific pieces of work commissioned by the Department.

In terms of overall provision of helpline services for people with mental health issues, NHS Direct provides a 24 hour, seven day a week service telephone helpline service and its fully-trained staff respond to about 325,000 calls per year from people with mental health issues. NHS Direct works in close partnership with the member organisations of the Mental Health Helpline Partnership (MHHP) of which SANELINE is a member, which, jointly, handles over five million telephone calls or contracts per year. MHHP member organisations jointly, respond to 99 per cent. of all calls made to mental health helplines.

The MHHP is currently in the procurement stage of purchasing a telecommunications solutions package that will enable MHHP members to work more efficiently in terms of call-switching between MHHP members and to work towards overall 24-hour provision of MHHP helpline services and, therefore, improve the overall level of service provision to people with mental health issues.

Seasonal Adjustment Disorder

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what NHS treatment is available for seasonal adjustment disorder. [29539]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Although seasonal adjustment (affective) disorder is not listed in the international classification of mental and behavioural disorders (ICD-10), it is generally accepted that there are people who appear to be affected in this way. Whatever the causes, which are not fully understood, depression is a matter of concern to those delivering mental health services. People suffering from depression that varies seasonally can access the full range of mental health services available in primary and secondary care.

Thames Valley SHA

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what capital allocations she expects to be made available to the Thames Valley strategic health authority over the next three years; and for what purpose each allocation will be made. [30643]

Caroline Flint: No decisions have yet been made on national health service capital allocations for 2006–07 onwards.

The last round of capital allocations was announced in January 2003, covering 2003–04, 2004–05 and 2005–06.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Bournemouth Schools

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what additional funding has been made available for schools in Bournemouth which are unable to remain within their financial budgets in 2005–06. [33425]

Jacqui Smith: Bournemouth local authority received transitional support grant (TSG) of £670,000 in 2004–05, and is due to draw down a further £335,000 in 2005–06. Distribution to schools will be in accordance with the authority's agreed transitional support plan which was approved by the Secretary of State.

Authorities, generally, are free under the LEA budget regulations to support schools in financial difficulty through sums held centrally by the authority, or by extending licensed deficit facilities under the terms of the local financial scheme.

Child Care

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what her estimate is of the number of child care places that are required but not being supplied. [34022]

Maria Eagle: At September 2005, the total number of (registered) child care places reported from Ofsted stood at 1.22 million. We do not collect national data on the demand for child care places although we have commissioned a number of sample surveys of parental needs and surveys, most recently in 2001. This survey found that a quarter of all households experienced some form of unmet demand in that year. Estimating the supply and demand at the national level is difficult because the child care market operates at a very local level, leading to significant local variation. We know for example the gap is bigger in London, South West and the East Midlands.

The Childcare Bill currently going through parliament formalises a new duty on local authorities to secure sufficient child care to meet local needs. Within this the duty also requires LAs to carry out an assessment of the local child care market, at least every three years, to develop an overall picture of child care provision in the area. This will help them to identify gaps in provision—and to support providers, from all sectors, to achieve a child care market that meets local needs of working parents. Statutory guidance will support the provisions.

Ed Balls: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many child care places have been created in Normanton in each year since 1997. [32452]

Beverley Hughes: The Department is unable to provide details of child care places for Normanton because we do not collect data by parliamentary constituency. However, from April 1999 to March 2005 Wakefield local authority increased the stock of registered child care places in Wakefield by more than 2,900. The Ofsted registered stock of child care in Wakefield in March 2005 was 5,099 places.

Nationally, from April 1999 to March 2005 local authorities have created almost 487,000 registered child care places. The Ofsted registered stock of child care nationally at March 2005 was 1,175,275.

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what powers her Department has to pursue local authorities who fail to fulfil their duties as set out in the Childcare Bill. [33517]

Beverley Hughes: Our legislative proposals include provision for the proposed functions in the Bill, which fall upon local authorities, to be subject to the existing powers of the Secretary of State to secure proper performance. These will ensure that where the Secretary of State is satisfied that a local authority is failing to perform the duties set out in the Bill, for example through the independent evidence of a Joint Area Review, the proposals will allow the Secretary of State to intervene.

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans her Department has to enable parents to require a local authority to fulfil its statutory duties under the Childcare Bill. [33544]

Beverley Hughes: Local authorities already have in place procedures to consider complaints relating to the services they provide. Statutory guidance issued to local authorities under the Childcare Bill will make clear that they must provide parents with a clear pathway within existing procedures for considering complaints about the availability of child care and other early years services. We will also expect local authorities to advise parents of this complaints procedure and, where parents need assistance, to help them navigate through it.

If parents are not satisfied with the action taken by the local authority and believe that there has been maladministration, they can refer the complaint to the local government ombudsman.

All complaints received by a local authority about its duties under the C dcare Bill will be available to Ofsted to take into account when forming judgments as part of the Joint Area Review and the Comprehensive Performance Assessment process.

Child Contact Procedures

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps she is taking to improve safety checks on new partners of a parent with custody of a child in cases of disputed contact with a non-resident parent. [33060]

Maria Eagle [holding answer 29 November 2005]: We wish to ensure that safety checks are undertaken in all cases where there is a concern that a child could be at risk. Subject to parliamentary approval, the Children and Adoption Bill will strengthen the safeguards for children, by placing a statutory duty on Children and Family Court Advisory and Support Service (CAFCASS) officers to undertake risk assessments whenever they are involved in private law family proceedings, where they suspect that a child is at risk of suffering harm. This will include those cases of disputed contact which are the subject of court applications, where the child resides with a parent who has a new partner and there is a concern that a child might be at risk.

Since section 120 of the Adoption and Children Act 2002 came into effect on 31 January 2005, parties in contact, and other section 8 Children Act 1989 proceedings, have the opportunity of raising concerns about harm, when an application for proceedings is first made or when the respondent files an acknowledgement of proceedings. If either party indicates there may be an issue of harm, including concerns about a new resident partner, they are then expected to provide details in a supplemental information form. These forms will be copied to CAFCASS by the courts, thus enabling its practitioners to prepare in advance of the hearing by making relevant checks and assessments. These include checks of social services and police records, which CAFCASS is entitled to ask for through its duty to safeguard and promote the welfare of children under section 12 of the Criminal Justice and Courts Services Act 2000.

Subsequently, assisted by information from CAFCASS, the courts are then well placed to consider whether it is necessary, at the outset of formal proceedings, to make findings of fact.

Child Protection Registers

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children were placed on child protection registers in each year since 2002, broken down by category of registration; and how many were taken into care in each case. [33151]

Maria Eagle: Details of registrations to child protection registers broken down by category of abuse may be found in table E of the Department's Statistical First Release on "Referrals, Assessments and Children and Young People on Child Protection Registers England: Year Ending 31 March 2005". Information on the number of looked after children that are placed on child protection registers can be found in table C of the same publication. This information can be downloaded from the Department's website at: http://www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/DB/SFR/s000614/index.shtml. It is also placed in the House of Commons Library.

Class Sizes

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in the constituency of Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland have class sizes of more than 30 children. [31602]

Jacqui Smith: In January 2005 there were 15 primary schools and four secondary schools in the constituency of Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland with class sizes of 31 or more children (classes taught by one teacher).

Legislation to limit the size of classes taught by one teacher to 30 or fewer pupils only applies to infant classes for 5, 6 and 7 year olds. In January 2005 there were no key stage 1 classes in Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland that exceeded the statutory maximum class size of 30.

Correspondence

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when she will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for West Worcestershire of 17 October. [34239]

Bill Rammell: My right hon. Friend the Minister of State for Schools and 14 to 19 Learning, replied to the hon. Member's letter of 17 October on 30 November.

Departmental Websites

Charles Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will take steps to ensure the Department's websites attain the W3C AAA standard of accessibility for people with visual and other disabilities; and if she will set a target date for this standard to be achieved by. [30962]

Maria Eagle: The Department for Education and Skills (DfES) follows government policy on publication on the web. This entails following the Guidelines for UK Government websites and compliance with the Web Content Accessibility Guidelines Version 1. Neither these Guidelines, e-Accessibility communications from the European Union or advice from the RNIB have ever suggested that government websites should attain and maintain Level AAA.

Government Guidelines currently indicate that websites should meet Level A of the Web Content Accessibility Guidelines that is the Priority One Checkpoints. They also identify a significant number of the Priority Two and Priority Three Checkpoints that have been deemed to be best practice.

The Department for Education and Skills websites currently meet Level A of the Web Content Accessibility Guidelines that is the Priority One Checkpoints. The DfES is currently working towards making all of its websites attain Level AA accessibility by July 2006. In addition to this, DfES identify that a number of checkpoints from the Level AAA requirement are essential best practice and routinely use aspects such as ensuring that there is sufficient contrast between foreground and background colours (P3 Checkpoint 2.2), the provision of search facilities (P3 Checkpoint 13.7) and the use of consistent presentation across all pages (P3 Checkpoint 14.3) in all websites.

Early-years Education

Ed Balls: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many three and four-year-olds in (a) Wakefield district and (b) Normanton constituency are receiving (i) 12.5 hours a week, (ii) 15 hours a week and (iii) 20 hours a week of free early-years education. [32450]

Beverley Hughes: Information is not collected in the form requested.

All four-year-olds have been entitled to a free early education place since 1998 and from April 2004 this entitlement was extended to all three-year-olds. The free entitlement consists of a minimum of five two-and-a-half hour sessions per week for 33 weeks of the year for six terms before statutory school age, which is the term following their fifth birthday.

Some local authorities may additionally offer subsidised child care places but this information is not collected centrally.

Figures for January 2005 show that all four-year-old children receive some form of free entitlement. The figure for three-years-olds is 96 per cent. This covers all maintained, private, voluntary and independent providers and represents 535,100 three-year-olds and 568,300 four-year-olds.

In January 2005 in Wakefield LA there were 3,200 free nursery places taken up by three-year-old children. The equivalent figure for four-year-olds was 3,600. Information for private and voluntary providers is not currently available for Normanton constituency in 2005.

The latest figures on early education places for three and four-year-olds in England were published in Statistical First Release 43/2005 "Provision for children under five years of age in England—January 2005 (final)" in September, which is available on my Department's website http://www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/DB/SFR/s000604/index.shtml

Extended Schools Programme

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how much funding has been allocated to (a) Staffordshire local education authority and (b) local schools in Tamworth constituency to develop and roll out the extended schools programme in (i) 2005–06, (ii) 2006–07, (iii) 2007–08 and (iv) 2008–09; [33731]

(2) what estimate she has made of the number of schools in (a) Staffordshire and (b) Tamworth constituency that will be delivering extended services in (i) 2006, (ii) 2007 and (iii) 2008; and to how many children and parents such provision will be available. [33733]

Beverley Hughes: This Government want all schools to provide access to a core offer of extended services by 2010, with half of all primary and a third of all secondary schools doing so by 2008. We want to see at least 2,500 schools providing access to the core offer by September 2006. The core offer, which should be available to all parents and pupils of the school, comprises: high quality child care; a varied menu of study support activities parenting support programmes; swift and easy referral to a wide range of specialised support services; and wider community access. It will be for individual local authorities, in discussion with all schools in their area, to take a strategic approach to developing access to the core offer through schools. This will include determining how many primary and secondary schools develop access to the core offer in each year. On 29 September 2005 my Department published its report on the baseline survey of extended services in schools which it commissioned earlier in the year. The survey showed that nationally the vast majority of schools were providing access to some form of extended activity. The survey did not provide figures at local authority level.

On 13 June 2005 my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced funding of £790 million over 2005–08 to support the development of extended schools. £110 million of this was allocated in 2005–06 and Staffordshire received £1,223,340. Of the £680 million to be allocated across 2006–08, £250 million will go direct to schools through the School Standards Grant and the formula for calculating each school's allocation for 2006–07 will be announced in the near future. The remaining £430 million will be distributed to local authorities through the Standards Fund and the General Sure Start Grant. Of this Staffordshire will receive £2,537,634 in 2006–07 and £3,121,417 in 2007–08. Funding will be released to schools in accordance with each local authority's extended schools strategy. My Department wrote out to each local authority on 13 June 2005 detailing what their extended schools allocation, excluding the School Standards Grant, will be over the period 2005–08.

Funding for extended schools beyond 2007–08 is subject to the outcome of the Comprehensive Spending Review in 2007 when the Department will be reviewing all its programme budgets.

Fostering

Jim Sheridan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children in England are awaiting fostering. [34309]

Maria Eagle: There is currently no central collection of data regarding the number of children in England who are awaiting fostering.

However, work to identify and resolve difficulties in the collection of national data about foster carers is on-going. Fieldwork involving a sample of local authorities has recently taken place in order to contribute to the development of an informative and workable data collection, the first results of which we expect to receive in 2007.

Higher Education

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what assessment she has made of the effect on (a) the science and knowledge base of regions and (b) regional development of the system for allocating research funding to higher education institutions; [33849]

(2) what discussions she has had with ministerial colleagues at the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister on the links between university research funding and tackling regional productivity differences; and if she will make a statement. [33850]

Bill Rammell: My right hon. Friend and I welcome the contribution that higher education is making to national and regional economic development and have discussed this on a regular basis with a wide range of partners, including representatives of the higher education sector, the Higher Education Funding Council for England (HEFCE) and other Government Departments. Although we have no present plans to change the system whereby HEFCE's research funding allocations reward research excellence wherever it is found, the Higher Education Innovation Fund continues to support universities' capacity to interact productively with business and the community. The third phase of the fund will run from 2006–08 and will guarantee all HEFCE-funded higher education institutions a minimum allocation from a total budget of more than £200 million. We also welcome the work that regional partners, including the regional development agencies, are doing to support collaboration, knowledge transfer, innovation and inward investment within their regions.

National Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list the (a) projects and (b) services run by the National Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children which have received public funding in each of the last three years; and what the (a) amount and (b) duration of each grant was. [33059]

Maria Eagle [holding answer 29 November 2005]: The Department for Education and Skills awarded the NSPCC a grant up to 3,085 from the Children and Young People's Participation Fund 2003–04 for an international consultation event on 19–20 February 2004 in Belfast, to enable children and young people to meet together and with members of the NSPCC's board of trustees.

This is the extent of Department for Education and Skills grant funding to the NSPCC.

The NSPCC does receive public funding in relation to services it provides from local authorities and possibly other public bodies but this information is not held centrally.

Pre-school Education

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what assessment she has made of the merits of (a) informal and (b) formal pre-school education; [31414]

(2) what research she has commissioned into the long-term effects of pre-school education for (a) emotional and social development and (b) attainment at key stage 1. [31420]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 24 November 2005]: To assess the benefits of funded early education, delivered in a wide range of both maintained and private, voluntary and independent settings, my Department commissioned the effective provision of re-school education (EPPE) study. This study, which began in 1997, follows 3,000 children from the age of three to the end of key stage 2. So far, the study has demonstrated that there are benefits of pre-school education for attainment and social and emotional development in key stage 1. Other findings include that children with experience of pre-school education demonstrate significantly higher attainment in KS1 national assessments in mathematics and English compared with children who have no experience of pre-school education. The EPPE study will continue to follow children's development to the end of key stage 2. Further information can be found at www.dfes.gov.uk/research

This study found that the children of those parents who actively engaged in activities such as teaching songs and nursery rhymes and reading to the child did better at the end of key stage 1 compared to children whose parents did not engage in such activities.

My Department has also commissioned the University of Bristol to look at the impact of different types of childcare (including informal care, for instance with relatives) on children's behavioural and cognitive outcomes at ages five and seven, using data from the Avon longitudinal study of parents and children. We will publish a report of these findings in early 2006.

Sure Start

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many three and four-year-olds in (a) Staffordshire and (b) Tamworth constituency are receiving (i) 12.5 , (ii) 15 and (iii) 20 hours a week free early-years education. [33734]

Beverley Hughes: Information is not collected in the form requested.

All four-year-olds have been entitled to a free early education place since 1998 and from April 2004 this entitlement was extended to all three-year-olds. The free entitlement consists of a minimum of five two and a half hour sessions per week for 33 weeks of the year for six terms before statutory school age, which is the term following their fifth birthday.

Some local authorities may additionally offer subsidised child care places but this information is not collected centrally.

Figures for January 2005 show that all four-year-old children receive some form of free entitlement. The figure for three-year-olds is 96 per cent. This covers all maintained, private, voluntary and independent providers and represents 535,100 three-year-olds and 568,300 four-year-olds.

In January 2005 in Staffordshire local authority there were 6,700 free nursery places taken up by three-year-old children. The equivalent figure for four year olds was 8,400. Information for private and voluntary providers is not currently available for Tamworth constituency in 2005.

The latest figures on early education places for three and four-year-olds in England were published in Statistical First Release 43/2005 "Provision for children under five years of age in England—January 2005 (final)" in September, which is available on my Department's website http://www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/DB/SFR/s000604/index.shtml.

Youth Matters

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 11 October 2005, Official Report, column 457W, on the Youth Matters Green Paper, if she will list the companies that have expressed an interest in working with the Government to develop the entitlement card scheme proposed in the Youth Matters Green Paper since 6 October [33862]

Maria Eagle: Since 6 October 2005, Axcess, Validate UK and y-gen Ltd. have expressed an interest in working with the Department for Education and Skills to develop the Youth Opportunity Card scheme proposed in Youth Matters.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when she plans to publish her response to the consultation on the Youth Matters Green Paper. [34020]

Maria Eagle: We are analysing the tremendous response to the consultation, including over 19,000 questionnaires completed by young people, and expect to publish the Government response and next steps in early 2006.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when she expects to announce the pilots for the youth opportunity card proposed in the Youth Matters Green Paper. [34021]

Maria Eagle: I expect to announce the pilot areas in February 2006.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Agricultural Shows

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will visit the West Midlands agricultural show in Shrewsbury next summer. [33291]

Jim Knight: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and other DEFRA Ministers make every effort to attend public events reflecting the full range of DEFRA's wide ranging responsibilities. Attendance at the West Midland agriculture show will be given every consideration as part of this process.

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many agricultural shows she has visited in 2005. [33364]

Jim Knight: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, visited one agricultural show this year.

Berkeley Nuclear Power Station

Colin Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she expects that the site of the Berkeley nuclear power station will be returned to green field status. [32941]

Malcolm Wicks: I have been asked to reply.

The Nuclear Decommissioning Authority (NDA) assumed responsibility for the decommissioning and clean up of the UK's civil nuclear legacy on 1 April 2005. The NDA has set out its plans for the decommissioning and clean up of its sites including the proposed closure dates of its fleet of Magnox power stations in its draft strategy. The NDA will seek the views of stakeholders on the site end state and when this should be achieved. The NDA's draft strategy assumes that Berkeley nuclear power station will be returned to green field status by 2083, however, the NDA has been consulting on the possibility of accelerated reactor decommissioning in respect of its Magnox sites. Further details are available in the strategy which can be found at www.nda.gov.uk

Byway Claims

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many applications for byway claims are pending; and how many of these claims have been made in each month since 1 January. [33537]

Jim Knight [holding answer 1 December 2005]: This information is held by local highway authorities and could be gathered only at a disproportionate cost.

Correspondence

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the Parliamentary Under-Secretary will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for West Worcestershire of 5 October 2005. [34242]

Mr. Bradshaw: I have replied to the hon. Member today.

Departmental Websites

Charles Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will take steps to ensure the Department's websites attain the W3C AAA standard of accessibility for people with visual and other disabilities; and if she will set a target date for this standard to be achieved by. [30960]

Jim Knight: It is our policy that our websites should comply fully with the World Wide Web Consortium's Web Accessibility Initiative's guidelines as detailed in UK Government guidelines. These currently require websites to meet the W3C A standard. We aim for compliance with the W3C AA standard, and have already incorporated a number of aspects of the W3C AAA standard identified as best practice. We are taking a number of further steps to improve the accessibility of DEFRA's websites. Work is being undertaken to update older content that may not meet current standards in full, and further work on both technical and authoring issues is intended to enable us to meet higher standards.

Discovering Lost Ways Project

Mr. Laxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many claims have been lodged with the surveying authorities in England since the inception of the Discovering Lost Ways Project. [33585]

Jim Knight: As yet, no claims have been logged with the surveying authorities in England as a result of the Discovering Lost Ways Project.

We expect work on compiling evidence in the two pilot counties of Cheshire and Wiltshire to be complete by the end of March 2006. Further work will be undertaken to assess and develop this evidence for submission to local surveying authorities later in 2006.

Mr. Laxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate was made by the Countryside Agency, at the time of setting up the Discovering Lost Ways Project, of the distance in kilometres of (a) footpath, (b) bridleway and (c) byway open to all traffic which would need (i) correcting and (ii) adding to the definitive map before it could be considered accurate and complete. [33586]

Jim Knight: A study commissioned by the Countryside Agency and the Countryside Council for Wales to identify the size of the potential task of recording lost ways, by reporting on the progress made in bringing the definitive map and statement up to date; and estimate how many unrecorded rights of way are likely to be brought onto the definitive map, reported in March 2002. 70 highway authorities (of 136) responded to the research questionnaire. 20 per cent. of the authorities that responded to the consultation had undertaken structured assessments of the extent of unrecorded rights. Based on these estimates, the report concluded that the number of unrecorded rights in England was likely to be in the region of 20,000. The estimate for the length of additional unrecorded rights was 16,009 km. It was estimated that 58 per cent. of that increase would be in the form of footpaths (9,300 km), 25 per cent. would be bridleways (4,000 km), and the remaining 17 per cent. (2,700 km) would be byways.

Food Labelling

Susan Kramer: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps she has taken since 20 July on best practice guidelines for labelling foods that contain allergies. [31442]

Caroline Flint: I have been asked to reply.

The Food Standards Agency met with consumers and enforcement officers and with representatives of the food manufacturing industry and the catering industry during July to discuss the development of best practice guidelines on the provision of allergen information on non-prepacked foods. A further meeting with all stakeholders has been arranged for 1 December with the intention of subsequently producing draft guidance, which will be the subject of a public consultation.

Freedom of Information

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many freedom of information applications her Department has received since 2000; how many have taken more than 20 days to process; and how many of these gave rise to complaints about the time taken. [31212]

Jim Knight: As is shown in the monitoring reports published by the Department for Constitutional Affairs (http://www.foi.gov.uk/statsapr-jun05.htm), the Department logged 520 requests for information since the Freedom of Information Act came into force on 1 January 2005 to 30 June 2005. Of these requests, 187 took longer than 20 working days, although the majority (101) were subject to formal extensions. The Department has received four formal requests for internal review of the length of time taken to respond.

The Department for Constitutional Affairs is committed to publishing quarterly updates in relation to departmental performance under FOI, including information on both the volume and outcomes of requests. The bulletin for the second quarter was published on 30 September 2005 and can be found, together with the bulletin for the first quarter, on the DCA website at http://www.foi.gov.uk/statsapr-jun05.htm and in the Libraries of both Houses. The next bulletin will be published before Christmas, while an annual report will be published in early 2006.

IT Projects

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many of the IT projects costing over £1 million in use in her Department and introduced since 1997 have been scrutinised by the Public Accounts Committee; and if she will list them. [26617]

Jim Knight: There have been 15 IT projects costing in excess of £1 million that have been developed within and introduced into the core Department since 2001 and are currently still in use. None of these has been scrutinised by the Public Accounts Committee, although there have been some comments on the overarching programmes or schemes requiring the IT projects.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many IT projects which cost over £1 million and were introduced since 1997 are in use in her Department. [26619]

Jim Knight: There are 15 IT projects costing in excess of £1 million that have been developed within and introduced into the core Department since 2001 and are currently still in use.

Maladministration

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many payments for maladministration have been made by (a) her Department, (b) its agencies, (c) its non-departmental public bodies and (d) other bodies for which her Department has responsibility in each of the last five years; and if she will make a statement. [32246]

Jim Knight: It is the policy of DEFRA, its agencies, non-departmental public bodies and, where appropriate, its sponsored organisations to make financial redress in accordance with the guidance set out in Chapter 18.7 and Annexes 18.1 and 18.2 of "Government Accounting".

However, the information you requested relating to DEFRA's agencies, NDPB's and other bodies sponsored by Defra is not held centrally by the Department and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The information you requested for core DEFRA only is set out in the following table:

DEFRA

	Number of payments made for maladministration
2001–02	57
2002–03	51
2003–04	15
2004–05	14

DEFRA was created on 8 June 2001, therefore information is only available from financial year 2001–02.

Milk

Mark Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will support the launch of a brand of fair trade milk in England. [31429]

Jim Knight: In line with our sustainable farming and food strategy, we support any initiative which seeks to reconnect farmers to markets and add value to products.

Navigable Waterways (England)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many rivers in England are navigable by unpowered craft; whether she plans to increase that number; and whether she plans to improve access to those waters for canoeists. [33814]

Jim Knight: The lengths of water for canoeing on canals, rivers with public navigation rights, and rivers with formal access agreements in England total some 5,000 km (34 per cent. of the major river and canal network.

Following a study commissioned from the Countryside Agency into the feasibility of improving recreational access to water, DEFRA has asked the Environment Agency to complete agreements in four pilot areas; the Teme, Waveney, Wear, and Mersey. In addition, we are supporting the Agency in its proposals to work with other stakeholders in developing regional strategies to identify new opportunities for access to rivers and canals.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many negotiated access agreements the Environment Agency has concluded for access to waterways for users of unpowered craft. [33816]

Jim Knight: The Environment Agency is on course to complete agreements in the four pilot areas by the summer of 2006. This is expected to create over 70 km of newly negotiated access.

In addition, the Agency has acted, and will continue to act, as an honest broker in access agreements negotiated by others when requested to do so.

Protected Wild Animals (Internet Trade)

Joan Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps her Department is taking to combat internet trade in protected wild animals. [33026]

Jim Knight: The National Wildlife Crime Intelligence Unit based at the National Criminal Intelligence Service has been working with internet service providers in the UK, advising them on the controls affecting the trade in wildlife items, and these providers have responded positively. Ebay, in particular, have recently revised the information given to sellers about the controls relating to the trade in endangered species.

Sick Leave

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many of her Department's employees who are within one year of the official retirement age are on extended sick leave. [32600]

Jim Knight: There is currently one member of staff in DEFRA who is within one year of retirement and on extended sick leave.

Single Farm Payments

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what progress she is making in the arrangements for single farm payments. [32913]

Jim Knight: Ministers regularly assess the likely timing of Single Payment Scheme awards with officials at the Rural Payments Agency (RPA), which is responsible for the administration of the scheme in England. RPA is still targeting commencing payments in February 2006 and completing 96 per cent. of payments by the end of March, in line with announcements made at the start of the year.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

British Embassies (Overnight Visitors)

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what system is in place to log (a) day and (b) overnight visitors to the British embassies in (i) France, (ii) Germany, (iii) Iran, (iv) Italy, (v) Russia, (vi) Saudi Arabia, (vii) North Korea, (viii) Zimbabwe and (ix) the US. [32742]

Ian Pearson: The embassies in these countries log all official visitors by the following means:

Germany	Logging-in form during the day, log Book at night
Iran	Log Book used day and night for all official visitors

British Nationals (Deaths Overseas)

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many British nationals have been killed abroad in unexplained deaths in the last 12 months. [33025]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: We do not currently collect detailed information on deaths of British Nationals abroad. In financial year 2004–05 there were 3,925 deaths requiring action by our consular staff. These ranged from accidental deaths to natural deaths where we were asked to provide assistance.

Burma

Mr. Binley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations to the United Nations Security Council to empower the Secretary-General to mediate in Burma in order to bring about national reconciliation and a transition to democracy. [33184]

Ian Pearson: We agree that the UN has a vital role to play in Burma. We strongly support the UN Secretary-General's efforts to promote national reconciliation and democratisation in Burma, and agree with his most recent 'good offices' report of 10 October. We also support the work of the UN Special Rapporteur for Human Rights in Burma, Professor Sergio Pinheiro, and the UN Secretary-General's Special Envoy to Burma, Tan Sri Razali, who have not been allowed to visit Burma since November 2003 and March 2004 respectively. We also support the efforts of Ali Alatas, who visited Burma on behalf of the UN Secretary-General earlier this year. We urge the State Peace and Development Council to allow free access for the UN Secretary-General's representatives, and to work closely with the UN and its agencies in the interests of lasting peace and inclusive democratic reform in Burma.

Cambodia

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of progress made in bringing former leaders of the Khmer Rouge to justice in Cambodia; and if he will make a statement. [33189]

Ian Pearson: The UK supports the efforts of the United Nations and the Government of Cambodia to bring to justice some of those who bear the greatest responsibility for crimes against humanity carried out by the Khmer Rouge. A successful outcome to the Khmer Rouge Tribunal (KRT) will help strengthen accountability, the rule of law and judicial reform in Cambodia and will send a strong international signal that war crimes, crimes against humanity and genocide will not be treated with impunity.

Progress in achieving a KRT has been slow to date for many reasons and significant hurdles still need to be overcome. The Government of Cambodia has encountered major difficulties in raising the $13.8 million contribution it is expected to deliver. Less than $2 million has been made available to date. Other factors include finding, selecting and training suitably qualified, experienced and politically independent national judicial staff including judges, prosecutors, investigators etc. who can meet international standards. In that context, we welcome the recent appointments of a director and a deputy director by the Government of Cambodia and the UN respectively. Addressing gaps in Cambodia's national legislation to ensure it is compatible with international criminal law has also proved problematic.

The UK has been one of the leading financial contributors to the KRT to date. We provided £500,000 in 2004–05 and expect to do so again for 2005–06 and 2006–07. Bilaterally, EU members have pledged a total of $8.5 million approximately and the European Commission has additionally pledged a further €1 million. We continue to underline the importance we attach to a credible Tribunal starting work as soon as possible with the Cambodian authorities at official and ministerial level and have offered our support.

Colombia

Sir Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations the Government have made to the Colombian Government regarding implementation of UN human rights recommendations; and if he will make a statement. [32731]

Ian Pearson [holding answer 1 December 2005]: Human rights lie at the heart of our policy towards Colombia. We regularly urge the Colombian Government to implement all outstanding UN human rights recommendations arising from successive annual reports of the Colombia office of the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights (UNHCHR), and have offered our assistance to achieve this goal. When Vice-President Francisco Santos called on Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) officials in August 2005, we made clear, as Presidency, the importance the EU attaches to active progress by the Colombian Government in implementing the UNHCHR recommendations. We regularly reinforce this message in our contacts with the Colombian Government.

In addition, the EU Ministerial Council conclusions, which were agreed on 3 October 2005, state the willingness of the EU to discuss a mid-year progress on the implementation of the UNHCHR recommendations within the framework of the G24, the group drawn from participants in the 2003 London meeting of international support for Colombia, in Bogota. We will continue to look for ways to encourage and assist the Colombian Government to improve the human rights situation in Colombia. My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State at the FCO (Lord Triesman of Tottenham) discussed human rights issues with Vice-President Santos on 28 November 2005.

Sir Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the paramilitary demobilisation in Colombia. [32732]

Ian Pearson [holding answer 1 December 2005]: The UK, in line with the EU, considers that the only viable solution to the armed conflict in Colombia is through a negotiated settlement. We have made it plain to the Colombian Government that the rights of the victims of the armed conflict to truth, justice and reparation must be taken into account in the paramilitary demobilisation process. These issues were raised directly with President Uribe during his visit to London on 14 July. The EU expressed its willingness, in the EU Ministerial Council conclusions of October 2005, to work with the Government, institutions and civil society of Colombia, as well as with the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights (UNHCHR), Michael Fruhling, the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights, and others who may be involved in monitoring the implementation of the judicial process of the demobilisation of the paramilitary groups. The EU also welcomes the continued engagement of the Organisation of American States in accompanying the demobilisation process. The Conclusions also spelled out specific areas of intervention where the EU is willing to assist Colombia in support of the search for peace. While we do have some concerns over the pace of paramilitary demobilisation, we acknowledge that effective and transparent implementation of the recently agreed Colombian Justice and Peace Law would make a positive contribution to the search for peace in Colombia.

Commonwealth

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps the Government are taking to ensure the future effectiveness of the Commonwealth. [32476]

Ian Pearson: The UK is committed to a Commonwealth that is effective and able to tackle the challenges of the 21st century, including terrorism and intolerance. We are the largest financial contributor to the Commonwealth, providing 30 per cent. of the Commonwealth Secretariat's funding. We participate fully in Commonwealth organs and rejoined the Commonwealth ministerial action group during the Malta Commonwealth Heads of Government Meeting 25–27 November.

Departmental Estate

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what (a) land and (b) property his Department (i) owns and (ii) rents in each constituency; and if he will make a statement. [33255]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office has the following land and property in the UK:

Common Agricultural Policy

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the French Government regarding reform of the Common Agricultural Policy. [33006]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: As my right hon. Friend, the Foreign Secretary, made clear to the House on 1 November, we speak regularly to our French counterparts, as we do with all EU member states, on the way to take forward the negotiations on the EU's budget for 2007–13, including the issue of Common Agricultural Policy reform.

Departmental Expenditure

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much the Department and its agencies have spent on (a) the design and production of new logos and (b) employing external (i) public relations and (ii) graphic design agencies in each year since 2000, broken down by project. [33218]

Ian Pearson: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) has spent £18,450 on the production of new logos. We have not employed any external public relations agencies and have spent the following on associated external graphic design agencies since 2000:

	Logo	£
2000	—	0
2001	—	0
2002	TGi logo	350
2003	TGi logo Genie Worldwide logo	700

Departmental Staff

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many staff in his Department have been relocated into London and the South East in each of the last five years for which records are available. [31778]

Ian Pearson: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office has not relocated any staff into London and the South East in the past five years.

Eritrea

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what steps he (a) is taking and (b) has taken towards stopping the persecution of Christians in Eritrea; [33104]

(2) what representations he has received on the persecution of Christians in Eritrea. [33105]

Ian Pearson: We have received various representations, including from members of the public, hon. Members, noble Lords and religious organisations.

We raise the issue of religious freedom with the Eritrean Government regularly, both bilaterally and with our European partners.

Most recently, my noble Friend the Foreign and Commonwealth Office Minister for Africa (Lord Triesman of Tottenham), raised our concerns with the Eritrean ambassador on 28 July and again on 24 October, and in a letter to President Isaias Afwerki on 6 October.

EU Budget

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made under the UK presidency of the EU to agree a new budget for the EU. [32456]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Coventry, South (Mr. Cunningham) on 28 November 2005, Official Report, column 157W.

Iran

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the progress of talks with Iran about that country's nuclear ambitions. [32448]

Dr. Howells: There are no negotiations at present between the E3/EU and Iran. On 5 August 2005, the E3/EU presented a comprehensive proposal for long term arrangements intended to give the international community objective guarantees that Iran's nuclear programme was exclusively for peaceful purposes, while equally providing firm guarantees on nuclear, technological and economic co-operation and firm commitments on security issues. Regrettably, Iran rejected this proposal and resumed uranium conversion activities on 8 August 2005, in violation of the framework for talks it had agreed with the E3/EU. The resolution adopted by the International Atomic Energy Agency Board of Governors on 24 September and the discussion at the board's meeting on 24 November have underlined that questions about Iran's nuclear programme remain unresolved. The Secretary-General of Iran's Supreme National Security Council, Ali Larijani, wrote to the E3/EU on 6 November expressing Iran's interest in resuming talks. In their reply on 27 November, E3 Foreign Ministers and EU High Representative, Javier Solana, expressed the hope that Iran would meet the expectations of the international community and help create conditions that would enable talks to resume. They outlined the European sides willingness to meet to see if a basis for the resumption of negotiations can be agreed.

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of EU policy on Iran and its nuclear activities. [32660]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: Iran's nuclear programme continues to be of deep concern to the whole international community. This was highlighted in the resolution adopted by the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) board of governors on 24 September 2005 and at the Board's most recent meeting on 24 November. Since 2003, the UK, France and Germany, with the support of the EU high representative, Javier Solana, have pursued a diplomatic solution, that would give Iran an opportunity to address international concerns and provide objective guarantees that its nuclear programme is solely for peaceful purposes. These efforts have helped raise international awareness of Iran's activities and have enjoyed increasing support. But, although we have seen limited progress in some areas, the steps taken so far by Iran fall far short of what is required. The E3/EU will continue to engage closely with key partners including Russia, the USA, EU member states and members of the IAEA board of governors to maintain the pressure on Iran to address the international community's concerns.

Iraq

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what measures are in place to protect his Department's employees in Iraq. [32783]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: Our staff in Iraq are housed in office and residential accommodation which has been strengthened in line with the demands of the current security situation. All such accommodation is located within protected compounds guarded by armed personnel from a private security company.

All of our staff are issued with body armour and helmets and attend a surviving hostile regions course before deployment.

To ensure that our staff are safe when travelling, they are only allowed to travel by air with the Royal Air Force. Staff must travel by road in armoured vehicles, accompanied at all times by armed personnel from another private security company.

These (protective security) measures are regularly reviewed by local security managers and a London based senior security adviser who visits Iraq on a regular basis.

Labour Camps

Sammy Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the scale of manufacture of goods in labour camps abroad for sale to other countries; and what steps he is taking to prevent imports of such goods to the UK. [29207]

Ian Pearson: The UK has played a leading role in ensuring that the international framework to promote and to tackle abuses of labour rights throughout the world is in place, particularly through our work with the International Labour Organisation (ILO), the UN specialised agency responsible for developing, promoting and monitoring labour standards. We play an active role in the ILO Committee on Multinational Enterprises and support the promotion and follow-up of the ILO Declaration of Principles Concerning Multinational Enterprises and Social Policy which seeks to enhance the positive social and labour effects of multinational corporations' operations throughout the world.

Through its Partnership Agreement with the ILO, DFID is providing more than £2 million to the Special Action Programme on Forced Labour, which has enabled the ILO to significantly deepen and extend its work. In addition we have provided over £2 million to the ILO's regional programmes against forced labour. And our country programmes have made commitments of nearly £12 million to the ILO's anti-trafficking programmes.

The UK also promotes the OECD Guidelines for Multinational Enterprises which recommend standards of responsible business conduct for businesses operating in or from the 37 adhering countries. My department has written to the FTSE 100 companies to raise awareness of these expectations. We have also set out our approach to encouraging environmentally and socially responsible practice internationally in our International Strategic Framework on Corporate Social Responsibility published in March.

The UK's Department for International Development helps fund the Ethical Trading Initiative (ETI): an alliance of companies, non-governmental organisations (NGOs) and trade union organisations which exists to promote and improve the implementation of corporate codes of practice which cover supply chain working conditions. The ETI's ultimate goal is to ensure that the working conditions of workers producing for the UK market meet or exceed international labour standards.

Nepal

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of steps being taken to restore multi-party democracy in Nepal; and if he will make a statement. [33190]

Dr. Howells: Since the King dismissed Nepal's multi-party Government and assumed direct power on 1 February this year, the UK, along with our international partners, has been seeking to restore multi-party democracy and pressing all concerned to work towards a negotiated political settlement to the conflict.

In response to the recent announcement between the political parties and the Maoists on the terms of a possible peace process in Nepal, the UK has said that, if by this agreement the Maoists commit to giving up violence and human rights abuses in favour of a democratic political settlement, then this is welcome news for the long- suffering people of Nepal.

The UK sees an effective multi-party democracy as the only sustainable solution to the problems of Nepal. We continue to support a negotiated political settlement involving all of the parties to the conflict, including the Maoists. This process must involve the King working with the political parties to develop a common agenda for a full return to multi-party democracy and the Maoists renouncing violence unconditionally and putting their weapons verifiably beyond use.

In this context we have urged the Maoists to extend their present ceasefire as a demonstration of their willingness to enter sincerely into negotiations. At the same time, we have urged the King of Nepal to call a truce, reach out to the political parties and take this opportunity for serious engagement on a negotiated settlement to the conflict.

The UK, along with our international partners, stands ready to support a meaningful peace process.

Private Military Companies

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether his Department employs private military companies. [32777]

Ian Pearson: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office does not employ private companies overseas for military purposes but it does employ two companies for security purposes: ArmorGroup and Control Risks Group who provide mobile security for our staff and static guarding for our compounds in Iraq, Afghanistan and Saudi Arabia. Control Risks Group also has a contract to provide a guard force for our missions at Cairo, Moscow, Beijing and Hong Kong.

Race Equality Impact Assessments

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many Race Equality Impact Assessments his Department completed between (a) April 2004 and March 2005 and (b) April 2005 and November 2005; and how many assessments in each period resulted in a change of policy. [32836]

Ian Pearson: Between April 2004 and November 2005 the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) has conducted the following Race Equality Impact Assessments (REIA):

Consular Directorate: the Forced Marriage Unit in this Directorate is currently doing a REIA on whether to make forced marriage a specific criminal offence.

Human Resources Directorate: a full diversity impact assessment was completed in September 2005 on a major reorganisation of HR Directorate as a result of the Gershon review. The reorganisation is still ongoing and changes have been made to it as a result of the impact assessment.

Lyons review: the FCO plans to move some of its central London staff to our existing site at Hanslope Park, Milton Keynes. Although a formal REIA was not completed on this, we have taken into account the different populations in these two areas in this work.

In addition, the FCO has a programme of wide-ranging consultation with external stakeholders, including minority ethnic groups, on its work. Examples of these are included in our Race Equality Scheme.

Small Arms Trade Treaty

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress is being made towards securing non-European support at the UN small arms review conference in July 2006 for the adoption of an international treaty on the trade in small arms. [32640]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The UK, in co-operation with a wide range of other partners, has made good progress in building support for agreement at the 2006 UN Small Arms and Light Weapons Programme of Action Review Conference on minimum common criteria to underpin controls on transfers of small arms and light weapons controls, including import, export and transhipment. We already have much non-European support, especially in Africa, Latin America and the Caribbean, and we are working to match that in Asian countries.

Separate from and outside the UN Programme of Action, which specifically only covers small arms and light weapons and is politically binding, the Government are pursuing the wider, longer term initiative for a legally binding international arms trade treaty to cover the trade in all conventional weapons. Support for this initiative, and for the launch of a formal UN based process, is steadily growing, including among non-European countries.

St. Helena

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 23 November 2005, Official Report, column 2135W, on St. Helena, on which dates (a) the Legislative Council in St. Helena disapplied the UK Freedom of Information Act 2000, (b) the notice of intent to disapply the Act was gazetted and (c) the disapplication became effective. [34114]

Ian Pearson: The provisional order was made on 11 January 2005. The order was gazetted on 30 March 2005. The motion to ratify the order was debated and passed by the Legislative Council the week commencing 27 June at which time the disallowance of the Freedom of Information Act 2000 became effective.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 23 November 2005, Official Report, column 2135W, on St. Helena, what mechanisms are available to enable the Public Solicitor to be available to members of the public in the light of his being retained by the proposed developers, SHELCO; and if he will make a further statement. [34115]

Ian Pearson: The terms of reference of the Public Solicitor require him to provide independent legal advice to members of the public and entities registered on St. Helena. Consistent with his terms of reference, he accepted instruction to act for the proposed developers SHELCO. He now cannot accept instruction from another party to oppose SHELCO. The public on St. Helena are familiar with the position that, should the Public Solicitor be unable to help them, they may seek the help of a lay advocate. There is a small fund which allows lay advocates to seek the advice of a UK solicitor if necessary.

Terrorist Suspects

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will take steps to ascertain whether flights being used for the extraordinary rendition of suspected terrorists to countries that practise torture are making use of UK airports. [33844]

Ian Pearson: The Government are aware of media allegations about "extraordinary rendition" operations allegedly conducted by the United States (US) authorities. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has written to the US Secretary of State, Condoleezza Rice, on behalf of EU partners.

Uganda

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps his Department is taking to support planned multiparty elections in Uganda in 2006; and if he will make a statement. [32921]

Ian Pearson [holding answer 1 December 2005]: The UK welcomed the decision of the Ugandan people, in their referendum of 28 July, to endorse the re-introduction of a multi-party political system. On 18 November the UK, as EU Presidency, issued a statement making clear our concerns regarding the recent arrest of the opposition leader, Dr. Kiiza Besigye. It is important that all parties are able, and are seen to be able, to compete freely and fairly in the 2006 elections.

The UK is an active member of the Kampala based Partners for Democracy Group, which co-ordinates international support for the political transition in Uganda. The Department for International Development has provided £600,000 to the donor funded Election Support Unit and has also committed £400,000 to the national civic education programme. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office is currently funding a project to help build capacity in all Uganda's major political parties as they prepare for the 2006 elections.

UN Convention Against Corruption

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many rounds of discussions his Department has held with business groups regarding the UN Convention Against Corruption; which business groups were involved in these discussions; and what concerns were raised by business groups in relation to the convention. [33507]

Ian Pearson [holding answer 1 December 2005]: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office regularly discusses the UN Convention Against Corruption (UNCAC) in meetings with businesses and business associations, including with the International Chamber of Commerce and the Confederation of British Industry, as it does in contacts with other stakeholders, especially non-governmental organisations.

Concerns raised by businesses about UNCAC include the potential misuse of the convention, the scope of UK courts to investigate the substance of corruption allegations made overseas and arbitration mechanisms.

Zimbabwe

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Governments of (a) China and (b) South Africa regarding their support for President Mugabe's regime in Zimbabwe. [33016]

Ian Pearson: China is aware of our views on Zimbabwe. Our ambassador to the UN has raised Zimbabwe with his Chinese opposite number on several occasions, and has made clear our views in Security Council discussions, most recently on 4 October 2005. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office political director raised our concerns directly with the Assistant Foreign Minister in July, and the embassy in Beijing has discussed Zimbabwe with the Chinese Government at all levels, particularly on the issue of military assistance.

We discuss Zimbabwe with the Government of South Africa frequently. They are aware that we believe more should be done in the region to put pressure on the Government of Zimbabwe to reform. My right hon. Friend, the Foreign Secretary, raised Zimbabwe with South African Foreign Minister, Zuma, most recently on 7 November at the EU-South Africa Co-operation Council.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Civil Partnerships Act

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the total cost has been of awareness campaigns for the Civil Partnerships Act 2004, broken down by campaign. [33737]

Meg Munn: The total cost of the awareness campaign for the Civil Partnership Act 2004 has been £30, 648.

The Civil Partnership publicity materials production costs have been £19, 435.

The distribution costs of these publicity materials have been £11,213 to date.

Coal Imports

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proportion of the coal used for electricity generation in the United Kingdom was imported in each of the last three years. [32938]

Malcolm Wicks: In 2004, 57 per cent. of coal used for electricity generation in the UK was imported.

Clare Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when the Minister of State for Energy will reply to the letter from the right hon. Member for Birmingham, Ladywood, of 19 September on behalf of a constituent, Alan Stedall. [29152]

Malcolm Wicks: The response to my right hon. Friend has been delayed by administrative issues. The response will be with you in the next few days.

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects to reply to Mr. Tony Humphrey's letter to him of 3 November on his announcements on public sector pensions. [30728]

Alan Johnson [holding answer 21 November 2005]: My Department has no record of receiving this letter. If the hon. Member is able to provide me with a copy, I will ensure it receives a speedy reply.

Corruption

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer of 7 November 2005, Official Report, column 1W, on corruption, when his Department was first informed of the allegations of corruption involving a Department for Trade and Industry employee; and if he will make a statement. [27874]

Ian Pearson [holding answer 14 November 2005]: There are sensitivities linked to any allegations made against individuals. I am not in a position to comment on such allegations. However, bribery and corruption are criminal offences and as such dealt with by the criminal justice system. UK Trade and Investment takes such allegations very seriously and co-operates fully with the criminal justice system.

Departmental Estate

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which buildings and sites used by his Department and related agencies (a) have ceased to be used in the last year and (b) will be closed under current plans for relocation. [31740]

Alan Johnson: In the last year, the Department has vacated its accommodation in Elizabeth House, York Road, London SE1; 10–18 Victoria Street, London SW1; 4 Abbey Orchard Street, London SW1. In the next 12 months, the Department plans to vacate its accommodation in Oxford House, Oxford Street, London WC1 and two floors of 151 Buckingham Palace, London SW1.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry who the Director of Human Resources and Change Management is in his Department; what relevant specialist qualifications he or she holds; and what the details are of his or her career to date. [26315]

Alan Johnson: The Director of HR and CM at the DTI is Shirley Pointer. She has over 25 years' experience working as an HR professional within the private sector with substantial experience.

She has a degree in psychology and is a member of the CIPD.

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry who the Director of Finance and Resource Management is in his Department; what relevant specialist qualifications he or she holds; and what the details are of his career to date. [26317]

Alan Johnson: The (acting) Director of Finance and Resource Management is Adam Jackson, who was formerly Director of Business Planning. He is a career civil servant who has wide experience of the Department, including corporate services and policy delivery. Domestic Electricity Charges

Dr. McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the cost of electricity to customers was in England in each of the last five years. [33792]

Malcolm Wicks: Estimates of average annual domestic electricity bills in England and Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland are published in Table 2.2.2 in the DTI's "Quarterly Energy Prices", which can be found on the following website: www.dti.gov.uk/energy/inform/energy prices/index.shtml.

Electricity Supplies

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what contingency plans his Department has developed for providing power this winter to homes and businesses heated solely by electricity in the event of electricity shortages. [30905]

Malcolm Wicks: National Grid's Winter Outlook report shows that under normal weather conditions there are sufficient gas supplies for electricity generation to meet demand. Under much worse than normal winter weather, however, it may be necessary for large industrial users to restrain demand—a perfectly normal market response. Much of this demand reduction can be done through the electricity generating industry switching to coal or other fuels.—Under all credible scenarios, however, the market will be able to deliver energy supplies to domestic consumers.

Concerning contingency arrangements in the unlikely event of shortages, in the first instance, we expect a commercial response from the market to price signals indicating tightness in the supply-demand balance. National Grid's Winter Outlook report contains a detailed assessment of the extent to which this sector would be able to reduce demand for gas in this way while continuing to meet demand.

Only if the market fails to balance itself might it be necessary to take contingency measures. The Government has detailed emergency plans in place which have been developed and well rehearsed in close co-operation with industry. Our legislative powers to deal with gas emergencies date back to 1976. We are obviously updating operational response plans on a regular basis and our current plans, which have been thoroughly tested and developed in partnership with industry have been in place for the last three years. However, we would not expect such an eventuality to arise merely as a result of colder than average weather.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made following the National Grid winter outlook report of what reduction in electricity demand would be required over what period of days to keep electricity supplies in balance. [31727]

Malcolm Wicks: This is a matter for National Grid, as system operator.

National Grid, in its Winter Outlook Report 2005–06, published in October, considers the potential for demand-side response (sections A and C). The Winter Outlook can be found at: http://www.ofgem.gov.uk/temp/ofgem/cache/cmsattach/12493_214_05.pdf

Energy Definitions

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what definition he uses of (a) fuel poverty and (b) net importation of energy. [31549]

Malcolm Wicks: Fuel poverty is defined as the need for a household to spend more than 10 per cent. of its income on all fuel use and to heat its home to an adequate standard of warmth (21C in the living room and 18C in other occupied rooms). There are some minor differences in definition used across the devolved Administrations, and these are set out in "The UK Fuel Poverty Strategy of November 2001".

Net trade in energy is defined as the total quantity of fuels exported less total quantity of fuels imported. There is a net importation of energy when the total quantity imported exceeds the total quantity exported.

The units of energy used by the Department are expressed in million tonnes of oil equivalent which is a measure of the energy content of the individual fuels. The conversion allows different energy sources to be compared and combined. Quantities of imports and exports are converted from their original units of measurement to tonnes of oil equivalent using weighted gross calorific values and standard conversion factors appropriate to the individual fuel.

Energy Review

Colin Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the terms of reference are of the recently announced Energy Review. [32940]

Malcolm Wicks: The terms of reference for the Energy Review are set out as follows:

The Government will review the UK's progress against the medium and long-term Energy White Paper goals and the options for further steps to achieve them. The aim will be to bring forward proposals on energy policy next year.

The Review will be informed by analysis and options drawn up by a Review team led by myself. This will be a team of Officials drawn from key relevant Departments and my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister's Strategy Unit. In drawing up the analysis and options, I will undertake extensive public and stakeholder consultation.

The Review will be taken forward in the context of the Government's commitment to sound public finances and will take account of all short-term, medium-term and long-term costs and liabilities both to the taxpayer and energy user. The Review team will report to my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry in early summer.

Copies of the terms of reference have also been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Energy Supplies (Wales)

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate his Department has made of the total cost of (a) decommissioning nuclear capabilities in Wales and (b) final disposal of their nuclear waste; and if he will make a statement. [33525]

Malcolm Wicks: The Nuclear Decommissioning Authority (NDA) assumed responsibility for the decommissioning and clean up of the UK's civil nuclear legacy on 1 April 2005. The NDA has set out its plans for the decommissioning and clean up of its sites in its draft strategy. The draft strategy indicates that the most recent life cycle baseline costs (which set out the scope, schedule, and cost of work at each site over its life time) in respect of the Magnox nuclear power stations at Trawsfynydd and Wylfa is as follows:

Trawsfynydd—£1.1 billion;

Wylfa—£1.7 billion.

Further details are available in the NDA draft Strategy which can be found at www.nda.gov.uk.

Options for the long term management of radioactive wastes are subject to consideration and evaluation by the independent Committee on Radioactive Waste Management (CoRWM) who are due to make a recommendation to Government in July 2006.

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment his Department has made of the potential for nuclear fission power stations in Wales; what estimate his Department has made of the total life cycle costs of such facilities including full decommissioning and final disposal of waste; and if he will make a statement. [33527]

Malcolm Wicks: The role of nuclear power in meeting the UK's future electricity generating needs will be examined in the recently announced Energy Review, alongside all other options to ensure the UK remains on track to meet our medium and long-term energy policy goals. Review will need to analyse the costs of all options, including new nuclear, as part of weighing up costs and benefits before a decision can be taken.

Export Support

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what export support for UK manufacturers has been introduced since 1997. [29435]

Alun Michael: UK Trade and Investment (UKTI), formerly British Trade International, is a joint DTI and FCO operation created in 1999. One of UKTI's key aims is to strengthen the provision of support to exporters, including manufacturers. UKTI provides a range of information, advice and support to potential and existing exporters. Support is tailored specifically to individual company needs. Full detail of the export support available to all companies, including manufacturers, can be found at www.uktrdeinvest.gov.uk.

Gas

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the average beach gas availability from the UK continental shelf for winter (a) 2005–06, (b) 2006–07 and (c) 2007–08. [32364]

Malcolm Wicks: There are currently no publicly available figures estimating UKCS availability for the years 2006–07 and 2007–08. An estimate of beach gas availability for this winter (2005–06) by National Grid, the network operator, can be found at: http://www.ofgem.gov.uk/temp/ofgem/cache/cmsattach/12493_21405.pdf.

Uncertainties regarding facility and equipment reliability, reservoir performance and the weather make availability of beach gas estimates highly complex, and subject to variation.

John Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment his Department has made of the availability of gas supplies in the event of a failure of the continental gas interconnector this winter. [30534]

Malcolm Wicks: National Grid, in its Winter Outlook report 2005–06, published in October, considers various gas supply assumptions (table 3). The Winter Outlook can be found at: http://www.ofgem.gov.uk/temp/ofgem/cache/cmsattach/12493_214_05.pdf

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the estimated gas production from the UK's own resources is for each quarter from Q1 2006 to Q4 2008. [31496]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department does not make projections of gas production on a quarterly basis. It does publish projections of annual production from the UK continental shelf, in the form of ranges, at http://www.og.dti.gov.uk/information/bb_updates/chapters/Section4_17.htm. For 2006 to 2008 the latest projections of production available for sale (i.e. net of producers' own use) are 85–95 billion cubic metres (bcm) in 2006, 80–90 bcm in 2007 and 75–85 bcm in 2008. By comparison, net production in 2004 was 94.5 bcm and is likely to be around 89 bcm in 2005.

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when his Department first provided information to (a) Ofgem and (b) the national grid about gas production problems in the North Sea to enable gas supply forecasting. [33564]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department provides information to Ofgem on unplanned, offshore and gas terminal outages that may have a significant impact on the volumes of gas produced into the National Transmission System. This information has been provided routinely since summer 2004.

The offshore industry provides national grid with information about significant gas production problems under the terms of an agreement that came into effect in autumn 2003.

Law Firms (Service Claims)

Mr. David Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if he will break down by law firm the number of service claims made (a) as a total for each firm and (b) as a percentage of their case holding; [30797]

(2) if he will break down by law firm the number of group three denials that have been overturned (a) as a total for each firm and (b) as a percentage of their case holding. [30798]

Malcolm Wicks: A table containing the information requested in (a) and (b) has been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Miners Compensation

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the average hearing loss settlement made to miners has been in claims submitted by Vendside Ltd. [31339]

Malcolm Wicks: Vendside Ltd have not submitted any hearing loss claims. The average settlement in claims submitted by the Union of Democratic Mineworkers is £2,707.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much has been paid to Vendside Ltd (a) in total and (b) per average claim for miners' hearing loss compensation since 1997. [31340]

Malcolm Wicks: Vendside Ltd have not submitted any miners' hearing loss claims. The Union of Democratic Mineworkers has been paid £23.7 million in damages for those claimants it represented at an average of £2,707 per claim.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on what date the first claim for (a) hearing loss, (b) beat knee and (c) industrial accident was registered with his Department by (i) Vendside Ltd and (ii) the Union of Democratic Mineworkers. [31341]

Malcolm Wicks: The UDM first registered a hearing loss claim on 3 June 1997 and a beat knee claim on 9 January 2003. The UDM have not submitted any industrial accident claims and Vendside Ltd have not submitted any claims for any of these types.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the average hearing loss settlement paid to miners has been since 1997 in claims submitted by the 20 solicitors' firms which have submitted most claims; what percentage this represented of the total claims submitted; and what the average amount of fees paid in costs has been. [31364]

Malcolm Wicks: Claims from the 20 solicitors' firms who have submitted the most hearing loss claims represent 81 per cent. of the total number submitted. The average settlement in claims handled by these firms is £2,377 and the average cost is £794.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which 20 solicitors' firms or others have registered the greatest numbers of miners' hearing loss claims with his Department; and how many claims each has registered. [31337]

Malcolm Wicks: The 20 firms with the largest number of miners' hearing loss claims and how many each has registered since 1998 is set out in the table:

Firm	Number of claims
Union of Democratic Mineworkers	10,166
Beresfords Solicitors	3,350
Graysons Solicitors	3,118
Moss Solicitors	2,268
Browell Smith and Co	1,904
Thompsons Solicitors	1,600
Hugh James	1,111
Ashton Morton Slack Solicitors	881
Kidd and Spoor Harper Solicitors	827
O. H. Parsons and Partners Solicitors	743
Corries Solicitors	665
Irwin Mitchell Solicitors	625
Towells Solicitors	581
Watson Burton LLP	470
Meloy Whittle Robinson	469
Endlars Solicitors	420
Morisons Solicitors	415
Mortons Solicitors	408
Latham and Company Solicitors	403
Heptonstalls Solicitors	396

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many hearing loss claims paid out by his Department since 1997 have required two separate medical tests. [31338]

Malcolm Wicks: Of the 28,562 hearing loss claims settled as of 31 October 2005, 553 have required a second medical test.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many common law claims have been registered with his Department since 1998 by the Union of Democratic Mineworkers, excluding those registered by Vendside Ltd. [31342]

Malcolm Wicks: Since 1998, the Union of Democratic Mineworkers have submitted 22,757 common law claims.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many hearing loss claims paid out by his Department have included a payment involving Melex Ltd. [31356]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department makes payments to claimants' representatives in hearing loss claims, including, where appropriate, payment for arranging hearing loss tests. The extent to which those representatives use parties such as Melex Ltd. is a matter for them. The Department has had no direct dealings with Melex Ltd. at any time.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what hourly rate is paid to Vendside Ltd for work on claims for (a) vibration white finger, (b) chronic obstructive pulmonary disease and (c) hearing loss. [31357]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department do not pay Vendside Ltd an hourly rate for handling claims. Claim handling costs for successful claims are met according to handling agreements for vibration white finger and chronic obstructive pulmonary disease. Vendside Ltd have not submitted any claims for hearing loss.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what evidence of insurance indemnity has been provided to (a) his Department and (b) its insurers by (i) the Union of Democratic Mineworkers and (ii) Vendside Ltd for (A) beat knee, (B) industrial accident claims and (C) hearing loss claims in the mining industry. [31358]

Malcolm Wicks: This is a matter for claimants. The Department does not hold such information.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many miners hearing loss claims submitted by (a) Vendside and (b) others since 1997 have required a second medical examination. [31360]

Malcolm Wicks: Vendside have not submitted any miners hearing loss claims. Since 1997, 758 claimants have required a second medical examination, of which 40 were represented by the Union of Democratic Mineworkers.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many hearing loss claims from the mining industry have been registered with his Department since 1997. [31361]

Malcolm Wicks: As at 31 October 2005, 38,244 miners hearing loss claims have been registered.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the claims handlers officials in his Department have met since 1997 to discuss mining hearing loss and knee claims. [31363]

Malcolm Wicks: No meetings have been held with officials, although the Department's contractors have met representatives from solicitors firms and the Union of Democratic Mineworkers to discuss hearing loss and knee injury claims.

National Grid

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much electricity in megawatts was lost to heat from the national grid in each year since 2000. [32643]

Malcolm Wicks: Heat is energy and may be expressed in watt-hours, rather than in megawatts, which are units of power.

The amount of generated energy lost to heat in the national grid transmission system in each year was as follows. The figures are expressed in megawatt-hours (i.e. MWh):

	MWh
2000–01	4,750,000
2001–02	4,370,000
2002–03	4,330,000
2003–04	4,510,000
2004–05	4,450,000

National Minimum Wage

Ms Katy Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many employees in his Department were affected by the rise in the national minimum wage on 1 October. [28976]

Alan Johnson: In the Department of Trade and Industry there were no employees affected by the increase in the national minimum wage on 1 October 2005.

New Power Stations

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the total generating capacity is of proposals for new power stations being considered by his Department. [33638]

Malcolm Wicks: 7,667 megawatts.

Nuclear Power

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what evidence he is taking into account when reviewing the future role of nuclear energy in the United Kingdom. [31713]

Malcolm Wicks: The forthcoming Energy Review will undertake an extensive analysis of evidence relating to a wide range of different energy technologies.

The terms of reference for the Energy Review have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received advocating renewed provision of nuclear power. [31717]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department receives many representations from the public and commercial companies, which both advocate and oppose the renewal of nuclear power.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much public money has been earmarked for investment in future nuclear fission development; and how much of that money is expected to be spent on the Generation IV Scheme. [33699]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 1 December 2005]: DTI has allocated £10 million, £5 million in 2006–07 and £5 million in 2007–08, to support UK involvement in international research on advanced nuclear energy systems. Much of this is expected to fund UK research on Generation IV systems for potential international deployment from around 2030; the exact amount will depend on the mix of research proposals that are submitted. The initiative will support UK skills needed to keep open the nuclear energy option and our capability to keep abreast of international developments and inform UK policy development.

The Research Councils have allocated £6 million to a consortium for research to "Keep the Nuclear Option Open" which commenced in October 2005 for four years (of which a small element will focus on Generation IV technologies). EPSRC intends to award up to £5 million to support an Engineering Doctorate Centre in Nuclear Skills, which will have a first intake of students in autumn 2006, and in May 2005 awarded £1 million for a masters level training package—the Nuclear Technology Education Consortium (NTEC).

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what (a) safety and (b) financial tests will be used to determine whether the building of further nuclear power stations will be approved. [32441]

Malcolm Wicks: The information is as follows:

(a) An operator may not begin construction of a new nuclear power station until a licence has been granted by the Health and Safety Executive. Before granting that licence HSE will need to be assured that the plant is robustly designed to ensure high levels of safety throughout its operation and eventual decommissioning. HSE has published its Safety Assessment Principles which guide its assessment of a prospective licensees safety submissions.

(b) The Energy Review will need to analyse costs of new nuclear power, alongside other technologies, as part of weighing up costs and benefits before a decision can be taken.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment the Department has made of the potential for nuclear power to increase its share of the national grid's electricity supply over the next 50 years. [32442]

Malcolm Wicks: The role of nuclear power in meeting the UK's future electricity generating needs will be examined in the recently announced Energy Review, alongside all other options to ensure the UK remains on track to meet our medium and long-term energy policy goals.

Overhead Power Cables

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the estimated cost of repairs to overhead power cables was in each month since January 2000. [32644]

Malcolm Wicks: Expenditure to repair distribution overhead power lines was £47.1 million in 2000–01, £46.2 million in 2001–02, £71.8 million in 2002–03, £53.7million in 2003–04 and £53.1 million in 2004–05.

These figures are taken from data provided by the network operators to Ofgem.

Ofgem does not require the network companies to provide information on a monthly basis—to do so would place an unduly onerous burden on them.

Overseas Trade

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the total value of UK trade with (a) India, (b) China, (c) the EU, (d) the USA and (e) Russia and the former Eastern bloc countries was in each year since 1995. [33233]

Ian Pearson: The figures requested are shown in the following tables.

Postcodes

David Mundell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether there are plans to remove responsibility for management of postcodes from the Royal Mail. [32820]

Barry Gardiner: No.

Power Stations

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many applications for the building of new power stations he is considering; and how many of these are for power stations in Wales. [32937]

Malcolm Wicks: There are currently 12 applications under section 36 of the Electricity Act 1989 for consent to construct new power stations, three of which are in Wales.

Protection of Trading Interests Act

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the operation of the Protection of Trading Interests Act 1980. [28269]

Ian Pearson: The Protection of Trading Interests Act (PTIA) was enacted in 1980 to counter US assertions of extraterritorial jurisdiction in the late 1970s. The PTIA was modified in 1996 by an order under section 2(2) of the European Communities Act 1972 in order to give effect to Council Regulation (EC) 22717 96, otherwise known as the EU Blocking Statute, which prohibits compliance with the US embargo on Cuba. Although the PTIA was introduced as a defence against US extraterritorial attempts to assert its jurisdiction, the Act does not relate specifically to the US and can be invoked against any third country attempting to assert extraterritorial jurisdiction in the UK.

Three orders have been made under section 1 of the PTIA:

Protection of Trading Interests (US Re-export Control) Order 1982 (SI 1982/885);

Protection of Trading Interests (US Antitrust Measures) Order 1983 (SI 1983/900); Protection of Trading Interests (US Cuban Assets Control Regulations) Order 1992(811992/2449).

There has also been one order made under section 5, the Protection of Trading Interests (Australian Trade Practices) Order 1988 (SI 1988/569).

However, its terms have not been invoked since the introduction of the EU Blocking Statue in 1996, and in recent years the role of the PTIA has shifted from a means of enforcement to that of a deterrent.

Public Service Agreements

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether the data required to measure 2004 public service agreement target 2 are published. [30324]

Alan Johnson: The indicators used to measure PSA 2 are set out in the technical note for that target. This is available on the DTI website at http://www.dti.gov.uk/pdfs/psa_2.pdf. The technical note also provides detail of the data sources used for each indicator.

The Department reports twice a year on progress towards achieving PSA targets—in the autumn performance report and the spring departmental report. This includes the most recent available data for all PSA 2 indicators. The first assessment of progress towards the PSA targets set out in the 2004 spending review will be in the forthcoming autumn performance report 2005, which will be laid before Parliament in mid-December.

Redundancy/Early Retirement

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he plans to introduce (a) voluntary redundancy and (b) early retirement schemes within his Department during the next two years; and if he will make a statement. [28275]

Alan Johnson: The Department is currently running a small scale early severance scheme as one of a package of measures to redeploy staff displaced as a result of headcount reductions. My Department may run small scale schemes during the next two years to deal with areas where staff cannot be redeployed by alternative means. A large number of staff have already left the Department under early severance schemes run during 2004 and 2005.

Renewable Energy

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what research he has evaluated on the efficiency of (a) wind turbines and (b) wave and tidal power sources. [31550]

Malcolm Wicks: For conventional generators, efficiency is the delivered energy expressed as percentage of the fuel input to the generator. However, given that the fuel source for wind, wave and tidal power is limitless and free, its efficiency does not have the same meaning as conventional power stations.

The capacity factor (or load factor) of an electricity generator is a relative measure of the output of the device. The capacity factor expresses the output of the generator over a given time period (typically one year) as a percentage of the theoretical maximum output of the generator over the same time.

A paper by the Environmental Change Institute on Wind Power and the UK Wind Resource, suggest that the annual capacity factor for wind power in the UK (long-term average of over 27 per cent.) compares favourably to that of Denmark (around 2 per cent.) and Germany (around 15 per cent.). The expansion of wind power to higher wind speed locations, including offshore, may result in capacity factor increasing in the future.

A similar paper by the Environmental Change Institute on the Variability of UK Marine Resources also includes information on wave and tidal capacity. A copy of both reports are available from their website http://www.eci.ox.ac.uk/

Royal Mail Services

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the Home Secretary's answer of 24 November 2005, Official Report, columns 2319–20W, on passports, if he will instruct Royal Mail to investigate (a) how the passport of Mrs. Valerie Veale of Winchester (Royal Mail ref 1–1601472618) was lost in the post, (b) why it was sent to the South Kensington sorting office and (c) why it was delivered to the Natural History Museum. [33443]

Barry Gardiner: This is an operational matter for Royal Mail. The chief executive has been asked to reply direct to the hon. Member.

Senior Appointments (Departmental Agencies)

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on how many occasions, in respect of senior appointments for agencies administered by his Department, the appointed candidate was not the highest-score candidate at interview for each year since 1997; and what (a) the sex of the person appointed and (b) the sex of the highest-scoring candidate was in each case. [28495]

Alan Johnson: This information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Solar Photovoltaics

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what his Department's estimate is of the amount of capital grant support required to deliver the Government's White Paper commitments to a 10 year solar photovoltaics programme in line with Germany and Japan. [30946]

Malcolm Wicks: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to his question number 29979.

Staff Discipline

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many employees have been dismissed by his Department in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [29134]

Alan Johnson: The number of employees dismissed from the Department in each year since 2001 is as set out on the following table.

	Number of employees dismissed
2001	3
2002	5
2003	15
2005 to date	18

The Department has procedures in place to deal with misconduct, unsatisfactory performance and poor attendance. These are developed in consultation with the trade unions and are available to all staff on the Department's intranet or in hard copy.

UK Trade and Investment

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to his answer of 1 November 2005, Official Report, columns 864–65W, on UK trade and investment, how many employees within UK trade and investment (a) are locally employed in overseas jurisdictions and (b) are seconded from the UK. [28938]

Ian Pearson: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given today to his question number 21617.

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many (a) employees and (b) consultants working for (i) UK Trade and Investment and (ii) each regional development agency are working overseas, broken down by (A) city and (B) country. [21671]

Ian Pearson: I have placed a table in the Libraries of the House that sets out information on people working for UK Trade and Investment overseas using Foreign and Commonwealth Office figures for the current financial year. In this table UK Trade and Investment's operations are shown broken down by market—normally an individual country—and by the location of the individual posts within the market concerned. As regards personnel, UK Trade and Investment is a joint Department of Trade and Industry and Foreign and Commonwealth Office organisation, and is not an employer in its own right. Consequently it has no employees of its own. The majority of people deployed on its overseas operations are either staff of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, who are sent abroad on diplomatic terms and conditions (and referred to in the tables which follow as "UK-based"), or locally-engaged employees of the embassy, high commission or consulate general in question (referred to in the tables which follow as "LE"). There is no centrally held data on consultants engaged overseas, and acquiring it separately from each FCO Post overseas would involve disproportionate cost.

Wind-generated Electricity

Paddy Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what contribution (a) onshore and (b) offshore wind-generated electricity made to the UK's electricity supply system on each day from 16 November to 23 November; and what capacity factors were recorded by individual wind farms on each day during this period. [33557]

Malcolm Wicks: The Government do not collect information on the contribution of onshore or offshore wind generated electricity to the UK's electricity supply, or the capacity factor of individual wind farms, on a daily basis.

Information on the annual contribution of onshore and offshore wind generated electricity is published in the Digest of UK Energy Statistics (DUKES). A copy of DUKES is available from the Libraries of the House. Information on load factors is also published on an annual basis and available from the DTI's website http://www.dti.gov.uk/energy.

A paper by the Environmental Change Institute on Wind Power and the UK Wind Resource, suggests that the annual capacity factor for wind power in the UK

(long term average of over 27 per cent.) compares favourably to that of Denmark (around 20 per cent.) and Germany (around 15 per cent.). The expansion of wind power to higher wind speed locations, including offshore, may result in capacity factor increasing in the future.

World Trade

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on progress in the current round of international trade negotiations. [32418]

Ian Pearson: The draft text for the Hong Kong Ministerial was issued on 26 November by Pascal Lamy, Director General of the World Trade Organisation (WTO). Lamy will now consult further with Members before the General Council meeting on 1–2 December, which will submit the text for discussion by Ministers in Hong Kong.

All WTO members need to come to Hong Kong ready to make tough political decisions that will secure a pro-development outcome and enable the Doha Development Agenda (DDA) to be concluded by 2006.

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the Government's priorities are for the World Trade Organisation talks in December. [32477]

Ian Pearson: The UK Government's priority for the Hong Kong ministerial conference is to secure agreement to a package that is pro-development, helps build a more competitive European economy and allows a conclusion to the round by the end of 2006.

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what changes he is seeking to make to the EU's negotiating position in advance of the World Trade Organisation's ministerial conference in Hong Kong; and if he will make a statement on the United Kingdom's objectives for this conference. [32691]

Ian Pearson: The UK Government's priority for the Hong Kong ministerial conference is to secure agreement to a package that is pro-development, helps build a more competitive European economy and allows a conclusion to the round by the end of 2006.

As presidency, the UK's main role during the ministerial conference will be to support the European Commission in its role as negotiator, liaising with member states to develop a flexible EU position that will help progress negotiations. The UK has every confidence in the Commission's grasp and understanding of its negotiating mandate.

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps his Department is taking to reflect the needs and interests of developing countries at current World Trade negotiations on agriculture. [32773]

Ian Pearson: The needs and interests of developing countries are at the heart of the current World Trade negotiations. The Department of Trade and Industry works closely with other relevant Government Departments, in particular the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs and the Department for International Development, to design UK trade policy and influence the EU trade policy position.

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will publish the data that were used as a basis for UK support for the non-agricultural market access negotiations at the World Trade Organisation. [32774]

Ian Pearson: There is a wide range of analysis, including by international organisations such as UNCTAD (United National Conference on Trade and Development), World Bank and (Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development) OECD, which has been used to inform UK policy on NAMA. These analyses draw on published trade and tariff data collected by the above organisations.

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps his Department will take to deliver fair and free trade at the forthcoming World Trade Organisation ministerial in December. [32865]

Ian Pearson: The Government are committed to achieving an ambitious, pro-development package at the WTO ministerial conference in Hong Kong in December, which will allow a successful conclusion to the Doha Development Agenda (DDA) by the end of 2006.

The DDA has the potential to deliver a freer and fairer trading system, through substantially increased market access for developing countries and the dismantling of trade-distorting subsidies by industrialised countries, with poor countries given the flexibility to decide, plan and sequence trade reforms. The Department is pressing for as much progress as possible towards a deal at the Hong Kong ministerial.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will support measures to allow developing countries to set their level of tariff reductions in accordance with their development needs at the World Trade Organisation Hong Kong ministerial meeting. [33092]

Ian Pearson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Winchester (Mr. Oaten) on 7 November, Official Report, column 57W.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps his Department is taking to implement the UK's commitments to ensure that developing countries are not obliged to open up their markets through international trade agreements. [33093]

Ian Pearson: We are working closely with relevant Government Departments, particularly the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs and the Department for International Development, to influence the EU trade policy position and achieve an ambitious, pro-development outcome at Hong Kong in line with the UK's objectives.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he will take to ensure full account is taken of the interests of developing countries during the World Trade Organisation negotiations in Hong Kong in December. [33094]

Ian Pearson: The needs and interests of developing countries are at the heart of the current World Trade negotiations. The Department of Trade and Industry works closely with other Government Departments including the Department for International Development and The Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs to design UK trade policy and influence the EU trade policy position.

The UK is supporting meaningful special and differential treatment for developing countries in every part of the negotiation. The UK is supporting the right of developing countries to plan and sequence reforms in line with national poverty reduction strategies and the right for LDCs to make no new commitments at all. The UK is also working to encourage other WTO members to offer full duty and quota free market access to least developed countries as the EU already does.

Outside of the WTO, the UK has agreed to treble our trade related assistance to help the poorest countries build their supply side capacity to trade to £100 million per annum by 2010. As a donor we are also actively engaged in discussions to design the World Bank enhanced integrated framework on 'Aid for Trade'.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what his targets are for the Doha development round at the Hong Kong ministerial meeting in December; what assessment he has made of the implications of failing to reach an agreement in Hong Kong; and if he will make a statement. [33095]

Ian Pearson: The UK Government's target for the Hong Kong ministerial conference is to secure agreement to a package that is pro-development, helps build a more competitive European economy and allows a conclusion to the round by the end of 2006.

Many issues remain to be resolved in the negotiations and reaching agreement on as many of these as possible in Hong Kong will be critical to meeting the 2006 deadline. This deadline, which is widely accepted, stems from the expiry of the US Trade Promotion Authority in 2007.

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Residential Housing Units

Kate Hoey: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners what steps the Commissioners are taking to ensure that their non-fair rent tenants are not adversely affected by the introduction of market rents by new owners of properties sold by the Commissioners. [33409]

Sir Stuart Bell: Sales are, generally, of the freeholds only; existing tenancy arrangements are not changed. Future tenancy arrangements and rental policies are for new owners to determine.

Kate Hoey: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners if he will list the names and addresses of the estates on which the Commissioners have owned residential housing units over the past five years, excluding those used by the clergy for homes. [33410]

Sir Stuart Bell: The Commissioners have owned residential housing units over the past five years, excluding those used by the clergy for homes, on their rural estates in the following areas:

Alston, Lancashire
Ashford, Kent
Bishop Auckland, Durham
Bishopstone, Wiltshire
Canterbury, Kent
Carlisle, Cumbria
Central Durham, Durham
Chelsea, London
Chester, Cheshire
Chichester, West Sussex
Dissington, Northumberland
East Lincs, Lincolnshire
East Riding, Yorkshire
Eccleshall, Staffordshire
Ely, Cambridgeshire
Exeter, Devon
Foremarke, Derbyshire
Great Easton, Leicestershire
Halsall, Lancashire
Hereford, Herefordshire
Huntingdon, Cambridgeshire
Hyde Park, London
Islip, Oxfordshire
Kelmscott, Oxfordshire
Kings Lynn, Norfolk
Leicester, Leicestershire
Maida Vale, London
Navestock, Essex
Newbiggin, Cumbria
North Lincs, Lincolnshire
North Riding, Yorkshire
Northallerton, Yorkshire
Norwich, Norfolk
Peterborough, Cambridgeshire
Pimlico, London
Rainford, Lancashire
Ripon, Yorkshire
Rochester, Kent
South Durham, Durham
South Lincs, Lincolnshire
Staverton, Devon
Stoke Newington, London
Tyneside, Tyne and Wear
Vauxhall, London
Walworth, London
Warkworth, Northumberland
Waterloo, London
Wells, Somerset
Winchester, Hampshire
Winchester Park, London
Wisbech, Cambridgeshire
Wollaston, Northamptonshire
Worcester, Worcestershire
Wybunbury, Cheshire
Yeovil, Somerset
York, Yorkshire

Many of these are farmed rural estates including smaller amounts of ancillary housing; the ownership of substantial blocks of largely residential accommodation has been and is focused in London.

Kate Hoey: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners if he will break down the residential housing units sold by the Commissioners since 2001 by number of bedrooms per unit. [33411]

Sir Stuart Bell: This information cannot be provided without consulting a wide range of sources (as demonstrated by my answer to question 33410) thus involving a disproportionate amount of staff time.

Kate Hoey: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners what personal information on Church Commissioners' tenants is passed to the buyers of Church Commissioners' residential properties; and what measures are taken to ensure that the information is correct. [33450]

Sir Stuart Bell: Hard copy and computer tenancy files containing customary business information are passed to new owners to enable them to continue to manage the properties sold. This information will often have been supplied by the residents themselves.

The accuracy of these data is verified and controlled in the course of ongoing business management.

TREASURY

£5 Notes

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many £5 notes were in circulation in each of the last 10 years; [34436]

(2) what assessment his Department has made of the merits of replacing the £5 note with a (a) plastic coated note and (b) £5 coin; and if he will make a statement. [34437]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The following table provides information on the value of £5 notes in circulation as at end-February in each year over the last ten years and as published in the Bank of England's Annual Report and Accounts.

Value of £5 notes in circulation

	£ billion
2005	1.055
2004	1.025
2003	1.051
2002	1.044
2001	1.041
2000	1.045
1999	1.111
1998	1.034
1997	1.047
1996	1.067

The current £5 note in issue (featuring Elizabeth Fry) is printed on heavier weight paper than the previous £5 note design and is also the first Bank of England note to be coated with a varnish. This was done to improve the durability of the £5 note, recognising that it is subject to more wear and tear than other denominations.

The Bank of England is continually investigating ways to improve the quality and quantity of £5 notes in circulation. One option could be to introduce a £5 note printed on a more durable substrate, such as polymer (a type of plastic). A number of factors need to be considered in the selection of an alternative substrate, in particular that it provides acceptable protection against current and likely future counterfeiting threats. At present, the Bank has no plans to change the substrate.

The Royal Mint, which is responsible for producing and issuing UK coins on behalf of HM Treasury, reviews from time to time the structure of the UK coinage. At present, there is little evidence of any significant public interest for introducing a new £5 circulating coin.

100 Parliament Street

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the disposal of antique fixtures and fittings in 100 Parliament street. [34348]

Dawn Primarolo: In accordance with standard Government procedures, a comprehensive asset register is maintained which includes any antique fixtures and fittings.

Following the successful refurbishment of 100 Parliament street an audit has been undertaken to reconcile the asset register to the items that have been reinstated in the newly refurbished premises. Most of the antique fixtures and fittings have been reinstalled in the building. Some items on the asset register have been disposed of following discussions with English Heritage. Other low value loose items have been disposed of as these were inappropriate for the refurbished building. No items remain in store at 100 Parliament street.

Air Passenger Duty

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he plans to reduce air passenger duty. [34589]

Dawn Primarolo: The Chancellor considers relevant social, economic and environmental factors when deciding taxation policy. Any changes are announced in the context of the Budget.

Alcohol-related Deaths

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many deaths in (a) Tamworth and (b) Staffordshire were primarily caused by alcohol in each of the last five years. [33808]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 5 December 2005:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many deaths in (a) Tamworth and (b) Staffordshire were primarily caused by alcohol. (33808)

The latest year for which figures are available is 2004. The table below shows the numbers of deaths among residents of Tamworth local authority and the current county of Staffordshire where the underlying cause of death indicated a condition directly related to alcohol use in the years 2000 to 2004.

Alcohol-related deaths[1] to usual residents of Tamworth local authority and the current county of Staffordshire[2], registered 2000–04

Number of deaths

	Tamworth	Staffordshire
2000	5	80
2001	4	87
2002	9	104
2003	6	106
2004	9	111

[1] For the year 2000 the cause of death was defined using the International Classification of Diseases, Ninth Revision (ICD-9). The codes used by ONS to define alcohol-related deaths are listed below:
291—Alcoholic psychoses
303—Alcohol dependence syndrome
305.0—Non-dependent abuse of alcohol
425.5—Alcoholic cardiomyopathy
571—Chronic liver disease and cirrhosis
E860—Accidental poisoning by alcohol
For the years 2001–04 the International Classification of Diseases, Tenth Revision (ICD-10) was used. To maintain comparability with earlier years the following codes were used:
F10—Mental and behavioural disorders due to use of alcohol
142.6—Alcoholic cardiomyopathy
K70—Alcoholic liver disease
K73—Chronic hepatitis, not elsewhere classified
K74—Fibrosis and cirrhosis of liver
X45—Accidental poisoning by and exposure to alcohol
Deaths were selected using the original underlying cause.

The selection of codes to define alcohol-related deaths is described in: Baker A and Rooney C (2003). Recent trends in alcohol-related mortality, and the impact of ICD-10 on the monitoring of these deaths in England and Wales. Health Statistics Quarterly 17, pp 5–14.

Annual Death Rate (Gravesham)

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people in the Gravesham constituency between the ages of (a) 65 to 67, (b) 67 to 70, (c) 70 to 75, (d) 75 to 80 and (e) 80 or above died in each year since 1997. [33606]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Average Wage

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the average wage in Beverley and Holderness was for (a) men and (b) women in the last period for which figures are available. [33457]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 5 December 2005:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question concerning what the average wage in Beverley and Holderness was for (a) men (b) women in the last period for which figures are available. (33457)

Currently average earnings are estimated from the Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings (ASHE), and are provided for full time employees on adult rates whose pay for the survey period was not affected by absence. This is the standard definition used for ASHE. The ASHE does not collect data on the self employed and people who do unpaid work.

I attach a table showing the Average Gross Weekly Earnings for full time employees in the parliamentary constituency of Beverley and Holderness for 2005. These statistics are also available on the National Statistics website at: http://www.statistics.gov.uk/StatBase/Product.asp?vlnk=13101.

The ASHE, carried out in April of each year, is the most comprehensive source of earnings information in the United Kingdom. It is a one per cent sample of all employees who are members of pay-as-you-earn (PAYE) schemes.

Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings, Office for National Statistics.

Background Note:

(a) The Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings, (ASHE), carried out in April of each year, is the most comprehensive source of earnings information in the United Kingdom. It is a 1 per cent. sample of all employees.

(b) Average gross weekly earnings for adult full-time employees whose pay for the survey period was not affected by absence.

(c) The median replaces the mean as the headline statistic. The weighted mean is the sum of the weighted values divided by the sum of the weights. The median is the value below which 50 per cent. of employees fall. It is preferred over the mean for earnings data as it is influenced less by extreme values and because of the skewed distribution of earnings data.

CDs and DVDs

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what assessment his Department has made of the impact of the level of UK VAT on the volume of (a) compact disks and (b) digital versatile disks sold online and delivered within the UK by UK-listed trading entities; [34568]

(2) what assessment his Department has made of the impact of the level of UK VAT on the volume of (a) compact disks and (b) digital versatile disks smuggled into the UK. [34570]

Dawn Primarolo: No assessment has been made.

Centenarians

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many centenarians live in (a) Southend, (b) Essex, (c) Hertfordshire, (d) Greater London and (e) England and Wales. [33653]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 5 December 2005:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent question asking how many centenarians live in (a) Southend, (b) Essex, (c) Hertfordshire, (d) Greater London and (e) England and Wales (33653)

Figures on the number of people aged 100 or over on Census day (29 April 2001) in the requested geographical areas are available in table S001 on the CD supplement to the Census 2001 National Report for England and Wales pt 1, which is available in the House of Commons Library. Alternatively the data is available on-line at: http://www.nomisweb.co.uk/home/census2001.asp

Child Benefit

Helen Goodman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what the cost would be of raising the rate of child benefit for (a) the second and (b) the third child from £11.40 per week to £17.00 per week; and how many children would benefit in each case; [34573]

(2) what the cost would be of raising child benefit to £20 per week for all children. [34574]

Dawn Primarolo: The cost of raising the rate of child benefit for the second and third child from £11.40 per week to £17.00 per week is shown in the following table, in addition to the number of children benefiting in each case.

Position of child in family	Annual difference in cost if child benefit increased to £17.00 per week (£ million)	Number of children benefiting (million)
Second	1,200	4.1
Third	360	1.2
Total for second and third child	1,566	5.3

Note:
Based on a 5 per cent. sample of administrative data on child benefit recipients at 31 August 2005

The annual cost of raising child benefit to £20.00 for all children is around £3.7 billion. This would benefit around 13.2 million children.

Code of Practice 26

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) when a new version of Code of Practice 26 will become available; [18640]

(2) whether HM Customs and Revenue has completed its review of Code of Practice 26; and whether he plans to introduce a statutory test for the recovery of overpayments with a right of independent appeal. [19298]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer to my evidence to the Treasury Sub-Committee on 26 October in which I stated that HMRC will be discussing Code of Practice 26 with the voluntary sector and other interested parties with a view to introducing a new version by the end of this year.

Death Duties

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list assets accepted in lieu of death duties since 1997. [34371]

Dawn Primarolo: Acceptances up to 31 March 2005 are shown in the Acceptance in Lieu Reports published by the Museums, Libraries and Archives Council and available at http://www.mla.gov.uk/action/cp/00ail.asp. Details of acceptances since then are given in press releases issued by the Museums, Libraries and Archives Council on 2 September (http://www.mla.gov.uk/news/press_article.asp?articleid=844) and 13 October (http://www.mla.gov.uk/news/press_article.asp?articleid=860); by the Scottish Executive on 13 July (http://www.scotland.gov.uk/News/Releases/2005/07/13125910); and by the Welsh Executive on 31 October (http://www.wales.gov.uk/servlet/PressReleaseBySubject?area_code:140COB).

Enterprise Education

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the evidential basis is for his statement of 14 November in the Financial Times that half of all schools now offer enterprise education and that every school will do so by 2006. [34695]

John Healey: Responding to the 2002 Howard Davies report and following an evaluated pathfinder round in 2003–04 and 2004–05, new Department for Education and Skills funding of £60 million a year was rolled out in September 2005, which will support a new focus on "enterprise education in every school" for all key stage 4 pupils. This includes the equivalent of five days' enterprise activity for every pupil (such as running a real, or realistic, business) alongside existing work-related activities like work experience.

This new funding builds on funding for a third year of the Enterprise Advisors service. Adding the Pathfinder schools of 2003–04 and 2004–05, this means that less than two years since the Davies report, more than 50 per cent. of English secondary schools had Department for Education and Skills or Learning and Skills Council funded interventions on enterprise, preparing for national roll-out in September 2005.

Financial Statistics (South East England)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the South East's percentage share of (a) UK public expenditure, (b) UK population and (c) UK gross domestic product was in each year between 1995 and 2005. [33714]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the national statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 5 December 2005:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about public expenditure, population and gross domestic product for the South East compared to the total for the UK. (33714)

The tables below show the South East Government Office Region per cent share of UK public expenditure, population, and Gross Value Added (GVA)[1]. Comparable data is shown for all available years from 1995.

Table A: South East percentage of identifiable UK public expenditure[2]

	Percentage

Identifiable expenditure (approximately 85% of Total Managed Expenditure) is that which can be recognised as having been incurred for the benefit of individuals, enterprises, or communities within particular regions.

Non-identifiable expenditure is that which is deemed to be incurred on behalf of the UK as a whole, e.g. defence expenditure.

Estimates in Table B are based on mid year population estimates, available on the National Statistics website at: www.statistics.gov.uk/popest

Table C: South East percentage of UK GVA[1]

	Percentage
1995	14.9
1996	15.0
1997	15.2
1998	15.4
1999	15.5
2000	15.7
2001	15.7
2002	15.6
2003[3]	15.6

The estimates in Table C are based on the regional Gross Value Added[1] (GVA) estimates published in December 2004. These are available on the National Statistics website at: http://www.statistics.gov.uk/StatBase/Product.asp?vlnk=7359

[1] Gross Value Added (GVA) is Gross Domestic Product (GDP) less taxes (plus subsidies) on products.

[2] Public Expenditure estimates are only available on a comparable basis from 1998–99.

Lord Turner Letter

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which official is leading the investigation into the leak of his letter to Lord Turner, Chairman of the Pensions Commission; and if he will make a statement. [33700]

John Healey: The Chancellor has asked Nicholas Macpherson, Permanent Secretary to the Treasury, to lead an inquiry into the leaking of the letter sent to Lord Turner and its reply.

Solar Photovoltaics Programme

Alan Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the benefits to the UK economy of a 10 year solar voltaics programme in line with that of Germany and Japan. [29979]

Malcolm Wicks: I have been asked to reply.

The Department has supported photovoltaics since 2000 through the PV Field Trials Programme and also through the £31 million Major Photovoltaics Demonstration Programme. These programmes have contributed to the development of the microgeneration industry in the UK, including an installer base. We plan to continue support for photovoltaics and other building scale renewables through a low carbon buildings programme, which is currently under development. This was recommended in the Renewables Innovation Review (February 2004), which looked at the viability of photovoltaics and other renewable technologies. It suggested that the environmental benefits in buildings could be maximised by developing an appropriate mix of building integrated renewables and energy efficiency. The new programme will have a budget of £30 million over three years and will start in April 2006 subject to EU state aids clearance.

The new programme and the wider microgeneration strategy currently under development will aim to introduce further measures to help develop a sustainable market for all the buildings renewable technologies. In addition PV installations are eligible for support under the renewables obligation. The current renewables obligation review is looking to simplify the way in which small-scale generators can claim renewable obligation certificates. International reports on photovoltaics, including developments in Japan and Germany, are undertaken by the International Energy Agency, www.iea.org.

Statutory Instruments

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many statutory instruments introduced by his Department had to be (a) withdrawn, (b) amended by a further statutory instrument and (c) reprinted because of defective drafting in each session since 1997; and what steps he (i) is taking and (ii) plans to take to prevent further such instances. [33649]

John Healey: Information in relation to instruments which have been amended, replaced and reprinted is restricted to those instruments which have been reported on for defective drafting by the Joint Committee on Statutory Instruments.

Information on statutory instruments withdrawn or reprinted before publication is not held centrally and information in relation to any such instruments for which the Treasury were responsible can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

25 Treasury and HMRC (previously Customs and Inland Revenue) statutory instruments have been reported on by the Joint Committee on Statutory Instruments since 1997, although figures from Customs and Inland Revenue relate only to the period beginning 2000. 12 instruments were produced directly in response to a JCSI report and were issued free-of-charge to purchasers of the original instrument. Of the remaining 13 instruments, most were corrected by a later instrument, and others did not require amendment once an explanation had been provided.

The Treasury have arrangements in place to prevent instances of defective drafting. Draft statutory instruments are checked by policy officials and at least one lawyer in addition to the draftsman before they are made. These arrangements are kept under review. In addition, training and guidance are provided for all lawyers who draft statutory instruments.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what training is given to (a) policy officials and (b) lawyers in his Department responsible for drafting statutory instruments; and if he will make a statement. [33650]

John Healey: All Treasury statutory instruments are drafted by lawyers. Formal training courses, written guidance and on the job training are provided for all lawyers who draft statutory instruments. Draft statutory instruments are checked by at least one lawyer in addition to the draftsman before they are made. Policy officials do not draft Treasury statutory instruments. Training in turning policy into law is provided for policy officials as well as written guidance.

Tax Credits

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what action he is taking to address the recent criticism from the parliamentary ombudsman that the tax credit system is suffering from "systemic maladministration"; and if he will make a statement. [22180]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 31 October 2005]: I refer to my letter to the ombudsman on 29 July, a copy of which can be found on the ombudsman's website. On 26 October, I gave an update to the Treasury Sub-Committee on the improvements that HMRC is making.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) on what dates in 2005 new instructions on tax credit (a) overpayments and (b) administration were given to HM Revenue and Customs; what the changes were in each case; and if he will make a statement; [8568]

(2) when the new streamlined procedures for the determination of tax credit overpayment disputes were introduced; what these procedures are; and if he will make a statement. [18642]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Stroud (Mr. Drew) on 6 June 2005, Official Report, column 298W.

Instructions were issued to TCO staff prior to the introduction of the procedures.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what happens to the (a) level of an award and (b) rate of recovery when a tax credit overpayment is disputed; what will happen when the interim IT solution is introduced to suspend an overpayment; and if he will make a statement; [19718]

(2) whether when a tax credit overpayment is suspended the award continues (a) at the same level it was before the overpayment was identified and (b) at a new rate; and if he will give an illustration. [25251]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Leeds, East (Mr. Mudie) on 26 October 2005, Official Report, columns 368–69W.

From 5–6 November, HMRC has been suspending recovery of an overpayment where a claimant disputes that recovery.

An example of the suspending recovery function is:

A couple with one child, working 30 hours a week and earning an annual income of £15,000 informs HMRC of a change in income that will increase their income for the 2005–06 tax year to £19,500 (of which £2,500 is disregarded). The change in income happens after six months and the family reports the change immediately.

Before the change the family would be entitled to an annual tax credit award of £2,495 or £47 per week. The change in income implies that new annual tax credit entitlement is £1,755 or £33 per week. So, for the first 26 weeks the family has been paid £370 more than they were entitled to. This amount will be deducted from tax credit payments for the remainder of the year, reducing weekly payments to £19.

If in-year recovery was suspended, then the family would be paid their entitlement for the rest of the year. Given their new income, this would be £33 per week.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many tax credit award notices have been (a) issued, (b) printed and (c) delivered to tax credit claimants in each month since April 2003. [31523] an initial award notice, following a successful claim, an amended award notice, when a claimant notifies HMRC of a change of circumstances or income during the year, a finalised award notice, following the completion of the renewal process.

Dawn Primarolo: Award notices are issued at the following points in the tax credits cycle:

Award notices issued each month since April 2003 are as follows:

April	2,400,000
May	3,000,000
June	2,000,000

July	3,400,000
August	3,700,000

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he will answer questions 23572, 19290, 19286, 19288 and 19299 on tax credits from the hon. Member for Yeovil. [33950]

Dawn Primarolo: I have done so.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will revise the rules governing the assessment of self-employed income for evaluating eligibility for tax credits to take into account actual income in the preceding year. [34112]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 2 December 2005]: No. The income assessment for the child and working tax credits is already based on income of the previous tax year which is chargeable to income tax. This includes any taxable profits from self-employment. Tax credit awards are finalised after the end of the year of award on the basis of that year's income.

Tax Relief

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of all tax relief was received by persons in the top tax bracket in the last year for which figures are available. [34786]

Dawn Primarolo: Information on the proportion of all tax reliefs received by higher rate taxpayers is not available.

Treasury Silver

Mike Penning: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the estimated value is of the Treasury silver; and what additions have been made to that silver since May 1997. [33740]

John Healey: The value of the Treasury silver is £1,320,650. This was valued by Bonhams auctioneers at 31 March 2005 and is reported in HM Treasury's Resource Accounts 2004–05. No additions have been made to this silver since May 1997. The silver items are either stored at the Bank of England for safekeeping, or on display at 10 Downing street and the Cabinet Office.

Unemployment (Tamworth)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of the registered unemployed in Tamworth constituency were (a) 25 years and under, (b) 26 to 35 years, (c) 36 to 45 years, (d) 46 to 55 years and (e) over 55 years of age on the latest dates for which figures are available. [33809]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 5 December 2005:

As National Statistician; I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question about unemployment. (33809)

The Office for National Statistics (ONS) compiles unemployment statistics for small areas from the Annual Population Survey following International Labour Organisation definitions.

Table 1 shows the percentage of unemployed, by specified age groups, who were resident in the Tamworth Parliamentary Constituency for the 12 month period ending in March 2005. These estimates, as with any from sample surveys, are subject to sampling variability.

ONS also compiles statistics for local areas of people claiming Jobseeker's Allowance (JSA). Table 2 shows the percentage of JSA claimants, by age bands, resident in the Tamworth constituency for October 2005.

Work Force Statistics

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the total estimated work force was in (a) Southend, (b) Essex, (c) Hertfordshire, (d) Greater London and (e) England and Wales in each of the last 10 years. [33654]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 5 December 2005:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about employment. (33654)

The attached table shows, for the last 10 years, the estimated numbers of persons aged 16 and over in employment who were resident in Southend-on-Sea Unitary Authority, Essex (excluding Southend-on-Sea and Thurrock unitary authorities), Hertfordshire, Greater London and England and Wales. ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Agricultural Levy Board

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many people are employed, by full-time equivalents, by each agricultural levy board. [32304]

Mr. Bradshaw: The number of people employed, by full-time equivalent, for the five statutory agriculture and horticultural levy boards are: 51 in the British Potato Council; 61 in the Home-Grown Cereals Authority; 15 in the Horticultural Development Council; 47 in the Milk Development Council; and 565 (of which 115 are funded by the statutory levy) in the Meat and Livestock Commission.

Animal Exhibitions

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer of 22 November 2005, Official Report, column 1830W, on animal exhibitions, how many applications were (a) applied for, (b) granted and (c) refused in the most recent year for which figures are available. [33752]

Jim Knight: Exemptions from the provisions of the Zoo Licensing Act 1981 (as amended), and hence from Directive 1999/22/EC, may be granted under section 14(1)(a) of the 1981 Act. Figures on applications to the Department for such exemptions are provided below for the most recent 12 month period for which they are available (1 November 2004 to 31 October 2005).

In answer to point (a), nine applications for exemptions under section 14(1)(a) of the 1981 Act have been determined. A further eight such applications have been received and are in the process of being determined.

In answer to point (b), five exemptions were granted.

In answer to point (c), four applications for exemptions were refused. Of these, the Department has recommended that three are suitable for a section 14(2) dispensation and one is suitable for a section 14(1)(b) dispensation. These dispensation provisions retain the requirement for the establishment concerned to be licensed under the 1981 Act but provide for reduced regulatory requirements.

Animal Welfare Bill

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will redefine (a) decapod crustaceans and (b) cephalopods as animals to be included in the provisions of the Animal Welfare Bill. [30913]

Mr. Bradshaw: The definition of an animal for the purposes of the Animal Welfare Bill is limited to non-human vertebrates. This restriction to vertebrates is made on the basis that there is currently insufficient evidence to show conclusively that other types of animals, such as "lobsters/crabs/squids", have the capacity for conscious awareness: a prerequisite for experiencing pain and suffering. However, there are powers within the Bill to extend the definition if future scientific evidence demonstrated that such animals can in fact experience pain and suffering.

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the likely effect of the Animal Welfare Bill on the licensing of pet fairs and markets. [33628]

Mr. Bradshaw: Our assessment on the effect of our proposal to license pet fairs is detailed in the regulatory impact assessment (RIA), which was published alongside the Animal Welfare Bill. The RIA was informed by a public consultation on our animal welfare legislation and meetings with a wide range of organisations with an interest in animal welfare. We have also recently been in contact with interested parties, both for and against the licensing of pet fairs, in order to assist in the preparation of our proposals on these events. Once the Bill has been enacted, we plan to draw up regulations on pet vending, including pet fairs, and these proposed regulations will be subject to full public consultation.

Avian Influenza

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of bio-security on poultry farms in England. [24644]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Government consider that poultry farmers, in common with all animal owners, have a responsibility to maintain good biosecurity practices.

There has been no assessment of current bio-security on poultry farms. However, the Government are working with the poultry industry to ensure that biosecurity practices are consistent and to the required standard. Defra has distributed guidance materials on avian influenza to a range of industry groups—including the British Poultry Council, the British Egg Industry Council and the National Farmers Union—who are helping to distribute this material to their members, who cover the majority of birds. A simple one- page leaflet on biosecurity and surveillance for smaller concerns and back yard keepers has also been produced and is being distributed widely including to all veterinary practices and placed in trade and specialist press targeting the same audience. All this information is available on my Department's website.

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the total capacity is of existing bird quarantine facilities in the UK. [24647]

Mr. Bradshaw: Licences for quarantine premises do not specify the maximum capacity of the centre or facility. This is due to the fact that the capacity of a quarantine premises will vary depending on the type and size of the birds and the behavioural characteristics of different species. Certain species enjoy 'clumping' in dense groups, whereas other species are uncomfortable in close proximity to each other. Judgments about the welfare of the birds in quarantine will be a matter for clinical and professional veterinary judgment.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the effects of using ring-vaccination of poultry to combat an outbreak of avian influenza. [25043]

Mr. Bradshaw: Our experience has been that with early reporting of suspect disease, swift action to humanely slaughter infected flocks/movement controls and good biosecurity on the part of keepers, the disease can be quickly contained and eliminated without recourse to vaccination.

However Defra will continue to explore the situation regarding vaccination. Should there be advances in vaccination technology—particularly improving its effectiveness—then this would of course need to be taken into account.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to her oral statement of 26 October 2005, Official Report, column 312, on avian influenza, whether smuggling birds to avoid quarantine requirements comes within her definition of offences related to the keeping of birds. [25676]

Mr. Bradshaw: The import of captive birds into the EU from third countries must comply with the rules set out in Commission Decision 2000/666/EC. Smuggling of captive birds is an offence under the Animal Health Act 1981 and the Importation of Birds, Poultry and Hatching Eggs Order 1979.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the clade type was of the H5N1 isolate recovered from (a) the parrot/mesia pooled sample and (b) the mesia-only sample in Essex; and whether each clade type was within the same sub-grouping associated with the disease in humans. [30750]

Mr. Bradshaw: The H5N1 isolates from the pooled parrot/mesia sample and from the mesia only samples may be classified as clade 2 by some authorities. While the Department uses advance molecular techniques to determine the linage and, by inference, the origin of avian influenza viruses, the classification by clade is unhelpful when considering the potential these viruses may have for human infection. On a precautionary principle any isolate of highly pathogenic Avian influenza should be considered as having a potential to infect man and appropriate precautions should be taken in every case.

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether eggs would be destroyed as part of the measures to deal with an outbreak of Avian influenza; and what assessment has been made of the likely impact on (a) pharmaceutical and (b) other industries of reduced availability of eggs as a result of Avian influenza. [30752]

Mr. Bradshaw: Eggs will usually only be destroyed on infected premises and premises with a link to infected premises which are therefore considered to have disease.

Egg movements in areas subject to movement restrictions should continue to move under licence and subject to biosecurity controls. We do not therefore envisage a significant impact on industries using eggs or the supply of table eggs as a result of an outbreak of Avian influenza.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs from what countries mesia species are imported into the UK; and what measures her Department has taken to ascertain the source of the mesias sampled at the quarantine facility in Essex, in whose samples the Avian influenza virus H5N1 was isolated. [31062]

Mr. Bradshaw: The EU-wide computer system used to record imports of animals and their products, known as TRACES, gives all captive birds the same code and therefore it is not possible to specifically identify consignments of mesia species.

The mesias were documented as originating from a Taiwanese farm on which mesias are bred in captivity.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the (a) significance, and (b) implications of the inconsistency in recorded numbers of the mesia birds batch in which avian influenza was identified, for the effectiveness of the import and quarantine system. [32080]

Mr. Bradshaw: Where there are relatively large consignments of small birds it can be difficult to count the numbers exactly. This means that sometimes small inconsistencies occur. An independent review has been set up to look at avian influenza quarantine procedures and a report on their effectiveness is expected in early December.

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on her Department's contingency plan in case of an outbreak of avian influenza. [33704]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Government have in place an Exotic Animal Disease Generic Contingency Plan, which includes a section dealing specifically with an outbreak of avian influenza. A copy of the contingency plan can be found on the DEFRA website.

http://www.defra.gov.uk/animalh/diseases/notifiable/disease/avianinfluenza-contplan.htm

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer of 28 November 2005, Official Report, column 7W, on avian influenza, what funding is available from her Department in the event of an avian influenza outbreak. [34306]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Department is planning to spend over £8 million to enhance preparedness for avian flu in the current financial year. However in the event of an outbreak, the Department will need to assess the financial impact and if deemed necessary, will put forward proposals to the Treasury to consider additional funding from the contingency reserve.

Beef

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent assessment she has made of the impact on beef products in England of the import of South American beef products. [28106]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 14 November 2005]: Imports of beef and beef products from South America into the UK for 2003—August 2005 are shown in the following table. Imports into England are not separately available. The final row in the table shows that these represented 29 per cent. (by value) of total beef and beef product imports into the UK for the period January to August 2005.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what timetable she expects for ending the US ban on British beef; and if she will make a statement. [32620]

Mr. Bradshaw: Once the EU embargo is lifted for beef from UK cattle born after July 1996 we will look to trading partners outside the EU to remove their restrictions on our beef exports in line with international OIE guidelines. Officials are in contact with their opposite numbers in the US to explore the best way to proceed on this issue.

Bovine TB

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many animals have been ordered to be slaughtered to prevent the spread of bovine tuberculosis in each month in 2005. [34186]

Mr. Bradshaw: The number of infected cattle slaughtered in Great Britain for the first nine months of 2005 is given in the following table:

Mr. Bradshaw: The information is not correlated in the format requested, and can be derived only at disproportionate cost.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many tests for bovine tuberculosis her Department undertook in each month since 2001. [34193]

Mr. Bradshaw: The number of tests for bovine tuberculosis undertaken since 2001 broken down by month are given in the following five tables.

[1] In 2001, the TB testing and control programme was largely suspended due to the foot and mouth disease (FMD) outbreak. When testing resumed in 2002, resources were concentrated on herds with overdue TB tests which would have had a longer period in which to contract the disease. Also the proportion of high risk herds tested immediately after the FMD outbreak was greater than that prior to the outbreak. As a result, data for 2001 and 2002 are not comparable with other years.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what her latest estimate is of the number of animals infected by bovine tuberculosis. [34279]

Mr. Bradshaw: Our latest assessment shows that bovine TB restrictions, applied as result of a TB incident, affected approximately 5.2 per cent. of cattle herds in Great Britain between January and September 2005, compared with approximately 4.7 per cent. for the same period in 2004.

In Great Britain there were 2,721 new TB incidents in the first nine months of 2005—an increase of 222 on 2004. The long-term trend has been an 18 per cent. annual increase in new herd incidents.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what measures she is planning to introduce to prevent the spread of bovine tuberculosis; and if she will make a statement. [34280]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Government expect to make an announcement shortly detailing future plans for dealing with bovine TB.

Carbon Dioxide Emisions

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the impact on carbon dioxide levels of the removal of existing nuclear power stations as each is closed down. [33812]

Malcolm Wicks: I have been asked to reply.

I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to the hon. Member for North Essex on 10 October, Official Report, column 23W and our published projections at http://www.dti.gov.uk/energy/sepn/uep2004.pdf and http://www.dti.gov.uk/energy/sepn/uep_addendum.pdf.

The published projections of nuclear generation reflect company views at the time and do not allow for additional life extension potential. Updated energy projections will be made available in due course.

Cetacean By-catch

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer of 15 November 2005, Official Report, column 1053W, when the findings of the European Commission Observer Programme are expected to be published; and whether they will be published on a regular basis. [34846]

Mr. Bradshaw: We will be supplying the required information by 1 June 2006. As the Commission want to address the issue as a matter of urgency, I anticipate that a report will be available soon after.

Council Regulation (EC) 812/2004 provides for the Commission to make a report to the Council and the European Parliament after the second and fourth annual reports.

Christmas Card Recycling

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the number of (a) Christmas cards and (b) Christmas trees that were recycled in each year since 1990; what support she provides to local authorities with regard to the recycling of Christmas cards; and if she will make a statement. [33663]

Mr. Bradshaw: Christmas card and tree recycling schemes are run by the Woodland Trust and local authorities respectively. As such DEFRA has no record of the amounts collected and recycled. However, in 2005 over 50 million cards were collected through the Woodland Trust scheme.

Support for local authorities who wish to run an awareness campaign at Christmas, including the recycling of Christmas cards, can be provided by WRAP'S 'Recycle Now' programme. The support includes the use of artwork, advertising templates and PR materials.

Civil Nuclear Facilities

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the possible impact of climate change upon civil nuclear facilities in the UK. [33666]

Malcolm Wicks: Safety at nuclear facilities is regulated by the Health and Safety Executive (HSE) Nuclear Installations Inspectorate (NIL). By virtue of the conditions attached to licences granted by the HSE, nuclear site licensees are required to maintain up-to-date safety cases for their sites, which take into account any changes to assumptions made about external hazards, such as the frequency, duration and severity of flooding, extreme temperatures, high winds and other climate change impacts.

As sites move into decommissioning and periods of care and maintenance which may extend over several decades, HSE will expect licensees to continue to consider the possible impacts of climate change and to identify any actions which they might need to take to ensure the continued safety of their sites.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what her assessment is of the possible impact of climate change on the nuclear facilities at (a) Chapelcross, (b) Hartlepool, (c) Heysham and (d) Torness. [33667]

Malcolm Wicks: The Health and Safety Executive (HSE) Nuclear Installations Inspectorate (NIL) regulates the safety of all nuclear power stations in the UK, including those at Chapelcross, Hartlepool, Heysham and Torness. The NIL requires the operators of these facilities to have an up to date written demonstration of safety, the safety case, for each facility, which takes into consideration external hazards such as climate change impacts. The NIL assesses the adequacy of operators' safety cases against its published Safety Assessment Principles (SAPs), which require that the risks posed to the safety of the nuclear plant by reasonably foreseeable external events, remain demonstrably low.

Cockle Fishing

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if the Government will implement a secure permit system for cockle fishing requiring (a) the observation of health and safety regulations, (b) that the coastguard be informed of any cockling activity, (c) a responsible person to be on shore at all times and to be informed of all active participants at any time, (d) the enforcement of risk assessment procedures and (e) a proper check of all vehicles and equipment. [33536]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 1 December 2005]: The 12 Sea Fisheries Committees in England and Wales have powers under the Sea Fisheries Regulation Act 1996 to introduce byelaws to meet local fisheries management requirements (for example, to regulate cockle fishing by permit requirement). Other authorities have primary responsibility for such matters as health and safety regulation and the safety of vehicles, and relevant legal requirements and enforcement arrangements are in place. I will be considering whether additional provision for effective inshore fisheries management needs to be made in the Government's planned Marine Bill.

Crematoria

Mr. Olner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if the Government will provide the Crematorium Authority Mercury Abatement Organisation with powers enabling it to co-ordinate implementation measures with regards to the installation of mercury-abatement equipment and emissions burden-sharing in crematoria. [31843]

Mr. Bradshaw: We have made provision for the mercury reductions required from crematoria to be delivered through burden sharing, in response to concerns raised by some cremation organisations over alternative approaches, and have been pleased to assist the cremation sector to the extent possible in their development of suitable arrangements. This is a novel approach and is an alternative to the conventional method of identifying installations above a given size to take pollution control measures.

It would not be appropriate for the Government to intervene in order to dictate that one particular burden sharing approach—such as that of the Crematorium Authority Mercury Abatement Organisation—be taken up by all crematoria. I have, however, extended the deadline until 1 June 2006 by when we wish to see evidence that the burden sharing approach will deliver the 50 per cent. reduction we have specified.

Endemic Species

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list in descending order the number of endemic species of (a) insects and (b) plants in each of the world's islands, countries and territories. [34049]

Jim Knight: It is not in the public interest for the Secretary of State to hold such a list. However, information on endemic species is available from the following sources:

Groombridge, B & Jenkins, M. 2002. World atlas of biodiversity. University of California Press, Berkeley, Los Angeles and London

Farming

Dr. McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the cost of animal feeds was to farmers in England in the 2004–05 financial year. [33794]

Mr. Bradshaw: Data are not available for the 2004–05 financial year. However the cost of animal feed to farmers in England for the 2004 calendar year was £1.649 billion. This includes compound feed, straight concentrates and non-concentrates and also feed purchased from other farms.

Fixed Penalty Notices

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many fixed penalty notices have been issued by (a) community support officers and (b) police officers for dog fouling under paragraph 1(2)(c) of Schedule 4 to the Police Reform Act 2002 in each of the last four years, broken down by police authority. [29346]

Mr. Bradshaw: The figures for fixed penalty notices we collect annually makes no distinction between those fixed penalties issued by local authority officers and police community support officers.

Foot and Mouth (Brazil)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to house imports of meat from Brazil following the outbreak of foot and mouth disease there. [32302]

Mr. Bradshaw: Following outbreaks of foot and mouth disease in Brazil, action was taken to ban imports of meat from the affected areas which may present a risk.

All meat imported into the EU from third countries must enter at designated Border Inspection Posts (BIPs) where it is subject to veterinary inspections. All consignments are subject to documentary and identity checks and at least 20 per cent. of consignments undergo physical checks. These ensure import conditions are met and that the products remain in a satisfactory condition during transport.

Any consignment that does not meet EU requirements, including that which may have been affected by the ban would be rejected and re-exported or destroyed.

Identity Cards

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the (a) total and (b) net cost of (i) integrating the proposed identity card scheme into her Department's IT systems and (ii) the ongoing operation of the scheme within her Department. [31108]

Jim Knight: The Department has not finalised current best estimates of the cost of using the ID cards scheme to support the services which it oversees.

Landfill

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer of 28 November 2005, Official Report, column 16W, on landfill, what percentage of glass and plastic bottles were recycled in the last period for which figures are available. [33856]

Mr. Bradshaw: Results for 2004 from the trade organisations of British Glass and British Plastics Federation estimate 35 per cent. of glass and 8 per cent. of plastic bottles are recycled.

Live Animal Imports

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the extent to which live animals exported from Brazil are subsequently imported as meat products into the UK. [28112]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 14 November 2005]: The trade in individual animals can not be traced through overseas trade statistics.

The following table shows the total exports of live animals from Brazil split by country for 2004.

	Value (1000$)	Weight (Tonnes)
Bovine	7,339	6,941

Livery Yards

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will publish the arrangements for licensing of livery yards. [30829]

Mr. Bradshaw: Proposals for the licensing of livery yards were published on 14 October in the Regulatory Impact Assessment along with the Animal Welfare Bill. It is proposed that local authorities would be responsible for issuing licenses, which would be of three years duration and would have powers of entry and inspection. A code of practice will provide guidance to the livery yard owner on minimum welfare standards.

No decisions have been made as to the definition of a livery yard. A full consultation will be undertaken when our proposals have been finalised.

Marine Management Organisation

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the (a) remit and (b) responsibilities are of the proposed Marine Management Organisation; and which bodies are presently responsible for discharging each such responsibility. [31878]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 28 November 2005]: The establishment of a new public body, currently referred to as the Marine Management Organisation, is one option that is being considered as part of proposals for a Marine Bill.

A Bill may create new marine functions, delivery of some or all of which may best be carried out by a new public body. In such circumstances that new public body may also be well placed to deliver other functions that are presently delivered by, or on behalf of, Government in the marine area.

However, at this stage no decision has yet been made as to the need for such a public body. Correspondingly, no decisions have been made as to what its remit might be, or what responsibilities it might discharge.

The Government have taken a very open approach to its consideration of what a new public body might deliver, engaging stakeholders at the very earliest stage in policy development. This has been achieved through a stakeholder forum (26 September) and a series of bilateral meetings with key stakeholders.

A public consultation exercise in early 2006 will be an opportunity for the Government to offer more information on what role such a new public body might play, and for stakeholders to contribute to the policy development process on this and other elements of the Marine Bill.

National Register of Poultry Businesses

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs in what circumstances those who have released (a) poultry and (b) gamebirds into the wild will be required to register on the National Register of Poultry Businesses. [32004]

Mr. Bradshaw: It is a legal requirement for all commercial premises with 50 or more poultry to register. This applies whether the 50 poultry are of a single species or a combination of species, which include pheasants and partridge. For game bird premises, which are included under this requirement, the information supplied should only relate to captive birds and those still under the control of the keeper, and not to birds that may remain on the premises (for example, in a woodland area on the premises) after release. If production is seasonal, as with partridges and pheasants, only the usual number of birds when production/stock is at peak capacity should be recorded.

Organic Food

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had with supermarkets and other retailers regarding sourcing organic food from home suppliers. [32303]

Mr. Bradshaw: I have had discussions with ASDA, Tesco and Morrisons on organic issues, including sourcing organic food from home supplies. My noble Friend, the Minister for Farming and Food (The Lord Bach), who is now the Minister responsible for organic issues in the Department has recently met Sir Ken Morrison. My officials also have regular contact with representatives from supermarkets and retailers.

Pet Travel Scheme

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what controls against rabies form part of the pet travel scheme. [33789]

Mr. Bradshaw: The controls against rabies relating to dogs and cats entering the UK are as follows. They must first be fitted with a microchip, then vaccinated against rabies, but not before they are three months old, and then have a blood test carried out at a laboratory approved by the European Union to ensure the vaccination was satisfactory.

They must be issued with an EU pet passport or third country certificate. They may not enter or return to the UK until six calendar months have passed from the date the blood sample was taken that provided a satisfactory test result. They must enter the UK using an approved transport company on an authorised route which ensures they will have their microchip read and documentation checked before entering the country. In the six months before entering or returning to the UK they must not have travelled to countries other than those listed under EU Regulation 998/2003 on the movement of pet animals.

Ferrets are subject to broadly similar but not identical controls.

Dogs, cats and ferrets which do not comply with these rules can only enter this country if they spend up to six months in UK quarantine.

Quarantine

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether (a) criminal convictions and (b) a history of breaching quarantine procedures are taken into consideration before a licence to quarantine birds is granted to an individual; and whether a (i) criminal conviction for fraud and (ii) a history of breaching quarantine procedures precludes the attainment of a licence to quarantine birds. [28719]

Mr. Bradshaw: Checks are not carried out on individuals submitting applications for approval of quarantine premises.

The conditions for approving quarantine premises are laid down in Commission Decision 2000/666/EC. In addition to the prescribed standards which the premises themselves must meet, such as location and structure, to obtain approval for the centre or facility, the applicant has to demonstrate that the centre or facility meets the management requirements imposed by the Commission Decision, as well as welfare standards. Recommendations for approval or non-approval following a veterinary visit can take into account other known, relevant information.

Approvals are effective for one year and are dependent on all the laid-down conditions being met. Approvals may be withdrawn at any time should the approval requirements of the Commission Decision not be met.

Race Equality Impact Assessments

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many race equality impact assessments her Department completed between (a) April 2004 and March 2005 and (b) April 2005 and November 2005; and how many assessments in each period resulted in a change of policy. [32837]

Jim Knight: From April 2004 to March 2005, Defra completed nine race equality impact assessments (REIAs), eight of which resulted in policy changes.

From April 2005 to November 2005 Defra completed 10 REIAs, two of which resulted in policy changes.

It should be noted that while this was the formal number of REIAs notified to the Home Office, which monitors this area of work across Government, it is not possible to give a precise number. In Defra, multiple assessments have been carried out in a single policy area with the results being published under a single heading. Defra's Diversity Strategy is seeking to embed diversity into the business ensuring that impact assessments are intrinsic to business management, therefore, in some areas the impact assessment process is so embedded that they are not recorded separately. Therefore the numbers provided are lower than actually took place.

Refrigerators

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she plans to update the guidance on the recovery and disposal of controlled substances contained in refrigerators and freezers. [25005]

Mr. Bradshaw: This guidance was produced by the Environment Agency. It plans to review the guidance to coincide with the implementation of the treatment requirements of the waste electrical and electronic equipment (WEEE) directive.

Rights of Way

Mr. Laxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of how many kilometres of additional rights of way on foot there would be if the public were to have access to all of the coastline of England. [33590]

Jim Knight: I cannot currently provide a reliable estimate.

In line with Defra five year strategy we are looking at ways to improve access to the coast. We have asked the Countryside Agency, working together with its Natural England confederation partners English Nature and the Rural Development Service, to undertake research and analysis to identify possible options to improve access to the coast. One of the options to be investigated will include possible improvements to the rights of way network using existing rights of way legislation.

As part of this work, the Natural England confederation partners are undertaking an information gathering exercise to collect data on a national basis to gain a comprehensive picture of the coast and existing access provision. They will report on their findings in 2006 in advance of a public consultation document which we aim to issue in October 2006. At that stage I will be in a better position to estimate the extent to which public rights of way would need to increase, if that was the option chosen as the best way to improve access to the coast.

Waste Disposal

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the environmental effects of using incinerators to dispose of waste. [26495]

Mr. Bradshaw: Waste incineration with energy recovery offers a substantial climate change benefit compared to the alternative of landfill. This is a result of displaced fossil fuel from conventional power generation, reduced methane emissions from landfill and additional recovery of metals for recycling.

Defra has published an independent study, 'Review of the Environmental and Health Effects of Waste Management', which concluded that on the evidence from studies so far, the treatment of municipal solid waste—including by incineration—has at most a minor effect on human health and the environment. The report is available on Defra's website at: www.defra.gov.uk/environment/waste/research/health/index.htm.

Wildlife and Countryside Act

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many convictions for possession of birds listed on Schedule 4 to the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 which have relied on DNA samples as evidence have been successful; and in how many such cases her Department provided to the police registration details maintained under section 7 of the Act. [33555]

Jim Knight: The Department does not keep a record of the specific evidence used in prosecutions.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Adoption

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what average time adults have waited from application to completion of adoption proceedings of a child in (a) Southend, (b) Essex, (c) Greater London and (d) England and Wales in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available. [34294]

Ms Harman: I have been asked to reply.

Figures relating to adoptions dealt with in the county courts to the questions can be found in the following tables.

After-school Clubs

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what action she (a) is taking, and (b) plans to take to allow schools to run after-school clubs on their premises; and if she will make a statement. [34218]

Beverley Hughes: Many schools already provide a good range of after school clubs on their premises. The Education Act 2002 gave school governing bodies the power to provide community facilities on school premises which will enable those clubs to develop into formal child care offers where there is parental demand for those services.

The Government want all schools to provide access to extended services, including child care, a varied menu of study support, and before and after school clubs, by 2010, with half of all primaries and a third of all secondaries doing so by 2008.

To support schools in setting up and embedding extended services, we have committed £840 million up to 2008. These funds can be used flexibly to help address any practical issues that schools may be facing to develop extended services.

We have also asked the National Remodelling Team (NRT) within the Teacher Development Agency, working with voluntary sector partners such as Continyou and 4Children to support LAs and schools nationally as they implement extended services.

Autism (Funding)

John Penrose: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether guidelines will be published for local education authorities on funding for pupils with autism through (a) elective home learning, (b) dedicated autism-specific units within special schools and (c) adapted general provision within special schools. [34147]

Maria Eagle: We have no plans to publish such guidelines.

It is for local authorities to decide how to deploy the funds available to them to meet the needs of children with special educational needs (SEN), including those children with autistic spectrum disorders (ASDs). Budgeted expenditure by local authorities on meeting children's SEN in 2005–06 is £4.1 billion, some 13 per cent. of all education spending. In 2004 the Department published guidance "The management of SEN expenditure" providing information and suggested approaches to managing this expenditure. In 2002 the Department, with the Department of Health, published Good Practice Guidance on ASDs which gave pointers to good practice, including pointers on funding and home-based provision.

Local authorities have a duty to keep their arrangements for special educational provision under review and it is for them to take decisions about SEN provision in their schools, in consultation with the schools including special schools, and fund that provision appropriately. Funding for individual pupils with autism in special schools is through their SEN statements, which set out their needs and the provision required to meet those needs.

Bookstart (Kettering)

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children have participated in the Bookstart scheme in Kettering constituency, broken down by location; and how many books have been distributed. [34110]

Beverley Hughes: This is essentially a matter for Book trust. The total number of Bookstart packs issued in Kettering from 2002 to October 2005 is 6,206. This information cannot be further broken down by location.

Childcare Bill

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what financial provision her Department expects to make to (a) English and (b) Hertfordshire local authorities to enable them to fulfil their statutory duties in part 1 of the Childcare Bill. [33516]

Beverley Hughes: The Government have invested well over £17 billion on early years and child care services since 1997.

The new duties described in the Childcare Bill will be funded through their General Sure Start Grant (GSSG) allocations. An announcement of GSSG funding for 2006–07 and 2007–08 is due to be made shortly.

The substantial additional funding agreed in the spending review 2004, and pre-Budget report (PBR) for 2004, will enable governmental spending on Sure Start to reach £1.8 billion in 2007–08, around double the 2004–05 figure. This represents an average real annual increase of 24 per cent.

Consultants

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list departmental projects conducted by consultants in each year since 2000; what the cost was in each case; and what the total cost of employing consultants was in each year. [29103]

Maria Eagle: No projects have been conducted by consultants for the Department for Education and skills in the years since 2000.

With regard to the total cost of employing consultants in the years since 2000, I refer the hon. Member to the answers given by the Minister of State for Lifelong Learning, Further and Higher Education on 21 July 2005, Official Report, column 2057W, and Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Children, Young People and Families on 23 June 2005, Official Report, column 1168W.

Dental Schools

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 3 November 2005, Official Report, column 1310W, on dental schools, how many of the temporary allocation places are the subject of bids to make them permanent; and at which schools the places are. [32158]

Bill Rammell: Due to the competitive nature of the bidding process, we are unable to release details about the bids from individual dental schools. However, all the dental schools that received a temporary allocation of dental student numbers have submitted bids for permanent places. In total, an increase of 142 dental student places is being sought by the existing dental schools.

The bids from existing dental schools, together with the bids to support new dental schools, will be considered by the Higher Education Funding Council for England (HEFCE)/Department of Health Dental Joint Implementation Group (JIG) on 9 December. Recommendations from the JIG will be put to the HEFCE board in January 2006.

Departmental Estate

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills which buildings and sites used by her Department and related agencies (a) have ceased to be used in the last year and (b) will be closed under plans for relocation. [31773]

Bill Rammell: The Department for Education and Skills have not ceased to use any buildings and sites in the last year or have buildings and sites that will be closed under current plans for relocation.

Departmental Expenditure

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much the Department and its agencies have spent on (a) the design and production of new logos and (b) employing external (i) public relations and (ii) graphic design agencies in each year since 2000, broken down by project. [33216]

Bill Rammell: It would only be possible to provide details of expenditure on design and production of new logos at disproportionate cost.

Expenditure by year, on external public relations for my Department is listed in the following table. The detailed breakdown of expenditure by project (from January 2001) has been placed in the Library for reference.

Financial year	Expenditure on Public Relations (£ million)
2000–01	0.8
2001–02	1.7
2002–03	2.4
2003–04	1.9
2004–05	0.9
2005–06 (Expenditure to date for 2005–06)	0.3

Expenditure on graphic designs agencies is not identified separately from other design costs and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) who the Director of Human Resources is in her Department; what relevant specialist qualifications he or she holds; and what the details are of his or her career to date; [26324]

(2) who is responsible for managing the Estate of her Department; what relevant specialist qualification he or she holds; and what the details are of his or her career to date; [26325]

(4) when she will answer questions (a) 26324, (b) 26325 and (c) 26326 tabled by the hon. Member for Stratford-on-Avon on 3 November 2005. [33010]

Maria Eagle: In response to the hon. Members question 33010 the replies are as follows:

The Director General: Finance, Analysis and Strategy is Peter Makeham, who holds a BA(Hons) in Economics and Economic History and an MA in Labour Economics. His experience in the civil service includes spells in the treasury and the Department for Trade and Industry, and a secondment during the early part of his career to Unilever.

The Director General: Corporate Services and Development is Susan Thomas, who holds a BA(Hons) in Political Science and is a Fellow of the Chartered Institute of Personnel Development. Her background is in local government and the further education sector. The remit of her post includes overall responsibility for both human resources and facilities management.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many staff in her Department have been relocated into London and the South East in each of the last five years for which records are available. [31774]

Maria Eagle: My Department and sponsored organisations are implementing the Lyons Review recommendations to relocate around 800 posts from the Department and its non-departmental public bodies out of London and the South East by 2010.

There have been no relocations of posts in my Department into London and the South East since we began to implement the Lyons Review in 2004. There are no figures available for relocations before that time.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans she has to relocate staff in her Department and related agencies into London and the south-east. [31775]

Maria Eagle: My Department and sponsored organisations have no plans to relocate staff into London and the south-east.

Bill Rammell: The Department's accounting system does not separately identify private organisations who receive grant and the information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost. A list of bodies identified as in the voluntary sector which have received (a) under £5,000 and (b) over £5,000 in direct grants to date in 2005–06 are as follows.

Extended Services

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate she has made of the number of schools in (a) Northamptonshire and (b) Kettering constituency that will be delivering extended services in (i) 2006, (ii) 2007 and (iii) 2008; and to how many children and parents she expects such provision will be available. [34108]

Beverley Hughes: This Government wants all schools to provide access to a core offer of extended services by 2010, with half of all primary and a third of all secondary schools doing so by 2008. We want to see at least 2,500 schools providing access to the core offer by September 2006. The core offer, which should be available to all parents and pupils of the school, comprises: high quality childcare; a varied menu of study support activities; parenting support programmes; swift and easy referral to a wide range of specialised support services; and wider community access. It will be for individual local authorities, in discussion with all schools in their area, to take a strategic approach to developing access to the core offer through schools. This will include determining how many primary and secondary schools develop access to the core offer in each year. On 29 September 2005 my Department published its report on the baseline survey of extended services in schools which it commissioned earlier in the year. The survey showed that nationally the vast majority of schools were providing access to some form of extended activity. The survey did not provide figures at local authority level.

Further Education

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 31 October 2005, Official Report, columns 817–8W, on further education, how the categories and figures given relate to the categories and figures in Annex B of the Learning and Skills Council Grant letter for funded institutions. [31267]

Bill Rammell: In the LSC Grant letter for 2006–07 the resources for (i) the Learner Support Fund, (ii) Care to Learn, (iii) Dance and Drama Awards, (iv) Adult Learning Grant and (v) Career Development Loans are all included in the Learner Support Funds line of Block B. The education maintenance allowance resources make up Block E.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans her Department has to review the levels of funding allocated to further education against demand for places in (a) Lancashire and (b) England. [34124]

Bill Rammell: Our 14–19 and Skills White Papers clearly articulate our priorities for post-14 education and training. Higher participation among young people must have the highest priority, alongside helping disadvantaged adults gain basic and Level 2 skills for employability and progression to Level 3. Starting from these strategic objectives we have reviewed the SR2004 settlement announced in April 2004 and we have agreed a funding strategy with the LSC for the next two years that is driven by policy priorities and the successes of the sector.

On the 21 October, I made an announcement, setting out the Government's strategic direction for the learning and skills sector for the coming period. My main purpose for doing so was to ensure the 2006/07 funding allocations process began with a clear and concise message on the principles that will underpin funding over the next two years.

In addition, the Learning and Skills Council (LSC) published 'Priorities for Success'-a document that sets out the funding strategy for the next two years in more detail. This document is available on the LSC's website.

Although more funding will be going into the sector, we will focus funding even more strongly on key priorities of raising participation and achievement 14–19 and driving down the skills deficit in the adult workforce. This will mean that less provision outside these priority areas can be supported at previous levels, and that there has to be a new balance of responsibilities between government, employers and learners to achieve this.

We confirmed our overall funding to the LSC for 2006–07 in our grant letter of 30 October 2005 and the LSC published its annual statement of priorities in November. The LSC as part of its business cycle conducts an annual stock-take of learning and skills in England and at regional level, working with Regional Skills Partnerships, identifies regional skills needs. Building on this national and regional activity, local LSC teams analyse anticipated demand and prepare local plans which are then reviewed at regional and national level before budgets are confirmed.

These processes ensure that within our available funding we address the needs of learners, employers and partners in a framework that meets our strategic objectives.

Higher Education

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what was the proportion of students on higher education courses from social groups (a) D and (b) E in each year since 1997. [24545]

Bill Rammell: The latest available figures on the social background of students entering higher education are given in the following tables. The categories used to measure social background were revised in 2002/03: the socio-economic group classification was introduced to replace the social class groupings, but the two classifications are not directly comparable.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of the new funding that will be provided for higher education in September 2006 she expects will be spent on staff salaries. [32759]

Bill Rammell: Universities are autonomous and responsible for determining their own academic and administrative affairs, including deciding what to pay their own staff. Pay and conditions of service are subject to negotiations between employers, their staff and their representative trade union bodies. The Government play no part in this.

There are many reasons underlying our higher education reforms, of which the variable fees policy forms a part: one is to provide institutions with a secure income stream, which is under their own control. The Government are not in the business of micro-managing how institutions' fee income is spent; institutions are best placed to make these decisions—including, for example, how much to put into student bursaries, to enable more students to participate in HE, and how much to put into staff pay and conditions. They will also want to consider how best to invest in their infrastructure to meet the needs of today's and tomorrow's learners. Only institutions can sensibly decide on the balance between different priorities, in the light of their individual circumstances.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what targets she has set for participation rates in (a) higher education and (b) first degree courses for each year to 2015. [34232]

Bill Rammell: The participation target we have set is to make progress towards 50 per cent. of 18–30 year olds having had experience of higher education by 2010.

We report regularly on progress against this target, but we do not have interim targets for the years leading up to 2010. We do not have a target for participation rates for later years.

Learning and Skills Council

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills under which category in band B of the Learning and Skills Council budget the Union Learning Fund comes. [31261]

Bill Rammell: The £12.5 million funds for the Union Learning Fund are included in the overall £76.744 million Capacity and Infrastructure line of Block B of the LSC Grant letter for 2006–07.

Maladministration

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many payments for maladministration have been made by (a) her Department, (b) its agencies, (c) its non-departmental public bodies and (d) other bodies for which her Department has responsibility in each of the last five years; and if she will make a statement. [32243]

Bill Rammell: It is the policy of the Department for Education and Skills, its non-departmental public bodies and its sponsored organisations to make financial redress in accordance with the guidance set out in Chapter 18.7 and Annexes 18.1 and 18.2 of "Government Accounting."

However, the information you requested is not held centrally by the Department and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Non-departmental Public Bodies

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list her Department's advisory non-departmental public bodies which the Government are required (a) to consult prior to legislative proposals and (b) to publish any response to advice received from such bodies. [20143]

Bill Rammell: My Department sponsors three advisory non-departmental public bodies: the Independent Advisory Group on Teenage Pregnancy (IAGTP), the School Teachers Review Body (STRB) and the Teachers' TV Board of Governors. The Government are not required to consult any of them prior to legislative proposals. The Government are not required to but does respond to advice from the IAGTP and STRB. It is also expected that the Teachers' TV Board of Governors will publish the response to its advice following the publication of its first annual report at the end of 2005.

Science Graduates

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many students have graduated in (a) chemistry, (b) physics and (c) mathematics or further mathematics in each year since 1990; [32624]

(2) what assessment she has made of the impact of trends in the numbers of physics and chemistry graduates on (a) science and technology industries and (b) the teaching profession. [32626]

Bill Rammell: The table shows the annual number of first degree qualifiers in the Physics, Chemistry and Mathematics from 1989/90 to the latest available data. Please note discontinuities in the time-series at 2000/01 and 2002/03, as explained in the table notes.

A review by Sir Gareth Roberts[1] demonstrated skill shortages within the science and technology industries and in response we have launched the 10-year science and innovation investment framework with the specific aim of attracting more students into science and engineering. The first annual report was published in July.

Falling numbers of chemistry and physics graduates may also have contributed to higher-than-average vacancy rates for science teachers[2]. In response, science graduates studying for Postgraduate Certificates of Education are now eligible for training bursaries of £7,000 starting courses in 2005, which will rise to £9,000 for those starting in 2006. If they go on to teach science in a maintained school they become eligible after completing their induction for a 'golden hello' of £5,000.

As stated at the recent evidence session on strategic science provision, we have noted HEFCE's advice that university science departments are not in crisis. In fact provisional UCAS data on 2005/06 entry indicates that there is a higher than average increase of 10 per cent. + in the number of students entering science (including physics and chemistry), technology, engineering and mathematics. However, we are not complacent and we will keep this under review to see if more action is needed.

Special Educational Needs

Mr. Cameron: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will publish the letter sent recently to all local education authorities setting out the statutory duties under the Education Act 1996 regarding special educational needs. [33933]

Maria Eagle: The Department for Education and Skills writes to Chief Education Officers from time to time about issues concerning the special educational needs legislation. The letter to Chief Education Officers and Directors of Children's Services dated 15 November 2005 is the most recent of such letters. It will be published on the Teachernet website www.teachernet.gov.uk/sen.

Student Loans

Martin Linton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many settlement figures were issued to borrowers by the Student Loans Company Ltd. in 2003–04 (a) on the basis of payslips sent in by the borrower showing evidence of payments and (b) on the basis of other information. [32555]

Bill Rammell: It is not possible to report on the basis of the two categories requested as borrowers can ask for settlement quotations without providing any evidence. In the financial year 2003–04 there were 61,005 settlement quotations issued to 39,729 customers.

Martin Linton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the cost to public funds was on the latest date for which figures are available per (a) loan and (b) borrower of calculating settlement figures for borrowers wishing to pay off their loan with the Student Loans Company Ltd. in one payment. [32596]

Bill Rammell: Full costs for this work are not available.

Martin Linton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what advice she has given the Student Loans Company Ltd. about helping borrowers to pay off their loans with the company in a lump sum; and if she will make a statement. [32557]

Bill Rammell: Borrowers can repay their income contingent student loans at any time. The Student Loans Company has provided an online calculator to assist borrowers in assessing their loan balance at any time between the annual statements SLC sends borrowers based on reconciliation by Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs of employers' annual returns of loan repayments.

Sure Start

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children living in disadvantaged areas of (a) Staffordshire and (b) Tamworth constituency are participating in Sure Start schemes. [33732]

Beverley Hughes: There are approximately 8,400 disadvantaged children aged 0–4 living in Staffordshire. At present around 4,750 children under the age of five are within reach of a Sure Start local programme or a Sure Start children's centre in Staffordshire. In addition, 425 new full day care places have been created through the Neighbourhood Nursery Initiative.

Tamworth Sure Start local programme currently delivers services to almost 450 children aged 0–3. The programme is expected to develop into a Sure Start children's centre in Phase 2 of the children's centre programme between 2006–08. The Manna House Neighbourhood Nursery in Tamworth offers 28 full day care places for children from birth to school age.

All disadvantaged children living in Staffordshire will have access to a Sure Start children's centre by March 2008.

Teacher Vacancies

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) full-time and (b) part-time teacher vacancies there are in (i) secondary, (ii) primary and (iii) special schools in Southend; and if she will make a statement. [34131]

Ruth Kelly: The following table provides the number of full and part-time teacher vacancies in nursery, primary, secondary and special schools in Southend local authority in January 2005, the latest information available.

Number of full-time and part-time vacancies[1] in maintained nursery and primary, secondary and special schools in Southend, January 2005

The hon. Member may wish to know that I am today publishing my response to the fifteenth report of the School Teachers' Review Body (STRB). Copies are available in the Vote Office and in the Library of the House of Lords and at http://www.teachernet.gov.uk.

In making its recommendations, the STRB was required to have regard to the matters set out in the remit letter of 10 March 2005, which included, among other matters, the need to have regard to the enhancement of recruitment and retention. The fifteenth STRB report deals with some very important matters affecting teachers' pay, including the pay award from 2006–08, and I am most grateful for the careful and detailed attention the STRB has given to these matters. The STRB recommendations are set out followed in each case by my response.

I am seeking consultation comments on the report and my response by 10 January 2006.

Pay Award

The STRB has recommended the following:

We recommend:

an increase of 2.5 per cent. from September 2006 and a further increase of 2.5 per cent. from September 2007 in the values of the leadership group pay scale;

an increase of 2.5 per cent. from September 2006 and a further increase of 2.5 per cent. from September 2007 in the values of the main pay scale and upper pay scale for qualified teachers, the pay scale for unqualified teachers and the new 18 point pay scale for Advanced Skills Teachers;

a slightly enhanced pay increase for certain points on the main pay scale in bands A and B, as outlined in Appendix C; and that should the average rate of headline inflation for the 12 months preceding April 2007 (i.e. April 2006 to March 2007) or April 2008 (i.e. April 2007 to March 2008) fall below 1.75 per cent. or exceed 3.25 per cent., any of the consultees can ask the STRB to consider the case for seeking a remit from the Secretary of State of State to review teachers' pay.

This is a central recommendation, which is key in terms of recruitment to and retention in the teaching profession as well as its impact on schools' budgets. It is of crucial importance that the significant investment this Government has made in public sector pay in general and in the pay of teachers in particular continues to produce dividends. We must be confident that any further increases can be justified and afforded.

An award of 2.5 per cent. could not be considered acceptable on the basis that it represented anticipated inflation over the period to which the pay award relates, or that an award at this level is necessary to protect teachers from a real terms pay cut. In its latest Inflation Report, the Bank of England forecasts CPI inflation to fall to just below the 2 per cent. target next year and then to be close to the 2 per cent. target in subsequent years.

However, it is clear from the report that the STRB has given close consideration to a range of evidence relating to the overall labour market position of teachers and has reached a balanced judgment as to a suitable level of award for the next period, taking into account both appropriateness and affordability. In particular, the STRB has noted its concerns about the need to ensure a continuing supply of high quality teachers, consolidating the improvements made in recruiting and retaining good teachers at a time of change, and some emerging evidence of recruitment and retention issues in relation to specific groups of teachers.

In the light of this analysis, I propose to accept the recommendation for teachers, including the slightly enhanced increase for teachers at certain points on the main scale in Inner and Outer London. I also accept the STRB's argument regarding leadership group pay and agree that the same rise for this group is appropriate.

I also accept the basis of the review mechanism as set out above.

Leadership Group

The STRB has recommended the following:

We recommend:

that the Secretary of State remit us to look fundamentally at the leadership group and how its changing role and responsibilities should be reflected in its future pay structure; to provide a sound evidence base for that remit, that a comprehensive independent study be carried out by December 2006 on the roles, responsibilities, structures and reward systems for the leadership group, looking at both current practice and likely future developments, and including at least the following issues:

new models of headship;

the role and functions of deputy and assistant heads;

administrative support;

recruitment planning;

type of contract; and reward.

I very much welcome the STRB's recommendation for an independent study into the developing roles and responsibilities of the leadership group. This is very timely given the need for schools to respond effectively to Government priorities in England such as greater personalisation, extended schools, Every Child Matters and the 14 to 19 agenda, and to initiatives in these and other areas in Wales. Schools will need to become more outward facing, more flexible and, as we have set out in the Schools White Paper for England, work far more collaboratively with others, including parents, if we are to make the next step change in raising attainment and opening opportunities. I want to make sure that we can support our leadership teams effectively and have the right people in place to take forward these changes. For this reason I will wish to explore with partners the extent to which the terms of reference for such a review should not only encompass but also go further than those outlined by the STRB. I will also wish to consider the arrangements for handling the review, including whether the proposed timetable is appropriate, or whether it should be run in parallel with a general review of teachers' duties.

Excellent Teacher Scheme (ETS)

The STRB has recommended the following:

We recommend that:

the Excellent Teacher Scheme be reviewed by December 2008 at the latest and that the results of the review be remitted to this Review Body for appropriate consideration and recommendation;

the salary for the ETS to be a spot salary, as previously recommended;

the spot salary be determined by individual schools and services within an ETS salary range;

the ETS salary range from September 2006 be £35,000 to £45,000 in pay bands B to D, and extend additionally to £50,000 in pay band A; the minimum and maximum of the ETS salary range and ETS spot salaries determined prior to September 2007 be increased by 2.5 per cent. in September 2007.

The remit to the STRB invited it to make recommendations on what the appropriate spot salary for Excellent Teachers should be in the respective pay regions, following the recommendations in its Fourteenth Report. I am grateful to the STRB for its advice.

The Excellent Teacher Scheme is a welcome career pathway for teachers who are excellent classroom practitioners and is an important addition to the teacher's career structure, to which I remain committed. The STRB has suggested that the Excellent Teacher scheme should be reviewed by December 2008. I believe it would be helpful to keep the scheme under review but that it would be most helpful to do so in the context of our wider plans for a new teacher professionalism and the development of the career structure of the profession as a whole. I will give further thought to the arrangements and timing.

The STRB has made a number of recommendations about the salary for Excellent Teachers. The first Excellent Teachers will be appointed from September 2006 and schools are already considering whether to include Excellent Teacher posts in their staffing structures and how many Excellent Teacher posts they need. It is important that schools have a clear understanding about the potential salary implications of Excellent Teacher posts so they can plan effectively; that the arrangements for determining Excellent Teacher salaries are unambiguous and can be implemented effectively; and that the approach to Excellent Teacher salaries is consistent with our approach to teachers' pay more generally.

In the light of these considerations, I propose to defer introduction of the salary ranges proposed by the STRB until September 2008. I propose that in the interim there should be a single salary rate for each pay region for those holding excellent teacher posts. The level of these salaries should be those proposed by the STRB in its Fourteenth Report, increased in line with the general increases to teachers' pay scales. I believe that this approach will give schools the early clarity they will need to help with the introduction of ETS posts. It will also allow us the opportunity to develop the guidance they will need to help introduce the greater flexibility which the STRB proposes—and which in principle I welcome—in the light of our ongoing review of the operation of the scheme and of further work to be done on standards and duties for the profession as a whole.

Teaching and Learning Responsibility (TLR) Payments

The STRB has recommended the following:

We recommend:

an increase of 2.5 per cent. from September 2006 and a further increase of 2.5 per cent. from September 2007 in the minimum and maximum of the two TLR ranges;

an increase of 2.5 per cent. from September 2006 and a further increase of 2.5 per cent. from September 2007 in the value of individual teachers' TLR payments.

I welcome these recommendations, which will enable all those receiving TLRs over this period, at whatever level in the relevant ranges those TLRs have been set locally, to receive the same percentage uplift.

Special Educational Needs (SEN) Allowances

The STRB has recommended the following:

We recommend:

an increase of 2.5 per cent. from September 2006 and a further increase of 2.5 per cent. from September 2007 in the value of SEN allowances; that the Department draw up guidance, in consultation with all interested parties, including BATOD, on how the payment of higher-level SEN allowances might take account of the enhancement of the teaching of SEN pupils brought about by specialist qualifications.

I welcome the recommended application of the same percentage uplift to SEN allowances as to the other parts of the pay system. I note that the STRB has repeated its recommendation about guidance on specialist qualifications, which was made in 2004 and which was put on hold pending the review of the management allowance system. I am content that this matter should now be discussed with relevant parties.

Unattached Teachers

We recommend that:

the Department investigate the pay and conditions of unattached teachers (including such teachers in the leadership group) in comparison with other teachers. The investigation should be completed in time to inform our next review of teachers' pay.

The STRB has taken the view that that the pay and conditions of unattached teachers need investigation, because of concerns that unattached teachers do not progress as quickly as other teachers. I recognise this concern and agree that an investigation would be helpful. I propose therefore to arrange such an investigation in the course of 2006.

Part Time Teachers

The STRB has recommended the following:

We recommend that:

the Department undertake further work in association with interested parties to consider the issues in standardising pay and conditions for part time teachers and identify possible solutions;

the conclusions of this work come back to this Review Body for consideration and recommendation.

I welcome the STRB's consideration of the issues facing part time teachers; and note its recommendation that further work should be undertaken on this. I will want to consider, with partners, the most effective way of undertaking this work.

Teachers' Professional Development and Pay Progression

The STRB has recommended the following:

We recommend that:

the outcomes of teachers' CPD and, if appropriate, their contribution to others' development, be taken into account as part of a range of evidence when schools assess performance for pay progression purposes; and the Department require schools and services to include details in their pay policy about how performance is assessed for pay purposes and how different factors, including the outcomes of CPD and contribution to others' development, are taken into account.

I welcome the STRB's recommendation that the outcomes of teachers' CPD should be taken into account as part of a range of evidence when schools assess performance for pay progression purposes. I want all teachers to be engaged in effective, sustained and relevant professional development throughout their careers. CPD should not be a "bolt-on", short-term experience or narrowly defined as "going on courses" but a continuous planned series of activities designed to improved a teacher's knowledge and skills. Some of the most effective professional development is teachers learning from other teachers in the classroom and I want all teachers to be able to benefit from and contribute to coaching and mentoring as they progress in their careers as part of their professional development. I believe the approach recommended by the STRB will help to incentivise, recognise and reward teachers' participation in effective CPD and help to ensure that the professional development activities are planned and evaluated in schools.

It is important that the arrangements for reflecting assessments of performance in decisions about pay are fair and transparent and can operate effectively at school level without being onerous. I strongly agree that details about how schools and services will assess performance for pay purposes should be included in their pay policy, though I have reservations about introducing a requirement. I will therefore want to give further thought to how best to support this, and invite further views.

Teachers' Professional Responsibilities

The STRB has recommended the following:

We recommend that:

consultees consider the fundamental question of whether a description of teachers' professional role and responsibilities is needed (specifically whether it is needed in the STPCD), and present us with their written evidence and views by the end of August 2006.

I am grateful to the STRB for its advice. I accept the STRB's recommendation that consultees should consider the fundamental question of whether a description of teachers' professional role and responsibilities is needed. The current approach of describing professional duties in the STPCD is intended to provide a national framework for local decision-making and to help to clarify the range of responsibilities that are appropriate to different roles. I invite comments on whether it is appropriate to move away from the current approach of describing professional duties in the STPCD at this stage.

I also believe that there is a need to review the description of teachers' professional duties provided in the STPCD to reflect the recent changes in school and the role of the profession in the 21st century and that further thought should be given to this. I intend to discuss how this can be taken forward with partners.

Pay of Advanced Skills Teachers in Mathematics and Science in Secondary Schools

I note that the STRB has not made any recommendation in relation to the remit request that they consider if any changes should be made to the pay of mathematics and science ASTs in secondary schools. However, in noting this I maintain that there are very strong reasons for continuing to pursue the objective behind the remit which was to raise both the quantity and the quality of graduates in these subjects entering and remaining in the teaching profession. Also, I would not wish this to constrain the use of such a focused approach to the determination of pay in the future in appropriate circumstances.

Pay arrangements for Fast Track teachers

I note that the STRB has not made any recommendation in relation to the remit request to recommend whether any modifications are required to the pay arrangements of Fast Track teachers. I agree with the suggestion that we continue to encourage Fast Track teachers to undertake at least one post in a challenging school, but how to recognise the leadership impact of Fast Track teachers, and the way in which this can help to raise standards in our schools, remains an important objective for us.

Pay of Teachers in Challenging Schools

Finally, I note that the STRB has not made any recommendation in relation to the remit request that they consider other factors which should be taken into account in determining career and pay progression, specifically accelerated pay progression for teachers working in more challenging circumstances. The STRB highlighted the need for schools to make greater use of the flexibilities already in the pay system. This matter remains a significant concern and I will want to consider whether more can be done to raise awareness of the flexibilities provided by the current provisions and how they could be applied in this context.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Civil Service Relocation (Scotland)

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many departmental civil service jobs have been relocated to Scotland in each year since 2001. [32376]

Jim Fitzpatrick [holding answer 28 November 2005]: The Office of Deputy Prime Minister only began monitoring relocation away from its London Headquarters in September 2003. In this time, there has been no reported relocation of departmental civil service jobs to Scotland.

Council Tax

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what estimate the Valuation Office Agency has made of the value of a sea view from a coastal property for council tax purposes. [34142]

Mr. Woolas: None.

David Taylor: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much council tax must be paid by owners of dwellings that are empty after a year; and who sets that level. [34281]

Mr. Woolas: The council tax discount can be set on second homes at any point between 50 per cent. and 10 per cent. and on long-term empty homes at any point between 50 per cent. and zero. Second homes are homes which are furnished and no-one's main residence, while long-term empty homes are homes which are substantially unfurnished and in general have been unoccupied for at least six months (a substantially unfurnished unoccupied home is generally exempt from council tax for up to six months).

Local billing authorities are responsible for setting the council tax discount on second and long-term empty homes.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the council tax is for each band in (a) each London borough and (b) each local authority in Essex; and what it was in each of the last three years. [34318]

Mr. Woolas: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member on 11 July 2005, Official Report, column 795W.

Departmental Expenditure

Martin Horwood: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much his Office and its agencies have spent on (a) the design and production of new logos and (b) employing external (i) public relations and (ii) graphic design agencies in each year since 2000, broken down by project. [33202]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The information requested is not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Finance

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the real terms percentage increase in allocated resources for his Department (a) was for the period 1997–98 to 2004–05 and (b) is estimated to be between 2005–06 and 2007–08 (i) for each period and (ii) for each year. [31034]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister was established following the Machinery of Government changes on 29 May 2002. The following table sets out in real terms the percentage increase in expenditure from 2002–03 to 2004–05, the increase in allocated resources between 2005–06 and 2007–08 and the increases for each of those years.

The figures cover total resource and capital spending on the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's main programmes and on local government.

Percentage

Period	Increase in expenditure/allocation[1]
2002–03 to 2004–05	28
2005–06 to 2007–08	15
2003–04	[2]18
2004–05	9
2005–06	10
2005–07	6
2007–08	8

[1] 2005–06 onwards.
[2] This increase was due in part to the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister taking on full responsibility for the Supporting People programme of some £1.8 billion.

Departmental Staff

Dr. Cable: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has to relocate staff in his Department and related agencies into London and the South East. [31752]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has a general presumption against locating in London and the South East. However, as an exception to this, ODPM Central will on current planning assumptions relocate another nine posts to its existing Hastings office. A further four posts are expected to be relocated to the Government Office for London and two posts to the Government Office for the South East in order to undertake work closer to the communities involved. In addition, so as to make best use of their existing estate, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's non-departmental public bodies have plans to relocate another 33 posts within London and the South East.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many staff in his Department have been relocated into London and the South East in each of the last five years for which records are available. [31753]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Office of Deputy Prime Minister only began monitoring relocation away from its London Headquarters in September 2003. In this time, ODPM Central has relocated three posts to its existing Hastings office, on the grounds of Hastings' level of deprivation and regeneration areas status.

In line with the Office of Deputy Prime Minister's policies for improving regional performance, the majority of our moves to date have been to the Government Offices. This has allowed us to make use of existing ODPM estate and greatly reduce the costs of relocation. Where posts have been dispersed around all the regions in order to undertake work closer to the communities involved; some have moved to the Government Offices for London and the South East. Such dispersal accounts for the seven posts already relocated to the Government Office for London and five posts to the Government Office for the South East.

The relocation of the above posts is an exception to the Office of Deputy Prime Minister's presumption against locating in London and the South East.

Departmental Tendering Policy

Martin Horwood: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what his policy is on including (a) ethical and (b) environmental factors in tenders for services. [33337]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister takes its responsibilities on environmental and ethical issues very seriously and the documentation it sends out with its invitations to tender make it known that the ODPM requires all of its potential suppliers to comply with key environmental and ethical issues and that these will in conjunction with other criteria be used in evaluating their tender response.

Deprivation (Tamworth)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what funding streams are available to tackle areas of deprivation in Tamworth. [33810]

Mr. Woolas: Tamworth was in receipt of Single Regeneration Budget (up to 2005) to help address deprivation in the Glascote area of the town, the one super output area in Tamworth that is among England's 10 per cent. most deprived.

The Learning and Skills Council, Sure Start and Test-Bed Learning Communities all offer funding streams (via the Department for Education and Skills) that contribute to tackling deprivation in Tamworth. Staffordshire Learning and Skills Council (in partnership with others) is currently supporting the development of a new vocational skills centre in Glascote. This will help to re-engage local people.

Transitional ERDF Objective 2, ESF Objective 3 and aspects of Home Office funding streams also contribute to tackling deprivation in Tamworth.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what programmes the Neighbourhood Renewal Fund has funded in Tamworth. [33811]

Mr. Woolas: Tamworth is not in receipt of Neighbourhood Renewal Fund (NRF). Eligibility for NRF is determined by the Indices of Deprivation.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what proportion of spending by (a) Northumberland county council, (b) Tynedale district council and (c) Castle Morpeth borough council has been financed from council tax in each year since 16 January 1996. [34023]

Mr. Woolas: The percentage of Revenue Expenditure by Northumberland county council, Tynedale district council and Castle Morpeth borough council that has been financed from council tax in each financial year since 1996–97 is tabled as follows.

Percentage

	Northumberland county council	Tynedale district council	Castle Morpeth borough council
1996–97	23.0	38.8	38.8
1997–98	25.0	44.4	43.7

The data are as reported by local authorities and are taken from Revenue Summary (RS) returns for 1996–97 to 2003–04, and Revenue Account budget (RA) returns for 2004–05 and 2005–06.

The definition of council expenditure used here is that expenditure funded from Aggregate External Finance (AEF), council tax and authorities' reserves.

Comparisons across years may not be valid due to changes in the method of reporting the information. In particular, the outturn data for 1996–97 to 2002–03 have been calculated on a non-FRS (Financial Reporting Standard) 17 basis while the outturn data for 2003–04 has been calculated on an FRS 17 basis. The budget data for 2004–05 and 2005–06 are a mix of FRS 17 and non-FRS 17. This is because for their 2004–05 and 2005–06 budget forms local authorities, after consultation, were given the option to complete their forms either on a non-FRS 17 basis or on an FRS 17 basis. Hence, figures for different years may not be directly comparable.

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what proportion of revenue spending by (a) Northamptonshire county council, (b) Kettering borough council and (c) Daventry district council has been financed from the council tax in each year since 1 January 1996. [34102]

Mr. Woolas: The percentage of Revenue Expenditure by Northamptonshire county council, Kettering borough council and Daventry district council that has been financed from council tax in each financial year since 1996–97 is in the following table.

Percentage

	Northamptonshire county council	Kettering borough council	Daventry district council
1996–97	23.2	29.8	30.5
1997–98	24.1	34.4	33.2
1998–99	24.5	35.4	26.0

Neighbourhood Wardens

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what statutory powers community and neighbourhood wardens have to deal with incidents of crime and disorder. [33164]

Mr. Woolas: Warden schemes may use local authority powers to issue fixed penalty notices for offences such as dog fouling, littering and parking violations. These powers are largely derived from the Environment Protection Act 1990, the Dogs Act 1996, and other local byelaws.

The Anti-Social Behaviour Act 2003 and the Community Safety Accreditation Scheme provides powers to accredited persons, such as wardens. A list of these powers is as follows:

Powers that may be designated to accredited persons by a chief officer of police:

Power to require name and address

Power to deal with begging

Power to require name and address for antisocial behaviour

Power to require name and address for road traffic offences

Power to require persons aged under 18 to surrender alcohol

Peabody Trust

Simon Hughes: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the effects of the change in the number of the Peabody Trust's social rented homes on (a) homelessness and (b) overcrowding in London. [33370]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister does not carry out analysis of homelessness or overcrowding data in relation to the stock holdings of individual registered social landlords (RSLs). Local authorities have a statutory responsibility for reviewing homelessness and the resources available to tackle it in their area, in consultation with RSLs and other agencies, in order to inform their homelessness strategies.

Race Equality Impact Assessments

Keith Vaz: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many Race Equality Impact Assessments his Office completed between (a) April 2004 and March 2005 and (b) April 2005 and November 2005; and how many assessments in each period resulted in a change of policy. [32834]

Mr. Woolas: Between April 2004 and March 2005 eight race equality impact assessments were carried out within the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (not including agencies). Between April and November 2005, two full and one partial race impact assessments were completed. No changes in policy occurred as a result of the assessments. In order to assist staff in carrying out these assessments, the Equality and Diversity Unit (EDU) ran a series of 32 workshops, which were attended by several hundred staff members. Guidance on how to complete the assessments has also been placed on the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's intranet.

There are currently three race equality impact assessments under way in the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister, and the ODPM has agreed to conduct a series of 14 assessments across a wide range of the ODPM's existing policy and programme areas as part of an 18-month call-off contract. The contract's aim is both to conduct race equality impact assessments, and to build capacity in ODPM officials to carry them out subsequently.

Regeneration (Oldham)

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the effect on the regeneration of the local area of the sale by Legal and General of land at the Alexandra Retail Park in Oldham. [34615]

Mr. Woolas: The local authority is currently considering the options for the regeneration of the area. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is working with Oldham MBC to consider the best way forward. We shall be looking at the recently published inspector's report into the revised UDP and taking forward the Under-served Markets Project for which Oldham has been shortlisted.

Standards Board for England

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the work of the Standards Board for England; and if he will make a statement. [34341]

Mr. Woolas: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (ODPM) monitors the progress of the Standards Board for England as part of its on-going sponsorship role for the board, and we are also currently considering the recommendations of the Committee on Standards in Public Life and of the ODPM Select Committee on the board's work.

Valuation Office Agency

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether the valuation of a domestic property by the Valuation Office Agency for council tax valuation or revaluation purposes would be affected by the presence of (a) television aerials, (b) showers, (c) fixtures, (d) fittings and (e) carpets. [33484]

Mr. Woolas: The statutory assumptions for valuation in respect of Council Tax are contained within Local Government and Finance Act 1992 and Local Government Act 2003.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many public conveniences were registered for business rates by the Valuation Office Agency in each government office region (a) in the most recent year for which figures are available and (b) in 1997. [33505]

Mr. Woolas: The information requested is as follows.

(a) As at July 2005, there were 5,377 public conveniences included in the 2005 Rating List.

Government region	Number of public conveniences
Eastern	547
East Midlands	390
London	414
North East	228
North West	489
South East	770
South West	980
West Midlands	409
Yorkshire and Humberside	479
Wales	671
Total	5,377

(b) 1997 figures are not available.

TRANSPORT

A21 Upgrade

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he plans to announce the findings of the South East of England Regional Development Agency's consultation on the proposed A21 upgrade. [34338]

Dr. Ladyman: I am not aware of any consultation being undertaken by the South East of England Regional Development Agency specifically into the A21. However, we expect to receive by the end of January 2006 the South East region's advice on which transport schemes should be given priority for funding, as part of the regional funding allocation process. The schemes they are considering as part of this process include several improvements to the A21.

Merseytravel

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on Merseytravel's record on project delivery across all forms of public transport. [33432]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 1 December 2005]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer of 28 November 2005, Official Report, column 146W.

Railways

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State's oral statement of 22 June 2005, Official Report, column 301WH, if he will meet hon. Members with constituencies in the west country to discuss the night-train and sleeper service between London and Penzance. [34416]

Derek Twigg: I have met a number of hon. Members from the west country to discuss the sleeper service between London and Penzance. I would be happy to meet the hon. Member to discuss this issue.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Human Rights (Iraq)

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Solicitor-General what correspondence the Attorney-General has had with Mr. Phil Shiner regarding human rights cases against British forces in Iraq; and if he will make a statement. [33574]

The Solicitor-General: Mr. Phil Shiner has written to the Attorney-General raising a number of issues concerning British forces in Iraq. The Attorney-General's officials have replied to Mr. Shiner, advising him that if he has any evidence of potential criminal offences he should bring it to the attention of the prosecuting authorities, and that he should direct to the Ministry of Defence other issues he might have about the conduct and training of the armed forces.

SCOTLAND

Civil Service Relocation (Scotland)

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many departmental civil service jobs have been relocated to Scotland in each year since 2001. [32259]

David Cairns [holding answer 28 November 2005]: Over two-thirds of the posts in the Scotland Office are already based in Scotland; the Office presently has a staff complement of 55, of whom three are based in Glasgow and 34 in Edinburgh. The remainder are based in London: this reflects the needs of the Office.

Race Equality Impact Assessments

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many Race Equality Impact Assessments his Department completed between (a) April 2004 to March 2005 and (b) April 2005 to November 2005; and how many assessments in each period resulted in a change of policy. [32838]

David Cairns: No Race Equality Impact Assessments have been undertaken during these periods. The Scotland Office's executive policy responsibilities are limited to the funding and conduct of elections and constitutional matters affecting the devolution settlement. We do not therefore as a matter of routine carry out such assessments.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Alcohol Sales

Norman Baker: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission how many litres of alcoholic drinks have been purchased for sale (a) in bars of the House and (b) by the refreshment department at catering functions on the parliamentary estate in each year since 1975. [33660]

Nick Harvey: I refer the hon. Member to my predecessor's reply on 23 March 2005, Official Report, column 874W. I am now able to update that information and confirm that the volume of alcoholic drinks consumed in the bars of the House of Commons was 46,151 litres for the full year to March 2005, and has been 23,886 in the eight months from April 2005 to November 2005. Consumption at functions catered or supplied by the refreshment department was 32,334 litres in 2004–05 and 17,959 litres in the eight months from April 2005 to November 2005.

E-networks

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission what assessment the Commission has made of the level of security on the e-networks available to hon. Members and their staff (a) on the parliamentary estate and (b) in constituency offices. [34331]

Nick Harvey: It is not the Commission's practice to comment in detail on matters relating to security. The Parliamentary Communications Directorate (PCD) takes the security of the parliamentary network very seriously and uses appropriate tools and techniques in its design and management. These are subject to audit and external assessment. A similar approach is taken to facilities provided by the PCD in constituencies and other locations. The Commission has put in place governance arrangements to ensure these matters are periodically reviewed. This work is led by the Parliamentary Security Co-ordinator.

Portcullis House

Norman Baker: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission if he will list the (a) tree species and (b) country of origin of the wood used in the construction and maintenance of Portcullis House; and in what capacity the wood was used in each case. [33661]

Nick Harvey: The courtyard roof of Portcullis House is constructed of American White Oak, which is stronger and grows straighter than English Oak which is not stress graded in terms of strength.

English Oak was used for all the joinery-cabinets, cupboards, desks etc-as the structure of the grain is more decorative. The majority of English Oak used was from trees that fell during the storms of 1987.

Stationery

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission if the Commission will take steps to replace the plastic window in all stationery with environmentally friendly corn paper. [32673]

Nick Harvey: The material in the window envelopes is polystyrene. This is used because it is easily recycled and uses less resources in production and produces less solid waste than other materials. The polystyrene windows are compatible with mail sorting machinery, making them efficient as well as environmentally friendly. There are therefore no plans to replace the stationery. Hon. Members may purchase envelopes from outside the standard range and be reimbursed from the Incidental Expenses Provision.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Housing (Immigration)

5. Mr. Lilley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with the Deputy Prime Minister on the impact of the current level of net immigration on demand for housing. [33823]

Mr. McNulty: The Home Office works across Government to ensure that immigration policy works to the benefit of the United Kingdom. This has included discussions, both at ministerial and official level, with the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister.

Dangerous Driving

14. Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his plans to change the law relating to the causing of death by bad driving. [33833]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Government have tabled amendments to the current Road Safety Bill that take forward a number of proposals arising from the "Review of Road Traffic Offences involving Bad Driving" consultation exercise.

These proposals include a new offence of causing death by careless driving; a new offence where an unlicensed, disqualified or uninsured driver causes a fatal accident and provision for alternative verdicts where a manslaughter charge or culpable homicide charge has failed.

Community Support Officers

16. Mr. McFadden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what change in the number of police community support officers is planned between now and 2008; and if he will make a statement. [33836]

Hazel Blears: There were more than 6,300 police community support officers (PCSOs) in June 2005. We announced on 7 March 2005 plans to increase the number of PCSOs to 24,000 by March 2008.

We informed forces and police authorities on 7 November 2005 the details of the funding for additional PCSOs in 2006–07 and 2007–08. They have been invited to submit their proposals to meet the access criteria by 12 December 2005.

Women Trafficking

17. Jim Sheridan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to prevent the trafficking of women from eastern Europe. [33837]

Paul Goggins: The Government are committed to tackling trafficking in human beings and we are working closely with several eastern European source and transit countries to improve preventative measures and increase prosecutions. The new EU action plan on trafficking, drafted by the UK presidency and adopted last week, includes actions to prevent trafficking from outside and within the EU.

Anti-semitism

18. John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate his Department has made of the number of offences involving anti-semitism in the last three years for which figures are available. [33838]

Paul Goggins: The total number of racially or religiously aggravated offences rose from 31,035 in 2002–03 to 35,022 in 2003–04. These figures cannot, however, be broken down by particular race or religion. We will continue to tackle racism and prejudice in all its forms and wherever it occurs.

Police

19. Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consultation he has carried out on proposals to merge Sussex police into a regional force. [33839]

Hazel Blears: Police forces and authorities have been asked to undertake consultation with relevant stakeholders in their areas including communities when developing their options for change. This should ensure that selected options reflect the views of as many stakeholders as possible. As part of developing options for change, I requested all forces and authorities including Sussex, to consult with local communities.

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures he is taking to reduce the time it takes beat officers to return to the beat after making an arrest. [33835]

Paul Goggins: The use of designated support staff such as detention officers and investigating officers help minimise the time the arresting officer needs to spend at the police station in processing the suspect and investigating the offence. In addition, street bail allows the officer to determine when the arrested person is required to attend the police station to best meet the needs of the investigation, the custody suite and the officer's operational duties.

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) groups have been dispersed and (b) under-16s have been removed to their place of residence by (i) community support officers and (ii) police officers under paragraph 4A of Schedule 4 to the Police Reform Act 2002 in each of the last four years, broken down by police authority. [29363]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Section 30 of the Anti-social Behaviour Act 2003 provides the police with a power to disperse groups and remove under 16s to their place of residence, within designated areas. The Act also inserted paragraph 4A into Schedule four to the Police Reform Act 2002 to allow designated community support officers to use these powers.

These powers came into force on 20 January 2004. From a Home Office data collection exercise, we estimate that 809 areas were designated between January 2004 and June 2005. Police officers and community support officer dispersed 14,375 people from the 293 areas where data was available. They also removed 520 young people under 16 to their place of residence from 236 areas where data was available. We do not hold the information on whether these powers were exercised by police officers or community support officers.

Sex Crimes (Victim Support)

21. Barbara Keeley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps his Department is taking to support victims of rape and other sex crimes. [33841]

Paul Goggins: Over 2004–06 we have invested £4 million in the development of Sexual Assault Referral Centres and voluntary services for victims of sexual violence. A further £1.25 million will go to support voluntary sector sexual violence services in 2006–07. We have also improved the ways in which the police and the Crown Prosecution Service provide support and greater access to justice for victims of sexual violence.

False Vehicle Registration

22. Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the effect of the registration of false vehicle licence addresses on the ability of the police to combat multiple road traffic offences. [33842]

Paul Goggins: Vehicles which are registered with incorrect details or not registered at all are regularly used in criminal and antisocial activities. An accurate register is important for identification purposes, so that the police can take effective action against the perpetrators. It is an offence not to supply the relevant details for correct registration, and in the last two years we have strengthened the likelihood of accuracy by the introduction of continuous registration and by creating a new offence of using a vehicle that is incorrectly registered.

Community Courts

23. Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made in establishing community courts; and if he will make a statement. [33843]

Fiona Mactaggart: There are currently two Community Justice projects—the pilot Community Justice Centre, North Liverpool which was formally opened last month and the Salford Community Justice Initiative to be launched next week. It is early days for Community Justice in this country and these are both groundbreaking projects that will be fully evaluated.

Acceptable Behaviour Rules

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many individuals are being held for breaching acceptable behaviour rules and are awaiting deportation to countries where he believes they could face, without appropriate memoranda of understanding being in place, a risk of torture, broken down by nationality. [24015]

Mr. McNulty: No individuals are currently being held awaiting deportation on grounds of unacceptable behaviour.

However, 20 people are in detention pending deportation for reasons of national security. Their eventual deportation is subject to the negotiation of memorandums of understandings (MoUs) which cover various issues regarding return to country of origin.

Asset Recovery Agency

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what role the Asset Recovery Agency will have in recovering the assets of foreign politically exposed persons which have been derived from corrupt activities or theft of state assets. [34012]

Paul Goggins: The Assets Recovery Agency operates the civil schemes of recovering assets, namely civil recovery and taxation. In domestic cases, they take cases on referral from law enforcement where they are satisfied that a criminal conviction of a person followed by a confiscation order is not appropriate or has failed.

The cases referred to them might include those involving politically exposed persons. In international co-operation cases, they will have powers to enforce overseas civil forfeiture orders over assets in the UK.

Asylum/Immigration

Annette Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many families subject to the pilot implementation of section 9 of the Asylum and Immigration (Treatment of Claimants) Act 2004 have had their support re-instated by the National Asylum Support Service as a result of the identification of a potential human rights breach. [31186]

Mr. McNulty: Under the section 9 pilot, support is only withdrawn where a family has refused, without reasonable excuse, to take steps to return home. The National Asylum Support Service (NASS) only withdraw the family's support when this can be done without breaching any person's human rights. However, after support has been withdrawn, a family's circumstances can change in such a way that support needs to be reinstated to avoid a breach. This has happened in three cases.

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will review the regulation that prevents asylum seekers from securing employment in the UK; [28905]

(2) what assessment he has made of the merits of allowing asylum seekers to take paid work in the UK. [28906]

Mr. McNulty: The Government keep their immigration and asylum policies under review. Our current assessment is that it would not be right to routinely allow asylum seekers access to paid employment. The immigration rules make clear that asylum seekers may seek permission to work if their claim for asylum remains outstanding for longer than 12 months without an initial decision being made on it and providing the reason for the delay cannot be attributed to the applicant.

We do encourage asylum seekers to undertake voluntary work while their claim for asylum is being assessed.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many failed asylum seekers were removed from the UK between 1 July and 30 September; and how many were removed in the equivalent period in 2004. [32814]

Mr. McNulty: Information on the number of failed asylum seekers removed from the UK is published quarterly in the Asylum Bulletin.

The quarterly Asylum Bulletin relating to the third quarter of 2005, contains the number of failed asylum seekers removed between 1 July and 30 September 2005, and that in the equivalent period in 2004.

This publication is available from the Home Office's Research Development and Statistics website: http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of illegal immigrants living in the UK. [32817]

Mr. McNulty: Although it is impossible to determine accurately how many people are in the UK illegally, the Home Office published a report which included an estimate of the size of the illegal migrant population in the UK in 2001. A copy of the RDS On-line report 29/05 Sizing the unauthorised (illegal) migrant population in the United Kingdom in 2001 can be found at: http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/notes/june_summaries.html#rdsolr2905.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what average time appellants whose appeal against the decision to remove them from the United Kingdom had been allowed waited between the date that their appeal was allowed and grant of leave to remain, in the latest period for which figures are available. [33372]

Mr. McNulty: Information on allowed appeals is not currently available.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of hon. Members' correspondence to the Immigration and

Nationality Directorate was answered within 20 working days for the periods (a) January to March, (b) April to June and (c) July to September; and if he will make a statement. [33239]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The proportion of Members' correspondence answered by the Immigration and Nationality Directorate within 20 working days was: 28 per cent. for the period January to March; 49 per cent. for April to June; and 64 per cent. for July to September.

This improvement is encouraging but I am determined that it should be maintained until we reach the published target of replying to 95 per cent. of Members' letters within 20 days.

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average escorting contract price was for inter-detention estate transfers of immigration detainees in the last period for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [32901]

Mr. McNulty: The contract price for in country escorts is inclusive and covers all required escort movements for immigration detainees including inter-detention estate transfers.

Under the existing contract arrangement the average price of an escorted movement is £119.50.

Mrs. Maria Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department to what extent immigration rules allow for the entry of foreign children to the United Kingdom for the purpose of fostering by (a) relatives and (b) non-relatives. [33129]

Mr. McNulty: There is no provision in the immigration rules to allow a child to enter or remain in the United Kingdom on the basis of a private fostering arrangement. It is open for a child who is the subject of a private fostering agreement to enter the United Kingdom under other provisions of the immigration rules, for example under the various adoption provisions, where they can meet the requirements.

Mrs. Maria Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps are taken by immigration caseworkers to (a) monitor the welfare of foreign children who are fostered in the United Kingdom and (b) intervene where necessary. [33130]

Mr. McNulty: Whilst a child cannot enter or remain solely on the basis of a private fostering arrangement, where children who are in the United Kingdom under another provision of the immigration rules and are covered by the definition of a privately fostered child in the Children Act 1989, the carer must advise their local authority social services of the child's presence. The local authority then has duties in respect of the child, including regular visits, so long as the arrangement lasts. The duty of care of a child lies with the relevant social services department. Immigration and Nationality Directorate (IND) staff are instructed to contact the local social services where they have any concerns about a child's welfare.

Breath Tests

John Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many drivers received a positive breath test in the Easington constituency in each of the last five years. [33274]

Paul Goggins: Information on positive/refused screening breath tests is collected centrally at police force area level only. Data for 2004 will be published early in 2006.

Conferences

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much the Department spent on (a) organising and (b) sponsoring conferences in each of the last five years. [10275]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Total costs incurred by the Department in respect of conferences for each of the last five years are given in the table.

	Total conference costs
2000	1,322,102.20
2001	2,170,463.31
2002	3,550,268.99
2003	4,958,414.59
2004	5,189,640.56

Correspondence

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of public correspondence to his Department was answered within 20 working days in the period (a) January to March, (b) April to June and (c) July to September; and if he will make a statement. [32796]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Department monitors centrally received correspondence from the public except that relating to immigration, (a) In the period January to March, 84 per cent. of the 6,777 letters and e-mails received from the public were answered within 20 working days. (b) In the period April to June, 89 per cent. of the 5,898 letters and e-mails received from the public were answered within 20 working days. (c) In the period July to September, 92 per cent. of the 7,222 letters and e-mails received from the public were answered within 20 working days.

Council Tax Valuation

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the current maximum fine levied by the magistrates court is for intentionally delaying or obstructing a Valuation Office Agency representative, who is conducting a council tax valuation inspection. [33152]

Mr. Woolas: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Brent East (Sarah Teather) on 23 November 2005, Official Report, column 2066W.

Countryside and Rights of Way Act

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) (i) prosecutions and (ii) convictions have taken place and (b) orders have been made under section 14 of the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000. [31839]

Paul Goggins: Information on prosecutions and convictions under section 14 of the Countryside and Right of Way Act 2000 is not available as this section was commenced in England on 19 September 2004 and in Wales on 28 May 2005. There were no prosecutions under the Act in 2004. Data for court proceedings for 2005 will be available in autumn 2006.

Custodial Sentences (Women)

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many women are in prison; and how many and what proportion of women in prison have children under (a) five and (b) 11 years of age for the most recent available date. [32315]

Fiona Mactaggart [holding answer 24 November 2005]: As at 30 September 2005, there were 4,611 females in custody, 1,012 on remand, 3,539 sentenced and 60 non-criminal. There is no routinely collected data on the number of females in prison who are mothers but Home Office Research Study 208 found that 66 per cent. had dependent children under the age of 18. Of those with children, 34 per cent. had pre-school children aged under five and a further 40 per cent. had children aged from five to 10.

Cyclamen Programme

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made on the Cyclamen programme; what resources have been transferred from HM Revenue and Customs in connection with this programme; and for what purpose. [32417]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Programme Cyclamen is now operational at several ports and airports and remains on course to be completed by 31 March 2007. HM Revenue and Customs' (HMRC) on-going anti-smuggling activities have been expanded to include programme Cyclamen.

This has meant the employment of an additional 320 HMRC staff. Funding has been provided for the programme and this is managed jointly by HMRC and the Home Office.

Departmental Estate

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much has been spent on the maintenance of the Home Office's Marsham Street office (a) gardens and (b) water features since relocation. [31798]

Mr. Charles Clarke: This is the responsibility of the facilities sub-contractor to Annes Gate Property plc the PFI Service Provider. AGP are unable to confirm the precise amount that has been spent on maintenance of the gardens and water feature by the sub-contractor but as a guide have indicated it is probably in the region of £40,000 since 26 January 2005.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list parliamentary constituencies in which his Department (a) owns and (b) rents (i) land and (ii) property; what the land or property is in each case; and if he will make a statement. [32799]

Mr. Charles Clarke: This information is not held by reference to parliamentary constituency boundaries and could be researched only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Policies

Mrs. Hodgson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will set out, with statistical evidence relating as closely as possible to Gateshead East and Washington West constituency, the effects in Gateshead East and Washington West of changes to his Department's policies since 1997. [22285]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Government has put in place policies in the areas of crime reduction, antisocial behaviour, policing and active communities that are yielding considerable benefits for the constituency.

Between March 1997 and March 2005 the number of police officers in the Northumbria Police Force increased by 411 from 3,677 to 4,088. The Government's introduction of community support officers (CSOs) in 2002 has put 104 CSOs on Northumbria's streets to tackle crime and antisocial behaviour.

Northumbria Police will receive £232.2 million in general grants for 2005–06, an increase of 4.87 per cent. (£10.81 million) over last year. General grants funding to Northumbria has increased by 33.7 per cent. between 1997–98 and 2005–06. In addition to general grants, Northumbria will also receive around £20.36 million in specific grants funding for targeted initiatives and capital provision in 2005–06. The distribution of resources locally is a matter for the police authority and the chief constable.

The Crime Reduction Programme (CRP) was a £340 million intervention programme running for three years from April 1999. Figures are not available for constituency or local level. In Gateshead a total of 14 antisocial behaviour orders (ASBOs) have been issued and in Sunderland a total of 29 ASBOs have been issued as of 31 March 2005. (The latest figures available).

Departmental Targets

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will publish details of the drug harm index required for the measurement of performance against 2004 Public Service Agreement target number 4. [29936]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Details of the Drug Harm Index and PSA baseline figure were published by the Home Office in March 2005 and can be found at www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs05/rdsolr2405.pdf

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to publish an assessment of progress against 2004 Public Service Agreement target number 7. [29940]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Performance against the element of Public Service Agreement (PSA) seven covering perceptions of racial discrimination by organisations and in the labour market was published on 24 November in a research publication on the Home Office website. Performance against PSA seven will also be included in the Home Office Autumn Performance Report to be published in December.

This will be a Command Paper and available on the Home Office website. The baseline for the community cohesion element of PSA seven is 2005, so an assessment of progress will not be available for this element until 2007, when the next survey is carried out.

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects the first Voluntary and Community Activity Index data to be published, as required by 2004 Public Service Agreement number 6. [29941]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The State of the Sector Panel was introduced in the SR02 Public Service Agreement (PSA) set to measure progress against the then PSA8. The 2002–03 Baseline was published in the "Home Office Targets Autumn Performance Report 2004" Cm 6423 published in December 2004 and this is available on the Home Office website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/documents/ho-targets-autumn-report-04?version=1

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the impact of asylum cases that go to appeal on performance against 2004 Public Service Agreement target number 5. [29942]

Mr. Charles Clarke: For PSA five the target is defined in the Public Service Agreement (PSA) technical notes (which can be found at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/documents/psa-technical-note-SR04-jul-05) as reducing the number of cases that are unfounded.

An unfounded asylum claim is one where the applicant and dependents of the applicant have not been granted full refugee status (indefinite leave to remain) under the 1951 UN Convention, i.e. failed asylum seekers (applicants refused refugee status at the initial decision stage for which no appeal is received, and applicants whose appeal rights are exhausted).

Asylum cases that go to appeal and are unsuccessful therefore are included in the measurement of the target. As the technical notes indicate, performance data, for the year as a whole, will be published in the asylum statistics, on the Home Office website, as soon as possible after the end of the financial year (once the data is judged sufficiently reliable).The latest available data will also be published in the Home Office Autumn Performance Report this December. This will be a Command Paper and available on the Home Office website.

Development Plus Programme

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 3 November 2005, Official Report, column 1254W, on equality and diversity, what positive action development is expected to be provided for staff by his Department's Development Plus programme for under-represented groups. [28291]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Development Plus programme is a positive action learning and development programme for female, minority ethnic and disabled staff across the Home Office, at the levels where there is under-representation. The aim of the programme is to enable participants to increase their skills, address the barriers that prevent them from reaching their full potential and to help them compete more effectively for promotion. This will enable all staff to progress on merit.

DNA Database

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what percentage of the population of London the police hold a record on their DNA database, broken down by (a) black, (b) ethnic minority and (c) white people. [22132]

Andy Burnham [holding answer 25 November 2005]: The information requested is not currently available. The data held by the National DNA Database (NDNAD) are not directly comparable with the census 2001 population data.

The NDNAD does not hold self-reported ethnicity data on arrested persons who have a DNA sample taken, but on their 'ethnic appearance'. Nor does it hold data on sampled persons by area of residence, but by the police force area where the person was arrested and their DNA sample was taken; this may not be the area where they reside.

The sampling police officer completes a form with the sampled person's name, sex, date of birth, ethnic appearance and sampling force details. The ethnic appearance data is based on the judgment of the police officer and is recorded for police intelligence purposes to assist in subsequent identification. It uses seven broad ethnic categories whereas the Office for National Statistics population data from census 2001 is based on 16 ethnic groups self-reported by individuals when completing the census return.

Ed Balls: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what provision is available in (a) West Yorkshire and (b) Normanton constituency to deal with domestic violence. [31563]

The provisions cover both statutory and voluntary sector agencies and range from the police, domestic violence co-ordinators, refuge accommodation, outreach work and specialist support services for victims and children, as well as perpetrator programmes.

Drug Treatment and Testing Orders

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many offenders have been subject to a drug treatment and testing order in each month since their inception; and if he will make a statement. [32788]

Fiona Mactaggart: The number of Drug Treatment and Testing Orders (DTTOs) made in each month since the roll-out of the order across England and Wales in October 2000 up to September 2005 is shown in the table. The DTTO has gradually been replaced by the Drug Rehabilitation Requirement (DRR) of the community order from April 2005. Dungavel Detention Centre

Anne Moffat: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the situation in Dungavel detention centre. [33834]

Fiona Mactaggart: Dungavel House Immigration Removal Centre was opened in September 2001 and holds those who have been detained under Immigration Act powers. The centre holds single males and females as well as families, including those with children. Families with children are not normally held at Dungavel beyond 72 hours. The centre is currently operating normally and there is no situation to report.

Environmental Sustainability

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures he has put in place to ensure that his Department meets the quick win targets set by the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs to ensure that all (a) copying paper bought by the Department is 100 per cent. recycled with a minimum of 75 per cent. post-consumer waste content and (b) paper for printed publications bought by the Department is 60 per cent. recycled of which a minimum is 75 per cent. post-consumer waste. [16201]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The quick wins targets were introduced on 1 November 2003 by the inter-departmental Sustainable Procurement Group. From this date all government departments' contracts were expected to apply the minimum environmental standards when purchasing certain types of product and services including paper.

It has been recommended that the purchase of recycled paper products is phased in over a period of time and targets will be developed as part of the "Framework for Sustainable Development on the Government Estate". The Home Office will work with its current suppliers in order to meet these targets. The department's current three-year stationery contract to supply paper and paper products as well as other stationery products was awarded prior to 1 November, in September 2003. This followed a competitive tender exercise in line with Home Office policy that the procurement of goods and services is based on value for money principles. The provision of recycled paper is part of the agreed contract with Office depot.

In June 2002 the Home Office mandated all offices within the Department to use A4 recycled paper which has an 80 per cent. unspecified recycled paper content in photocopiers, fax machines and printers, unless technical reasons precluded them from using this paper. The Prison Service mandated the use of the same A4 recycled paper from September 2003 and following successful trials are also procuring only A3 recycled paper.

The Home Office makes use of various stocks of paper/board in our publications. Most of our internal facing material is printed on recycled paper and all of these are at least 60 per cent. recycled with a content of 75 per cent. post-consumer waste. The majority of our external facing work is printed on totally chlorine free paper/board. Although this is not made from recycled pulp, this is 'environmentally friendly' because the pulp is bleached without the use of chlorine chemicals.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made (a) of the environmental impact and (b) against sustainable development criteria of the bids made for contracts awarded by his Department; who makes such an assessment; and whether these assessments are published. [16314]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Home Department does not hold this information centrally and it could only be obtained at disproportionate cost. Advice on the opportunities for integrating environmental and sustainability issues in assessment during procurement is published in OGC/DEFRA guidance "Environmental Issues in Purchasing" (www.ogc.gov.uk/index.asp?id=400'). Additional Home Office internal advice has been issued for use by procurement and project teams via procurement bulletins. Where appropriate assessments against both environmental impact and sustainable development criteria for bids made for contracts are carried out on a case by case basis. Environmental impact assessments and criteria for sustainable development are set and evaluated by the project team. These assessments are not published.

Equality and Diversity

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 3 November 2005, Official Report, column 1254W, on equality and diversity, how many members of staff (a) are estimated to have to have taken part in Diversity Week events in each of the past three years and (b) in (i) his Department, (ii) the Immigration and Nationality Directorate and (iii) the Prison Service attended compulsory diversity awareness training in 2005. [28292]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The figures are as follows:

For the Diversity Week the Core Home Office attendance in 2005 was approximately 360. No records were kept for 2003–04. For the Immigration and Nationality Directorate (IND) in 2005—approximately 1,950, 2004—approximately 1,680 and 2003—approximately 960. For Prison Service from 2003–05, Diversity Week was celebrated in a number of prison establishments, where events were attended by prison staff and prisoners. No records of the numbers of prison staff or prisoners involved were kept.

The Diversity Awareness training attendance up to November 2005 has been Core Home Office 663, IND 4920, Prison Service—approximately 9,820.

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 3 November 2005, Official Report, column 1254W on equality and diversity, how much was spent on (a) compulsory diversity training in 2005, (b) launching the Development Plus programme, (c) testing for inappropriate behaviour during the 2005 senior management exercises, (d) Diversity week in each of the last three years and (e) networks supporting (i) black and ethnic minority, (ii) disabled, (iii) lesbian, gay and bisexual and (iv) transgendered and transsexual members of staff in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available. (e) The Core Home Office funds three staff support networks: The Network (set up in 1999) which supports black and ethnic minority staff; HODS (set up in 2002) which supports disabled staff; and, SPECTRUM (set up in 2003) which supports lesbian, gay bisexual and transsexual and transgender staff. Details of the networks' expenditure since their formation is shown as follows:

The Prison Service RESECT staff support network for black and minority ethnic staff received £400,000, £453,000 and £394,000 in financial years 2002–03, 2003–04, 2004–05 respectively. The Prison Service GALIPS staff support network (established in July 2004) for lesbian, gay bisexual and transsexual and transgender staff received £145,000 of funding in financial years 2004–05 and 2005–06.

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 3 November 2005, Official Report, column 1254W, on equality and diversity, how many (a) black and ethnic minority, (b) disabled, (c) lesbian, gay, bisexual and (d) transgendered and transsexual staff have been employed by (i) his Department, (ii) the Immigration and Nationality Directorate, (iii) HM Prison Service and (iv) the UK Passport Service in each of the last 20 years for which figures are available. [28295]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The following figures are taken from the Cabinet Office Mandate return for April in each of the years between 2000 and 2004. Data for years prior to 2000 are not readily available and data for 2005 have not yet been published.

The Home Office has not yet started to monitor the number of its staff by sexual orientation or gender identity, although we have recently introduced monitoring of our HR processes, including recruitment, promotion and training, against those diversity strands.

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 3 November 2005, Official Report, column 1254W, on equality and diversity, what (a) funding and (b) other support was made available for the support of staff on the Cabinet Office Pathways scheme for ethnic minorities in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [28296]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The following table shows funding the Home Office has provided for participants on the last three Cabinet Office Pathways development schemes for which we have financial data. These are two-year schemes for talented black and ethnic minority civil servants who show potential to reach the level of the senior civil service.

2002–04	42
2003–05	74

(b) In addition to providing funding, the Home Office in liaison with the Cabinet Office, supported staff participation on the Pathways schemes by providing mentors and obtaining work placements outside the Home Office.

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 3 November 2005, Official Report, column 1254W, on equality and diversity, how much his Department spent on positive action training for (a) women, (b) black and minority ethnic staff and (c) disabled staff in 2001; how many members of staff attended this training; and what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of (i) positive action training in 2001 and (ii) diversity awareness training in 2000–01. [28297]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The cost of positive action training in 2001–02 was approximately £60,000. This included research, design, development, course delivery and evaluation.

52 women, black and ethnic minority staff and disabled staff attended the programme.

The aim of positive action training was to increase the confidence and skills of under-represented groups to compete successfully for posts at the next level. Evaluation of feedback from 34 attendees 12 months on found that 12 had already been promoted and the majority had grown in confidence.

As part of a review of the diversity awareness training in 2000–01, 107 managers completed questionnaires and 96.2 per cent. agreed that as a result of attending the training they had a better understanding of the relevance and importance of diversity in effective team working.

Extradition

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the UK requests all related evidence from the relevant country as a matter of policy when an extradition request is received. [32155]

Andy Burnham: No, the UK does not and to the best of our knowledge has never, as a matter of either policy or law, requested all the available evidence when it receives an extradition request. This is consistent with our international obligations and our domestic law.

Female Prisoners (Literacy)

Barbara Follett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he is planning to have with the Secretary of State for Education and Skills about improving the literacy of female prisoners. [33840]

Fiona Mactaggart: I discuss matters relating to learning and skills for all offenders on a regular basis with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Skills. Recently our discussions have focused on the matters to be set out in the forthcoming Green Paper "Reducing Re-offending through Skills and Employment", which will include material relating to the needs of female offenders delivered through our new Offender Learning and Skills Service.

Festivals

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures his Department took to celebrate and promote the events of (a) Ramadan, (b) Diwali and (c) Chinese New Year in 2005. [31163]

Paul Goggins: The Home Office hosted an Eid/Diwali celebration on 14 November 2005 which was attended by 200 guests from the Muslim, Hindu and Sikh communities as well as representatives from other faith groups. An internal staff event was held on 8 November. The Home Office also made staff aware of a number of external events including the Civil Service Islamic Society event for all civil servants "Dusk til Dawn" on 10 October and the Greater London Authority (GLA) Chinese New Year event held in Trafalgar Square, Leicester Square and Soho held on 13 February as well as other London China events during this period. Information on the celebrations of Ramadan and Diwali was also circulated to staff within the Immigration and Nationality Directorate.

Firearm Offences

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many firearms offences were recorded in each year since 1997 in (a) Northamptonshire and (b) England; and how many led to convictions. [23697]

Hazel Blears: The number of offences involving firearms, excluding air weapons, recorded by police is given in the table.

Convictions data for these offences are not collected centrally.

The National Crime Recording Standard was introduced on 1 April 2002. Figures after this date are not directly comparable.

Fixed-penalty Notices

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many fixed-penalty notices have been issued by (a) community support officers and (b) police officers for littering under paragraph 1(2)(d) of Schedule 4 to the Police Reform Act 2002 in each of the last four years, broken down by police authority. [29344]

Mr. Charles Clarke: From 1 November 2004 littering became an offence for which a Penalty Notice for Disorder (PND) could be issued. The following table gives figures for the number of penalty notices issued for littering in 2004 by each police force, alongside provisional figures for January to July 2005.

Community support officers have the power to issue fixed-penalty notices for littering on behalf of local authorities. Information on these fixed-penalty notices is held by the Department for the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs.

Gershon Review

Mr. Francois: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department who in the Department has been made responsible for achieving the efficiency objectives set for the Department by the Gershon Review. [21311]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I am responsible for achieving my Department's value for money objectives. The permanent secretary is responsible for this work at official level.

Green Ministers

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what work his Department's Green Minister has undertaken in the last three months in an official capacity in that role; and what meetings that Minister has attended in the last 12 months. [16192]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Following the general election in May, the Cabinet Sub-Committee of Green Ministers (ENV(G)) was replaced by the Ministerial Sub-Committee on Sustainable Development in Government (EE(SD)) whose members are departmental Sustainable Development Ministers. Andy Burnham was appointed as our departmental Sustainable Development Minister in June 2005.

In July, the Minister attended a breakfast seminar for Sustainable Development Ministers to discuss the sustainable development strategy and Ministers' role in delivering it. He has also held met with officials to discuss the Department's contribution to sustainable development.

Identity Cards

Mr. Khan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the likely impact of the identity cards scheme in helping to tackle online fraud. [27473]

Andy Burnham: Through the use of remote authentication technologies, there is an opportunity for the identity card scheme to combat online fraud. Currently, the identity cards programme is looking at various alternatives that allow the implementation of secure remote authentication including use of one-time password technology. These technologies offer a mechanism to obtain greater assurance of the identity of individuals during internet transactions.

Work is continuing with representative groups from both private and public sectors to assess how these technologies might be used to supplement existing procedures in practice. However, no final decisions regarding these options have been taken. As a result, no quantifiable benefits connected with online fraud have, as yet, been claimed with the scheme's benefits case.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the likely effects of identity cards on card-not-present (a) credit card fraud in (i) on-line, (ii) telephone and (iii) mail order shopping and (b) internet banking fraud. [31507]

Andy Burnham: Through the use of remote authentication technologies, there is an opportunity for the identity card scheme to combat fraudulent card-not-present financial transactions. Currently, the identity cards programme is looking at various alternatives that allow the implementation of secure remote authentication including use of one-time password technology. These technologies offer a mechanism to obtain greater assurance of the identity of credit card or account holders when conducting transactions over the internet, telephone or post in the future.

Work is continuing with representative groups from both private and public sectors to assess how these technologies might be used to supplement existing procedures in practice. However, no final decisions regarding these options have been taken. As a result, no quantifiable benefits connected with reducing card-not-present fraud for online, telephone or mail-order shopping or banking have, as yet, been claimed within the scheme's benefits case to date.

IMPACT System

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the IMPACT system will be operational; and what assessment he has made of progress towards the target date of March 2007. [16027]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Government's Second Progress Report on implementing Sir Michael Richard's recommendations was released to Parliament on 7 November 2005. The IMPACT programme, set up to deliver many of the key recommendations, will deliver incremental improvements in police information management and information sharing systems over the next five years.

The first application, a national index of names (the IMPACT Nominal Index) will be deployed into a Child Abuse Investigation Unit in every force in England and Wales by the end of 2005. This will enable police forces to check where information is held on individuals by other forces.

The next phase of development will provide police forces with a direct national link between their six core systems, including intelligence, by the end of 2007.

Internet (Voice Calls)

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the (a) police and (b) intelligence agencies are able (i) to intercept and (ii) to collect traffic data on voice calls made over the internet. [32894]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The lawful basis for both intercepting and accessing traffic data on internet calls is contained in the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000, which is designed to be technology neutral. We do not comment on specific capability, or lack of capability, in these areas, where to do so would undermine national security and the prevention and detection of crime.

Investigatory Powers Tribunal

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the (a) staffing level and (b) cost of the Investigatory Powers Tribunal has been in each calendar year since its inception. [30560]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Investigatory Powers Tribunal was established on 2 October 2000. The tribunal's staff in post in each calendar year since then has been:

	2000	2001	2002	2003	2004	2005
President	1	1	1	1	1	1
Vice President	1	1	1	1	1	1
Registrar	n/a	1	1	1	1	1
Members	6	7	7	7	7	6
Tribunal office administration staff	2	3	3	3	3	3

The running costs of the tribunal in each financial year since its inception have been:

	Running costs
2000–01	55,470
2001–02	86,620
2002–03	114,540
2003–04	104,440
2004–05	173,280

Local Authority Secure Units

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the re-offending rates of those released from local authority secure units. [32889]

Fiona Mactaggart: These re-offending rates are not available. The following table shows reconviction rates, a commonly used proxy for re-offending rates, for juveniles released from custody. Local authority secure children's homes and secure training centres are included in the reconviction rate, but these cannot be distinguished from other juvenile custodial disposals.

Owing to the administrative costs of matching criminal histories, the results shown relate to the reconvictions for samples of offenders, those juveniles discharged in the first three months of the year. Reconviction rates should be used with caution as a number of different factors can influence them. Reconviction rates can be adjusted to take account of the changing characteristics of offenders and these adjusted rates are published annually on the Home Office's website (http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/index.htm). The most recent adjusted figures for the 2003 cohort show a reduction in reoffending of 2.4 per cent. against the 2000 baseline.

	Reconviction rate
2003	69.4
2002	68.3
2001	70.4

Magistrates Courts

Dr. Vis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many and what percentage of people appearing before each magistrates court were remanded to custody in each year from 2002 to 2005. [33096]

Fiona Mactaggart: The table shows the numbers and percentages of defendants proceeded against in England and Wales who were remanded in custody by magistrates courts, for the years 2002 to 2004.

The remand data received by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform is often incomplete and custodial remands are believed to be under-recorded. The figures felt to be most the most unreliable are not presented in the table. Due to the poor quality of the data we are unable to present figures for the individual magistrates courts. Figures for 2005 will be available in the autumn of 2006.

Murdered Children

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list minors killed in the last 12 months by (a) parents and (b) carers in all cases where proceedings are complete; and what their relationship was to their murderer in each case. [33114]

Fiona Mactaggart: In 2003–04, for cases where proceedings are complete, 14 homicide victims aged less than 16 years were killed by their parents (includes adoptive parents). One victim under 16 years was killed by their step parent (includes children of suspect's cohabitant/lover). This is based on data as at 22 October 2004.

The relationship codes for homicide do not include a classification for 'carer' so data on homicides by carers are not available centrally.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many children have been killed by a non-resident parent in each of the last five years during (a) authorised contact and (b) unauthorised contact. [33115]

Fiona Mactaggart: This information is not collected centrally.

Non-departmental Public Bodies

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which of the advisory non-departmental public bodies sponsored by his Department (a) hold public meetings, (b) conduct public consultation exercises, (c) conduct consultation exercises with outside commercial interests, (d) publish a register of Members' interests, (e) publish agendas for meetings and (f) publish the minutes of meetings; and whether it is under a statutory requirement in each case. [20098]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The reply is found in the following table.

Operation Tarian

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of Operation Tarian mounted by the South Wales, Gwent and Avon and Somerset police forces. [32908]

Paul Goggins: The Home Office has commissioned a preliminary evaluation of the work of the Regional Task Force, which is the supply reduction component of Operation Tarian. It became fully operational in January 2004. The evaluation covers its first full year of operation and assess the feasibility of conducting a fuller evaluation at a later date. Findings will be published in 2006.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to answer question reference 23,300, tabled on 26 October 2005 by the hon. Member for Yeovil. [33705]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 28 November 2005, Official Record, column 31W.

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will reply to the question from the hon. Member for Sunderland, South, reference 18605, tabled on 13 October. [28747]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I replied to my hon. Friend on 21 November 2005, Official Report, column 1730W.

Prisoners

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners are being held beyond their automatic release date. [32892]

Fiona Mactaggart: The only prisoners who should not be released at their automatic release date are

(i) those held under Immigration Act powers; the number of these fluctuates but at any one time will be between 200 and 300.

(ii) those serving a disciplinary punishment of additional days; the number of these is not centrally recorded.

Regulatory Impact Assessments

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many regulatory impact assessments have been produced by his Department since August 2001; and if he will list (a) those produced following initial consultation with affected parties on the most appropriate methodology for assessing costs and other impacts and (b) those that set out full commercial impacts, including on profitability, employment, consumer prices and competitiveness, as recommended in Good Policy Making. [17005]

Mr. Charles Clarke: From August 2001 to the end of June 2005 the Department has produced 65 regulatory impact assessments (RIAs), published with legislation, broken down as follows: 2001 (August to December) 42002 82003 2004 92004 202005 (January to June) 24.

The increase from 2004 is a reflection of the change to the RIA process whereby we now complete RIAs in relation to the public sector as well as the private, voluntary and charitable sectors. In preparing RIAs, we follow the Better Regulation Executive (Cabinet Office) guidance in assessing costs and benefits and the economic, social, and environmental impacts of the proposal. RIA requirements have developed over the years since its introduction in 1998 but now also cover a wider range of issues including competition and impact on small firms. This information is recorded in the individual RIAs and generally includes comments on the consultation process, both formal and informal. We also routinely consult publicly on our proposals, with an accompanying Partial RIA, and publish a summary of the views received and our response. The 65 individual RIAs are listed in a regular Command Paper House prepared by Cabinet Office and laid before the House. Copies, together with related consultation documents, can be accessed on the Home Office website.

Road Safety

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will break down the number of sentences passed on persons convicted of the offence of causing death by dangerous driving in the last five years by (a) type of sentence and (b) duration of custodial sentence. [32947]

Fiona Mactaggart [holding answer 28 November 2005]: The information requested in shown in the following table.

Persons sentenced for death by dangerous driving, 2000 to 2004—England and Wales

Schedule 1 Offenders

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of schedule 1 offenders who have attended a sex offenders treatment programme have subsequently reoffended; and what the rate of recidivism involving a similar offence of schedule 1 offenders who have not undergone a sex offenders treatment programme has been in each of the last two years. [32779]

Paul Goggins: The collection of reconviction data for sex offenders attending current treatment programmes is not yet available. Research on early versions of the current programmes found that 4.6 per cent. of offenders completing treatment on the Prison Service programme were reconvicted compared to 8.1 per cent. of sex offenders who did not attend the programme.

The early version of one of the community-based sex offender treatment programmes found that 3.2 per cent. of sex offenders who completed treatment were reconvicted compared to 10.6 per cent. of sex offenders who did not attend treatment. Both prison and community treatment programmes have been revised since this research. However, it is too soon to be able to collect reconviction data over a meaningful period.

Serious Organised Crime Agency

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the executive directors of the Serious Organised Crime Agency. [26650]

Paul Goggins: The Executive Directors of the Serious Organised Crime Agency are: David Bolt, Trevor Pearce, Paul Evans and Malcolm Cornberg.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the salary of the (a) chair, (b) director general designate and (c) each of the four executive directors of the Serious Organised Crime Agency is in 2005–06; what the recruitment costs for the (a) chair, (b) director general designate and (c) each of the four executive directors of the Serious Organised Crime Agency were; and if he will make a statement. [33600]

Paul Goggins: The chair of the Serious Organised Crime Agency was appointed in September 2004 to receive a remuneration of £120,000 p.a. (pro rata). The director general was recruited on a salary of up to £150,000 p.a. These figures were subject to a 2.5 per cent. increase in line with other senior civil servants' pay as at 1 April 2005.

The salaries of the executive directors are within the advertised pay range set out in the recruitment advertisement, which is between £100,000 and £120,000 for the Enforcement, Intelligence and Intervention Directors and £120,000 and £140,000 for the Director of Corporate Services.

The recruitment costs were in line with those published in the Cabinet Office Framework Agreement for Executive Search Firms in force at the time.

Sex Offenders

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many and what percentage of sex offenders are participating in home detention curfews. [21725]

Fiona Mactaggart: On 25 November 2005 there were 3,210 prisoners serving the remaining part of their sentence on the home detention curfew (HDC) scheme. According to the Prison Service IT system, none of those were prisoners subject to the registration requirements of the Sexual Offences Act 2003 or were serving sentences for sexual offences.

Special Advisers

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list (a) the special advisers in his Department, (b) their specific areas of expertise and (c) the total cost of employing them in the latest year for which figures are available. [8814]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister to the hon. Member for Castle Point (Bob Spink) on 4 July 2005, Official Report, column 36W.

Tagging

Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received about tagging people who have been convicted under the Protection from Harassment Act 1997. [32517]

Fiona Mactaggart: I have received no representations about tagging people convicted under this Act.

Terrorism

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 17 November 2005, Official Report, column 1436W, on terrorism, on how many occasions since 1997 he has suggested to Association of Chief Police Officers that chief constables contact hon. Members about a particular Government policy; and what the policies were. [32168]

Mr. Charles Clarke [holding answer 24 November 2005]: The Government's view is that it is to the benefit of both hon. Members and the police service for there to be regular discussions between them on issues of topical interest which affect policing. That approach is reflected in the links between Home Office Ministers and officials and the police service. Precise details on all the occasions since 1997 when the police have been encouraged to contact hon. Members could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many individuals were stopped under section 44 of the Terrorism Act 2000 during (a) the Defence Systems and Equipment International trade fair 2005, (b) the Labour party conference 2005, (c) the Conservative party conference 2005 and (d) the Liberal Democrat party conference 2005. [32868]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Statistics showing the number of stop-searches in each police force area for England and Wales under section 44 of the Terrorism Act 2000 are published annually in the Home Office Statistical Bulletin and are available on the Research, Development and Statistics page of the Home Office website.

The Home Office Statistical Bulletin: 'Arrests for Notifiable Offences and the Operation of Certain Police Powers under PACE; England and Wales', details stops and searches under the Terrorism Act 2000, broken down by police force over financial years. The bulletin also shows subsequent arrests. The most recently available figures can be found on the Home Office website at: http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/hosbpubs1.html. Statistics are not collated below police force area, therefore the number of people stop-searched at specific events or locations is not available.

Young Offenders

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) 12, (b) 13, (c) 14, (d) 15 and (e) 16-year-olds have been held in custody under sentence in each of the last five years. [32890]

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

10 Victoria Street

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the future of his Department's 10 Victoria Street building. [33550]

Alan Johnson: 10 Victoria Street has been vacated by the Department and is surplus to DTI requirements. It is now being brought up to a condition suitable for reletting on the commercial market or reuse elsewhere within Government.

Arms Sales (Iraq)

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which British companies were engaged in the sale of arms to Iraq between (a) 1980 and 1991 and (b) 1991 and 2003; what arms were exported in each case; and if he will make a statement. [31556]

Malcolm Wicks: The DTI holds information only on the export licence applications it has received. Information on which UK companies have applied for licences to export military list equipment to Iraq is commercially confidential and as such is exempt from disclosure. The Scott report does however contain some export licensing information, including on the applicant companies and the goods involved, relating to the period 1984–1990; the report is available from the Libraries of the House. The hon. Member will be aware that a full-scope UN arms embargo has been in place on Iraq since 1990 (UN Security Resolution 661).

Since 1997, the Government have published detailed information on THEIR export licensing decisions, including summaries of the goods licensed, in their annual report on Strategic Export Controls, available from the Libraries of the House.

Artists' Resale Levy

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what evidence led him to reconsider his Department's policy on excluding sales of below 3,000 euros from the artists' resale levy. [33772]

Alan Johnson [holding answer 1 December 2005]: No final decisions have been reached on the implementation of artist's resale right. We have consulted extensively with all interested parties and have met representatives from the art trade and artists. We have also commissioned and received independent evidence since the European Directive was originally negotiated.

The Government's decision will be based on ensuring the continuing success of the British art market and supporting British artists. We will announce a decision in this House in the very near future.

Broadband Provision

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he is taking on local loop unbundling to ensure that the UK continues to improve its broadband provision. [32533]

Alun Michael: The matter raised is the responsibility of the Office of Communications (Ofcom). Ofcom is the independent regulator for the communications sector, deriving its main powers and duties directly from statute rather than by delegation from the Secretary of State, and accountable to Parliament in its own right. Accordingly, the officials have asked the chief executive of Ofcom to respond directly to the hon. Member and to send me a copy of his response. Copies of the chief executive's letter will also be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Business Start-ups

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what grants are available from the Government and their agencies to assist business start-ups in Rochdale constituency. [33439]

Alun Michael: There is one grant specifically available to the Rochdale area and it is funded under the Single Regeneration Budget (SRB round 5). The Business Development Grant provides funding to both start ups and existing businesses which are setting up in, are located in, or are re-locating to, the inner Rochdale SRB5 area, provided they can demonstrate an element of job creation or job safeguarding.

Monies can be used towards the purchase of equipment, market research and feasibility studies, marketing and legal set up costs. Applicants can receive 70 per cent. of eligible costs up to a maximum of £3,000.

The Inner Rochdale SRB5 area stretches from Sparth to Cloverhall, and from Deeplish and Newbold to Lower Falinge and Hamer.

Rochdale also benefits from Selective Finance for Investment. There are currently eight companies in Rochdale benefiting from these funds, which focus on job creation and job safeguarding.

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many grants for job creation his Department awarded in Rochdale in each year from 1992; and what the value was in each case. [33461]

Alun Michael: The following awards were made to companies in Rochdale:

	Number of companies	Offered	Capex	Jobs created	Jobs safeguarded	Programme
1997–98	1	50,000	345,000	20	—	RSA
1998–99	12	914,500	6,762,960	192	84	RSA

Consultants

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what mechanisms are in place to assess the effectiveness of consultant-led projects in his Department; what sanctions are available to penalise consultants who run unsuccessful projects; how many projects conducted by consultants were assessed as unsuccessful in each year since 2000; and what sanctions were imposed. [29057]

Alan Johnson: Comprehensive guidance on the appointment and management of consultants by the Department is available to staff via the Department's intranet. This details necessary steps and considerations at all stages of the engagement of consultants, from justification of need in the business case through to submission of a Post-Completion Report by the Departmental project manager. This Post-Completion document should mirror the original business case and address among other things whether critical success factors were achieved, whether the project was carried out to schedule and to budget and an assessment of lessons learned about the consultant's performance and the management of the project.

The online guidance refers users to the requirements of the OGC Gateway process that provides assurance at critical stages of a programme or project's lifecycle.

Contracts should set out key performance measures via, for example, 'Service Level Agreements', which specify the deliverables and timescales to be met by the consultant. In the event of these targets not being met contracts may provide for the payment of liquidated damages by the contractor. This will be agreed on a case by case basis.

Further information is not available centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list departmental projects conducted by consultants in each year since 2000; what the cost was in each case; and what the total cost of employing consultants was in each year. [29059]

Alan Johnson: Central records indicate that the cost of employing consultants in each financial year has been as follows:

	£ million
2000-01	36
2001-02	64
2002-03	93
2003-04	112
2004-05	86

Further information is not available centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Damages

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the 10 largest amounts of damages paid out by his Department in the last year for which figures are available, indicating in each case the nature of the claim. [27724]

Alan Johnson: There were seven claims for damages paid out by my Department in the last financial year (2004–05) as follows:

Compensation for work related personal injury	8,500
Compensation for upheld complaint of bullying and harassment, including compensation for loss of earnings	6,812.49
Compensation for work related personal injury	6,500
Compensation for work related personal injury	4,100
Compensation for upheld complaint of disability discrimination	2,500
Compensation for upheld complaint of race discrimination	2,000
Compensation for upheld complaint of race discrimination	2,000

Departmental Estate

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what (a) land and (b) property his Department (i) owns and (ii) rents in each constituency; and if he will make a statement. [33252]

Alan Johnson: The following list shows properties owned/rented by the Department and the constituency in which each building is located.

European Federation of Black Women Business Owner Awards

Note:

The term 'sponsor' has been defined as business/industry awards programmes that have received a financial contribution from the Department of Trade and Industry.

Departmental Staff

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many personnel were employed in his Department in each year since 1997, broken down by (a) civil servants, (b) contractors and (c) other staff. [27579]

Alan Johnson: The figures for the number of civil servants employed by the Department of Trade and Industry are published in Table C of the Civil Service Statistics which covers permanent staff numbers (on a full-time equivalent basis) in each Departments and Agency. The latest (2004) Civil Service Statistics are available in the Libraries of the House and on the Cabinet Office Statistics website at:

http://www.civilservice.gov.uk/management_of_the_civil_service/statistics/civil_service_statistics/index.asp

Specific data on the number of contractors and other staff in the Department and Agencies since 1997 is not held. The information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Websites

Charles Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will take steps to ensure the Department's websites attain the W3C AAA standard of accessibility for people with visual and other disabilities; and if he will set a target date for this standard to be achieved by. [30965]

Alan Johnson: DTI follows the Guidelines for UK Government Websites which mandate Level A of the W3C's Web Content Accessibility Guidelines. DTI aims to go beyond this by meeting the AA standard, along with those elements of AAA which are considered best practice. However, neither the Government Guidelines, e-Accessibility communications from the European Union or advice from the RNIB have ever suggested that government websites should attain and maintain the whole of Level AAA.

We do recognise importance of ensuring all of our web content is accessible to all our customers, regardless of disability, level of technology or other factors. We therefore strive to build accessibility and usability into all our websites, from commissioning the initial design to the ongoing maintenance.

Economic Performance Statistics

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to his oral statement of 19 May 2005, Official Report, column 283, what the source is for his reference to the UK as the fourth largest economy of the world; and when he expects such figures will next be updated. [33475]

Alan Johnson: The source was OECD statistics of comparative GDP of member states at current prices and exchange rates. The latest figures published by the OECD relate to 2004. Data for 2005 will be released towards the middle of 2006.

Energy Imports

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what percentage of the United Kingdom's energy requirements for the 2004–05 financial year was imported from France; and at what cost. [33422]

Malcolm Wicks: During the calendar year 2004, the United Kingdom imported 9,784GWh of electricity generated in France, which was valued at £347 million. In addition, small quantities of coal, manufactured solid fuels and petroleum products were also imported from France, but from records held centrally it is not possible to reliably identify whether these were produced in France or if French companies acted as intermediaries.

In total, imports from France accounted for around 2½ per cent. of energy imports, equating to around 1¼ per cent. of UK primary energy demand.

Energy Review

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry who will chair the Energy Review; when it will deliver its preliminary findings; whether they will be published; when he expects it will be completed; and when he expects its findings to be made public. [34181]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 2 December 2005]: I will lead the Energy Review.

The Review will report to my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister and the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry in early summer. Details of the arrangements for the publication of the findings of the Review will be made available at that time.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will seek a cross-party consensus on the recommendations of the Energy Review before they are published. [34182]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 2 December 2005]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and I would welcome contributions throughout the Energy Review process from a wide range of stakeholders, which of course includes colleagues from all parties.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether his Department plans to publish a White Paper following completion of the Energy Review; how representations should be made to the Review; whether there will be public hearings; and whether the Review will consider the (a) operation of energy markets and (b) incentives for long-term investment in the energy sector. [34184]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 2 December 2005]: There are no plans to publish a White Paper at present.

A consultation document will be published early in the review process. Stakeholders will be invited to respond to the consultation document in writing. Throughout the review a programme of events will be held to engage with stakeholders and encourage an informed debate.

The Terms of Reference of the Review are broad in scope including aspects of both energy supply and demand and will focus on policy measures to help us deliver our objectives beyond 2010.

Energy Supplies (Wales)

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what projections his Department has made for carbon dioxide emissions in Wales based on (a) a continuation of the present mix of energy sources, (b) mixes of energy sources that include nuclear power and (c) mixes of energy sources that do not include nuclear power; and if he will make a statement; [33522]

(2) what projections his Department has made for a mix of energy sources to meet energy demand in Wales that (a) includes and (b) does not include nuclear power over the next (i) five, (ii) 10, (iii) 20 and (iv) 50 years; and if he will make a statement. [33526]

Malcolm Wicks: Official energy and emissions projections are not available for Wales. Projections for the UK as a whole were published in November 2004, and are available on the DTI website at http://www.dti.gov.uk/energy/sepn/uep2004.pdf. An addendum was also published, which extended the projections to 2020, and can be found at http://www.dti.gov.uk/energy/sepn/uep_addendum.pdf.

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment his Department has made of the potential for renewable energy to meet energy demand in Wales over the next (a) five, (b) 10, (c) 20 and (d) 50 years; and if he will make a statement. [33523]

Malcolm Wicks: The Government have a target of 10 per cent. of electricity coming from Renewable Obligation eligible sources of renewable energy by 2010, with an aspiration to double that by 2020.

The Department has made no assessment of the potential for renewable energy to meet energy demand by region. However, the Welsh Assembly Government have recently published Technical Advice Note 8:M (Tan 8) Planning for Renewable Energy, and is consulting on Route Map to a clean, low carbon and more competitive energy future for Wales. Copies are available from their website http://www.wales.gov.uk

Enterprise Grants

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many enterprise grants were made available to small and medium-sized enterprises in each year from 1997 until the scheme concluded; and what their total value was in (a) the UK, (b) each region and (c) each constituency. [33469]

Alun Michael: The Enterprise Grant scheme was launched on 1 January 2000 and closed to new applications on 31 March 2004. Scheme information relating to applications, offers and expenditure by region can be found in the Industrial Development Act Annual Report, published by the Stationery Office and placed in the Libraries of the House. Due to changes in data storage the information is not available by constituency.

EU Directive 2001/77/EC

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress has been made in meeting the requirements of Article 6 of EU Directive 2001/77/EC; and if he will make a statement. [32746]

Malcolm Wicks: Article 6 of the EU Directive 2001/77/EC, on the promotion of electricity produced from renewable energy sources in the internal electricity market, refers to Administrative procedures and the need to:

reduce the regulatory and non-regulatory burden; streamline and expediting procedures; and ensure that the rules are objective, transparent and non-discriminatory.

The 2003 Energy White Paper 'Our energy future—creating a low carbon economy', reviewed Government's energy policy including renewables and also gave a commitment to review progress of the Renewables Obligation in 2005–06. The Government are currently consulting on the 2005–06 Review of the Renewables Obligation. The changes under consideration are limited and seek to maintain the stability of the Obligation while improving its effectiveness over time.

A copy of the consultation document is available from the Libraries of the House.

Freedom of Information

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many Freedom of Information applications his Department has received; how many have taken more than 20 days to process; and how many of these gave rise to complaints about the time taken. [31222]

Alan Johnson: Between 1 January and 30 June 2005 my Department received 533 requests for information under the Freedom of Information Act 2000 (the Act). 205 requests took longer than 20 working days to respond to, of which 52 were answered within an extended time as permitted by the Act. These figures were published in the Department for Constitutional Affair's FOI monitoring bulletins for the first and second quarters of 2005. The number of complaints about the time taken to respond to requests under the Act is not a figure which is required for central Government monitoring purposes and is therefore not held by my Department.

The Department for Constitutional Affairs is committed to publishing quarterly updates in relation to departmental performance under FOI, including information on both the volume and outcomes of requests. The bulletin for the second quarter was published on 30 September 2005 and can be found on the DCA website at http://www.foi.gov.uk/statsapr-jun05.htm and the bulletin for the first quarter can be found at http://www.foi.gov.uk/statsjan-mar05.htm. The bulletins are available in the Libraries of the House. The next bulletin will be published before Christmas, and an annual report will be published in early 2006.

Gas

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment his Department has made of the Gas Exporting Countries' Forum's long-term influence on global gas prices. [32268]

Malcolm Wicks: The evidence to date indicates that gas exporting countries are seeking to increase their supplies. The Gas Exporting Countries' Forum has said that it does not wish to become a 'gas OPEC'.

Microgeneration Energy

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what research he has commissioned into the potential for microgeneration energy production across the waterways in (a) Leominster constituency, (b) each region of the United Kingdom and (c) the whole of the United Kingdom. [33489]

Malcolm Wicks: I have not commissioned research that focuses specifically on the potential for microgeneration across the waterways in Leominster constituency or on a regional basis. I did, however, commission a report looking into the costs and benefits of a range of microgeneration technologies including micro-hydro. I plan to publish this report shortly.

Miners' Compensation

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry in how many miners' hearing loss claims his Department has paid for more than one medical examination. [34208]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 2 December 2005]: To date, the Department has met the cost of more than one medical examination in 665 miners' hearing loss claims out of 38,244 received.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much has been paid in medical costs under the miners' compensation scheme (a) in total and (b) in hearing loss claims; and in respect of how many claims in each case. [34209]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 2 December 2005]: The total paid for medical costs in the respiratory disease and Vibration White Finger schemes is £311 million. This is in respect of £403,000 settled claims. The figure for medical costs in hearing loss claims is not readily available as these are met in respect of individual claims rather than on a schemed basis.

Nuclear Power

Anne Moffat: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether the (a) modification and (b) upgrading of nuclear power stations requires a planning application to be submitted. [34008]

Malcolm Wicks: Depending on the nature of the change, planning permission may be required.

Patent Office

Derek Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when the next quinquennial review of the Patent Office will take place. [30052]

Alan Johnson: A recommendation of "Better Government Services—Executive Agencies in the 21st Century" published by the Prime Minister's Office of Public Services Reform in July 2002 was that the central programme of quinquennial reviews of agencies such as the Patent Office, was abolished and replaced by business reviews of the end-to-end process in achieving specific outcomes. The methodology for such reviews and the cycle of them is integrated with the departments' business planning process and specific priorities for review agreed as part of Spending Review decisions.

A methodology has been adopted whereby the Patent Office Business Plan is agreed each year with the Department of Trade and Industry to ensure its objectives match departmental objectives and plans.

Post Office

Dr. McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make it his policy to maintain the Post Office as a public utility; and if he will make a statement. [33589]

Barry Gardiner: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry made it clear at DTI oral questions on 21 July that the Government will not privatise Royal Mail. We will continue to pursue our ambition of a publicly owned Royal Mail Group, including Post Office Ltd., fully restored to good health and providing customers with an excellent service and its employees with rewarding employment.

Public Service Agreements

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the feasibility of making international comparisons of consumer empowerment and support for the purposes of measuring achievement against public service agreement target 3. [30062]

Alan Johnson: In 2003, my Department published a comparative report on consumer policy regimes. The report can be found at http://www.dti.gov.uk/ccp/topics1/pdf1/benchmain.pdf. This was the result of work by DTI, OFT and HM Treasury officials looking at nine different consumer policy regimes across the OECD.

A DTI-led research programme under the OECD's Committee on Consumer Policy is now examining in more detail specific aspects of consumer policy regimes in OECD countries, with the aim of identifying the common features of effective regimes. As the research progresses, our understanding of what makes an effective consumer regime should improve and we will be able to compare aspects of our own regime against this.

Regional Assistance Grant

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the total amount of regional assistance grant to industry was in (a) each constituency in the north west of England and (b) each region in England in 2004–05; and if he will make a statement. [33444]

Alun Michael: The figures in the table include Regional Selective Assistance (RSA) and Selective Financial Investment (SFI) grants. RSA came to an end at the end of the financial year 2003–04 and was replaced by Selective Financial Investment (SFI). However some RSA grants received at the end of the financial year 2003–04 were processed in 2004–05.

RSA and SFI are aimed specifically at assisted areas (list as follows) which means that not all the constituencies in the North West are eligible for funding.

Renewable Energy

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress has been made in achieving an increase in electricity production from renewable energy sources in line with EU Directive 2001/77/EC; and if he will make a statement. [32745]

Malcolm Wicks: The Government have made significant progress in increasing electricity production from renewable energy sources in line with EU Directive 2001/77/EC, on the promotion of electricity produced from renewable energy sources in the internal electricity market.

In 2004, 4.39 per cent. of electricity was derived from renewable sources on a Renewables Directive basis, compared to just 2.85 per cent. in 2001. The details of which are published in the Digest of UK Energy Statistics (DUKES). A copy of DUKES is available from the Libraries of the House.

Colin Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what research his Department has undertaken to assess the export potential of renewable energy technologies to developing countries. [33985]

Malcolm Wicks: The renewable sector trade promotion service is currently focussing its market visit and appraisal work on countries that have demonstrated the greatest market potential for the UK and is supporting companies to win business in those markets. The service has in the past carried out formal market appraisal work for some developing countries including India and Indonesia which were followed up with trade missions.

Small Business Service

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many inquiries the Small Business Service had from Southend West constituency in each of the last three years for which figures are available. [33547]

Alun Michael: Inquiries for small businesses are handled by the local Business Link. The hon. Member's constituency falls within the catchment area of Business Link for Essex. In 2002–03 Business Link received 12,717 inquiries; in 2003–04 16,014 and in 2004–05 18,657.

The Business Link for Essex does not collate data at constituency level. However, it holds the following records of inquiries for Southend by financial year:

	Number of inquiries
April 2003 to March 2004	936
April 2004 to March 2005	1,228
April 2005 to November 2005	1,623

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many businesses were started in Southend West constituency with the help of the Small Business Service in each of the last three years for which figures are available. [33548]

Alun Michael: DTI figures based solely on VAT registrations for Southend West parliamentary constituency are shown as follows for 2002 to 2004. Data for 2005 will be available in autumn 2006.

	DTI figures
2002	275
2003	265
2004	245

VAT registrations do not capture all start-up activity. Businesses are unlikely to be registered if they fall below the compulsory VAT threshold. Only 1.8 million out of 4.3 million enterprises were registered for VAT at the start of 2004.

Public funding for start-ups takes various forms, including support from Business Link. In relation to Business Link, data is not routinely captured at constituency level. However, Business Link for Essex holds the following records of inquiries for Southend by financial year:

	Number of inquiries
April 2003 to March 2004	936
April 2004 to March 2005	1,228
April 2005 to November 2005	1,623

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much funding was made available to companies by the Small Business Service in each of the last three years for which figures are available. [33549]

Alun Michael: The total programme expenditure for the Small Business Service, as reported in its Annual Report and Agency Accounts, was:

	£ million
	Amount
2002–03	357
2003–04	378
2004–05	386

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the Small Business Service in assisting the establishment of new companies. [33551]

Alun Michael: Since the Small Business Service was established in 2000, business start-ups have risen to record levels. The number of small businesses has risen by over 500,000, since 1997, to 4.3 million. In England the Business Link service is now supporting 170,000 pre-start ups each year. The Small Business Service's Public Sector Agreement target is to help to build an enterprise society in which small firms of all kinds thrive and achieve their potential with (i) an increase in the number of people considering going into business, (ii) an improvement in the overall productivity of small firms, and (iii) more enterprise in disadvantaged communities. Recent progress in achieving this target is available on the DTI website: www.dti.gov.uk/expenditureplan/report2005/pdfs/expenditure_plan_complete.pdf

Small/Medium Enterprises Employees

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many employees in the UK are employed (a) in (i) small and (ii) medium-sized enterprises and (b) in total; and if he will make a statement. [33446]

Alun Michael: In the UK, at the start of 2004, there were 6,470,000 employees employed in small enterprises (enterprises with 0 to 49 employees), 2,567,000 employed in medium-sized enterprises (enterprises with 50 to 249 employees), and 9,124,000 employed in large enterprises (enterprises with 250 or more employees).

This gives a total of 18,161,000 employees in the UK private sector at the start of 2004. This excludes 3,838,000 business owners and partners. This information is set out in tables available on the website of the Department of Trade and Industry's Small Business Service at www.sbs.gov.uk/smes.

Small businesses make a major contribution to the health of the economy, helping to boost productivity, increase competition and innovation, and generating employment, which is why the Government are committed to making the UK the best place in the world to start and grow a business. Since 1997, employment in small firms has risen by nearly 900,000.

Telephone Numbers

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer of 10 October 2005, Official Report, column 38W, on telephone numbers, when he expects Ofcom to reply to the hon. Member for Gordon. [31730]

Alun Michael: I have made inquiries and it appears that due to an administrative error the questions did not reach Ofcom as intended. This has now been rectified and the hon. Member should receive his replies very shortly.

Wind Farm, Gwynt y Mor

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what applications he has received in respect of the development of the proposed Gwynt y Mor wind farm off the coast of North Wales. [33878]

Malcolm Wicks: I can confirm that the Department has received an application under Sections 36 and 36A of the Electricity Act 1989 from npower renewables for the construction of a 750MW offshore electricity generating station at Gwynt y Mor.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Consolidated Resource Accounts

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the written-off bad debt referred to on page 58 of the Consolidated Resource Accounts 2004–05. [34350]

Mr. Lammy: The written off bad debt referred to on page 58 of the consolidated resource accounts 2004–05 issued by the Department for Culture, Media and Sport arose as a result a change in treatment of VAT on rental invoices to tenants following a Customs and Excise (now HMRC) determination that DCMS cannot opt to tax and therefore is not providing a supply to its tenants for the purposes of VAT. Hence DCMS cannot issue a VAT invoice.

Legal advice from the Treasury Solicitor confirmed HMRC advice that DCMS could not opt to tax.

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the theft of works of art in Buenos Aires referred to on page 58 of the Consolidated Resource Accounts 2004–05. [34351]

Mr. Lammy: The works of art at Buenos Aires were stolen from the UK ambassador's temporary residence, Buenos Aires in August 2001. Details of the stolen works of art were immediately placed on the International Art Loss Register to try to identify any subsequent attempt to sell them on the International Art Market. However, as they have not been recovered, a decision was made to write them off as referred to on page 58 of the Consolidated Resource Accounts 2004–05.

Gaming Board

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) if she will make a statement on the proposals by the Gaming Board to increase prizes and stakes on gaming machines; [33968]

(2) what plans she has to implement the recommendations of the Gaming Board to increase prizes and stakes. [33969]

Mr. Caborn: While the triennial review of gaming machine stake and prize limits conducted by the Gaming Board (now replaced by the Gambling Commission) had become a matter of custom and practice, it had no statutory basis.

The Government decided last year that it would be inappropriate to a schedule of the stakes and prize limits that would apply on increase stake and prize limits just as Parliament was about to debate the Gambling Bill, and before any of the regulatory safeguards proposed in the Bill, now the Gambling Act 2005, could be put in place. Instead implementation of the Act was published alongside the draft Bill.

While I understand that many in the industry feel they are facing difficult trading conditions, I have seen no clear evidence that would lead the Government to reconsider this position.

Government Art Collection

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list the 10 most expensive items of modern art purchased from Government funds in the last 12 months. [33738]

Mr. Lammy: The information you request is not available centrally. Individual Departments keep records of works of art bought or commissioned by them.

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Hemel Hempstead (Mike Penning) of 21 November 2005, Official Report, column 1608W, on departmental assets, whether the Government Art Collection is insured. [34401]

Mr. Lammy: The Government Art Collection is not commercially insured. In general, the Government carry their own risk. However, there are a small number of exceptions of works of art in non-Government buildings which are commercially insured.

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Hemel Hempstead (Mike Penning) of 21 November 2005, Official Report, column 1608W, on departmental assets, whether an estimate is made of the value of items in the Government Art Collection for (a) risk assessment and (b) insurance purposes when art is selected for Ministers' offices. [34403]

Mr. Lammy: The current monetary value of a work of art can only be accurately assessed at the time of its purchase or sale or by professional valuation. In the former case, the collection is not actively traded; in the latter, it would not be a justifiable expenditure of public funds to have the whole collection commercially valued.

The professional staff at the Government Art Collection assess each display location on a case by case basis. The works of art from the collection that are placed in Minister's offices are not commercially insured as in general the Government carry their own risk.

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Hemel Hempstead (Mike Penning) of 21 November 2005, Official Report, column 1608W, on departmental assets, whether the assessors of the Government Art Collection have identified a particular cross-section of the whole as (a) possessing particular and exceptional merit, (b) as being of particular rarity and (c) in need of preservation. [34404]

Mr. Lammy: The professional curators of the Government Art Collection (GAC) assess the most important works within the collection and determine conservation treatment accordingly.

Licensing

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on representations received from the hospitality sector in Coventry, South on the Licensing Act 2003. [32325]

James Purnell [holding answer 29 November 2005]: I am not aware that the Government have received any representations from the hospitality sector in Coventry, South about the Licensing Act 2003.

I am confident that licensing reform will remove unnecessary regulatory burdens and enable the hospitality sector in Coventry and elsewhere to better respond to consumer demand. At the same time, licensing reform will help tackle alcohol-related problems by removing artificial and fixed closing times and providing new powers to tackle problem premises.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will place in the Library (a) the Regulatory Impact Assessments for the Licensing Act 2003 and (b) her Department's statutory guidance and subsequent secondary legislation. [32496]

James Purnell: All of the Regulatory Impact Assessments, the statutory guidance and secondary legislation have been deposited in the House Libraries on the dates set out in the following tables.

London Olympics

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made of the opportunities for businesses in Gravesham arising from the 2012 London Olympic Games. [33637]

Mr. Caborn: There has been no specific assessment made of the benefits to Gravesham from hosting the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games. However, we expect the Games to offer significant opportunities for business across the whole of the UK with contracts on offer ranging from construction and land remediation through to the design and manufacture of staff uniforms and catering for visitors, athletes and officials.

We have established a Nations and Regions Group on which each region of England—including the South East of England—plus Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland are represented. We are asking each region to develop a plan for their area to maximise the benefits of hosting the Games in sporting, social and economic terms.

Private Finance Projects

Stephen Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport pursuant to the answer of 8 June 2005, Official Report, column 583W, to the hon. Member for Runnymede and Weybridge (Mr. Hammond), on private finance projects, what the (a) capital value and (b) total value is of the Royal Parks Agency's private finance initiative contract for Inn on the Park at St. James'; and what percentage of the contract is attributable to capital value. [27133]

Mr. Lammy: The Royal Parks Agency's contract with the catering concessionaire who runs the Inn the Park restaurant at St. James's Park is, according to HM Treasury guidelines, more properly classified as a public-private partnership than a private finance initiative.

The capital value of the investment made by the concessionaire to fit out the restaurant was £718,755. The Royal Parks invested £3,146,231 in the project. The total value of the agency's contract with the concessionaire includes an annual licence fee to the agency, which is set at a percentage of the restaurant's annual turnover.

The value of the licence fee and the percentage rate at which it is set are both matters of commercial confidentiality.

Tourism

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the cost has been of VisitBritain's Britain Welcomes China initiative. [25884]

Tessa Jowell: The cost to VisitBritain of the "Britain Welcomes China" campaign was £49,500. A further £16,500 was raised from VisitBritain's private sector partners. The campaign is part of broader work to ensure that Britain's tourism industry makes the most of this emerging market, which is increasingly important to the whole of the British economy. In 2004, UK exports of goods and services to China amounted to £3.4 billion, a rise of 55 per cent. over the figure for 2002.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what funding she makes available to local authorities to establish tourism officers. [34247]

James Purnell: The Government value the importance of local authorities in developing tourism, and believe that the appointment of dedicated tourism officers is one way of adding value by co-ordinating local marketing, infrastructure development, and other functions.

However, my Department is not responsible for the funding of local authorities, which are themselves best placed to make decisions on tourism funding from their general resources. In making such decisions on the basis of local need, the Government expect local authorities to work closely with the regional development agencies where appropriate, and with others including the private sector.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport which 10 tourist attractions in Lancashire received the highest visitor numbers in each of the last three years for which figures are available. [34066]

James Purnell: My Department does not keep a central record of the tourist attractions throughout the United Kingdom. VisitBritain who promote tourism in England and overseas, and England's Northwest Research Service produce Attractions Surveys, and it's from these source, that the visitor numbers to the top 10 tourist attractions in Lancashire in 2002 and 2004 have been collated and set out in the table.

Tourist attraction	2004	2003	2002
Pleasureland Theme Park	2,100,000	2,100,000	2,000,000
Blackpool Pleasure Beach	6,200,000	6,200,000	6,200,000

[2] Estimate

Wembley Project

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on progress of the Wembley project. [34246]

Mr. Caborn: We have been given assurances that the new Wembley Stadium will be completed in the spring of 2006.

The aim of both the Football Association and Wembley National Stadium Ltd. is to hold the 2006 Cup Final at Wembley.

This is an extremely complex project that will ensure that Wembley remains one of the world's great sporting venues and a fitting stadium for football in the 21st century.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Airspace (Extraordinary Rendition)

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether under the (a) US/UK bilateral Air Services Agreement and (b) Chicago Convention the US authorities would need to seek permission for the use of (i) UK airspace and (ii) UK overseas territories for the purpose of the extraordinary rendition of those accused of terrorist activities; and if he will make a statement. [33706]

Ian Pearson: Under the UK/USA Air Services Agreement and the Chicago Convention, the permission of the United Kingdom is required to operate scheduled and non-scheduled services between the United States and the United Kingdom or United Kingdom Overseas Territories. Under the Chicago Convention, permission is not needed for non-scheduled, non-commercial civil aircraft overflying or landing at civilian airports in the UK or its Overseas Territories.

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 19 October 2005, Official Report, columns 1093–4W, on UK airspace, if he will list those countries (a) where there are substantial grounds to believe that a person deported would be subject to torture and (b) where there is a risk that the death penalty will be applied; and if he will make a statement. [33711]

Dr. Howells: It is not possible to list countries in the way suggested. The specific circumstances of an individual's case would determine whether there would be substantial grounds for believing that he or she would be subject to torture or face a real risk of the death penalty if deported.

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether UK Government officials have discussed with the US Administration the use of EU airspace for the purpose of the extraordinary rendition of those accused of terrorist activities since 11 September 2001; and if he will make a statement. [33818]

Ian Pearson: We raise a range of issues with the United States Administration on a regular basis. The Government are aware of media allegations about "extraordinary rendition" operations allegedly conducted by the US authorities, and my right hon. Friend, the Foreign Secretary, has written to the US Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice, on behalf of EU Partners.

Albania

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the Government's policy is on the possible accession of Albania to the EU. [33591]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The Thessaloniki summit of June 2003 reaffirmed the EU's commitment to the eventual integration of the Western Balkans countries, including Albania, into the Union. In return for this commitment, the countries undertook to meet the political and economic requirements, including regional co-operation, that are set for all aspirants. The Government fully support the commitment made at Thessaloniki towards Albania, and hopes that Albania will take steps to meet the necessary conditions.

Argentina

Mr. MacDougall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent progress has been made in negotiations with Argentina over air-links to the Falkland Islands. [34121]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: We would like to see an agreement on further flights between the Falklands and mainland South America but this must be on terms acceptable to all sides. So far we have not reached an agreed basis for starting discussion.

British Embassy (Moscow)

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the cost was of running the British embassy in Moscow in each year since 2002. [33365]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: From the budget devolved annually to the British embassy in Moscow, the following has been spent on its running costs during each financial year (FY) since 2002:

Financial year	Amount
2002–03	4,908,161.45
2003–04	4,542,097.90
2004–05	4,213,081.25

Departmental Research

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what research projects commissioned by his Department are being undertaken; and what the publication arrangements are in each case. [32995]

Ian Pearson: Definitive information on commissioning of research projects is not held centrally and could not be obtained except at disproportionate cost. However, I am not aware of any external organisations at present commissioned to carry out research projects on behalf of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office.

Departmental Tendering Policy

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his policy is on including (a) ethical and (b) environmental factors in tenders for services. [33332]

Ian Pearson: Tendering procedures for the award of contracts by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office adhere to strict guidelines embodying not only the EU procurement directives and UK legislation, but also the Department's own code of ethics. Robust measures for the evaluation process are in place which ensure not only the equal treatment of all tenders, but also the transparency and impartiality of the process.

Specific environmental factors can be a criterion and this is considered on a case-by-case basis. However, the Department requires as a minimum that all services are provided in accordance with the Department's environmental policy, which is to conserve energy, water and other resources, reduce waste and phase out the use of ozone depleting substances and minimise the release of greenhouse gases, volatile organic compounds and other substances damaging to health and the environment. All written work, including reports, in connection with the contract shall, unless otherwise specified, be produced on recycled paper containing at least 80 per cent. post consumer waste and used on both sides where appropriate.

Egypt

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what discussions he has had with the Government of Egypt on the human rights and welfare of the Baha'i community; [33452]

(2) what assessment he has made of the impact of the forthcoming computerisation of identity cards in Egypt and the potential exclusion of the Baha'i community upon the rights of the Baha'i community; [33453]

(3) what representations he has received on the impact of the forthcoming computerisation of identity cards in Egypt upon (a) the human rights, (b) the access to basic services and (c) the access to employment of the Baha'i community. [33459]

Dr. Howells: New Egyptian identity cards require citizens to associate themselves with one of only three religions: Islam, Judaism or Christianity. Egyptian citizens of other religions will not be entitled to an identity card, and may therefore suffer from lack of access to public services.

The Egyptian constitution states that all Egyptian citizens should be treated equally, regardless of religion. It is therefore important that provision is made for all Egyptian citizens to receive identity cards.

The UK, along with Australia, the USA, Canada and Ireland, took part in a demarche on the Egyptian Government in December 2004 on the topic of identity cards. We plan to raise our concerns again with the Egyptian Government before the end of the year.

The Foreign and Commonwealth Office has received representations from the Baha'i community, Egyptian and international human rights organisations and people that have converted from Islam to Christianity on the impact the new identity cards will have.

EU-Israel Association Agreement

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if, at the Association Council EU-Israel meeting to be held in Brussels on 12 December, the UK presidency will call for Israel to consult the EU by a set date on its compliance with the human rights obligations of the EU-Israel Association Agreement; and if he will make a statement. [33300]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The EU maintains a regular dialogue with Israel on human rights within the framework and structure of the EU-Israel Association Agreement. We last raised human rights with Israel at the EU-Israel Political Dialogue and Cooperation subcommittee, which met for the first time on 21 November 2005 and proposed the creation of a new working group on human rights. We will agree with other EU member states what issues to raise in advance of the forthcoming EU-Israel Association Council.

European Court of Human Rights

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many (a) petitions were received and (b) cases were dealt with by the European Court of Human Rights in the last five years for which figures are available; and how many and what percentage of each total related to each Council of Europe member state. [33724]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The following table provides a list of how many petitions have been received and how many cases have been dealt with by the European Court of Human Rights during the 5 year period 2000–04. The figures also relate to those for each member state of the Council of Europe, excluding Monaco, who only joined the Council of Europe in October 2004.

[1] Cases in this column include: applications declared inadmissible or struck out; and judgments.

Greek Cypriot Community

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the Minister for Europe last received a request for a meeting with the Greek Cypriot community in the United Kingdom; what his reply was; and if he will make a statement. [34442]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The Greek Cypriot community invited me to attend a dinner on 8 November and requested a meeting. My reply expressed my regret that I was unable to attend the dinner and meet with them at that time. I am, of course, willing to consider future requests for meetings.

Iraq

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to paragraph 92 of the Intelligence and Security Committee Report Cm 5972, whether the Secret Intelligence Service has reported to the Government on its investigations into the authenticity of its documentary evidence into the claim that Iraq sought to procure uranium from Africa. [33620]

Ian Pearson: It is not the Government's policy to comment on intelligence matters. The Intelligence and Security Committee reviewed the assessments made of available intelligence in the report to which my hon. Friend refers. Following this, and exceptionally, all relevant intelligence material relating to Iraq's alleged attempts to procure Uranium from Niger was made available to Lord Butler when conducting his 2004 Review.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many military missions over Iraq have been flown by US aircraft based on Diego Garcia since March 2003; and what types of missions have been flown. [32332]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 28 November 2005]: I have been asked to reply.

Information relating to military missions over Iraq from US aircraft based on Diego Garcia during the combat phase of Operation telic in March and April 2003 is not held centrally by the Ministry of Defence or any other Government Department and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, we can confirm that no US aircraft based at Diego Garcia has been involved in operations over Iraq since the end of April 2003.

Israel

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to (a) his Israeli counterpart and (b) the United Nations about the human rights implications of the Israeli air force policy of flying over the occupied Gaza strip breaking the sound barrier to create supersonic booms; and if he will make a statement. [33621]

Dr. Howells: Our embassy in Tel Aviv has raised our concerns about the indiscriminate damage caused by low flying aircraft in Gaza with the Israeli Government and directly with the Israeli air force. Israel has the right to defend itself against terrorism but must act within international law and minimise the impact of its actions on innocent civilians. Our concerns about Israeli military activity are reflected in our voting record at the United Nations.

Maladministration

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many payments for maladministration have been made by (a) his Department, (b) its agencies, (c) its non-departmental public bodies and (d) other bodies for which his Department has responsibility in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [32241]

Ian Pearson: It is the policy of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, its agencies, non-departmental public bodies and, where appropriate, its sponsored organisations to make financial redress in accordance with the guidance set out in chapter 18.7 and annexes 18.1 and 18.2 of "Government Accounting". The guidance can be accessed at:

http://www.government-accounting.gov.uk/current/content/ga_18_7.htm

The information the hon. Member requested is set out in the following table:

Mauritania

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to visit Mauritania; and whether he has had recent discussions with officials from this country. [33369]

Dr. Howells: Following the coup d'etat in Mauritania on 3 August, the UK, along with our EU partners, has sought to engage constructively with the Mauritanian authorities, in order to encourage a return to democracy as soon as possible. Since the coup, UK officials have had bilateral contact with representatives of Mauritania. On 30 November, my right hon. Friend, the Foreign Secretary, took part in EU consultations with Mauritania under Article 96 of the Cotonou Agreement, to set a timetable for a return to democracy.

There are no plans for a Government Minister to visit Mauritania.

Ministerial Meetings

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met the President of (a) Paraguay and (b) Mongolia; and what was discussed. [33366]

Ian Pearson: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has not had the opportunity to meet with President Duarte Frutos of Paraguay.

The Foreign Secretary has not met President Enkhbayar since he became President of Mongolia. Their last meeting was in October 2003, when he visited the United Kingdom as Prime Minister. They discussed relations between the two countries and shared concerns on international issues such as Iraq and terrorism.

Ministerial Visits

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs who made the decision for him to return early from Moscow in November. [33528]

Mr. Straw: I made the decision in consultation with the Chief Whip.

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many joint visits he has made with the Prime Minister to foreign countries in 2005. [33362]

Mr. Straw: I have not made any joint bilateral visits with my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister to foreign countries in 2005. The Prime Minister and I attend European Councils together and we both attended the NATO and EU/US Summits in Brussels in February. More recently the Prime Minister and I were in Barcelona for the EuroMed Conference.

Pakistan

Sir Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been made by the Government to the Government of Pakistan about the safety of religious minorities living in Pakistan; and if he will make a statement. [33947]

Dr. Howells: Officials have renewed their representations to the Government of Pakistan following recent incidents of violence against minorities.

On 16 November 2005, EU Heads of Mission met Pakistan's Minister for Religious Affairs Ijaz ul Haq and called for greater protection of the rights of minorities.

The Archbishop of Canterbury, accompanied by members of the British high commission, raised the treatment of minorities in meetings with President Musharraf and Prime Minister Shaukat Aziz, during his visit from 19–29 November.

Romania

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he plans to visit Romania to assess its progress towards meeting the criteria for EU entry. [33361]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary does not currently have plans to visit Romania. The UK is providing assistance and advice to help the Romanian Government implement the necessary EU reforms. The European Commission is closely monitoring Romania's preparations and will produce a progress report in April/May 2006.

Treaty of Rome

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on events planned (a) in the UK and (b) at EU level to commemorate 50 years of the Treaty of Rome; and what budget has been allocated to each such events. [33735]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office has not yet given consideration to what events it plans to hold in 2007. Further details of European Commission and European Parliament plans can be obtained from the UK Representations of the European Union's Institutions, contact details of which can be found at www.cec.org.uk, www.europarl.org.uk and www.europe.eu.int.

DEFENCE

Bosnia

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the value is of total outstanding claims against third party drivers deemed negligent in Bosnia in cases where reminders have been sent to the Ministry of Justice there. [34362]

Mr. Touhig: The total value of the three outstanding claims against third party drivers deemed negligent in Bosnia in cases where reminders have been sent to the Ministry of Justice is £18,729.

Army Vehicle Repairs

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) Warrior and (b) CVR(T) vehicles have undergone fourth line maintenance in the past 10 years; and to which Army Base Repair Organisation site they were despatched. [33579]

Mr. Ingram: All level 4 activity for Warrior and CVRT has historically been undertaken at ABRO Donnington. ABRO's records only go back as far as 1999–2000 and the output since then is as follows:

	Warrior	CVRT
1999–00	53	134
2000–01	91	158
2001–02	97	161
2002–03	88	149
2003–04	79	133
2004–05	77	132

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the expected throughput of (a) Warrior and (b) CVRT vehicles is for fourth line maintenance at the Army Base Repair Organisation Bovington site. [33581]

Mr. Ingram: As the trade union consultation process on the transfer of activity to Bovington has not concluded, the detailed planning has still to be finalised by ABRO, therefore precise information is not as yet available.

The intended throughput for level 4 activity at Bovington, based on the indicative requirements is as follows:

	Warrior	CVRT
2007–08	47	62
2008–09	55	66

BAE Systems (Saudi Arabia)

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence at how many meetings over the past year held between the Defence Export Services Organisation's (DESO) Regional Directorate 1 overseas staff based in Saudi Arabia and BAE Systems (a) the issue of agents to be used by BAE Systems in Saudi Arabia has been raised and (b) advice and information has been provided to BAE Systems by DESO's overseas staff. [33921]

Mr. Ingram: The Defence Export Services Organisation Regional Directorate responsible has one member of staff based in Saudi Arabia who has not been contacted by BAE Systems regarding the use of agents in the last year.

Departmental Finance

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the Winter Supplementary Estimates 2005–06 (HC 672), for what reasons actual expenditure under Request for Resources 1: Provision of Defence Capability in the first six months of the current financial year has exceeded forecasts. [32701]

John Reid: The forecast figure reported in table 1.6 of the MOD's 2005–06 Winter Supplementary Estimates was incorrect. HM Treasury will issue a correction notice.

The revised forecast will be £16,748.9 million, which is still slightly below the provisional out-turn. This is because Forecast Expenditure is profiled evenly across the year, but actual expenditure may not match this detailed profile exactly.

We expect to be within budget at year end.

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the Winter Supplementary Estimates 2005–06 (HC 672), if he will break down the (a) current and (b) revised Request for Resources 1 provision for each of his Department's top level budget holders by (i) direct resource departmental expenditure limit (DEL), (ii) indirect resource DEL and (iii) capital DEL. [32702]

John Reid: The main estimates split between direct and indirect resources for each top level budget holder (TLB) is set out in table 1 as follows:

Table 1: Composition of direct and indirect DEL by TLB at main estimates 2005–06

The Capital DEL allocations by TLB are set out in the 2005–06 main estimates in column 7, pages 276–77. The revised capital DEL allocations by TLB are set out in column 7, page 207 of the "Part 11: Revised subhead detail including additional provision" section of the winter supplementary estimates.

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the winter supplementary estimates 2005–06 (HC 672), for what reasons the total additional net resource requirement is lower than the additional net cash requirement. [32705]

John Reid: The additional cash requirement includes capital and resource expenditure. In accordance with HM Treasury consolidated budgeting guidance for 2005–06 the total additional net resource requirement excludes capital expenditure, and therefore a lower figure is shown than in the additional cash requirement.

Far East POWs

Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he held with representatives of Far East prisoners of war before his decision to offer compensation for distress caused by his Department's failure to set out the eligibility criteria clearly to non-qualifying claimants for the ex-gratia payment scheme for Far East prisoners of war. [32339]

Mr. Touhig: I met my hon. Friend, the Member for Hendon (Mr. Dismore), who is chairman of the Far East Prisoner of War All Party Parliamentary Group on 13 September, and took the opportunity to discuss the Department's intentions with respect to the level of compensation and the likely reaction of those affected. I also took advice from officials who had previous contact with some of those affected and their representatives, and who therefore had an appreciation of the distress that our maladministration has caused.

Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what criteria were used in arriving at the figure of £500 compensation awarded to non-qualifying claimants for the ex-gratia payment scheme for Far East prisoners of war for distress caused by his Department's failure to set out the eligibility criteria clearly. [32340]

Mr. Touhig: The payment is for any distress which may have resulted from the loss of expectation of a payment under the scheme. The amount reflects the extent of that expectation and the length of time that those involved have had to wait for a resolution. The award is at the upper end of the scale of what the Ministry of Defence would pay in cases where there has been similar maladministration of our pension and War Pension schemes.

Gulf War Veterans

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many of the personal medical records of veterans from Wales of the 1990–91 Gulf conflict have been lost. [22346]

Mr. Touhig [pursuant to the reply, 1 November 2005, Official Report, c. 913W]: It has come to light that some of the information about the retention of medical records of service and ex-Service personnel was misleading.

Medical records of members of the armed forces are not held centrally. The medical records of individuals who have left the services are held by each service at individual central locations. The records of those still serving are normally held at their unit medical centre. They are not held in a way that allows the identification of those who at some stage resided in Wales. It is not possible, therefore, to estimate the number that may be missing.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many servicemen and women from Wales who served in the 1990–91 Gulf conflict are suffering from diagnosed illnesses. [22437]

Mr. Touhig [pursuant to the reply, 2 November 2005, Official Report, c. 1069W]: It has come to light that some of the information about the retention of medical records of service and ex-service personnel was misleading.

Information on all the illnesses reported by veterans of the 1990–91 Gulf conflict is not held centrally. Although the medical records of individuals who have left the services are held by each service at individual central locations, the MOD does not hold records of all illnesses reported after an individual has left the service. Furthermore, for those still serving, medical records are normally held at their unit medical centre. They are not held in a way that allows the identification of those who at some stage resided in Wales.

Harrier Servicing

Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the cost per man hour of servicing the Harrier fleet at (a) RAF Cottesmore and (b) the Defence Aviation Repair Agency, St. Athan. [31646]

Mr. Ingram: Costs for servicing the Harrier fleet are not recorded by man-hour and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

In overall terms, however, the concentration of Harrier aircraft maintenance, including Harrier GR7 to GR9 upgrade, at RAF Cottesmore, and the introduction of more effective and efficient processes is expected to deliver savings of £44 million over financial years 2005–06—2008–09.

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the average repair times were in the last period for which figures are available on Harrier jets (a) at RAF Cottesmore and (b) the Defence Aviation Repair Agency St. Athan. [32700]

Mr. Ingram: Detailed information on average repair turn round times of aircraft is not held centrally. Repair times are agreed individually according to the extent of the damage and operational requirements. To obtain an accurate assessment of average repair times would require the manual checking of individual aircraft records to ascertain which elements of work were undertaken for repair purposes, and which fell into other categories, such as, upgrade, role change or scheduled maintenance. This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Iraq

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the extent of infiltration by insurgents of Iraqi security forces; and if he will make a statement. [23118]

John Reid: We are aware that a number of insurgents, militia members or individuals with militia allegiance have been able to join the Iraqi Security Forces (ISF) and that in some cases ISF members have committed insurgent acts. We continue to work with the Iraqi authorities to assess the scale of this problem. The Ministry of Defence does not, however, conduct routine monitoring of a kind that would provide an accurate quantitative assessment of ISF infiltration in the Multi National Division (South East) area where UK forces are operating.

NATO Secondees

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will pay those seconded to NATO, including those in the Territorial Army and reservists, the full rate according to current agreements. [32213]

Mr. Touhig: I understand that the hon. Member is referring to comparisons in pay between members of the UK's armed forces and those of the armed forces of other NATO member states.

The UK armed forces have an expectation of world wide service and their remuneration package is structured accordingly. Their pay is recommended by the independent Armed Forces Pay Review Body (AFPRB). For its 2005 report to the Prime Minister and the Secretary of State for Defence, the AFPRB commissioned a survey into the military remuneration packages of 12 countries which contribute to international operations alongside UK forces. The AFPRB concluded from the results that the UK package remains broadly comparable with those offered by other nations.

Naval Logistical Ships

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the total overspend on the two logistical ships under construction at Swan Hunter has been to date. [33736]

Mr. Ingram: The increase in costs above the originally agreed contract value for the two Swan Hunter vessels is £84 million. However, the company have indicated a likelihood of a further cost increase. The Ministry of Defence is currently in discussion with the company and these discussions are subject to commercial confidentiality.

Operation Telic

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service men and women who have served in Operation Telic have reported illnesses similar to those reported by veterans of the Gulf War. [22473]

Mr. Touhig [pursuant to the reply, 1 November 2005, Official Report, c. 916W]: It has come to light that some of the information about the retention of medical records of service and ex-service personnel was misleading.

Information on all the illnesses reported by service personnel who have served on Operation Telic is not held centrally. Although the medical records of individuals who have left the services are held by each service at individual central locations, the records of personnel who are still serving are normally held at their unit medical centre.

Royal Ordnance (Chorley)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the contract between his Department and Proof Yard, Royal Ordnance in Chorley; and whether the contract for work at the Chorley Royal Ordnance site will be renewed after March 2006. [33965]

Mr. Ingram: The current contract is due to expire on 31 March 2006 and there are no plans to extend the contract beyond that date.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps the Government are taking to ensure that redundancy payments to former employees of Royal Ordnance in Chorley are fully funded. [33967]

Mr. Ingram: The former Royal Ordnance site at Chorley is now owned by BAE Systems Land Systems. Any redundancy payments made to employees arising from the closure of the site are a matter for the company.

University Officer Training Corps

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what training in leadership is offered to participants in University Officer Training Corps schemes. [33136]

Mr. Touhig: Both theoretical and practical leadership training is conducted throughout the syllabus in both military and adventurous training, sport and social activities. Military training, coloured by the sponsor service, is used as a vehicle to deliver leadership opportunities rather than simply delivering military skills. Those who successfully complete the syllabus may sit an examination to gain a City and Guilds Council of Military Education Committees Leadership Award. The award is based on the five core skills areas of: leadership, organisation and self-discipline, communication, teamwork, analysis and problem solving.

PRIME MINISTER

Administrative Savings

Mr. Maude: To ask the Prime Minister what administrative savings have been made by his office in each of the last eight years. [34955]

The Prime Minister: For these purposes my office forms part of the Cabinet Office. I have therefore asked my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary for the Cabinet Office (Mr. Murphy) to reply. A copy of the reply will be placed in the Library of the House.

Commonwealth Head of Government Meeting (Malta)

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Prime Minister whether on the occasion of the Commonwealth Heads of Government in Malta (a) he, (b) accompanying Ministers and (c) officials had (i) formal discussions and (ii) discussions on the margins of the conference involving other prime ministers or members of delegations of those countries where Her Majesty the Queen is Head of State about the law and constitution pertaining to the common institution of the Monarchy; and if he will make a statement. [34509]

The Prime Minister: There were no such discussions.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Hands: To ask the Prime Minister pursuant to the answer of 21 November 2005, Official Report, column 162W, on ministerial travel, when it was last appropriate for him to travel on the London underground on official business. [33703]

Bob Russell: To ask the Prime Minister on how many occasions since 7 July he has used the London underground in connection with his official duties. [35016]

The Prime Minister: I have nothing further to add to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Hammersmith and Fulham (Mr. Hands) on 21 November 2005, Official Report, column 1661W.

Ministerial Visit (Saudi Arabia)

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Prime Minister (1) whether meetings he held with Crown Prince Abdullah and officials in July 2005 during his visit to Saudi Arabia were attended by employees of BAE Systems; and if he will make a statement; [34831]

(2) whether the meetings he held with Crown Prince Abdullah and officials in July 2005 during his visit to Saudi Arabia included discussion of (a) Saad al-Faqih and (b) Mohammed al-Masari; and if he will make a statement; [34834]

(3) whether the meetings he held with Crown Prince Abdullah and officials in July during his visit to Saudi Arabia included discussion of the Eurofighter Typhoon; and if he will make a statement. [34835]

The Prime Minister: I have nothing further to add to the answer I gave the hon. Member on 14 November 2005, Official Report, column 924W.

Northern Ireland (Offences) Bill

David Simpson: To ask the Prime Minister (1) what consultation he undertook with Northern Ireland political parties before the Government introduced the Northern Ireland (Offences) Bill; [34221]

(2) what discussions he had with church representatives before the Government introduced the Northern Ireland (Offences) Bill; [34222]

(3) what discussions he had with the Police Service of Northern Ireland about paramilitary fugitives from justice before the Government introduced the Northern Ireland (Offences) Bill; and what advice he received. [34244]

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

The Prime Minister: I have meetings with a wide range of organisations and individuals on a wide range of subjects. Information relating to internal meetings, discussion and advice is not disclosed as to do so could harm the frankness and candour of internal discussion.

Sugar Beet Farmers

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Prime Minister if he will meet a delegation of Shrewsbury sugar beet farmers at No. 10 Downing Street to discuss their concerns about the proposed EU sugar regime changes. [33886]

The Prime Minister: I have no current plans to do so. However, my right hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Department of Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (Lord Bach) has met representatives from the National Farmers Union and other interested parties on this issue, and would be happy to meet such a delegation from Shrewsbury.

Terrorism

Grant Shapps: To ask the Prime Minister pursuant to his oral answer of 9 November 2005, Official Report, column 298 to the right hon. and learned Member for Folkstone and Hythe (Mr. Howard) on terrorism, what estimate he has made of the number of police officers required to analyse the data contained on one 20.4 gigabyte hard drive within 90 days. [33569]

The Prime Minister: A decision on the number of police officers deployed to focus on a particular area of an investigation, such as analysing data, is the responsibility of the chief constable of the force concerned.

Visits (Shrewsbury)

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Prime Minister (1) when he last visited Shrewsbury; [33885]

(2) if he will visit the areas in Shrewsbury prone to flooding. [33887]

The Prime Minister: I last visited Shrewsbury in November 2000 to inspect flooding in the area, where I met local councillors and members of the Environment Agency. As part of that trip I also visited the other flood hit areas of Bewdley and York.

While I have no current plans to visit again in the near future, I understand that the Environment Agency has recently invested £3.5 million in a flood risk management improvement project in Shrewsbury, and is considering carefully the case for further investment in other areas of the town.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Africa (Aid)

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what method he will use to measure progress in providing enhanced partnership at the country and regional level, especially through the G8, to increase the effectiveness of aid and ensure that international policies support African development as required by 2004 public service agreement target 1. [29933]

Hilary Benn: The Technical Note to DFID's 2005–08 public service agreement provides full details of the indicators and methodologies which will be used to monitor performance against target 1. The Technical Note is available on DFID's website at www.dfid.gov.uk/pubs/files/PSA/technicalnotes.pdf

The latest progress against this target, and on all other targets within DFID's PSA, will be reported in the Autumn Performance Report 2005, which will be published later this month.

Darfur

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the development assistance which will be required by Darfur in the next (a) five and (b) 10 years. [33848]

Hilary Benn [holding answer 2 December 2005]: The Department for International Development has not yet made an assessment of the development assistance required by Darfur in the next five and 10 years. The UK and the broader international community have focused efforts in Darfur on responding to the humanitarian needs there; until there is a political resolution to the conflict it is unlikely that significant development work will take place in Darfur. However, we welcome recent efforts by the UN to look at how peace would be consolidated in Darfur through a range of political, humanitarian, recovery and reconstruction work, after a peace agreement.

Following this, we have recommended to the UN that it and the World Bank undertake an assessment in Darfur as soon as the security situation allows, looking at needs over a three to four year period. We have asked the UN and the World Bank for a concept paper for such an assessment.

Departmental Estate

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what (a) land and (b) property his Department (i) owns and (ii) rents in each constituency; and if he will make a statement. [33248]

Mr. Thomas: DFID does not own or rent any land. DFID owns one property, namely Abercrombie House, Eaglesham Road, East Kilbride, Glasgow, G75 SEA in the constituency of East Kilbride, Strathaven and Lesmahagow.

DFID rents the following properties:

1 Palace Street, London, SW1E SHE

20 Victoria Street, London, SW1H 0NF

both in the constituency of Cities of London and Westminster, and also (for storage purposes only) 43/45 Fairfield Place, East Kilbride, Glasgow, G74 5LP, also in the constituency of East Kilbride, Strathaven and Lesmahagow.

Departmental Targets

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of his Department's ability to influence the matters covered by his Department's 2004 public service agreement targets. [30639]

Hilary Benn: DFID, in common with all other Government Departments, submits a self-assessment of its capacity to deliver its public service agreement (PSA) targets to the Treasury on a six-monthly basis. These self-assessments feed into the Treasury's delivery reports on departmental performance.

DFID also makes assessments of its ability to deliver the PSA targets as part of our annual business planning process. Known as directors' delivery plans, the business plans, which are reviewed and amended each autumn: consider progress to date against each of the PSA targets; analyse the mechanisms and structures in place to secure delivery of the targets, making adjustments where necessary; review risk management strategies and set out the activities that will be carried out and the resources that will be required to deliver the targets.

Ethiopia

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what action the Government are taking on (a) government to government aid for Ethiopia and (b) direct budgetary support following recent events in Ethiopia; what representations he has made within the EU; and if he will make a statement. [34062]

Hilary Benn: The UK, holding Presidency of the EU, issued a statement on 6 November 2005 expressing grave concern about recent events in Ethiopia, and called for restraint and dialogue. In a separate statement all international donors to Ethiopia, including the UK, announced that they were reviewing their development assistance programmes.

We have not provided any direct budgetary support to Ethiopia this year, and together with the other budget support donors, we are considering how best to adjust our assistance programme to ensure that poor people are not disadvantaged.

Montserrat

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what progress the Government are making with its plan to establish in Montserrat a positive population policy which promotes population growth and is sensitive to the social and governance impact. [33757]

Mr. Thomas: With support from DFID and the European Union, the Montserrat Government have made good progress in several areas to promote the retention of the present population and to encourage the return of Montserratians from overseas. It has increased the level of housing and accommodation provision, increased access to good quality education, improved the quality and scope of health provision, improved air access to the island, and is promoting Montserrat as a safe and stable place to live in. The development of a social and economic hub at Little Bay, together with ongoing and planned efforts to stimulate economic growth, should contribute further to the achievement of this goal.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development when he will answer questions (a) 26330, (b) 26328 and (c) 26329 tabled by the hon. Member for Stratford-on-Avon on 3 November. [33012]

Hilary Benn: I refer the hon. member for Stratford-on-Avon to the responses given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for International Development (Mr. Thomas) on 28 November 2005, Official Report, column 57W and on 29 November 2005, Official Report, columns 356–57W respectively.

Public Service Agreement

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how value for money indicators will be used to measure performance against 2004 public service agreement number 6. [29929]

Hilary Benn: The technical note to DFID's 2005–08 public service agreement provides full details of the indicators and methodologies which will be used to monitor performance against target 6, which focuses on the impact and effectiveness of DFID's bilateral programme. The technical note is available on DFID's website at www.dfid.gov.uk/pubs/files/PSA/technicalnotes.pdf.

The latest progress against this target, and on all other targets within DFID's PSA, will be reported in the autumn performance report 2005, which will be published later this month.

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what criteria he will use to measure the effectiveness of multilateral institutions as required by 2004 public service agreement target number 3. [29930]

Hilary Benn: The technical note to DFID's 2005–08 public service agreement provides full details of the indicators and methodologies which will be used to monitor performance against target 3. The technical note is available on DFID's website at www.dfid.gov.uk/pubs/files/PSA/technicalnotes.pdf.

The latest progress against this target, and on all other targets within DFID's PSA, will be reported in the autumn performance report 2005, which will be published later this month.

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what plans he has to verify the quality of data used to measure performance against 2004 public service agreement target 2. [29931]

Hilary Benn: DFID's public service agreement (PSA) target 2 for the 2005–08 PSA seeks 'Progress towards the MDGs in nine key countries in Asia'. Detailed progress is measured against five indicators and the PSA Technical Note sets out the various sources of data which underpin these indicators. It can be seen that the information required is drawn from authoritative international data series. Despite every effort to secure accurate data for all PSA focus countries, DFID recognises that there are limitations to the data available for reviewing progress. A detailed note on methodology and data issues is found as an annex to DFID's 2004 Autumn Performance Report (APR) and a similar annex is included within our 2005 APR, which will be published shortly. DFID is at the forefront of the international effort to improve the availability and quality of data for measuring progress towards the MDGs and some of the work we are doing in this area is also mentioned in our APR annex.

I am pleased to note that the National Audit Office (NAO) is confident that the systems we use to measure progress against this target are sufficiently robust and well explained that they have been awarded a 'green' traffic light in their recent assessment. We are currently looking at comments from a useful report by the Statistics Commission which also looked at the targets used for measuring PSA progress.

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the baseline is against which a reduction in the proportion of 15 to 24-year-old pregnant women with HIV as required by 2004 public service agreement target 1 is measured. [29932]

Hilary Benn: In both the 2003–06 and 2005–08 public sector agreements (PSAs), DFID has targets seeking progress towards the millennium development goals (MDGs) in countries in Africa and Asia. For the 2003–06 PSA baseline positions were set out, however over time, the baselines were revised due to new data becoming available and ongoing work within the international statistical organisations who provide the data we use. In response to this, for the 2005–08 PSA DFID has not published baseline figures, but rather has set percentage point changes, or directions of travel sought and will make an assessment of progress during the PSA focus period, based on the difference between the prevalence figure for the baseline year (in many cases 2000) given when the assessment is made, and the latest data available. This is explained in the Technical Note which accompanies our PSA.

The Joint United Nations Programme of HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS), is the United Nations body which provides statistical data to measure progress in the area of HIV/AIDS and difficulties with these data are set out in DFID's PSA Technical Note. At the time the Technical Note was written, new data on HIV/AIDS were anticipated. These figures were supplied in 2004 and used in DFID's 2004 Autumn Performance Report. This stated that the average HIV prevalence rate among pregnant women aged 15–24 years, in the 11 African countries for which data were available, was 14 per cent., although prevalence rates range from 4 per cent. in Ghana to more than 28 per cent. in Lesotho. Most data in this assessment dated from 2003 and it is likely that this will represent the best baseline position for monitoring against the 2005–08 PSA. However DFID will continue to monitor methodological work in this area and seek the inclusion of data for the five PSA countries that were not included in the assessment made in 2004.

St. Helena

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development for what reason the costings have been removed from the publicly available version of the St. Helena Access Feasibility Study undertaken by Atkins. [34085]

Mr. Thomas: Procurement of a suitably qualified contractor for the design, construction and operation of the airport on St. Helena is being taken forward through international competitive tendering. Making available the cost information contained in the Feasibility Study may prejudice the procurement process and compromise our ability to ensure value for money.

UN Central Emergency Response Fund

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what representations he has made to governments from the (a) G8, (b) EU and (c) OPEC about the United Nations Central Emergency Response Fund; and what responses he has received. [34844]

Mr. Thomas: An expanded United Nations Emergency Revolving Fund (CERF) forms a key element of the wider package of reforms to the international humanitarian system currently under way. A resolution to establish the new CERF is currently under discussion in the UN General Assembly. The G8 Response to the Indian Ocean Disaster issued at Gleneagles 2005 welcomed the work being done on the CERF. The UK is the only G8 member to have made a pledge so far.

Under the UK presidency, the EU has issued statements at UN events such as the July meeting of the Economic and Social Council, and the World Summit in September, supporting the expanded CERF. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for International Development, has continued to discuss this with EU ministerial colleagues. In addition, I addressed the EU Informal Humanitarian Aid Committee in October on the reform package. So far, contributions to the expanded CERF have been pledged by the UK ($70 million), Sweden ($40 million), the Netherlands ($12 million), Ireland ($12 million), and Luxembourg ($4 million).

In terms of representations to OPEC countries, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for International Development wrote to the Foreign Minister of Saudi Arabia in September, but to date no reply has been received. The UK plans to make representations to Indonesia.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development which countries have pledged funds to the United Nations Central Emergency Response Fund; and how much each has pledged. [34845]

Mr. Thomas: To date a total of $172 million has been pledged from seven countries, including the UK. The UK contribution is $70 million (£40 million), and we have undertaken to increase it by $1 for every $3 donated by others, up to a maximum UK contribution of $100 million. The other six countries that have agreed to contribute are Sweden ($40 million), Norway ($30 million over 2 years), the Netherlands ($12 million), Ireland ($12 million), Switzerland ($4 million), and Luxembourg ($4 million).

Uzbekistan

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the circumstances were of the termination of aid projects in Uzbekistan in 2005; and if he will make a statement. [33476]

Mr. Thomas: Immediately after the events in Andijan in May 2005, DFID suspended, and subsequently terminated, its support to a poverty statistics project being implemented jointly with the World Bank, which involved close co-operation with the central Government. DFID has since decided to end its bilateral programme with effect from March 2006 when our remaining bilateral project-working with the United Nations Development Programme and local government on a cross-border sustainable livelihoods programme with Tajikistan-comes to an end. Given the policies of the Uzbek government the potential impact on poverty reduction of our small bilateral programme is very limited.

We will continue to support the work of multilateral agencies in Uzbekistan, particularly the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development (EBRD), the World Bank and the Asian Development Bank (ADB). The EBRD has agreed a new country strategy, limiting its assistance to the private sector. The World Bank and the ADB are in the process of revising their strategies. We are keeping closely in touch with them.

DFID's regional HIV/AIDS programme in Central Asia, working with the World Bank and other partners and based in the Kyrgyz Republic, will include a component in Uzbekistan, managed by a non-government agency. The programme has just begun, in the Kyrgyz Republic, Tajikistan and Uzbekistan, and will run to 2008.

Child Maintenance

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in Gravesham constituency are receiving maintenance via the Child Support Agency under the (a) old and (b) new scheme. [28373]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information is not available at constituency level.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions in respect of how many parliamentary questions tabled by the hon. Member for Yeovil on the Child Support Agency since 5 May the answers drafted by staff of the Child Support Agency have been altered following advice, representations or comment by (a) Ministers, (b) special advisers and (c) civil servants; and if he will make a statement. [33434]

Mr. Plaskitt: Ministers, special advisors and civil servants in the Department, including the Child Support Agency, contribute to drafting and quality assuring parliamentary question responses. The final reply is then the responsibility of the Minister or chief executive as appropriate.

The specific information requested is not available.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what proportion of Child Support Agency staff have been working for the Agency for (a) less than one year and (b) less than two years; and if he will make a statement. [21856]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Mr. Stephen Geraghty. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 5 December 2005:

In reply to your Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of state promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what proportion of Child Support Agency staff have been working for the Agency for (a) less than one year and (b) less than two years; and if he will make a statement.

a) 8.16% of Child Support Agency staff (821.73 full-time equivalent) have been working for the Agency for less than one year.

b) 14.19% of Child Support Agency staff (1429.24 full-time equivalent) have been working for the Agency for less than 2 years.

I hope you find this response helpful.

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what assessment he has made of the impact of the failures of the new Child Support Agency computer system on the Government's ability to meet its poverty reduction targets; and if he will make a statement; [30020]

(2) what assessment he has made of the effect of delays in the transfer of old cases to the new system by the Child Support Agency on progress towards the Government's poverty targets. [30037]

Mr. Plaskitt: The Child Support Agency contributes to the Government's wider target for the reduction of child poverty through a supporting target to increase the proportion of parents with care on income support and income-based jobseeker's allowance who receive maintenance for their children.

Achievement of this supporting target is dependent upon converting old scheme cases to the new scheme.

The Child Support Agency's chief executive, Stephen Geraghty, is currently undertaking a root and branch review of the Agency. He will report to Ministers and we will make announcements shortly.

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the average time taken to process compensation payments made to Child Support Agency clients for administrative errors was in 2004–05. [30031]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 5 December 2005:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what the average time taken to process compensation payments made to Child Support Agency clients for administrative errors was in 2004–05.

Financial redress is made to clients in cases where maladministration has occurred. The Agency does not hold robust information to distinguish administrative errors from other acts of maladministration.

However, in the 2004/2005 financial year 80% of financial redress payments for maladministered cases were processed within 30 days.

I hope you find this information useful.

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what disability benefits and allowances are taken into account when calculating Child Support Agency maintenance payments under the (a) old and (b) new systems. [30866]

Mr. Plaskitt [holding answer 28 November 2005]: The old child support scheme takes fully into account as income payments of incapacity benefit, severe disablement allowance and certain elements of industrial injuries disablement benefit awards. War disablement pension, and any analogous payment made by another state, is taken into account apart from the first £10 a week.

Where a non-resident parent is entitled to a relevant benefit and would otherwise be required to pay the minimum amount of child support maintenance, their liability will instead be nil. The relevant disability benefits are incapacity benefit, attendance allowance, severe disablement allowance, disability living allowance and certain elements of industrial injuries disablement benefit.

The new child support scheme is more straightforward, the amount of a disability benefit or allowance is ignored in the calculation of a non-resident parent's income. Non-resident parents in receipt of a benefit generally pay child support maintenance at a flat-rate of £5 a week.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the backlog of Child Support Agency claims made by claimants in Coventry South was in each month since January 2004. [33513]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information is not available at constituency level.

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the national targets are for the Child Support Agency; and what the performance of relevant offices in Devon and Cornwall has been against those targets. [34033]

Mr. Plaskitt: I would refer the hon. Member to the Child Support Agency's 2005 Business Plan which is held in the House of Commons Library and details the Agency targets.

I am sorry to say that information requested on performance against targets is not available at constituency level.

Community Employment and Social Solidarity Programme

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the answer of 22 November 2005, Official Report, columns 1867–68W, on the Community Programme for Employment and Social Solidarity, what the budget allocation has been for the programme; and if he will place in the Library copies of publications arising from the programme. [33668]

Mr. Plaskitt: Member states have not discussed the programme budget pending settlement of the Financial Perspective, the new EU-wide budget.

The Decision to establish the programme, including its eventual budget allocation, is subject to parliamentary scrutiny. The European Commission will publish annual activity reports, plus mid-term and ex-post evaluations of programme spending, outcomes and added value. Where appropriate these will be deposited for further consideration by the scrutiny Committees. Deposited documents and their associated explanatory memoranda provided by the Government are made available to the House Library.

Habitual Residence Test

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the answer of 30 November 2005, Official Report, column 613W on the habitual residence test, whether someone who has paid sufficient national insurance contributions to qualify for contributory benefits is subject to the habitual residence test for non-contributory benefits. [35117]

Mr. Plaskitt: Yes; all claims for income-related benefits are subject to the habitual residence test.

Jobcentre Benefit Claims

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on the performance of the new case management system for Jobcentre benefit claims. [30545]

Margaret Hodge: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 5 December 2005:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the performance of the Customer Management System (CMS) for Jobcentre Plus benefit claims. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

Since 2003 Jobcentre Plus has been introducing a new process for taking claims for benefit, supported by CMS. Information to support claims for benefit is gathered from customers through Contact Centres and recorded in CMS, before being transferred, electronically for Income Support and Jobseekers Allowance, to benefit processing IT systems.

When the system was first introduced, we experienced some difficulties with system performance and reliability. Following a series of "performance releases" designed to tackle these problems, the computer system now performs to agreed service levels. Since February 2005, there has only been one occasion where a CMS failure has affected all offices and made it necessary to invoke business continuity procedures.

We have, however, experienced some difficulties in call handling in some of our Contact Centres. Some of our customers have found it difficult to get through on the telephone, and we have had to introduce clerical contingency procedures in a number of sites in order to maintain customer service. This has not been caused by any failure on the part of the computer system itself, but relates to the administrative processes that have been introduced alongside the new computer system.

Since introducing a number of temporary adjustments to these processes and taking urgent measures to recruit and train staff, there have been encouraging signs of recovery in our call handling. We are keeping the position under review on a site-by-site basis and each site has a plan for returning to the full process, supported by CMS, as quickly as possible.

I hope this reply has been helpful.

Jobcentre Plus

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many and what proportion of Jobcentre Plus CMS2 enabled contact centres have been unable to process cases on CMS2 in each of the last 24 months; what the average time taken to start payments (a) from CMS2 contact centres and (b) nationally was in the latest period for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [29989]

Margaret Hodge: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 5 December 2005:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question concerning how many CMS2 contact centres have been unable to process cases on CMS2 in each of the last 24 months and the average time taken to start payments from CMS2 contact centres and nationally. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

In answering the first part of your question, there are two circumstances where claims would not be processed through CMS:

1. in the event of a full CMS failure, contingency processes to issue clerical claim forms would be invoked. Information on this has only been recorded from February 2005. There has only been one single day instance between February 2005 and October 2005 where this affected all contact centres; and

2. when a business decision is taken to ensure that customer service is maintained; for example, a decision to introduce temporary process adjustments. Across all 22 CMS contact centres this happened in:

August 2005 in 3 contact centres;

September 2005 in 5 contact centres; and October 2005 in 9 contact centres.

Turning to the second part of your question about the average time to start payments from CMS2 contact centres and nationally, Jobcentre Plus keeps statistics about the number of claims cleared and how long it takes. The statistics only show where the claim was processed, not where it originated so it is not possible to differentiate between claims that have been initiated through CMS2 enabled contact centres and existing service outlets. This means we cannot provide the specific information you have requested.

I can say, however, that in September, Income Support claims were cleared in an average of 10.8 days against a standard of 12 days, Incapacity Benefit claims were cleared in an average of 15.2 days against a standard of 17 days and Jobseeker's Allowance claims were cleared in an average of 13.5 days against a standard of 12 days.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many calls to Jobcentre Plus contact centres (a) were answered, (b) received an engaged tone and (c) were disconnected in each month from January; and if he will make a statement. [32512]

Margaret Hodge: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 5 December 2005:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question concerning how many calls to Jobcentre Plus contact centres (a) were answered, (b) received an engaged tone and (c) were disconnected in each month from January; and if he will make a statement. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

The table below gives information concerning the number of calls answered by our contact centres each month from January 2005:

2005	Calls answered	Number of weeks in month
January	1,047,410	4
February	987,512	4
March	1,123,918	5
April	974,024	4
May	983,397	4
June	1,347,089	5
July	1,068,299	4
August	972,636	4
September	1,357,084	5
October	1,082,554	4

When a customer calls they are placed into a queue either until the call is answered or they choose to abandon the call. Customers do not get an engaged tone. The information on disconnected calls is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

I hope this is helpful.

Means-tested Benefits

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the value of unclaimed means tested benefits funded by his

Department in (a) each region of the UK and (b) each county within Wales in each of the last five years, broken down by type of benefit. [33292]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information requested is not available.

Estimates of the value of the main income-related benefits unclaimed, that cover income support, minimum income guarantee and income-based jobseeker's allowance, as well as local authority administered housing benefit and council tax benefit, are available on a national basis. Estimates cannot be reliably disaggregated to lower geographies. The latest and previous years' national estimates can be found in the DWP report series entitled: "Income Related Benefits Estimates of Take-Up"; copies of which are available in the Library.

Pension Credit

Mr. McGovern: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of whether extra staff and resources would be required for administration purposes if every pensioner entitled to pension credit applied for it. [34859]

Mr. Timms: It is likely that additional staff would be needed to process a higher level of applications and administer a higher number of live awards. No specific estimates have been made of the number of staff and other resources that would be required in the event of full take-up by all entitled pensioners.

Pension Service staff and resource planning takes into account the planned take-up profile for pension credit.

Pensioners

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many and what percentage of pensioners in Wales receive less than £109 in total for state pensions and benefits; and if he will make a statement. [32569]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 28 November 2005]: The information in the following table shows those pensioners in Wales with a total weekly benefit income, including the state pension but excluding all private income, that is less than the standard minimum guarantee in pension credit for singles and couples.

	Couples	Singles	All
Number of pensioner units	80,000	100,000	170,000
Percentage of family type	50	43	45

Notes:
1. The total weekly benefit income includes pension credit but not income from private pensions.
2. Data is taken from the Family Resources Survey for years: 2001–02; 2002–03; and 2003–04. The Family Resources Survey is based on around 20,000 households, therefore there is a degree of sampling variation.
3. Figures are provided using a three-year rolled average as single-year estimates do not provide a robust guide to year-on-year changes.
4. The standard minimum guarantee in pension credit is equal to £109.45 per week for single pensioners and £167.05 for couples deflated to the appropriate price level for each year of data.
5. Pensioner couples are where the head of the household is above state pension age.
6. Number of pensioner units are rounded to the nearest 10,000.

Family Resources Survey

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in Beverley and Holderness are entitled to the basic state pension. [33455]

Mr. Timms: The information requested is not available. However, as at 31 March 2005, there were 20,600 people in the Beverley and Holderness parliamentary constituency in receipt of a basic state pension.

Notes:
1. Data is taken from 5 per cent. sample therefore figures are subject to a degree of sampling variation. They are also adjusted to be consistent with the overall caseload from the WPLS.
2. Figure is rounded to the nearest 100.
3. Parliamentary constituencies are assigned by matching postcodes against the relevant Office for National Statistics postcode directory.

Source:
DWP Information Directorate: Work and Pensions Longitudinal Study (WPLS) 100 per cent. data and PSCS 5 per cent. samples.

Pensions

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the cost implications were in 2004–05 of deferring the start date for state pension payments until the Monday after an individual's 65th birthday; and what assessment has been made of the effects on the individuals concerned. [26108]

Mr. Timms: There are no benefit cost implications in paying state pension in advance and in whole weeks as opposed to paying it in arrears which would allow for part-week payments at the start and end of an award. We have assessed the current policy and have concluded that whatever the circumstances of the individuals concerned. They will always be able to collect a full week's pension within one week of establishing entitlement.

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the basic state pension was in 1997. [33278]

Mr. Timms: The basic state pension was £62.45 per week in April 1997. It is now £82.05 per week.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Abandoned Court Cases

Mike Penning: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the average cost of a court case was where prosecution was abandoned in the last year for which figures are available. [32202]

Ms Harman: This information cannot be provided without incurring disproportionate cost.

Asylum/Immigration

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the legal aid costs were of (a) representation in criminal cases in England and Wales and (b) representation and advice to detained asylum seekers in each year since 1997. [32216]

Bridget Prentice: The legal aid expenditure for representation in criminal cases for each financial year since 1997 was as follows:

	£ million
2004–05	971
2003–04	943
2002–03	866
2001–02	773
2000–01	657
1999–2000	619
1998–99	637
1997–98	596

The Legal Services Commission does not hold information on how much was spent on representation and advice for detained asylum seekers.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs when she expects the immigration appeal of Basamai Abdul Wahab Salih, reference number VA07966/2005, to be heard. [33720]

Bridget Prentice: The Asylum and Immigration Tribunal (AIT) has confirmed that the appeal number provided in the question refers to the family visitor appeal of a Ms Basamat Abdulwhab Mohamed Salih. The appellant has requested the appeal be heard on papers.

A date for the hearing has not yet been set. A notice of pending appeal was issued to parties on 11 November 2005. Under current arrangements, the respondent has up to 11 weeks—including allowance for international transit—to prepare and serve the appeal bundle. Upon receipt of the bundle, such a case would be listed for hearing four weeks hence. On this basis, the AIT would expect to hear this case no later than the end of February 2006.

Correspondence

Sarah Teather: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs when she will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Brent East dated 17 December 2004. [33860]

Ms Harman: My Department does not appear to have received the hon. Member's letter. My officials therefore contacted the hon. Member's office and obtained a copy. The Lord Chancellor will write to the hon. Member soon.

Ms Harman: My Department has:

(a) Ceased to use: Stewart House, Kingsway; 6th–8th floors, Southside, London SW1E; and Bradford Combined Court in the past year.

(b) Southside, London SW1E 1st–4th floors will be closed on 24 December 2005 at the end of the lease term.

Further offices will be closed at the end of their lease terms, after the refurbishment of Queen Anne's Gate, as part of the wider rationalisation of the DCA estate.

Diplock Courts

Lorely Burt: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many court cases the Diplock courts have considered in each year since the Diplock courts were introduced. [34869]

Bridget Prentice: Diplock courts were introduced in Northern Ireland in 1973. Statistics relating to the number of defendants dealt with by the Diplock courts have been maintained since 1983. Disability Discrimination (Legal Aid)

Danny Alexander: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many individuals have (a) applied for and (b) been granted legal aid for action against (i) employers, (ii) transport providers and (iii) providers of goods and services for failure to comply with disability discrimination legislation. [31147]

Bridget Prentice: Records held by the Legal Services Commission (LSC) only record the category of law to which a proceeding relates rather than the category of business against which the action was taken. Therefore, the LSC can only provide details about Disability Discrimination Act proceedings in the categories of employment, housing and public law. In the last three full financial years 106 certificates were granted within these categories.

European Court of Human Rights

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will list the cases before the European Court of Human Rights since 1 January 1976 which have been brought against the United Kingdom, indicating in each case whether a finding of a violation of the Convention on Human Rights occurred; which Articles of the Convention were cited in each application as having been breached; what action has been taken to implement the ruling in each successful case; in respect of which successful cases the ruling has not been fully implemented; what the obstacles are to full implementation of each such ruling; and if she will make a statement. [33722]

Ms Harman: Records have not been kept of all cases brought against the United Kingdom since 1976. There are currently 60 judgments given against the United Kingdom which require implementation by the Government. Information on those cases is not held centrally, but we are taking action to obtain and collate it. We expect to provide a list giving details of progress towards implementation in each case before Parliament rises for Christmas.

Gender Recognition Certificates

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many applications for gender recognition certificates (a) she has received, (b) have been approved, (c) have come from overseas and (d) have come from overseas and have been approved. [34654]

Ms Harman: The information requested is as follows:

In total, 1,123 applications have been received and 863 full gender recognition certificates have been issued.

Included in the totals above are 28 applications made on the basis of having changed gender under the law of another country or territory outside the United Kingdom, in respect of which 15 full certificates have been issued.

General Election (Kettering)

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs why the complete marked register for Kettering constituency from the 2005 General Election is not yet available. [34099]

Ms Harman: Pickfords Records Management, who administer the supply of copies of the marked registers, have informed us that after receiving notice on 21 November 2005 that the marked register for Kettering was not complete, located the missing pages on 25 November 2005. These are now being processed.

The missing pages were located in a sack of election documents, separate from the bulk of the marked register. Guidance was issued to returning officers before the 5 May General Election, that marked registers should be stored in the first numbered sack only.

Inquests

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many inquests are outstanding in (a) Southend, (b) Essex, (c) Greater London and (d) Hertfordshire; and how many have been waiting more than (i) one, (ii) two, (iii) three, (iv) four and (v) five years since death occurred. [34210]

Ms Harman: I am obtaining this information from the 10 coroners concerned and will then write to the hon. Member. A copy of my reply will be placed in the House of Commons Library.

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many warrants were issued from Kettering magistrates court for the arrest of non-attendees in each year since 1997. [34098]

Ms Harman: Figures for failure to appear warrants are only available for Kettering magistrates court from 2003. The figures to date for police failure to appear warrants are (a) 345 for 2003 (b) 311 for 2004 and (c) 162[1] for 2005.

[1] Figure up to 29 November 2005.

Legal Aid

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what estimate she has made of the cost of legal aid for asylum seekers for the last 12 months for which figures are available; and if she will list the 10 companies in receipt of most aid. [27745]

Bridget Prentice: It Is not possible to separate spend on asylum from this overall category of Immigration and Asylum. Expenditure on legal aid for Immigration and Asylum matters in 2004–05 came to £171 million. Nor is it possible to estimate the cost of legal aid in other matters for those seeking asylum, for example, public law, crime, and clinical negligence.

I will write to the hon. Member when the Legal Services Commission has verified amounts paid to the 10 suppliers in receipt of the most funds.

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what discussions Ministers have had with (a) the Royal Household, (b) the Archbishop of Canterbury and (c) officials at Clarence House on varying the State prayers; and if she will make a statement. [34507]

Ms Harman: It is the long-established custom that communications between Ministers and the Royal Households remain confidential. There has been no discussion between Ministers and the Archbishop of Canterbury.

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs whether it is intended that a court warrant will be issued adding a name to the State prayers; and if she will make a statement. [34508]

The figures are not broken down by the defendant's residence.

Mr. Bone: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the Government's policy is on lowering the voting age from 18 to 16 years for (a) local, (b) parliamentary and (c) European elections. [33423]

HEALTH

Alcohol-related Hospital Admissions

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of attendances at accident and emergency departments were alcohol-related in each of the last five years; and if she will make a statement. [24221]

Mr. Byrne: Reasons for attendances at accident and emergency departments are not collected centrally. However, data are collected on emergency admissions. The percentage of all alcohol-related emergency admissions has fallen from 1.2 per cent. in 1999–2000 to 1 per cent. in 2003–04.

Alliance Medical

Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 5 October 2005, Official Report, column 2810W, on Alliance Medical, when she envisages the new data reporting system will be in place; and at what cost. [18882]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 17 October 2005]: The new diagnostic data collection will start across England in January 2006. It will enable the national health service to track progress towards meeting the Government's election pledge of a maximum wait of no more than 18 weeks from general practitioner referral to the start of hospital treatment. It will identify areas requiring focused attention and assist diagnostics capacity planning for future years.

The Department estimates that, once the initial implementation stage is complete and being submitted through Unify, the Department's new system designed to capture and analyse NHS performance data, the cost burden on the NHS will be lower than for existing monthly returns.

Ambulance Response Times

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the likely impact on ambulance response times in Warrington of creating a single North-West Ambulance Trust. [30716]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 22 November 2005]: Ambulance trusts in England are expected to meet national requirements on response times to 999 calls. If our proposals to reconfigure ambulance trusts are accepted, national response time requirements will be unchanged.

Cataract Units

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether funding projections for trusts will take account of take-up rates by patients at independent treatment scheme cataract units. [17414]

Mr. Byrne: Patient referral levels to independent sector treatment centres (ISTCs) have been estimated and agreed by primary care trusts (PCTs). These form a key part of the contracts with ISTC providers, to which PCTs are party. The financial cost at national health service tariff of the projected referrals should be included by PCTs in their financial projections.

Cheshire and Merseyside Health Authority

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the total cost of running the Cheshire and Merseyside health authority has been in each year since it was set up. [31477]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 24 November 2005]: The Cheshire and Merseyside strategic health authority has received allocations for its running costs of £4.7 million in 2003–04, £5.1 million in 2004–05 and £5.4 million in 2005–06.

Clinical Negligence

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many successful claims of clinical negligence were made against each hospital in hospital trusts in the Lancashire strategic health authority in 2004–05; and what the total cost of all successful claims was against each hospital. [33043]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 29 November 2005]: The number of successful clinical negligence claims made against hospital trusts in Lancashire strategic health authority (SHA) in 2004–05; and the total cost of all successful claims against each hospital trust is shown in the following table.

Clinical Services Review (East Lancashire)

Kitty Ussher: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consultations with clinicians have taken place as part of the review of clinical services being undertaken by East Lancashire Hospitals NHS Trust. [26124]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 29 November 2005]: This is a matter for the East Lancashire Hospitals NHS trust.

Kitty Ussher: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will place in the Library the evidence presented to the review of clinical services being undertaken by East Lancashire Hospitals NHS Trust. [26126]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 29 November 2005]: This is a matter for the East Lancashire Hospitals NHS trust. The Cumbria and Lancashire strategic health authority report that evidence is still being submitted to the current review of clinical services and that the trust intends to publish this early next year.

Contrast Thermal Imaging

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS centres in England have contrast thermal imaging equipment; and what plans there are to increase the number. [21391]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Diagnostic Scans

Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the reasons healthcare providers operating existing NHS scanners are unable to meet the demand for diagnostic scans in the NHS. [19845]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 20 October 2005]: Independent sector diagnostic scanning activity has been procured to meet the immediate need for additional workforce and imaging capacity to treat national health service patients and to enable the Government to deliver their election manifesto pledge to deliver a maximum wait of 18 weeks from general practitioner referral to hospital treatment by 2008.

As well as making selective use of the independent sector, the Government are also tackling the shortage of radiographers in the NHS. The pledges in the NHS Plan to train and recruit more therapists and other health professionals have been delivered and we expect that there will be 30,000 more therapists and scientists, including radiographers, employed in the NHS by 2008 than there were in 2001.

Flu Pandemic

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether (a) mortuary and (b) crematoria capacity is estimated to be adequate for dealing with the anticipated increase in death rates during an influenza pandemic. [24657]

Paul Goggins: I have been asked to reply.

Work is being taken forward on the capacity of local mortuaries and crematoria within the theoretical projections in the UK Influenza Pandemic Contingency Plan. An assessment will be put to Ministers before the end of the year.

Foundation Hospitals

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many foundation hospitals plan to commission services from the private sector; and if she will make a statement. [22255]

Mr. Byrne: National health service foundation trusts (NHSFTs) are free to enter into arrangements with third parties at their own discretion, subject to the terms of their authorisation issued by Monitor and the cap on private patient activity set out in legislation. If NHSFTs wish to collaborate with third parties to the benefit of NHS patients, they are free to do so subject to these constraints.

General Practice

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 21 July 2005, Official Report, column 2163W, on general practitioners' contracts, when she expects the NHS employers organisation to report back. [17692]

Mr. Byrne: Negotiations are progressing and it is hoped that the first phase of the contract review will be completed before Christmas, with any changes being implemented from April 2006.

Glass Injuries

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS patients received treatment for incidents involving stabbing and laceration by glass in the latest year for which figures are available; and how many of these incidents were alcohol-related. [30878]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 22 November 2005]: There were 4,772 finished admission episodes due to assault by a sharp object in 2003–04. It is not possible to identify how many of these incidents involved stabbing and laceration by glass, nor is it possible to identify how many were alcohol related.

Healthcare Professionals Recruitment

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 15 November 2005, Official Report, columns 1169–70W, on healthcare professionals recruitment, (1) what sanctions (a) are available and (b) have been used in cases in which a breach of the code of practice on the International Recruitment of Healthcare Professionals has been identified; [30787]

(2) how many breaches of the code of practice have been identified by NHS employers; how many of these have led to penalties (a) after the code of practice was first published and (b) since it was revised in December 2004; [30788]

(3) what discussions her Department has had with NHS employers on the effectiveness of the monitoring of compliance with the Code of Practice on the International Recruitment of Healthcare Professionals; and what assessment her Department has made of the effectiveness of (a) systems of monitoring used and (b) steps taken by NHS employers to ensure compliance with the code of practice. [30791]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 21 November 2005]: NHS Employers are responsible for monitoring the code of practice, investigating alleged breaches of the code and applying any appropriate sanctions. The latter can include investigation and removal from the list of agencies adhering to the code of practice. The Department receives regular reports on compliance with the code from NHS Employers and holds regular review meetings with NHS Employers on the operation of the code. There is routine liaison between officials of the Department and NHS Employers. To date, 11 agencies have been removed from the list for breaches of the code.

Hospital Finances

Julia Goldsworthy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what date her Department instructed strategic health authorities to review the financial stability of every hospital; and what deadline she has set to receive responses. [29969]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 21 November 2005]: I would like to refer the hon. Member to the written ministerial statement made by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health on 7 November 2005, Official Report, column 5WS.

Hospital Trusts

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 12 July 2005, Official Report, column 688W, on hospital trusts, what account will be taken of the interdependency of accident and emergency with other hospital departments when deciding whether departments will be closed; and if she will make a statement. [18872]

Mr. Byrne: Decisions about service reconfiguration are a matter for the national health service locally. Patients will increasingly influence such decisions as they exercise their new abilities to choose where their treatment takes place. However, this Government are committed to maintaining a national accident and emergency service and we expect the NHS to take into account the impact of reconfiguring interdependent services when making such decisions.

Independent Treatment Centres

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is planning to take to ensure that independent treatment centres work to their optimum capacity. [18477]

Mr. Byrne: Independent sector treatment centres (ISTCs) are intended to build capacity to treat national health service patients as quickly and effectively as possible. Primary care trusts (PCTs) have signed up to referral levels in contract for all wave one ISTCs. Optimising the use of this capacity is a matter for PCTs under contract. In the future, the decision whether or not patients are referred to an independent sector provider will be down to the choice of individual patients and service providers and commissioners will need to respond accordingly.

Information Technology

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been spent on schemes to install centralised information technology systems for patient care in the NHS since 1997. [27220]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 20 November 2005]: Funds for information management and technology systems are included in general allocations to the national health service. Until 2003, comprehensive information about actual spend across the NHS was not collected centrally. Since then, this information has been available from revenue expenditure reported through an annual national survey of NHS bodies, and capital expenditure identified from NHS accounts, and is as follows:

	£ million
2002–03	928
2003–04	1,128

Notes:
1. Figures do not include expenditure on software licenses, expenditure by special health authorities, or central expenditure through the Department.
2. In both years a small number of NHS bodies failed to complete survey returns. The revenue component has been projected to 100 per cent, response in each case.

Comparable information for 2004–05 is not yet available.

In addition, NHS Connecting for Health is managing contracts to the value of £6.2 billion for the national programme for information technology in the NHS in the period 2002–10 above the ongoing NHS baseline expenditure. To date, £234 million has been paid to the programme's principal contractors.

Intensive Care

Kitty Ussher: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many intensive care beds are available in East Lancashire; what the occupancy rates of these beds was in the last year for which figures are available; and what assessment she has made of the future requirement for intensive care beds in the sub-region. [26122]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 29 November 2005]: There were, on average, 38 intensive care beds available in 2004–05 at the East Lancashire Hospitals NHS trust. The occupancy rate was 70.4 per cent.

The trust is currently conducting a review of clinical services.

Source: Department of Health H KH03 statistical returns.

Note: Ward classifications-intensive care: neonates, intensive care: paediatrics and intensive care: wholly or mainly adult have been grouped to form intensive care beds.

Maternity Care

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures are in place to improve the range of choices available to women who wish to receive one-to-one maternity care. [16657]

Mr. Byrne: The maternity standard of the national service framework for children, young people and maternity services requires maternity care providers and primary care trusts to ensure that the range of ante-natal, birth and post-birth care services available locally constitutes real choice for women including the offer of support from a named midwife throughout pregnancy. It also advocates that all women are able to contact a midwife day or night at any stage in pregnancy if they have concerns.

In its manifesto commitment, the Government made a commitment that

> "by 2009 all women will have choice over where and how they have their baby and what pain relief to use. We want every woman to be supported by the same midwife throughout her pregnancy. Support will be linked closely to other services that will be provided in Children's Centre."

We have put in place a concentrated work programme to support implementation of the both the manifesto commitment and the maternity standard.

Medical Consultation Costs

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average cost of (a) a general practitioner consultation, (b) an attendance at accident and emergency and (c) a consultation at an NHS walk-in-centre was in the latest period for which figures are available. [20858]

Mr. Byrne: This data is not routinely collected centrally. The latest available estimates are contained in the 2004 National Audit Office report, 'Improving Emergency Care in England'. This report estimates that a general practice consultation costs about £15, a presentation at an established national health service walk-in centre between £20 and £30 which is based on 2002 data, and an attendance at an accident and emergency department around £55 to £60. The full report is available in the Library.

Ophthalmic Operations

Frank Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cataract operations carried out by the private sector led to a reduction in such NHS operations. [17372]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 17 October 2005]: Centrally procured independent sector mobile cataract units have carried out over 17,500 procedures to date on national health service patients, increasing NHS capacity and helping to reduce long waiting times. In the past, these patients would have faced a much longer wait for their operations in NHS facilities.

Patient Advice and Liaison Services

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions she has had with (a) Patient Advice and Liaison Services and (b) other patient and public involvement organisations on advising individuals on Choose and Book. [22409]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 26 October 2005]: NHS Connecting for Health's choose and book patient reference group, which meets once every six to eight weeks, is comprised of patient and public involvement forum members. Through this mechanism, they have been supporting the development of the choose and book service since May 2004. In addition, the Plain English Campaign and the Patient Advice and Liaison Service (PALS) are involved in reviewing choose and book related communications.

Since February 2003, the choose and book joint programme board has met on a six weekly basis. The board is an important part of the governance arrangements for choose and book. The chief executive of the National Association for Patient Participation is a member of this board and attends these meetings.

The Department has also issued guidance to primary care trusts, which advises them to engage their local PALS, libraries and existing patient and public involvement organisations with providing information and support to patients offered choice through the choose and book service or other routes.

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the (a) quality (b) consistency and (c) impact on equity of access to treatment for patients of the service provided by patient care advisers; and if she will make a statement. [19234]

Mr. Byrne: Evaluations of the two largest choice pilots recognised the importance of patient care advisers (PCAs) to support and advise patients through choice and ensure equitable access. These showed that patients appreciated the role of PCAs, with over 93 per cent. of patients in London rating the PCAs quality of service as good, very good, or excellent. In addition, in London the evaluation found that the equity of access to choice was achieved in particular by providing support through PCAs to patients who needed help finding their way through the system.

Primary Care Services

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations the Government have received on their proposals to involve the private sector in managing primary care services. [21591]

Mr. Byrne: The Government have not made any proposals to involve the private sector in managing primary care services.

Private Sector Transfers

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the NHS facilities in each region which are being considered for transfer to private sector management in the current round of tendering. [21493]

Mr. Byrne: No facilities will be transferred. As part of the elective phase two procurement programme, strategic health authorities (SHAs) with primary care trusts proposed facilities which could be leased to the independent sector for the provision of elective surgery. Final decisions about which sites are used will not be made until the procurement process has ended. The specific facilities identified by SHAs include those shown in the table.

SHAs	Proposed facilities
Birmingham and The Black Country	Birmingham City Treatment Centre
Cheshire and Merseyside	Facilities in Whiston, Clatterbridge and Warrington (renal dialysis)
Hampshire and Isle of Wight	New Forest Lymington
North and East Yorkshire and North Lincolnshire	Facilities at Hull, Scunthorpe, Scarborough and Grimsby (renal dialysis)
North West London	Ravenscourt Park
South West Peninsula	Scope for provider to utilise spare surgical capacity at the following NHS hospitals: Axminster, Sidmouth, Exmouth, Tavistock.
South Yorkshire	Catheter laboratories at Rotherham and Barnsley.
West Yorkshire	Facilities at Bradford and Skipton (renal dialysis)

Quality and Outcomes Framework

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the outcome of the review of the quality and outcomes framework will allow GPs to have their performance measured against specific local indicators. [29388]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 17 November 2005]: The quality and outcomes framework is a national agreement as part of the general medical services contract, but primary care trusts are able to make local agreements with practices, in addition to those contained in the framework.

Reconfigurations

Dr. Richard Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what criteria she uses to decide whether to refer disputed health service reconfigurations to the Independent Reconfiguration Panel; and how many such cases are awaiting her decision. [22584]

Mr. Byrne: When the Secretary of State receives a referral of a decision from an overview and scrutiny committee she has an option of seeking advice from the independent reconfiguration panel if she considers. She needs further independent advice before making a final decision. Currently, there are three cases awaiting her decision.

Rehabilitation (Visually Impaired People)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what measures are in place to ensure that rehabilitation services for visually impaired people are made available to those who need them; [31390]

(2) what measures are in place to ensure that rehabilitation services for visually impaired people are made available to those who need them. [31919]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 28 November 2005]: Rehabilitation services for blind and partially sighted people are provided by local health and social care bodies. It is for those organisations to commission appropriate services based on local need. This would include the number and training of teams available to provide rehabilitation for blind and partially sighted people.

Scanning Services

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether private providers under the new contract to provide diagnostic scans will be able to use (a) NHS equipment and (b) NHS staff to provide the scans; and if she will make a statement. [18898]

Mr. Byrne: The diagnostic capacity being procured is intended to be additional to national health service capacity but independent sector providers may be able to lease unused or surplus NHS equipment to treat NHS patients. Under revised additionality rules, NHS staff in shortage specialisms may offer independent sector providers their non-contracted hours, subject to the permission of the employing trust and adherence to safe working practices.

Vaccinations

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what numbers of vaccinations for children triggered top rate vaccine payments to general practitioners in (a) 2004 and (b) 2005. [28289]

Caroline Flint: The information is not available in the form requested.

In 2004, 93 per cent. of practices achieved the higher target payment of 90 per cent.

Coverage levels at 12 months of age increased slightly compared to the previous quarter, October to December 2004, and are now around 91 per cent.. At 24 months, uptake for all vaccines were between 93 per cent. and 94 per cent. Coverage with measles, mumps and rubella at 24 months has increased by 2.2 per cent. to 83 per cent. for April to June 2005, compared with the previous quarter.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Ambulances

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many ambulances are available to each hospital in Northern Ireland; and how many were available in (a) 1990, (b) 1995, (c) 2000 and (d) 2005. [33066]

Mr. Woodward: The Northern Ireland Ambulance Service provides a regional emergency and non-emergency ambulance service deployed from 32 stations throughout Northern Ireland. Ambulances are not allocated to individual hospitals, as these are not always the best points from which to deploy ambulances to reach patients in the shortest possible time.

However, the total number of ambulances available is as follows:

	Number
1995	220
2000	225
2005	243

Information on the number of ambulances in 1990 is not readily available.

Animal Feeds

Dr. McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the cost of animal feeds was to farmers in Northern Ireland in the 2004–05 financial year. [33796]

Angela E. Smith: The total cost of feedstuffs to Northern Ireland farmers in 2004–05 was £363 million. Of this, £318 million was compound feed.

CAP

Dr. McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether the Government, at the time that modulation was introduced for direct common agricultural policy subsidies in 2001, gave a commitment to provide an equal amount of national match funding in the form of co-financing; and if he will make a statement. [33560]

Angela E. Smith: When the decision to apply modulation from 2001 was made at the end of 1999, Government indicated that it would provide an equal amount of additional national match funding. Since then, the additions to the Northern Ireland Block in respect of match funding have been made with that objective in mind.

Dr. McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much match funded money in relation to common agricultural policy subsidies has been raised within Northern Ireland since modulation was introduced in 2001. [33561]

Angela E. Smith: The amount of modulation match funding allocated to the Northern Ireland block since 2001–02 was as follows:

	£ million
2001–02	3.9
2002–03	5.2
2003–04	6.1
2004–05	6.1
2005–06	17.8

Dr. McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much national match funded money has been awarded by the Government in relation to common agricultural policy subsidies in each year since modulation was introduced in 2001. [33562]

Angela E. Smith: Expenditure of modulation match funding in Northern Ireland in each year since 2001–02 was as follows:

	£ million
2001–02	0.15
2002–03	0.62
2003–04	1.36
2004–05	1.97
2005–06 (to date)	0.96

Centenarians

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many centenarians live in Northern Ireland. [31943]

Angela E. Smith: There were estimated[1] to be about 170 centenarians (aged 100 and over) resident in Northern Ireland at 30 June 2004.

Community Relations

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the timetable is for the re-launch and implementation of the shared future strategy for improving community relations in Northern Ireland; and what resources have been allocated to this strategy in 2006–07. [32899]

Angela E. Smith: The plan is to re-launch the Shared Future policy and strategic framework before March 2006. As part of the re-launch we will set out in a Triennial Action plan the key actions to meet the policy objectives.

At its core the policy is about promoting sharing over separation. Its aim is to establish over time a normal, civic society, in which all individuals are considered as equals, where differences are resolved through dialogue in the public sphere, and where all people are treated impartially.

The Triennial Action plan will aim to ensure, over time, that all expenditure is designed to promote sharing over separation. In the interim, and in the run up to the comprehensive spending review, the planned expenditure in 2006–07 on "community relations/good relations" activities across departments, which is about £15 million, will be specifically used to support the objectives of a shared future.

Cyclists

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many cyclists have been (a) charged and (b) convicted in Northern Ireland of neglect of traffic regulations in each of the last five years. [33068]

Mr. Woodward: The information requested is provided in the following tables.

Table 1 provides details of how many cyclists were reported for prosecution in Northern Ireland during the period 1 April 2004 to 31 October 2005 (1 April 2004 being the earliest date for which this data is available).

Table 2 provides figures for the number of cyclists convicted in Northern Ireland of neglect of traffic regulations from 1999–2003 (the most recent year for which statistics are available).

Table 1

	Number recorded
1 April 2004–31 March 2005	71
1 April 2005–31 October 2005	29

Table 2[1]

	Number of convictions
1999	5
2000	2
2001	3
2002	5
2003	2
Total	17

[1] Convictions in table 2 were for the specific offences of 'cycling without due care and attention', 'cycling without reasonable consideration', 'cycling when unfit through drink or drugs', 'no lights on pedal cycle' and 'failing to wear protective headgear'.

Electricity Supply

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what discussions he has had with Northern Ireland Electricity regarding the possibility of disruption to the electricity supply in the event of severe winter conditions over the next few months. [34443]

Angela E. Smith: My officials are in regular contact with Northern Ireland Electricity (NIE) and the Northern Ireland Authority for Energy Regulation (NIAER) about the maintenance of the electricity supply in Northern Ireland.

NIE is confident that it has a network and response capability sufficiently robust to meet our winter needs, and that there is access to sufficient stocks of generating fuels or alternatives at the power stations to avoid disruption in supply over the winter months.

Electrical Apprenticeships

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the terms are of the Electrical Training Trust's contract to manage all entrants to the electrical installation Jobskills Modern Apprenticeship Programme in Northern Ireland. [33971]

Angela E. Smith: Electrical Training Trust's (ETT) contract is to manage all entrants to electrical installation on the Jobskills Modern Apprenticeship programme in Northern Ireland is in line with terms and conditions contained in all training organisation contracts managing the Jobskills programme. The contract covers areas such as: proper financial accounting for public funds; skills and experience of delivery staff; health and safety; and insurance and liability issues.

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many electrical installation modern apprenticeship trainees there were (a) for each location and (b) for each provider in each year since 1996 in Northern Ireland. [33972]

Angela E. Smith: Data for the period 1996–98 is not available because of disproportionate cost. Since 1998 the Electrical Training Trust (ETT) is the training provider which has been contracted by the Department to manage all entrants to the electrical installation Jobskills Modern Apprenticeship programme. The following table provides details on the number of young people, by geographical area, starting each year.

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the reduced availability of electrical installation modern apprenticeships in Derry and the North West of Northern Ireland. [33973]

Angela E. Smith: There has been an overall reduction in the number of entrants to the electrical installation Jobskills modern apprenticeship over the past number of years, in particular in the North West of Northern Ireland. While there has been no change in the contract delivery arrangements, it is recognised that there has been a shift in the economic climate which has contributed to a reduction in the overall employer base in the North West. However, I will wish to inquire further and will write to the hon. Gentleman.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what energy efficiency measures have been taken by Government Department offices in Northern Ireland in 2005. [30471]

Angela E. Smith: Northern Ireland Departments have adopted the targets for improvements in energy performance contained in the 2003 Government White Paper "Our energy future—creating a low carbon economy". Departments are accommodated in buildings provided and managed by the Department of Finance and Personnel, which conducts a continuous programme of improvements of building energy performance in pursuit of the aforementioned targets.

Since 2003, within the office estate planned actions have included conducting surveys to identify and implement cost-effective energy conservation measures; converting suitable buildings from oil or electric heating to natural gas; and purchasing green electricity, where this represents value for money. Similar actions have been taken in the specialised buildings within the Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment and the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development.

The Department of Finance and Personnel (DFP) also manages the Public Sector Energy Campaign, monitoring energy use in all public buildings, and providing energy performance returns to Departments for attention. DFP also manages the Central Energy Efficiency Fund which provides financial support for the introduction of cost-effective measures for reducing carbon emissions from public buildings.

Official vehicle fleets are now generally diesel fuelled, and the official car pool has purchased two petrol/electric hybrid cars. Local plans are also in place covering car travel.

Executive Programme Funds

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will reinstate the Executive Programme Funds which were abolished in 2002; and if he will make a statement. [33535]

Angela E. Smith: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 23 November 2005, Official Report, column 1980W.

Hypothermia

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people in Northern Ireland over the age of 65 years died as a result of winter cold weather in each of the last five years. [32226]

Angela E. Smith: For the years 2000 to 2004, the number of deaths registered in Northern Ireland of people aged 65 and over, where hypothermia was mentioned on the death certificate, is presented in the following table.

Registered number of deaths of people aged 65 and over, with a mention of hypothermia[1] Northern Ireland, 2000–04

	Deaths with mention of hypothermia

2001	11

Identity Cards

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate he has made of the (a) total and (b) net cost of (i) integrating the proposed identity card scheme into his Department's IT systems and (ii) the ongoing operation of the scheme within his Department. [31112]

Mr. Hain: At this stage, the Northern Ireland Office does not plan to make any estimate of the cost of using the ID cards scheme to support the services which it oversees. The Identity Cards Bill makes clear that the use of the ID cards scheme by devolved administrations is a matter for them. The business case makes no assumptions that the scheme will be used for services which are the responsibility of devolved administrations.

Lyons Inquiry

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether his Department has made a written submission to the Lyons Inquiry on local government finance. [33158]

Angela E. Smith: A written submission was sent by the Department of Finance and Personnel in Northern Ireland to the Lyons Inquiry in November 2004 outlining the policy proposals for reform of the domestic rating system in Northern Ireland.

ME

Dr. McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he takes to monitor the balance of research findings in the field of myalgic encephalomyelitis in Northern Ireland. [33588]

Mr. Woodward: Myalgic encephalomyelitis is a relatively poorly understood disorder which produces a broad range of symptoms and disabilities and has various suggested causes and treatments. As such research in the field of myalgic encephalomyelitis is extensive and varied in both approach and results.

The Department, in considering research findings for specific conditions and their potential implications, is informed by the views of the relevant professional and clinical standard setting bodies.

Medicine (Imports and Exports)

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much medicine was (a) imported and (b) exported by Northern Ireland in each of the last three years for which figures are available. [33081]

Dawn Primarolo: I have been asked to reply.

The value and weight of the medicine that was (a) imported and (b) exported by Northern Ireland in each of the last three years is included in the following table.

Imports and exports of medicines[1,2], by Northern Ireland[3]

Military Bases

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the total cost to the public purse of care and maintenance for the (a) Ebrington and (b) Fort George military bases in Londonderry has been since the Army handed over both sites to ILEX. [32522]

Angela E. Smith: Since taking ownership of the Ebrington and Fort George sites in Londonderry the total cost to the public purse of care and maintenance has been £968,183 and nil respectively.

Pregnancy-related Deaths

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many women aged (a) 14 to 16 years, (b) 17 to 21 years, (c) 22 to 24 years, (d) 25 to 30 years, (e) 31 to 35 years and (f) 36 to 40 years have died from pregnancy-related diseases in Northern Ireland in each year since 1980. [33087]

Angela E. Smith: The following table gives the number of deaths registered in Northern Ireland by age of deceased in each year between 1980 and 2004, where the underlying cause of death related to pregnancy, childbirth and the puerperium[1].

Telecare Scheme

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will increase funding in Northern Ireland for the telecare scheme to equal the average per capita spending in the rest of the United Kingdom. [33533]

Mr. Woodward: The Department does not make a specific allocation of funding for the provision of telecare services. The HPSS will receive almost £450 million of additional funding over the next two years and HPSS boards must balance a wide range of health priorities ensuring that priority is given to meeting the Department's PSA commitments. It is for boards to identify the most appropriate and cost effective means of delivering their health and social care services, including the provision of telecare where deemed fitting.

Pricewaterhouse Coopers

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the Government departments in Northern Ireland which have received advice from PricewaterhouseCoopers on their business strategies and e-Government requirements; and what the timeline of the contracts was in each case. [34412]

Angela E. Smith: The details of the Government Departments in Northern Ireland which received advice from PricewaterhouseCoopers on their e-business strategies and e-government requirements in the last five years are set out in the following table:

Rates Revaluation

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment the Valuation and Lands Agency has made of whether a police presence will be required in some circumstances for inspectors wishing to inspect a property for valuation purposes as part of the rates revaluation in Northern Ireland. [33154]

Angela E. Smith: The Valuation and Lands Agency has trained risk assessors familiar with the risks in each area of its operations. Risk assessments are carried out on a regular basis as well as in response to changes in circumstances or the operational environment.

There has been no separate assessment made of whether a police presence would be required to facilitate the inspection of any property as part of the rates revaluation.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) whether the Government expects that pensioners participating in a deferred rates payment system would have a charge placed on their home; and how such a charge would be prioritised on the death of the pensioner relative to their other liabilities; [33155]

(2) whether the Government expects that pensioners participating in a deferred rates payment system would pay interest on the deferred payment; [33156]

(3) if he will publish the preliminary analysis that the Government has drafted on how a deferred payment scheme for pensioners would operate in relation to the draft Rates (Capital Values, etc.) (Northern Ireland) Order 2005. [33157]

Angela E. Smith: The Government has no plans to introduce a rates deferment scheme for people of pension age. No analysis has therefore been carried out on how such a scheme would operate. It is, however, intended to make provision in primary legislation that would allow a future executive to introduce a deferment scheme.

Regional Transport Strategy

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the impact of the level of funding to the Department for Regional Development Roads Service on the completion of Northern Ireland's Regional Transport Strategy. [33234]

Mr. Woodward: The chief executive of Roads Service (Dr. Malcolm McKibbin) has been asked to write to the hon. Lady in response to this question.

Letter from Malcolm McKibbin, dated 5 December 2005:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland a Parliamentary Question regarding what assessment he has made of the impact of the reduced funding to the Department for Regional Development Roads Service on the completion of Northern Ireland's Regional Transport Strategy.

I have been asked to reply as this issue falls within my responsibility as Chief Executive of Roads Service.

In terms of the capital budget, I can advise that by the mid-way point on the Regional Transportation Strategy (RTS) ten-year strategy period i.e. in 2006–7, investment on strategic improvements, local transport and safety measures, minor network development schemes, bridge strengthening, street lighting, etc. will have reached approximately 50% of the total envisaged in the RTS. Thus I can reassure you that the overall capital investment in the road network is in line with the increased level of investment that the RTS proposed for initiatives to address the bottlenecks and upgrade the key transport corridors in the network. Indeed, the investment plans outlined in the Draft Investment Strategy for Northern Ireland (ISNI) embodies proposals which would take capital spending to levels beyond those of the RTS.

From the maintenance point of view, while average expenditure increased substantially following approval of the RTS, the scope to allocate resources is constrained by the amounts that can be made available from new sources or by reallocating funds from other areas. In order to help create scope to release resources for other priorities, including Health and Education, Ministers have agreed to reduce the amounts in the Draft Budget allocations from those previously allocated for roads. This will result in maintenance levels, which, although above those prior to the RTS, will be short of the total levels envisaged by the RTS. Nevertheless, it is important to note that in the last three years (2003/04–2005/06), over £220 million has been allocated to this structural maintenance of roads and when assessing maintenance investment it is important to consider this figure over the full cycle.

I assure you that Roads Service will continue to make the best use of resources available taking proper account of both safety issues and the need to achieve value for money.

I hope this information is helpful.

Severe Weather (Elderly People)

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans are in place to ensure that elderly people in Northern Ireland are protected from the worst effects of prolonged and severe winter weather. [34445]

Mr. Hanson: There are a number of measures in place to protect the elderly from the effects of severe winter weather. The warm homes scheme offers a range of heating and insulation measures to make homes more energy efficient and help save on fuel bills. Since it began in 2001, the warm homes scheme has assisted over 25,000 vulnerable households in the private sector and continues to make a major contribution towards improving the quality of life of those in fuel poverty. To strengthen our commitment to warm homes, funding for the scheme has increased from just under £3 million in 2001 to just under £15 million in the current financial year and despite the many pressures on public funding the target of 8,250 participants each year continues to be achieved.

Those who live in public sector homes are also supported by the Housing Executive's maintenance and improvements programmes which include measures to address fuel poverty.

Winter fuel payments are available to people aged 60 or over who are ordinarily resident in Northern Ireland. These payments of £200 are paid to all eligible households. Households which include people aged 80 or over can receive an extra payment of £100. During the winter 2004/05, 230,553 households in Northern Ireland benefited from winter fuel payments amounting to £49.7 million.

In addition cold weather payments provide extra help towards heating costs for the poorest and most vulnerable members of our society, including pensioners receiving pension credit, in periods of exceptionally cold weather.

The cold weather payment is made automatically to people awarded pension credit when the average temperature is recorded as, or forecast to be, 0 degrees Celsius or below over seven consecutive days at the weather station linked to the customer's postcode. Savings are not taken into account and Cold Weather Payments are paid in addition to winter fuel payments. This year the Government are also making Age-Related Payments to help pensioners with their rates bills or other living expenses. People aged 65 or over and not in receipt of the guarantee credit element of pension credit, could receive £200 per household to help with rates bills. Pensioners are free to use it towards heating costs. People aged 70 or over and in receipt of the guarantee credit element of pension credit could receive 50 to help with their living expenses such as heating bills. Age-Related Payments will be paid together with winter fuel payments.

Sports Council for Northern Ireland

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what role the Sports Council for Northern Ireland has in ensuring that the interests of sportsmen and women in the Province are represented within sports which are (a) organised on a Northern Ireland/Republic of Ireland basis and (b) funded through similarly organised sporting bodies. [33270]

Mr. Hanson: Under the Recreation and Youth Service (Northern Ireland Order) 1986 the Sports Council for Northern Ireland (SCNI) is statutorily responsible for the development of Sport in Northern Ireland including the distribution of public funding to sport. SCNI runs a range of development programmes designed to assist sports men and women in Northern Ireland to develop their full sporting potential regardless of whether their sports are organised on a Northern Ireland, all-Ireland or UK basis or organised through similarly organised bodies.

The SCNI does not recognise any governing bodies of sport organised and funded on a Republic of Ireland basis.

Terrorist Offences

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) if he will list the individuals who are on the run for terrorist offences after conviction; and how many individuals are wanted for questioning in connection with offences relating to terrorism in Northern Ireland; [30953]

(2) when he intends to answer Question 30953, on terrorist offences, tabled by the hon. Member for Lancaster and Wyre on 17 November. [34236]

Mr. Hain: According to Prison Service records the following five individuals convicted of terrorist offences are unlawfully at large from prison in Northern Ireland:

Kevin Barry Artt
Paul Brennan
Terrence Damien Kirby
Patrick Joseph McKenna
Dermot Delaney.

This list includes individuals who escaped from prison after the Belfast Agreement.

The Government does not hold figures on how many people are wanted for questioning in connection with offences relating to terrorism in Northern Ireland. The Police Service of Northern Ireland is currently conducting a review of outstanding warrants. This review has not yet been completed.

Tourism

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he has taken to promote (a) Lough Neagh, (b) the annual Sham Fight in Scarva, (c) the annual Twelfth of July Demonstrations in Scarva, (d) the site of the Battle of Diamond at Loughgall, (e) the annual demonstrations by the Royal Black Institution and (f) the annual Apprentice Boys of Derry parades as major tourist attractions. [31276]

Angela E. Smith: The Northern Ireland Tourist Board's (NITB) Strategic Framework for Action 2004–07 document has identified the regions, signature projects and winning themes on which NITB will focus over this period.

With regard to the specific areas referred to:

Lough Neagh

The Northern Ireland Tourist Board (NITB) currently has a seat on the Lough Neagh Partnership Board and had been represented on the Lough Neagh and Lower Bann Advisory Board until 2005. Also in March 2005, the NITB contributed £4,000 to the Lough Neagh Partnership Board to assist with a marketing strategy for the Lough.

Sham Fight in Scarva

The Sham fight at Scarva while not featured directly on the NITB Discover Northern Ireland website, has links through the Twelfth of July Celebrations (www.grandorange.org.uk) and Scarva Visitors Centre (www.banbridge.com).

Annual 12th July Demonstrations

The NITB has promoted the Orange order Annual 12th July Parades through a number of media channels, including the 'Northern Ireland Visitor Guide 2005/06' and, 'Events in Northern Ireland', and on its Discover Northern Ireland website.

The Battle of the Diamond, Loughgall

This project lies outside the core priorities of the Strategic Framework for Action 2004–07 and as such the NITB has no further plans for this site. However, the Dan Winter Cottage in Loughgall is listed on the NITB website www.discovernorthernireland.com and the 'Stop and Visit Guide' on an annual basis.

Royal Black Institution

The NITB has not promoted any events from this organisation to date.

Apprentice Boys

Over the past five years the NITB has offered the Apprentice Boys £28,300 in selective financial assistance through the Events Marketing Support Scheme and paid out £25,000 in relation to the same. In addition to the Events Marketing Support Scheme money, the NITB board agreed to make an additional payment of £20,000 in 2002–03 towards the cost associated with the festival. This was in recognition of the potential benefits for tourism which may have arisen from the continued success and development of the event. The NITB has also listed the event in the 'Events in Northern Ireland' guide for the past five years and the Maiden City Festival was listed in the events section of the Discover Northern Ireland website from 29 November 2004 to 14 August 2005.

Valuation and Lands Agency

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether the Valuation and Lands Agency plans to employ extra staff for the domestic rates revaluation in Northern Ireland. [30663]

Angela E. Smith: The Valuation and Lands Agency has employed 26 additional staff in order to fully resource the revaluation. Four of these staff are employed on short-term contracts.

Additionally the Agency has employed two staff on secondment from another Government Agency within Northern Ireland for the purposes of the revaluation.

No further recruitment is anticipated for the purposes of the revaluation.

Vehicle Licences and Insurance

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many drivers have been convicted of driving without (a) road tax licence and (b) valid car insurance in each district command unit in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [31973]

Mr. Hanson: The information is as follows.

(a) Road tax licence

Figures in table 1 are provided by Driver and Vehicle Licensing Northern Ireland (DVLNI) and cover the financial years 2000–01 to 2004–05. It is not possible to provide a breakdown by district command unit, therefore, Northern Ireland totals are included.

Those detected for vehicle excise duty offences are usually offered an out-of-court settlement. Only if they ignore the penalty or refuse to pay are they prosecuted in court. The figures for those convicted or who paid out-of-court settlements in the last five years are:

Table 1: Number of convictions or those who paid out-of-court settlements 2000–01 to 2004–05

	Number
2000–01	15,966
2001–02	15,428
2002–03	13,932
2003–04	10,876
2004–05	8,796

Note:
Of the 64,998 cases actioned over the last five years 86 per cent. resulted in out-of-court settlements and 14 per cent. were prosecuted through the courts.

Enforcement Section (DVLNI)

(b) Valid car insurance

The statistics included within table 2 cover the calendar years 2000 to 2003 and are based on the PSNI district command unit in which an offender's address falls. Data for 2004 will become available in early 2006. Due to the lack of comparability of 1999 data (based on crimes reported to 12 police divisions) figures for that year have not been included.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Avian Influenza

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps she is taking to assist poultry farmers to combat any suspected outbreak of avian influenza; and if she will make a statement. [35218]

Mr. Bradshaw: Anyone who keeps poultry has an obligation to report signs of illness in their birds, and must know what to do about an avian influenza notifiable disease: this includes operating adequate biosecurity, and consulting their vet.

My department has distributed guidance material to our partners in the industry who are helping to distribute this material to their members, who cover the great majority of birds. We have also produced a simple one-page leaflet on biosecurity and surveillance for smaller concerns and back-yard keepers. This was posted on our website and sent out to organisations representing the industry to send on to their members.

In addition we have placed adverts in trade and specialist press targeting the same audience to get biosecurity and surveillance messages across. All these pieces of guidance are available on the Defra website.

Bees

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much funding has been allocated to the bee health programme in each of the last 10 years. [34608]

Jim Knight: The Department's expenditure with the National Bee Unit in each of the last 10 years is set out in the following table:

	Defra expenditure with the National Bee Unit
1996–97	1,300,000
1997–98	1,300,000
1998–99	1,300,000
1999–2000	1,300,000
2000–01	1,300,000
2001–02	1,300,000
2002–03	1,300,000
2003–04	1,235,000
2004–05	1,235,000
2005–06	1,235,000

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will set out the criteria by which funding decisions for the bee health programme are made. [34609]

Jim Knight: The bee health programme is funded from the Departmental vote. Funding is allocated in order to achieve the best available value for money in achieving the Department's objectives.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps her Department (a) has taken and (b) is planning to take to safeguard bee health against the threat of the varroa mite. [34610]

Jim Knight: DEFRA (and MAFF before it) has been helping the beekeeping sector to better equip itself to manage varroa infestations ever since the pest was first discovered in England in 1992. The Department has funded a range of measures delivered by the National Bee Unit, including the provision of a free diagnostic and inspection service to beekeepers and a comprehensive training and advisory programme, as well as R&D.

Although varroa continues to pose challenges to contemporary beekeeping particularly with the development of mite resistance to chemical treatments, it is now endemic in the UK and has been for several years. The Department has issued a consultation document on plans to remove the mite from the list of notifiable diseases in March 2006. However, the National Bee Unit will continue to offer advice to beekeepers about its management and control, as it does now for other serious but non-statutory diseases.

Biofuels

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what proportion of arisings from forestry waste were used as biomass fuel in 2004–05. [27310]

Margaret Beckett: Information on the removal of tree tops and branch wood for use as fuel following conventional timber harvesting operations is not routinely collected. However, the Forestry Commission estimates that less than 2,000 tonnes of this material, from a possible 500,000 tonnes, was removed from woodland and used as fuel in England last year.

Damages

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer of 23 November 2005, Official Report, column 2032W, on damages, what the basis was of the (a) personal injury claims and (b) unfair dismissal claim; and if she will make a statement. [34394]

Jim Knight: The information is as follows:

(a) The personal injury claim was brought in relation to a work related upper limb disorder.

(b) The unfair dismissal and discrimination claim concerned an employee who had failed their probation and lodged a case with the employment tribunal for unfair dismissal and race discrimination. The case was settled via ACAS outside of the employment tribunal without any admission of liability.

Departmental Research

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what research projects commissioned by her Department are being undertaken; and what the publication arrangements are in each case. [32996]

Jim Knight: The Department spends around £160 million each year on research projects covering a wide range of science in support of policy formulation and development. At any one time we have around 1,500 'live' research projects. We publish a large amount of information on completed and ongoing research projects on the department's internet site at:

http://www2.defra.gov.uk/research/project_data/Default.asp.

This information is available free to all. Our searchable system provides a range of information on projects, including title, cost, contractor, duration, description and, once completed, the final report.

EU Decision 2005/745/EC

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had with her counterparts in the European Union on the duration of decision 2005/745/EC. [24940]

Mr. Bradshaw: No proposals have yet been made by the European Commission to extend or limit the duration of decision 2005/745/EC.

Flood Defences

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what improvements have been made to flood defences in each borough along the River Thames in each of the last five years; and if she will make a statement. [32628]

Mr. Morley: I understand from the Environment Agency that they have undertaken the improvements detailed in the following table. Expenditure on the River Thames is expected to increase significantly during the next five years as many tidal walls and embankments reach the end of their design life and the recommendations from improvement strategies are implemented.

[2] Renewals and maintenance. The breakdown includes all improvements on the River Thames and excludes works on side channels and tributaries.
[3] New tidal flap gate.
[4] Moveable tidal defences installation.
[5] Tidal wall-embankment repairs.

Floodline

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many telephone calls were received by Floodline in each of the last 36 months; and if she will make a statement. [32617]

Mr. Morley: The Environment Agency is the principal operating authority responsible for flood risk in England and operates the Floodline telephone advice service. The number of calls is given in the following table.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many visits to the Floodline website there were in each of the last 36 months; and if she will make a statement. [32618]

Mr. Morley: "Floodline" is an Environment Agency telephone service. The number of times the Flood Warning pages on the Agency's website were accessed are given in the following table. It should be noted that an individual might access more than one page at each visit to the website. Each such page access has been counted separately rather than the "visits" as such.

Ministerial Travel

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on how many occasions since 7 July she has used the London underground in connection with her official duties. [35027]

Jim Knight: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State, has not had an opportunity to use the London underground in connection with her official duties since 7 July 2005.

MRSA

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had with colleagues in the Department for Health on MRSA, with particular reference to the emergence of similar strains in humans and animals. [33790]

Mr. Bradshaw: Meticillin-resistant "Staphylococcus aureus" (MRSA) in animals has been specifically discussed at the Defra Antimicrobial Resistance Co-ordination (DARC) Group, which is led by the Veterinary Medicines Directorate (VMD) and includes the Department of Health (DH) membership. The VMD held a meeting in 2004 involving DARC group members, and external specialists in MRSA, to consider how the issue should be addressed. It was decided to turn this group into a MRSA sub group of DARC. There have been two meetings of this MRSA sub group in 2005, in January and in July and a position statement on (MRSA) in animals is available on the web at http://defraweb/animalh/diseases/zoonoses/mrsa.htm

North Western Waters Regional Advisory Council

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer of 15 November 2005, Official Report, columns 1068–69W, on the Regional Advisory Council for North Western Waters, what the (a) mandate, (b) budget and (c) powers are of the Regional Advisory Council for North Western Waters; how many members the Council has; how many UK representatives are on the Council; what posts on the Council are held by UK nationals; and if she will make a statement. [32042]

Mr. Bradshaw: The information is as follows:

(a) The remit or mandate of the North Western Waters Regional Advisory Council (hereafter RAC):

To submit recommendations and suggestions to the European Commission or Member States on matters regarding fisheries management. This may be upon request of the aforementioned bodies or made of the RAC's own accord.

To inform the Commission or Member States of any problems relating to the implementation of fisheries policy, and suggest ways of addressing the problems.

Issues addressed will often be relevant to the region concerned, but may also be more general in nature.

(b) The budget of the RAC for September 2005-September 2006 is 299,310/205,010. This is comes from the Commission (84 per cent.), member states (7 per cent.) and other contributors including members (9 per cent.).

(c) The RACs play an advisory role only; neither the Commission nor the member states are bound by the advice they receive from the RAC. However those in receipt of advice must respond precisely, within three months of the advice being given.

Currently there are 82 members on the General Assembly, 24 on the Executive Committee, and 58 members of the four working groups. Of these totals 26, five and 19 are from the UK respectively.

RAC members from the UK hold the following positions: Chairman of the RAC and Executive Committee, Chairman of the West of Scotland Working Group, Vice Chairman of the English Channel Working Group, and Vice Chairman of the Irish Sea Working group.

Public Sector Energy Savings

Susan Kramer: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the percentage of energy usage in the public sector that will be saved through energy efficiency measures by 2020. [31468]

Mr. Morley: With current policies the public sector is expected to save about 3–5 per cent. of its energy consumption in 2010 compared to a business as usual baseline. Without any further policies the savings would remain at the same level to 2020. Current policies in this sector are being reviewed as part of the wider review of the UK climate change programme.

Statutory Instruments

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many statutory instruments introduced by her Department were (a) withdrawn, (b) amended by a further statutory instrument and (c) reprinted because of defective drafting in each session since 1997; and what steps she (i) is taking and (ii) plans to take to prevent further such instances. [33553]

Jim Knight: The Department does not maintain comprehensive statistics on these questions for the period since 1997. The Department was created in June 2001. According to available sources dating back to 1999 (which therefore relate in part to MAFF), the Department has in the last six years made 26 instruments which correct defective drafting. The training measures mentioned in the answer to UIN 33554 are designed to limit such occurrences to a minimum.

Waste Disposal

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how long it takes on average to build a fully working incinerator to deal with refuse. [26496]

Mr. Bradshaw: Indicative lead times to develop new waste management facilities are given in Defra's practice guide to support local authorities in developing municipal waste management strategies, which is available on Defra's website at:

www.defra.gov.uk/environment/waste/localauth/practice-guidance/index.htm.

For energy from waste facilities the indicative lead times from commencement of procurement to operation range from five to eight years, depending on factors such as the size of the facility and local planning issues.

Water Supplies

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will introduce a requirement on water companies to submit an application for water scarcity status before seeking permission for any new reservoir capacity. [33665]

Mr. Morley: The Government expects any water company proposing a major new water resources development, such as a reservoir, to have fully investigated the opportunities for enhanced levels of demand management. Enhanced levels of metering is one of the measures that should be considered.

The legislation governing application for designation as an Area of Water Scarcity are The Water Industry (Prescribed Conditions) Regulations 1999. Under this legislation when determining an application the Secretary of State must have regard to, among other considerations, the water resources which are or could be made available for meeting demand in an area over the period of 10 years following an application. This would include reservoir capacity.

One of the projects the recently formed Water Saving Group will be doing is to encourage companies to better use the current powers they have for promoting metering and develop and take forward options for increasing the particular circumstances in which companies have the discretion to meter, particularly in water stressed areas. The Group will also consider the lessons learnt from a review of the current application for area of water scarcity status and encourage further applications for area of water scarcity status in water stressed areas as well as looking at ways of simplifying the application process.

Wild Fowl

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer of 17 November 2005, Official Report, column 1383W, on wild fowl, what estimate she has made of the total number of mallard released on National Gamebag Census shooting estates in each of the last five years. [33745]

Jim Knight: The Secretary of State for Environment and Rural Affairs has not made any such assessment of the total number of mallard released on National Gamebag Census shooting estates in each of the last five years, but figures provided to the Game Conservancy Trust suggest that on average 34,988 mallard are released each year on shooting estates.

The actual figures taken from the National Game Census on a yearly basis are as follows:

	Total number of Mallard released
2000	39,614
2001	36,313
2002	25,521
2003	33,734
2004	39,761

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

International Convention Against Doping In Sport

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when the UK will ratify the international convention against doping in sport recently adopted by the UN Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organisation; and if she will make a statement. [34721]

Mr. Caborn: It is the Government's intention to become party to the convention as soon as the necessary parliamentary procedures have been completed. However, until we receive an authenticated copy from UNESCO of the adopted convention, we are unable at this time to give a precise date for when the UK expects to ratify the convention.

Consultants/Special Advisers

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many (a) consultants and (b) special advisers were employed by her Department in each year since 1997; what the cost of each was in each year; and if she will make a statement. [27420]

Mr. Lammy: The information requested is as follows.

(a) Detailed records of contracts are not retained for the years 1997 and 1998. In the year 1997 the cost of consultants was £309,000 and in 1998 it was £728,000.

(b) Since 2003, the Government has published on an annual basis the names and overall cost of special advisers and the number in each pay band. For the most recent information I refer the hon. Member to the statement made by my right hon. Friend, the Prime Minister on 21 July 2005, Official Report, 158–62WS.

Information on the numbers of special advisers prior to 2003 was provided at regular intervals and this information will be available in the Libraries of both Houses.

Licensing

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what estimate the Government have made of the number of (a) village halls, (b) sports clubs and (c) community centres which have applied for a full premises licence under the Licensing Act 2003. [32499]

James Purnell: Initial feedback from licensing authorities suggests that the vast majority of the 9,000 village halls in England and Wales applied to convert their old licences into new premises licences. We do not hold the information on the number of community centres that applied for premises licences or the number of sports clubs that applied for premises licences rather than club premises certificates.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport pursuant to her answer of 17 November 2005, Official Report, column 1403W, on licensing appeals, what guidance has been provided to magistrates courts by (a) the Magistrates' Association and (b) the Justices Clerks' Society. [32716]

James Purnell: The main guidance that has been provided to magistrates courts on the Licensing Act 2003 is through a training pack designed by the Justices Clerks' Society and issued by the Judicial Studies Board. The procedure for magistrates' courts is one that they are familiar with as they already deal with appeals arising from local authority decisions for example, on hackney carriage licences and entertainment licences.

National Water Sports Centre

Angela Browning: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the outcome was of the recent inquiry into the future of the National Water Sports Centre at Holme Pierpoint; and if she will make a statement. [34988]

Mr. Caborn: Sport England is carrying out a review of the future of the National Sports Centres, including the National Water Sports Centre at Holme Pierrepont. The Holme Pierrepont site is owned by Nottinghamshire county council (NCC) and leased to Sport England through the Sports Council Trust Company. A joint Sport England and NCC study of the wider strategic development options for Holme Pierrepont has been carried out, taking into account sporting requirements and local and regional stakeholder interests.

These options are still being evaluated. Discussions between Sport England and NCC continue with the aim of developing a strategy that offers a stronger long-term future for the site.

Olympic Games

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the contribution of London council tax payers will be to the 2012 Olympics. [30614]

Mr. Caborn: The Memorandum of Understanding between the Government and the Mayor of London (Command Paper CM5867 laid before the House in June 2003) provides for a contribution to the Olympics from the London council tax payer of up to £625 million over a period of eleven years.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the latest estimate of the costs of holding the Olympic games in London in 2012. [30650]

Mr. Caborn: The most recent figures for the costs of holding the Olympic games in London in 2012 are published in the candidature file. These costs are currently under review as part of process of robust cost management that is being put in place following the successful Olympic bid.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when the Olympic Delivery Authority is expected to (a) select its chairman and (b) be a functioning body. [31172]

Mr. Caborn: On 18 November my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced the selection of Mr. Jack Lemley as the chairman of the Olympic Delivery Authority. From 1989 to 1993 Mr. Lemley was chief executive of Trans-Manche Link, the consortium responsible for the construction of the channel tunnel. The appointment was made in accordance with the code of practice of the Office of the Commissioner for Public Appointments. The timing of the establishment of the Olympic Delivery Authority is subject to the passage of the London Olympic games and Paralympic Games Bill.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the relationship is between the Olympic Delivery Authority and the Olympic Transport Authority; and to whom each is accountable. [31173]

Mr. Caborn: The Olympic Transport Authority will be part of the Olympic Delivery Authority (ODA), which will itself be accountable to the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport as a member of the Olympic Board. In addition, the ODA's annual report and statement of accounts will be laid before Parliament.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the state is of negotiations between the London Development Agency and London and Continental Railways Limited regarding land needed for the 2012 Olympics over which London and Continental Railways Limited has development rights. [31174]

Mr. Caborn: Negotiations have resulted in the parties reaching an agreement. The agreement ensures that all the land and infrastructure required for the Olympics on the Stratford City land can be delivered and that the first phase of the Stratford City development, known as zone 1, can proceed.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what measures have been taken to ensure that unemployed people in inner London constituencies benefit from increased employment opportunities connected to construction work prior to the 2012 Olympics. [31175]

Mr. Caborn: The Government are committed to ensure that the London 2012 Olympic and Paralympic games maximise the potential for job creation, training and business growth so that the games leave a lasting social and economic, as well as physical, legacy for London and the rest of the UK. This is reflected in the "Procurement Principles" published by the interim Olympic Delivery Authority in September which will form the basis of the draft procurement strategy to be adopted by the Olympic Delivery Authority.

The London Development Authority is also now finalising a framework of initiatives with the London boroughs of Newham, Tower Hamlets, Hackney, Waltham Forest and Greenwich designed to give local people the skills they need to access Olympic-related jobs (including those in construction). This is an important pre-condition of the Olympic and legacy planning permissions granted by the boroughs in 2004. The details of how this programme will be delivered, match funding arrangements, and how the programme will operate within the existing construction training environment will need to be finalised and agreed with the boroughs as part of the ongoing planning process.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions she has had with (a) the International Olympic Committee and (b) National Olympic Committees on the prevention of exploitation of and cruelty to children training in Olympic sports. [34626]

Mr. Caborn: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has had no such discussions with the International Olympic Committee or other National Olympic Committees.

However, the Government firmly believes that parents and their children have a right to believe that they will be safe and well protected whilst participating in all sport. All sports organisations that receive statutory funding through Sport England must have an active child protection policy in place. The Child Protection in Sport Unit—a partnership between the National Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, Sport England, sportscotland, the Sports Council for Northern Ireland and the Sports Council for Wales—works with the various National Governing Bodies of sport on their child protection policies to ensure that this happens.

Queen's Diamond Jubilee

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what preparations and planning her Department has undertaken in connection with events to mark Her Majesty the Queen's diamond jubilee in 2012. [34439]

Mr. Lammy: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport is not currently involved in preparations to commemorate The Queen's diamond jubilee in 2012. Any announcement of plans will be made closer to the time.

DEFENCE

Aircraft Crashes

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what procedure was followed in clearing the radar altimeter hold for use on (a) the Chinook HC1 and (b) the Chinook HC2. [25194]

Mr. Touhig: The Chinook HC1 radar altimeter system under went detailed flight trials at the Aeroplane and Armament Experimental Establishment (A&AEE), Boscombe Down (now Qinetiq). Prior to the upgrade of the Chinook HC1 to Chinook HC2, further trials were undertaken, also at A&AEE.

Army Vehicles

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many vehicles have been sent to the Army Base Repair Organisation workshop Donnington for specified repair-only repairs over the past five years, broken down by type. [33580]

Mr. Ingram: The information requested is shown in the following table:

	Equipment
	Warrior	CVRT
2000–01	1	0
2001–02	0	0
2002–03	1	4
2003–04	1	24
2004–05	7	36

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) Warrior and (b) CVR(T) vehicles are expected to be sent to Afghanistan in 2006. [33583]

Mr. Ingram: I refer the hon. Member to the written statement I made on 14 November 2005, Official Report, column 41WS.

Once ISAF plans for expansion into the South and East of Afghanistan mature, individual Allies, including the United Kingdom, will be able to take final decisions on deployment of forces and capability.

British Troop Deployment (Afghanistan)

Mr. MacDougall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many British troops will be deployed to Afghanistan in the next 12 months; and in which region of Afghanistan they will be deployed. [34123]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 5 December 2005]: I refer my hon. Friend to the written statement I made on 14 November 2005, Official Report, column 41WS.

Claims Annual Report

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the background to the claims referred to in (a) Annex C and (b) Annex D of the Claims Annual Report 2004–05. [34358]

Mr. Touhig: The top 10 settled claims by value brought by service personnel and civilian employees under the Department's Employer's Liability obligations are set out in Annexes C and D of the Ministry of Defence's Claims Annual Report 2004–05. These claims are handled respectively by Royal and Sun Alliance and AXA Corporate Solutions, on behalf of the Ministry of Defence. Such claims are considered on the basis of whether or not the Ministry of Defence has a legal liability to pay compensation. Where there is a proven legal liability, compensation is paid.

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the nature of the cases referred to in paragraph 10.25 of the Claims Annual Report 2004–05. [34359]

Mr. Touhig: The cases referred to in paragraph 10.25 of the Ministry of Defence's Claims Annual Report 2004–05 relate to compensation claims arising in Northern Ireland. The details are as follows:

High value bloodstock claims

Death of five year-old mare as a result of being startled by low flying helicopter	32,000.00
Death of foal	12,700.00
Veterinary fees	108.70

Injuries sustained by an 80 year-old lady as a result of being blown off her feet by a Chinook helicopter	30,900

Defence Advisory Notices

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Defence Advisory (DA) Notices were issued to the media in each month since January 1997; and how many were (a) DA-Notices 01, (b) DA-Notices 02, (c) DA-Notices 03, (d) DA-Notices 04 and (e) DA-Notices 05. [33063]

Mr. Ingram: The term 'DA Notice' refers only to the five standing Defence Advisory (DA) Notices agreed by the Defence Press and Broadcasting Advisory Committee (DPBAC). Changes to DA Notices are made rarely and are circulated directly to editors throughout the UK, and made available to the public through the DPBAC website (www.dnotice.org.uk). Only two changes have been made to the standing DA Notices since January 1997. In May 2000, the then DA Notice No 6 was incorporated into DA notice No 4 (sensitive installations and home addresses). In March 2005. DA Notice No 4 was amended to reflect concerns over possible terrorist attacks on elements of the critical national infrastructure.

Additional DA Notice guidance, amplifying the advice set out in the standing DA Notices, is issued by the DPBAC secretary (on behalf of the Committee) to all editors in the United Kingdom to cover specific circumstances or to meet particular concerns. Since January 1997, the DPBAC secretary has written to all UK editors amplifying DA Notice guidance on the following occasions:

1997: No record of any letters being issued

1998: No record of any letters being issued

1999: February DA Notice No 6 (two letters); May DA Notice No 6

2000: August DA Notice No 5; September DA Notice No 5

2001: September DA Notice No 5; October DA Notice No 5; November DA Notice No 5

2002: January DA Notice No 5

2003: May DA Notice No 5 (two letters)

2004: September DA Notice No 2; November DA Notice No 1

2005: August DA Notice No 2; October DA Notice No 2

Defence Procurement

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will list the defence procurement projects in which changes in acquisition numbers have been made since 1997; [34364]

(2) if he will list the defence procurement projects in which capability requirement changes have been made since 1997. [34365]

Mr. Ingram: This information could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Eurofighter Typhoon

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) whether the meetings he held with Crown Prince Abdullah and officials in July during his visit to Saudi Arabia included discussion of the Eurofighter Typhoon; and if he will make a statement; [34836]

(2) whether the meetings he held with Crown Prince Abdullah and other officials in July 2005 on his visit to Saudi Arabia were attended by employees of BAE Systems; and if he will make a statement; [34837]

(3) whether the meetings he held with Crown Prince Abdullah and other officials in July 2005 on his visit to Saudi Arabia included discussions on (a) Saad al-Faqih and (b) Mohammed al-Masari; and if he will make a statement. [34838]

John Reid: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 9 November 2005, Official Report, column 563W. I have nothing further to add.

Falkland Islands

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to change the size of the UK garrison in the Falkland Islands. [33864]

Mr. Ingram: There are no plans to change the size of the United Kingdom garrison in the Falkland Islands. We keep all commitments under continual review and adjust resources when it is appropriate to do so.

Former Warsaw Pact Countries

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will list those former Warsaw pact countries belonging to NATO which have made information available (a) bilaterally to the United Kingdom, (b) to NATO and (c) by means of general publication revealing former Soviet plans to use (i) nuclear and (ii) conventional weapons in Europe; [34194]

(2) if he take steps, in conjunction with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, to obtain the material about former Soviet plans for (a) nuclear and (b) conventional warfare in Europe released by the Polish Government and publish translations in English of this material. [34195]

John Reid: Former Soviet plans for the use of nuclear and conventional weapons in Europe are of historic interest only. The Ministry of Defence have not therefore attempted to draw together information made available by former Warsaw pact countries; to do so would incur disproportionate cost.

We are aware that the Polish Government have recently released information about former Soviet plans for the use of nuclear weapons in Europe. However, as this information is considered to be of historic interest only, the Ministry of Defence and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office have no plans to publish translations of this information.

Future Aircraft Carrier

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) for what reasons Ministers in his Department have ceased to identify the target in-service dates for each Future Aircraft Carrier as 2012 and 2015; [33616]

(2) if he will make a statement on changes in the target in-service dates for each of the Future Aircraft Carriers. [33615]

Mr. Ingram: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 2 December 2005, Official Report, column 818W.

HMS Sheffield

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 17 November 2005, Official Report, column 1409W, on HMS Sheffield, whether the departmental files that are under review also contain all the reports that were written by the HMS Sheffield veterans on board the tanker British Elsk while on passage from the Falkland Islands to Ascension Island; and if he will make a statement. [34849]

Mr. Ingram: Witness statements are held on file from all but one of the surviving members of HMS Sheffield's crew.

Jet Emissions

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will take steps to ensure that carbon emissions from military jets are offset by carbon reducing programmes. [33360]

Mr. Touhig: The Government are committed to offsetting carbon dioxide emissions from central Government civilian air travel from April 2006. Defra are developing a strategy for an offsetting scheme across Government. The MOD is currently working with Defra to identify how best to contribute to this.

Joint Combat Aircraft

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent information he has received about whether the United States intends to develop the STOVL variant of the Joint Combat Aircraft; and what assessment he has made of the effect on plans for (a) the Future Aircraft Carriers and (b) the RAF if the STOVL variant were cancelled. [33618]

Mr. Ingram: Development of the STOVL variant of the Joint Strike Fighter (JSF), which is the solution to the UK Joint Combat Aircraft requirement, continues as planned. Assembly of the first STOVL development aircraft has commenced with its first flight planned for late 2007. It is too early to say what will emerge from the US Quadrennial Defence Review (QDR). So far as the STOVL JSF is concerned, however, while there is no doubt that it will remain under close scrutiny as the development programme transitions into production, we are not aware of any delay as a result of the QDR.

Lynx Helicopter

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to sign the contract for the Future Lynx helicopter; and when he expects it to enter service; [32715]

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence the service entry planning assumption target date is for the Future Lynx project; and what provisions he has made for (a) naval and (b) Amy helicopter capability until the Future Lynx enters service. [33404]

Mr. Ingram: The Future Lynx is our preferred procurement option to meet the Surface Combatant Maritime Rotorcraft and Battlefield Reconnaissance helicopter requirements. This is, however, subject to continuing negotiations with the company, and the main investment decision has not yet been taken. While the Department will consider a number of planning assumptions for in-service dates when conducting assessment studies on projects, actual in-service dates are not set until projects achieve their main gate approval. If we decide to proceed with FLynx its entry into service will be coordinated with the progressive withdrawal from service of the current Lynx aircraft.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions he has visited wounded soldiers since May; and in which locations. [33402]

John Reid: I visited wounded soldiers at Shaibah field hospital in Iraq on 17 May and again on 2 December. My ministerial colleagues have also visited wounded soldiers on four occasions since May:

My hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Defence and Minister for Veterans visited wounded soldiers at the Royal Centre for Defence Medicine (RCDM) in Birmingham on 8 September. This was in a private capacity and was part of a wider official visit.

My right hon. Friend the Minster for the Armed Forces visited wounded soldiers at RCDM on 14 June.

My noble Friend the Minister for Defence Procurement visited wounded soldiers at RCDM on 18 November, and visited Shaibah field hospital in early July.

With regard to support for wounded servicemen and women, the Government's priority has been to provide the best possible medical care to injured personnel, giving them the peace and quiet needed to allow a speedy recovery. It is the emotional support provided by friends and family that is of most importance to our injured soldiers. The Government supplement this through the wide range of welfare services made available by the Ministry of Defence.

MOD Contracts

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library copies of the audit clauses contained in contracts between the Ministry of Defence and BAE Systems agreed over the past two years. [33920]

Mr. Ingram: A number of defence contract conditions (DEFCONS) provide for audits or investigations to be conducted in a variety of circumstances during and after the contract period, mainly for pricing, quality assurance and government property holdings purposes. Audits are conducted by the appropriate MOD integrated project team staffer authority, such as the pricing and forecasting group, defence quality assurance authority or directorate of internal audit.

Information about the clauses contained in the 639 contracts between the MOD and BAE Systems and its divisions agreed over the past two financial years is not held centrally and could only be provided at disproportionate cost. However, a 'Conditions guide' and a copy of each DEFCON, along with other commercial policy information, are available through the Commercial Toolkit at www.ams.mod.uk. I will place a copy of the 'Guide' in the Library of the House.

Naval Rules of Engagement

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent assessment he has made of the adequacy of the rules of engagement under which the Royal Navy ships operate in the Mediterranean to deal with (a) threats of terrorism, (b) drugs and arms running and (c) the smuggling of illegal immigrants; and if he will make a statement. [33712]

Mr. Ingram: It has been the practice of successive Governments not to comment in detail on the rules of engagement under which our armed forces operate.

Royal Ordnance

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 15 November 2005, Official Report, column 1092W on Royal Ordnance, from which country each of the munitions listed are to be sourced. [32744]

Mr. Ingram: BAE Systems Land Systems remain responsible for the alternative sourcing of items previously manufactured at their Bridgwater and Chorley sites, and for maintaining overall security of supply. The company is examining a range of alternative sources for the products, both at home and overseas. The details are a matter for the company.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Bona Vacantia Division

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Solicitor General what the national targets are for the Bona Vacantia division; and what the performance of relevant offices in South Devon has been against those targets. [34031]

The Solicitor-General: There are no national targets for the Bona Vacantia division for either receipts or volumes of new cases as it would be inappropriate to set targets in these areas. The Bona Vacantia division does not in general seek out bona vacantia assets relying instead on notification by others.

Income and expenditure from bona vacantia is detailed in the Crown's nominee account, laid before Parliament each financial year. The Bona Vacantia division operates from the offices of the Treasury solicitor based in central London. There are no other Bona Vacantia offices located anywhere else in England and Wales.

Information on the volume of cases as well as a suite of internal quality targets is kept by the division. These include responding to new cases within five working days, against which performance in the year to date is 94.3 per cent. and responding to complaints within 10 working days, against which performance this year is 100 per cent.. Apart from Northern Ireland there is no geographical breakdown of this information for England and Wales.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Antisocial Behaviour

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many antisocial behaviour orders have been issued to children in each local authority in England and Wales in each year since they were established, broken down by age of child. [33302]

Hazel Blears: The available information is given in the tables and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will list the grants available to organisations tackling antisocial behaviour in East Sussex; and how much money is available in each case; [33573]

(2) what funding is available to organisations tackling antisocial behaviour in Bexhill-on-Sea, East Sussex; [33778]

(3) how much money has been spent on antisocial behaviour prevention in East Sussex since 1997. [33779]

Hazel Blears [holding answer 1 December 2005]: Prior to the antisocial behaviour unit being set up in January 2003 there was no specific funding for antisocial behaviour. However since 2003 each CDRP has received £25,000, primarily for an ASB co-ordinator. In 2004 Hastings was made an action area. £55,000 has been allocated to Hastings for 2005–06.

This resource has been used to help support the recruitment of housing association staff to work in the ASB team. It has also been used to fund in part the development of four together action zones which will divide the area and enable a more structured approach to tackling ASB. Some of the resource will be spent on a targeted advertising campaign informing residents about ASB and how to tackle it.

Correspondence

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of hon. Members' correspondence with his Department was answered within 15 working days for the period (a) January to March, (b) April to June and (c) July to September; and if he will make a statement. [34325]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The proportion of Members' correspondence answered by core Home Office units (excludes the Immigration and Nationality Department and agencies) within 15 working days was: 52 per cent. in January to March 78 per cent. in April to June 93 per cent. in July to September. In October we reached the target of 95 per cent. of Members' correspondence that was answered within 15 working days.

Council Tax Valuation

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether an individual prosecuted in the magistrates court for intentionally delaying or obstructing a Valuation Office Agency representative conducting a council tax valuation inspection would receive a criminal record if convicted. [33118]

Hazel Blears: A person who intentionally obstructs a valuation officer commits an offence and may be liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding level two (£500) on the standard scale. This is not a recordable offence and will not be recorded nationally on the police national computer, but will be recorded on local police and court records.

Data Analysis

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent steps have been taken to speed up the processing of data analysis by (a) the police and (b) the security services. [33567]

Hazel Blears: Recent investigations have demonstrated how the use of technology by terrorist suspects has an impact on the data processing required by investigating authorities. However, the steps taken by the police and the Security Service to respond to this increased requirement is an operational matter on which it would not be appropriate to comment.

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average number of police officers is which has been assigned to the processing of data held by a terrorist suspect. [33568]

Hazel Blears: The Home Office does not hold this information. A decision on the number of police officers deployed to focus on a particular area of an investigation, such as processing data is the responsibility of the chief constable of the force concerned.

Independent Police Complaints Commission

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department why the (a) salary, (b) pension and (c) other costs relating to the former Joint Deputy Chair of the Independent Police Complaints Commission were not included in the Commission's annual report and accounts 2004–05; and if he will make a statement. [32580]

Hazel Blears: This information may only be made available with the consent of the individual concerned and it was specifically not given.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were the (a) salary, (b) pension and (c) other costs relating to the former joint deputy chair of the Independent Police Complaints Commission in 2004–05; and if he will make a statement. [32582]

Hazel Blears: The former deputy chair was paid in accordance with the salary range advertised for the post (£50,000-£70,000). Further details can not be disclosed without the consent of the individual concerned. Recruitment costs cannot be identified because they are part of a campaign to recruit 16 commissioners.

Licensing Hours

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will visit Shrewsbury (a) to assess the impact of extended licensing hours on the town and (b) to discuss the issue with local police. [34368]

Mr. Charles Clarke: At the present time I have no plans to visit Shrewsbury. I understand however that the majority of the 165 premises within the Shrewsbury and Atcham Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnership area, including public houses, clubs, restaurants and shops that applied for an extension of their opening hours were for extensions of only one or two hours. I also believe West Mercia police, who cover Shrewsbury, have briefed Pub Watch members and licencees on the new powers in the Licensing Act 2003.

The Act which became effective from 24 November 2005 strengthens the powers the police have to clamp down on crime and disorder if it arises. Not only does that help the police and licensing authorities to do their jobs, but it gives licence holders an added incentive to manage venues responsibly. The Government have given a commitment to monitor the impact of the act on crime and disorder and the other licensing objectives. If necessary the Government will introduce further legislation with the consent of Parliament to strengthen or alter any provisions.

Money Laundering

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which law enforcement agencies have responsibility for (a) monitoring, (b) investigating and (c) prosecuting money laundering offences committed by foreign politically exposed persons which bring money derived from corrupt activities or theft of state assets into the UK financial system; and whether he plans to change the allocation of responsibilities. [34011]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The principal law enforcement agencies involved are the National Criminal Intelligence Service (NCIS) and local police forces. Prosecutions are the responsibility of the Crown Prosecution Service and the Serious Fraud Office. The Serious Organised Crime Agency will take over the NCIS responsibilities from 1 April 2006.

Motor Vehicle-related Accidents/Deaths

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to propose changes to the law relating to penalties for those responsible for motor vehicle related (a) accidents and (b) deaths. [32296]

Fiona Mactaggart: Following consultation on road traffic offences involving bad driving earlier this year the Government are taking forward a number of measures. These include two new offences where a death has occurred: a new offence of causing death by careless driving, with a maximum of five years imprisonment: a new offence dealing with death resulting from illegal (disqualified, unlicensed and uninsured) driving, with a maximum penalty of two years.

These measures were tabled by the Government as amendments to the Road Safety Bill currently before Parliament and included in the Bill at Lords Report on 22 November. The Government are not recommending any statutory changes in relation to bad driving that causes injury. The consultation proposed that the courts should be under a statutory responsibility to take account of non-fatal injuries when sentencing. This proposal received some support but some respondents thought it was unnecessary and that this is already done in practice in England and Wales.

The Government agree that requiring sentencers to take appropriate account of these factors in sentencing is an issue better dealt with by the Sentencing Guidelines Council and the Sentencing Commission for Scotland rather than through legislation.

Muttahida Quami

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the activities of the Muttahida Quami movement in the United Kingdom. [27692]

Mr. Charles Clarke: We do not comment on operational matters nor do we comment on any decisions whether to proscribe or deproscribe organisations

Nursery Bullying Study (Leak Inquiry)

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will hold an inquiry into the leak of the study proposing that nursery staff should identify children aged three and four who bully other children as being at risk of growing up criminals; and for what reason he will not publish the leaked study referred to on page 20 of The Times on Monday 13 June. [5035]

Hazel Blears [holding answer 15 June 2005]: The study on nursery staff and bullying children was more than a year old and could have been leaked at any time during the previous twelve months. Previous leak inquiries have identified the source of other similar leaks over that period. The Secretary of State has therefore decided that a separate leak inquiry is not required in this instance.

I will not publish the leaked report referred to on page 20 of The Times on Monday 13 June 2005 because, in order to fully protect the ability of officials to formulate clear and well considered policy recommendations, it would not be in the public interest to do so. We do however propose to release a factual synthesis of crime patterns and reduction measures analysis in the new year which will provide a more up to date picture than is currently available.

Police

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which police forces have a policy of visiting every crime. [34498]

Hazel Blears: Attendance policy in respect of visiting every crime is essentially an operational matter for chief officers and police authorities to determine.

This information is not therefore collected centrally.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress his Department has made towards light touch inspection of high performing police services. [13580]

Hazel Blears: HM Inspectorate of Constabulary has conducted a comprehensive scrutiny of core policing activities, known as baseline assessment. The results were published in October, with each activity graded as excellent, good, fair or poor.

HMIC will now use this baseline assessment to identify high performing forces—ie those with a majority of excellent or good and no poor grades—which will benefit from significant inspection freedoms. Instead of inspecting these forces across the board, HMIC will rely upon a significant degree of self-assessment and will limit its scrutiny to core governance issues—leadership, diversity and integrity—and those areas of greatest threat and vulnerability. Other forces will be subject to more inspection attention but this will be risk-based, focusing on activities attracting a poor grading and, as above, those activities that are high risk such as child protection, the management of dangerous sex offenders, civil contingencies and major crime.

The inspection effort will also take into account the fact that forces/police authorities are engaged in a significant exercise to reconfigure policing for the 21st century. HMIC will support the process by advising on how current high levels of performance can be maintained, and by ensuring that forces go into new merged arrangements, where appropriate, with a clear "balance sheet" of their respective strengths and weaknesses. HMIs' assessments of force leadership will specifically address the chief officers' change management capabilities.

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the (a) role and (b) composition of the police authority will be in the proposed strategic police forces. [34617]

Hazel Blears [holding answer 5 December 2005]: We continue to see a vital role for police authorities in setting priorities for strategic police forces and in holding the chief officer to account for the delivery of an efficient, effective and responsive policing service. Under the provisions of the Police Act 1996, any order amalgamating police force areas would provide for the establishment of a police authority for the new force.

As now, the authority would comprise a mix of councillors, magistrates and independent members. The White Paper "Building Communities, Beating Crime" set out proposals for strengthening the role and composition of police authorities, including by widening the skills and experience of the membership by removing the separate category of magistrate members.

Politically Exposed Persons

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate the National Criminal Intelligence Service has made of the value of assets held by foreign politically exposed persons in the UK. [34014]

Mr. Charles Clarke: No estimate has been made as the National Criminal Intelligence Service only receives and assesses suspicious activity reports of money laundering.

It would not be appropriate to comment on intelligence assessments carried out by NCIS.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many bank or building society accounts held by politically exposed persons in the UK are being monitored by law enforcement agencies; and how much money is held in these accounts. [34015]

Mr. Charles Clarke: This information is not held centrally. The National Criminal Intelligence Service does not have the powers to monitor bank or building society accounts. This is a function of individual law enforcement agencies.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons on the list of foreign politically exposed persons which has been circulated to financial institutions in the UK come from (a) Africa, (b) the Middle East, (c) Russia, (d) Europe, (e) Asia, (f) North America, (g) Central and Southern America and (h) other countries. [34016]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Government have not circulated a list of foreign politically exposed persons to financial institutions in the UK.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 24 November 2005, Official Report, column 2322W, on politically exposed persons, if he will list the countries of origin of the persons about whom the suspicious activity reports refer; and what the total value was of transactions made by the persons to which the suspicious activity reports refer. [34017]

Mr. Charles Clarke: It would not be appropriate to comment on current intelligence assessments, or amounts of funds concerned, in view of the risk of prejudicing the outcome of any investigations.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 28 November 2005, Official Report, column 47W, on politically exposed persons, how many of the suspicious activity reports received by the National Criminal Intelligence Service relating to foreign politically exposed persons have been forwarded to other law enforcement agencies; and if he will list the law enforcement agencies to which they have been sent. [34851]

Mr. Charles Clarke [holding answer 5 December 2005]: This information is not available. It would be disproportionate to try to compile the details requested as the information is now made available to law enforcement agencies online.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 28 November 2005, Official Report, column 47W, on politically exposed persons, which Government Departments or agencies submitted the suspicious activity reports which refer to corrupt activity overseas. [34852]

Mr. Charles Clarke [holding answer 5 December 2005]: It would not be appropriate to comment on those suspicious activity reports, regardless of source, which indicate corrupt activity and are possibly under investigation.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many investigations into the proceeds of corruption held by foreign politically exposed persons in the UK have been initiated by (a) the Metropolitan police, (b) the City of London police, (c) the Serious Fraud Office and (d) other regional police forces. [34853]

Mr. Charles Clarke [holding answer 5 December 2005]: This information is not available. These are operational matters for law enforcement agencies. It would not be appropriate to comment on any current investigations, in view of the risk of prejudicing the outcome.

Prisoner Rehabilitation

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much was spent in 2004–05 on programmes to ensure that prisoners are released with employment or training arranged. [32637]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Prison Service's custody to work initiative provided £14.2 million to support prisoner resettlement in 2004–05. Of this funding, £5 million was used for supporting prisoners' future employment or training when released. A further £5.2 million was directed to supporting prisoners find accommodation on release, with a further £4 million split between the two. In addition, £4.2 million was invested through the Prison Service Plus initiative to support employment and training outcomes and Jobcentre Plus funded £4.5 million for employment and benefit surgeries.

Terrorist Suspects

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what average number of days terrorist suspects were held over the past two years prior to being (a) charged and (b) released without charge. [35139]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The maximum period of detention pre-charge was extended to 14 days with effect from 20 January 2004. Between that date and 4 September 2005, 357 people have been arrested of whom 36 have been held for in excess of seven days. A breakdown of these cases is in the table.

Together We Can Conference

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action plan resulted from the Together We Can conference in December 2004; what plans there are to hold future conferences; and if he will make a statement. [33185]

Hazel Blears: Following the December 2004 Together We Can conference, the Home Office worked with Departments across Government to develop the Together We Can action plan, which was launched on 28 June 2005. This draws together community engagement initiatives from across 12 Government Departments around the themes of citizens and democracy; health and sustainability; regeneration and cohesion; and safety and justice. The plan is available on the Home Office website.

The Home Office leads on the Together We Can plan and the Department has held a series of Together We Can conferences. The next Together We Can conference is likely to take place in March 2006.

Victim Support

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what mechanisms are in place to support victims of crime and their families (a) before an offender is apprehended, (b) during the trial and (c) after the completion of the trial. [21549]

Fiona Mactaggart: The key elements of effective support for victims and witnesses of crime are receiving information, having a voice in the system and access to appropriate services.

The code of practice for Victims of Crime, which will come into force in April 2006, sets out in detail victims' rights to information from all key parts of the criminal justice system. The code covers all stages of the criminal justice process from the point at which an offence is reported to post-sentence. Copies of the code have been placed in the House Library.

The Victim Personal Statement, introduced in 2001, gives victims a voice by giving them the opportunity to explain how a crime has affected them. The statement forms part of the case papers and can be seen by everybody who makes decisions about the case as it progresses. Building on this, in September 2005, we published proposals for those bereaved through homicide to have their views heard in court. Assistance and support services for victims and witnesses of crime are available at all stages throughout the criminal justice process.

The Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme provides financial help to blameless victims of violent crime. A national network of Witness Care Units is being implemented to provide a more customer focused service to witnesses, this includes the tailoring of services to help the witness attend court. The Home Office also provides £30 million to the charity Victim Support to provide support to those affected by crime, regardless of whether the crime has been reported.

Violent Offences (Licensed Premises)

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many violent offences were committed in connection with licensed premises in each year since 2002–03, broken down by (a) crime and disorder reduction partnership area and (b) basic command unit area. [33121]

Hazel Blears: Information on violent offences committed in connection with licensed premises by crime and disorder reduction partnerships is not collected centrally. Police forces returned data for basic command units but they were incomplete and of variable quality. These are given in the table and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Recording of such incidents will be dependent on levels of police activity and how police define such incidents locally. For example in certain areas where alcohol-related violence is particularly prevalent, local police are more likely to police city centres on Friday and Saturday nights thus recording more incidents of violent offences committed in connection with licensed premises.

TRANSPORT

A5117 Improvements

10. Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the proposed improvements to the A5117 between Deeside Park and the M56 are expected (a) to start and (b) to be completed. [34469]

Dr. Ladyman: The Highways Agency has scheduled the proposed improvements to the A5117 between Deeside Park and the M56 to start in the summer of 2006. Completion of the scheme is scheduled for summer 2008, subject to satisfactory completion of remaining statutory procedures.

Transport Access (Pensioners)

12. Mr. Simon: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to improve pensioners' access to public transport. [34471]

Ms Buck: From 1 April 2006 people 60 or over will be entitled to free off-peak bus travel within their local authority boundary or passenger transport executive area.

We have also introduced regulations for trains and buses and coaches which require new vehicles to be accessible and so easier to use for older people

Street Lights (Bingley)

14. Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will ensure that street lights in Bingley in West Yorkshire are improved and paid for by the Highways Agency. [34474]

Dr. Ladyman: Following completion of the A650 Bingley Relief Road the Highways Agency passed responsibility for the existing route through Bingley to the City of Bradford metropolitan district council in April 2004. Therefore any improvements to, and funding for, street lighting is a matter for the district council.

Road Congestion

15. Mr. Ian Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps his Department is taking to prevent congestion increasing on the road network. [34475]

Dr. Ladyman: We are tackling road congestion through targeted solutions developed with national and local agencies—investing more in the road network, including new capacity where it's justified, trialling innovative new traffic management systems, and exploring the benefits of new ways to manage demand for road space—including road pricing.

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the timetable is for the Department's research programme into road congestion. [34070]

Dr. Ladyman: Tackling road congestion is informed by a wide range of research covering issues such as incident and demand management, as well as road capacity and the use of public transport. Congestion has implications also for the delivery of other objectives, for example relating to safety and the environment. The research on those objectives also contributes to the evidence base on congestion. Much of this is ongoing—though new research is commissioned to improve the evidence available and to address new issues.

The Department for Transport (DfT) is developing a new high-level Evidence and Research Strategy. It will include an overview of our evidence needs and how these will be met. It will be organised around the Department's strategic priorities and will therefore contain a section on congestion. The strategy is expected to be published on the DfT website within the next few weeks. More details of the individual units' and agencies' evidence and research activities will be published on the Departments website in 2006. Details of current research are available through the DfT and Highways Agency websites.

Mineral Railway Lines

16. Paddy Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what powers he has to safeguard former mineral railway lines for future transport use. [34476]

Ms Buck: Disused railway land that is owned by British Rail Residuary Limited is subject to a review of its possible use in the future for railway purposes prior to its disposal. Similar arrangements apply to land owned by Network Rail.

Road Network (East Anglia)

17. Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the road network in East Anglia. [34477]

Dr. Ladyman: In recent years, the Department and the Highways Agency have undertaken a number of studies on individual roads and wider areas which have assessed the problems and effectiveness of key routes within East Anglia, including the A11, A12, A120, A14 and A47.

Concessionary Fares

18. Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the availability of concessionary fares for pensioners across local authority area boundaries. [34478]

Ms Buck: We are keen for local authorities to work together to provide cross boundary, county or regional-wide schemes where that suits local circumstances. Local authorities will have discretion to work together to provide cross-boundary travel, as they do at present, based on their judgment of local needs and their overall financial priorities.

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on what date a decision on the distribution of concessionary fares funding will be made. [34051]

Ms Buck: The decision was announced as part of the provisional local government settlement on 5 December.

Telford to London Rail Services

19. David Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on rail services from Telford to London. [34479]

Ms Buck: The Department is continuing to examine the business case for direct rail passenger services linking both Shrewsbury and Telford with London. The work is being carried out in conjunction with the train operators, local authorities in the area and other interested bodies.

A1 Western Bypass

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether his Department required section 106 provision to be made to widen the A1 Western Bypass as part of the approval of Newcastle Great Park; for what stretch of the A1 such widening was required; and when he expects the widening to take place. [31576]

Dr. Ladyman [holding answer 24 November 2005]: Planning approval has been given for the development of Newcastle Great Park in phases. The earlier phases of the development have no planning conditions that require the A1 to be widened. However, in order for the later stages to be built the developer would have to fund the widening of a section of the A1 Western Bypass immediately adjacent to the development—between Ponteland Road and North Brunton Junctions—from two to three lanes in each direction, a distance of 4 kilometres. This would be under the provision of a S278 agreement which is equivalent to S106, but for a trunk road not a local road. The timing of the improvement is in the hands of the developer and the rate at which he wishes to implement the phases of the project, and is only guaranteed to go ahead if there is full development of the site.

A14

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations the Department has received from the (a) East Midlands regional assembly and (b) East Midlands Development Agency on improvements to the A14. [34089]

Dr. Ladyman: Neither East Midlands regional assembly (EMRA) nor East Midlands Development Agency (EMDA) have made any representations to the Department regarding improvements to the A14.

However, they both contributed to London to South Midlands Multi Modal Study (LSM MMS). Its recommendations were to widen the A14 through the East Midlands to dual three lanes. Both were also heavily involved in the production and publication in March 2005 of the East Midlands regional spatial strategy (RSS 8) and the Milton Keynes and South Midlands sub-regional strategy. Both strategies include a timetable for implementing improvements to the A14, matching the LSM MMS recommendations.

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the A14 Kettering bypass is included in the Department's targeted programme of improvements. [34090]

Dr. Ladyman: A scheme to widen the existing A14 around Kettering has not yet been included in the Government's targeted programme of improvement (TPI). It will not be included until we are satisfied that a robust and affordable scheme can be delivered to meet the aspirations set out in the East Midlands regional spatial strategy (RSS 8) and the Milton Keynes and South Midlands sub-regional strategy, both published in March 2005.

Both documents state 2016–17 as the earliest implementation date for the widening scheme. Schemes are entered into the TPI between five and seven years before their implementation.

A417 (Maintenance)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport who is responsible for the maintenance of the A417 between Cirencester and Gloucester. [34998]

Dr. Ladyman: The Highways Agency is responsible for the A417 between Cirencester and Gloucester, which is managed on their behalf, as a Design, Build, Finance and Operate contract, by Road Management Services (Gloucester) Limited.

Blue Badge Scheme

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what offence is committed if someone wrongly takes advantage of the Blue Badge scheme on private land; and if he will make a statement. [35090]

Ms Buck: The Blue Badge scheme is a European and national scheme offering parking concessions primarily for disabled people with severe walking difficulties who travel as drivers or passengers. The scheme applies to on-street parking only.

The Blue Badge scheme does not apply to off-street car parks, private roads or at most airports. Charges for and conditions of use in off-street car parks, which are likely to be privately owned and managed, are a matter for the landowner. It is unlikely that spaces in such off-street car parks marked for blue badge holders are legally enforceable and the regulation of such parking is at the discretion of landowners and depends on the courtesy and consideration of drivers.

It is the Department for Transport's view that it is possible in law for the owners of a private car park to agree with the local authority that a parking place order be made in respect of that car park. Conditions of use can then be enforced as if it were a local authority car park, with penalties or excess charges levied on offenders. It would, therefore, be an offence under the Traffic Regulation Order rather the Blue Badge regulations.

Buckshaw Village (Railway Station)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on progress being made on the new railway station at Buckshaw village in Chorley. [35481]

Derek Twigg: Lancashire county council have a proposal to provide a new station at Buckshaw Village. The council are in discussions with Network Rail about the proposal, who would be responsible for delivering the project.

c2c Line/One Rail

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much investment has been made in (a) the c2c line and (b) One Rail between Liverpool Street and Southend Victoria in each of the last two years. [34255]

Derek Twigg: The One franchise began operation on 1 April 2005, since when the franchise holder has invested approximately £480,000 on the Liverpool Street to Southend Victoria line. c2c does not operate trains on this route.

Car Accidents (Young People)

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to reduce car accidents involving people between the ages of 17 and 24 years; and if he will make a statement. [35089]

Dr. Ladyman: I am very concerned to reduce car accidents involving young drivers, especially those that result in deaths and serious injuries. The Department has recently consulted on a more structured approach to learning to drive and a copy of its decision letter in August 2004 is on the Department's website at—www.dft.gov.uk/stellent/groups/dft_rdsafety/documents/page/dft_rdsafety_028178–01.hcsp#P37_1339.

The main conclusions were that:

the way forward is to improve the education environment so that learners have access to a more consistent and better standard of training;

the Department's Driving Standards Agency (DSA) should consider what further learning resources might be made available to learners and trainers. In particular, they will look at how modern learning techniques and information technology can be further developed and used to help learners develop safe driving skills for life; and the regulatory arrangements for driving instructors will also be reviewed to ensure that the public can have confidence that the driver training services they are buying are of the highest quality. DSA will consult interested parties on measures to achieve these changes.

We decided that further statutory regulation on the way new drivers learn would be unlikely to make enough of a contribution to road safety to justify legislative action at present.

The Department has a substantial programme of research relating to learning to drive and new drivers. It is repeating and extending a cohort study of young and new drivers, which is a large scale evaluation of they way people learn to drive, and their attitudes and behaviour, and an evaluation of the effectiveness of measures introduced as part of the Government's Road Safety Strategy. Separate studies are being commissioned on DSA's Driver Record, and the Pass Plus scheme for newly-qualified drivers.

Civil Service Relocation (Scotland)

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many departmental civil service jobs have been relocated to Scotland in each year since 2001. [32257]

Ms Buck [holding answer 28 November 2005]: The Department was formed in May 2002. Since then no civil service jobs have been relocated to Scotland.

Eco-driving

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of proposals to (a) make driving instructors attend training for eco-driving and (b) teach and test learner drivers on eco-driving. [33421]

Dr. Ladyman: On 1 October, the Driving Standards Agency (DSA) introduced an assessment of eco-safe driving skills as part of the driving ability test taken by those seeking to qualify as Approved Driving Instructors (ADIs). We believe it is important that all drivers should acquire these basic skills at the earliest opportunity, ideally while they are learning to drive.

When DSA has evaluated the effectiveness of this initiative, we will consider whether an assessment of eco-safe driving skills should form part of the driving theory and practical tests.

Infrastructure Projects

Mrs. Villiers: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the suitability of the London underground public-private partnership as a model for future infrastructure projects. [34473]

Ms Buck: The London Underground Public Private Partnerships were unique, as the contracts provided for the extensive rehabilitation and replacement of existing assets over 30 years. The National Audit Office published two reports on the London Underground PPPs in 2004, which identified the lessons that could be learnt for other private finance initiatives or public private partnerships, which the Government accepted.

Kent Franchise

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what effect the recent award of the Integrated Kent Franchise will have on rail services between Bexhill and London Victoria. [34575]

Derek Twigg: Services from Bexhill to London Victoria are operated by Southern and so are unaffected by the award of the Integrated Kent Franchise.

M6 Toll Road

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the construction cost was of the M6 toll road; and what the total receipts have been to date. [34343]

Dr. Ladyman: The construction costs awarded by Midland Expressway Limited (MEL), the concessionaire for the M6 Toll, to its contractor at tender stage were £485.5 million. The overall costs are a matter for MEL, but I understand that the development cost incurred was in the region of £900 million, including construction, the cost of land, interest on loans, consultancy, management and legal fees.

Information on receipts is not held by the Department for Transport. Requests for this information should be made direct to MEL.

Merseytravel

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the answer of 21 November 2005, Official Report, column 1542W, on Merseytram services, if he will publish the evidence on which he based his statement on the promoters' assessment of regeneration and employment impacts; and when he discussed this issue with the promoters. [33466]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 1 December 2005]: The Department's view on the regeneration impacts of Merseytram was based on the analysis presented by Merseytravel in their Economic Impact Report. Merseytravel has declined to permit the Department to publish the Economic Impact Report.

The Department carried out an assessment of Merseytravel's analysis, and will make that available in the House Library, and on the Department's website.

MV Derbyshire/MV Tribulus

Joan Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will take steps to ensure that all information regarding the sinking of (a) the MV Derbyshire and (b) the MV Tribulus has been examined. [34915]

Dr. Ladyman: All information on the sinking of the MV Derbyshire has been examined in close co-operation with the families of those who lost their lives.

The Maritime and Coastguard Agency will shortly be publishing a Marine Information Note which describes the history of the Derbyshire surveys, the principal findings of the re-opened formal investigation, and records the research programmes undertaken by the DfT and the MCA into seakeeping and wave loads and the Formal Safety Assessment studies on bulk carriers. It also describes the process that led to the introduction of revised standards for bulk carriers by the International Maritime Organization following the sinking of the MV Derbyshire.

In addition, arrangements are being made to transfer information on the sinking of the MV Derbyshire from the DFT to the National Archives.

The Tribulus, owned by Shell and registered with the Isle of Man, was involved in an incident in Bantry Bay in 1990 in Irish coastal waters. The matter was not therefore for the UK Government.

Railways

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to change the composition of Network Rail. [34153]

Derek Twigg: Network Rail is a private sector company limited by guarantee, whose board is accountable to its members drawn from the rail industry and other stakeholder groups. Any change to the composition of the board is a matter for the company and its members. Any change to membership is governed by its Articles of Association and company law.

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to publish (a) the final regional planning assessment for the North East and (b) the consultants' final report on the review of the Northern Rail franchise; and whether their recommendations will be available to the 2006 rail timetable planning conference in February 2006. [32615]

Derek Twigg: I am currently considering the draft of the North East England Rail Regional Planning Assessment with a view to publication in due course. The RPA is an assessment rather than a commitment to certain courses of action. Work on the review of the Northern Rail franchise is proceeding, and I expect to announce proposals for consultation early next year. No decision has been made as to whether any service change proposals relating to the review will be tabled at the 2006 timetable conference.

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will recommence rail passenger partnership funding for new passenger services; whether such services can be considered under (a) the local transport plan major scheme procedure and (b) a similar procedure; and if he will make a statement. [32614]

Derek Twigg: There is no plan to re-instate the Rail Passenger Partnership funding programme for new passenger services. Funding in support of such services can be provided by devolved administrations, Passenger Transport Executives and local authorities and, should capital expenditure be required, through the Local Transport Plan Major Schemes procedure, or through the new Network Rail Discretionary Fund. Proposals will need to be supported by a fully costed business case.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the answer of 11 October 2005, Official Report, column 242W, on rail services, what the timetable is for (a) the publication of the results of the South West Trains route utilisation strategy and (b) public consultation; and if he will make a statement. [34850]

Derek Twigg: The final South West main line route utilisation strategy is due to be published by Network Rail in spring 2006. The period for public consultation runs until 6 January 2006.

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the public subsidy to the railway industry (a) was in 1997 and (b) has been in 2005 to date. [34472]

Derek Twigg: Government subsidy for the railways was £1.8 billion in 1996–97. This year the Government will be spending £4.5 billion on the railway.

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many staff work in DFT Rail. [34152]

Derek Twigg: There are 327 people working in Department for Transport Rail.

Road Accidents

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many (a) pedestrians, (b) cyclists, (c) drivers and (d) car occupants were (i) injured and (ii) killed in road accidents in Lancashire in each of the last six years for which figures are available. [34520]

Dr. Ladyman: The number of pedestrians, cyclists, car drivers and car passengers killed and injured in personal injury road accidents in the county of Lancashire (excluding Blackburn with Darwen unitary authority and Blackpool unitary authority) for the years 1999–2004 are shown in the table.

Lancashire (excluding Blackburn with Darwen UA and Blackpool UA)

	Pedestrians		Cyclists		Car drivers		Car passengers

Road/Rail Journeys (Costs)

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent estimate he has made of the typical per passenger per mile comparative costs of passenger road and rail journeys within the United Kingdom. [34072]

Dr. Ladyman: The estimated average cost per passenger/person per mile in Great Britain in 2004–05 was 15p for bus, 18p for rail and 25p for private motoring by car and van (of which fuel costs account for 7p per mile).

Estimates are for the average cost faced by the transport user, net of any subsidy. Estimates for bus and rail average costs are based on revenue collected by operators and passenger mileage estimates. The car and van motoring cost estimate is based on household expenditure on private motoring from the "Expenditure and Food Survey 2004–05" and household car mileage figures from the "National Travel Survey 2004". Motoring costs include expenditure on car purchase, spares, maintenance, insurance, taxation, fuel and parking, but excludes costs paid by employers. The marginal cost of travelling by car is significantly less than the average cost as car purchase, and other fixed costs, would be excluded.

Roads

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what funding the Government are providing to improve the condition of Bedfordshire's road network; and if he will make a statement; [34450]

(2) what funds the Government have allocated to (a) road maintenance and (b) improvement of the road network in Bedfordshire in the next three years; and if he will make a statement. [34502]

Dr. Ladyman: The Highways Agency expects to spend the following amounts on the maintenance and improvement of the trunk road and motorway network in Bedfordshire in the current and next three financial years:

Financial year	Maintenance (£ million)	Improvement scheme (£ million)
2005–06	3.799	34.916
2006–07	3.375	33.920
2007–08	3.297	43.427
2008–09	5.402	157.855

Note:
Figures are approximate and are subject to change.

In 2005–06, we allocated Bedfordshire county council, through the local transport plan programme, £3.350 million for its integrated transport block and £6.001 million for capital highway maintenance.

We have also announced an indicative allocation for highway capital maintenance of £6.001 million for 2006–07 (as part of a two-year settlement) and that the capital highway maintenance allocation for 2007–08 will represent a minimum of 75 percent. of the 2006–07 allocation.

The integrated transport block and capital highway maintenance provide funding for local capital expenditure except major schemes. It is for the authority to determine how these allocations are spent in line with its local transport plan and their priorities. Other future funding for the integrated transport block and capital maintenance has yet to be announced.

In addition, funding for the routine maintenance of local roads is provided through the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's revenue support grant. This grant is unhypothecated and may be applied to any services.

Under the local transport plan programme, we have provisionally approved the Bedford Western Bypass, East Luton corridor improvement scheme and A507 Ridgmont Bypass for funding, subject to certain conditions, including the completion of the necessary statutory procedures. Funding for these schemes would be allocated once they had achieved final approval under the Department's procedures for major transport schemes.

Sleep Apnoea

Mrs. Riordan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the effect is of an individual having obstructive sleep apnoea on their eligibility for (a) a driving licence and (b) an heavy goods vehicle licence. [34451]

Dr. Ladyman: A driving licence will be revoked if the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency is not satisfied that treatment is both effective and well tolerated.

A licence can be reinstated once satisfactory control is achieved and confirmed by medical inquiry. Confirmation from a consultant or specialist is required for Group 2 (lorry and bus) licence holders. Group 2 drivers will normally be issued with a licence valid initially for one year to allow for periodic medical review. AGroup 1 (car or motorcycle) licence will normally be restored without further restriction.

All licences issued to drivers with obstructive sleep apnoea syndrome are accompanied by advice to the driver and their doctor of the necessity to maintain good control of the condition and the need to report any deterioration in that control.

St. Pancras Station

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans there are to open the unused Thameslink Station underneath St. Pancras. [32740]

Derek Twigg: The fitting out and opening of the Thameslink station box underneath St. Pancras Station at Midland Road has always been part of the Thameslink Project.

The station shell was constructed as planned, as part of the Channel Tunnel Rail Link Project. Further investment will be required to make the station operational.

As a result of the delays to the Thameslink Project, officials are currently determining the viability and value for money case of fitting out and operating the station prior to the Thameslink Project.

Strategic Rail Authority

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what costs were incurred by his Department in abolishing the Strategic Rail Authority (SRA); how many people are still employed at the SRA; and when the authority will be completely wound up. [34165]

Derek Twigg: The Department is aiming to complete the winding up of the Strategic Rail Authority by the end of this financial year. As such final outturn costs are not available. The current estimate of the financial costs and benefits is set out as follows.

ThamesLink 2000 Project

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the future of the ThamesLink 2000 Project. [34157]

Derek Twigg: The Thameslink Public Inquiry which opened on 6 September 2005 is due to be completed on 7 December 2005. The Inspector is then expected to report to the Secretary of State and the Deputy Prime Minister in January 2006, which will be followed in spring 2006 by the report on closures relating to the Thameslink project. Until these reports are published the Secretary of State cannot comment on the future of the Thameslink project.

Traffic Flow Forecasts

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what retrospective analysis has been undertaken of the accuracy of the Highways Agency's traffic flow forecasts on (a) motorways, (b) A roads and (c) other roads. [34074]

Dr. Ladyman: The Highways Agency retrospectively analyses the accuracy of the traffic flow forecasts for all improvement schemes in the Targeted Programme of Improvements (TPIs). On motorways, A roads and other roads where the forecasts have indicated that significant traffic flow changes were likely, the forecast flows are compared with the flows measured one and five years after opening.

Traffic Management

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to issue statutory guidance under section 87 of the Traffic Management Act 2004; and what the reason is for the time taken in so doing. [34013]

Ms Buck: The Department is currently working on regulations and statutory guidance on civil parking enforcement under parts 6 and 7 of the Traffic Management Act 2004. This follows a review of the existing system of decriminalised parking enforcement which has been undertaken with the help of key industry stakeholders. We intend to consult on draft parking regulations and statutory guidance in spring 2006, with a view to issuing final regulations and guidance in early 2007. Our work on civil parking enforcement will be followed by regulations and statutory guidance on the civil enforcement of bus lanes and moving traffic offences.

Mr. Jim Murphy: The Cabinet Office promotes standards that ensure good governance, including adherence to ministerial and civil service codes.

e-Government Programme

24. Gordon Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on the progress of the e-Government programme. [34456]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The Government recently launched our transformation Government strategy enabled by IT.

Maximising the opportunities provided by IT to make public services increasingly personal and responsive to the needs of customers. The strategy is available at www.coi.gov.uk.

Government Regulation

26. Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what plans he has to reduce the level of Government regulation. [34458]

Mr. Jim Murphy: We are on track to deliver the radical programme of regulatory reform set out in the March 2005 Budget and the better regulation action plan published in May 2005.

We have consulted on proposals for a Bill for better regulation that will create a powerful tool to enable wide scale regulatory reform, begun a major exercise to measure and then reduce administrative burdens faced by business, launched a new web-based portal so that business and other stakeholders can submit proposals for simplification and are on track to rationalise the number of regulators in the public and private sectors.

Ministerial Visits

27. Mr. Wallace: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he next intends to visit Duchy lands in Lancaster and Wyre constituency. [34459]

Mr. Jim Murphy: Pending the appointment of a new Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster I am unable to commit to such a visit.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what matters the Civil Contingency Secretariat has discussed recently. [34691]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The Civil Contingencies Secretariat co-ordinates work to improve the United Kingdom's ability to respond to and recover from emergencies. As part of that role, the Secretariat considers the full range of risks that the UK faces and any necessary emergency preparedness, response and recovery measures. It carries out this work in discussion with a wide range of partners from both inside and outside Government.

Civil Service Nurseries

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what the running costs of nurseries for civil service staff were in 2004–05. [34374]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The Cabinet Office does not hold central expenditure figures on the costs to public funds of nurseries for civil service staff. A number of Departments and agencies support employees' access to child care and in doing so, the civil service shows it is committed to being an equal opportunities employer, supporting a diverse work force and helping staff achieve a better balance between their home and work responsibilities.

Damages

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster further to the answer of 14 November 2005, Official Report, column 963W, on damages, what the basis was of each of the claims; and if he will make a statement. [34397]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The basis of each of the four injury claims settled by the Department during 2004–05 was as follows:

Mr. Jim Murphy: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 28 November 2005, Official Report, column 50W.

Departmental Tendering Policy

Martin Horwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what his policy is on including (a) ethical and (b) environmental factors in tenders for services. [33326]

Mr. Jim Murphy: Procurement in the Cabinet Office is conducted in accordance with Government policy applying to ethical and environmental standards within the overarching policy of value for money. The policy reflects the principles of Community law. Requirements for both services and goods specify relevant environmental factors where appropriate.

Environmental Regulations

Colin Challen: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what mechanisms are in place to allow all interested parties to comment on regulatory simplification proposals concerning environmental regulations. [34001]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs published its initial regulatory simplification plan, 'Lifting the Burden', on the 29 November to allow all interested parties to comment. This signals the start of a process of dialogue between the Department and stakeholders. The initial plan identifies among other proposals, initiatives to reduce the burden of environmental regulations on business. Each of these will, where appropriate, be subject to full consultation.

Health Bill

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will place in the Library a copy of the Better Regulation Task Force's report on the proposed regulatory system in the Health Bill. [34711]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The Task Force has not produced a report on the proposed regulatory system in the Health Bill.

TREASURY

Birth Statistics

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the number of women born in the early 1960s who have never given birth to a child; and if he will make a statement. [34211]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 6 December 2005:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your request for an estimate of the number of women born in the early 1960s who have never given birth to a child. (34211)

Summaries of the estimated proportion of women that are childless in England and Wales are regularly published in the annual reference volume, Birth statistics FM1, copies of which are available in the House of Commons Library.

The table below shows the proportions and the numbers of women who are childless, for those born in each of the years 1960 to 1965. The proportions are estimated for England and Wales only. These are based on births that occurred up to the end of 2003, the latest year for which data are available. The numbers have been estimated by applying these England and Wales proportions to the United Kingdom population.

Estimated percentage and number of women who have not given birth to a child, by year of birth of the woman, United Kingdom, 2003

Year of birth of woman[1]	Percentage of all women in cohort[2,3]	Number of women (000)
1960	19	80
1961	20	87
1962	20	91
1963	20	96
1964	22	106
1965	22	105
All years 1960 to 1965	—	565

[1] The years of birth shown are, by necessity, approximate since births before 1963 are available only by calendar year of occurrence and age of mother at childbirth For instance, women giving birth in 2003 at age 42 could have been born in either 1960 or 1961; for convenience, however, they are recorded as belonging to the 1961 cohort.

[2] Percentages for England and Wales.

[3] Cohorts born in the early 1960s have yet to reach the end of their childbearing years (taken as age 45), although the proportions of women giving birth for the first time at ages 40 and over are low. For example, in 2003, 18 per cent. of the 1958 cohort were childless at age 45, the same as at age 40.

Great George Street (Refurbishment)

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the total cost of refurbishment of the offices in Great George Street was; what the final cost will be to public funds of the private finance initiative; and if he will make a statement. [34347]

John Healey: I refer the hon. member to the answers given by Financial Secretaries to the Treasury Ruth Kelly and Stephen Timms on 5 February 2002, Official Report, column 840W and on 13 December 2004, Official Report, column 868W. The figures relating to 100 Parliament street given in the reply of 13 December 2004 equate to a net present value of approximately £213 million at March 2002 prices.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many men have been diagnosed with prostate cancer in (a) Southend Primary Care Trust area, (b) Essex, (c) Hertfordshire, (d) Greater London and (e) England in each year since 1995. [34212]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Public Sector Pensions

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the current level of public sector pension liability. [34151]

Mr. Des Browne: We do not hold information centrally on the whole public sector pensions liability. The total liabilities of unfunded public service pension schemes as at 31 March 2004 were estimated to be £460 billion. This estimate is based on figures published in 2003–04 Resource Accounts. The Resource Accounts for all these schemes for 2004–05 are not yet ready.

The liabilities of the funded Local Government Pension Schemes across the UK at the latest valuation dates, mostly March 2004, were around £120 billion with assets of around £90 billion.

Tax Credits

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer in respect of what proportion of tax credit claimants who have a reduced tax credit award due to the recovery of an overpayment the reduction is in response to an overpayment occurring in (a) 2003–04, (b) 2004–05 and (c) 2005–06. [35338]

Dawn Primarolo: This information is not available.

Unregulated Products

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans his Department has (a) to protect consumers from unregulated products sold by banks and (b) to ensure that consumers are made fully aware of which products are regulated and which are not; and if he will make a statement. [35852]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Financial Services Authority (FSA) regulates all banks and financial services providers operating in the UK. The FSA has a statutory obligation to protect consumers and is responsible for policing the regulatory perimeter and for drawing attention to where the boundary lies. FSA rules require banks to explain to customers that a particular product or service is regulated by the FSA.

The FSA Handbook includes requirements that firms must ensure that they should not make any misleading statements to a client, whether expressly or by implication, that its affairs, or any aspect of them, have the approval of the FSA. This does not, of course, prevent firms from indicating that they are authorised and regulated by the FSA, in conjunction with selling products regulated by the FSA.

In addition to FSA regulation, the Banking Code is a voluntary code which applies to the large number of banks that subscribe to it. It covers some regulated services, such as deposit-taking, and some unregulated services, such as foreign exchange services. The existence of the Banking Code is one of the reasons why the FSA has not introduced significant additional conduct of business regulation except where required by European legislation.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Council Property Discounts

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many local councils in England no longer give a 50 per cent. council discount for (a) empty homes and (b) second homes. [33502]

Mr. Woolas: As at November 2004, the latest date for which data are available, 209 local authorities in England did not give a 50 per cent. council tax discount for empty homes and 158 local authorities did not give a 50 per cent. council tax discount on second homes.

The data are as reported on CTB1S forms submitted by billing authorities to the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister each year.

Council Tax

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what estimate the Government have made of the effects on revenue of council tax collection rates being less than 100 per cent. in the most recent year for which figures are available. [33498]

Mr. Woolas: In 2004–05, the latest year for which data are available, local authorities in England collected in-year £17.1 billion of council tax out of a possible £17.7 billion. This represents a collection rate of 96.6 per cent. and is the fifth consecutive annual improvement in this figure. However, collection continues once the financial year to which council tax relates ends. In 2004–05 for instance, authorities collected £368 million that related to previous years.

Councillors (Pensions/Income)

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many councils offer pensions for their councillors.[33485]

Mr. Woolas: The information requested is not held centrally, and could only be provided at disproportionate cost. I understand that the Local Government Pensions Committee of the Employers' Organisation for local government conducted a survey of English local authorities in 2004, seeking details of their decisions on giving councillors access to the local government pension scheme. The results of the survey can be found in LGPC Circular 155 dated April 2004, available on the Employers' Organisation website at: www.lg-employers.gov.uk.

Fire and Rescue Services

Justine Greening: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many fire and emergency call-outs were handled from fire stations based in the London borough of Wandsworth in each year since 1997, broken down by fire station location. [34997]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Information on emergency call-outs to fires and other incidents broken down by London borough and fire stations within boroughs is not available centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Justine Greening: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many fire and rescue emergency call-outs took place in the London borough of Wandsworth in each year since 1997, broken down by parliamentary constituency. [34999]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Information on emergency call-outs to fires and other incidents broken down by London borough and parliamentary constituency is not available centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Justine Greening: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the total cost was of fire and rescue services based in London in each year since 1997, broken down by London borough; how much of that expenditure was accounted for by manpower costs in each case; and if he will make a statement. [35000]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The information requested for London is tabled as follows. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister does not collect or hold this information broken down by London borough.

£000

	Total expenditure on fire services by London fire and civil defence authority/ Greater London authority 1997–98 to 2003–04	Cost of fire service employees

ODPM Revenue Outturn (RO) data

John Mann: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many call-outs for fires there were at each fire station in (a) Nottinghamshire, (b) South Yorkshire and (c) Derbyshire in the last three years. [35094]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Information on emergency responses at fire stations within fire and rescue service areas is not available centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Local Government Employees

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when his Department plans to publish the conclusions of its review of political restrictions of employees in local government. [33487]

Mr. Woolas: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister intends to publish these conclusions shortly.

Local Strategic Partnerships

Bob Russell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what monitoring he undertakes of the operation of local strategic partnerships; and if he will make a statement. [32515]

Mr. Woolas: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has commissioned an extensive independent research programme to evaluate the operation of Local Strategic Partnership (LSPs). The main LSP research has been running for over three years and it includes a survey of all LSPs in 2002 and 2004 and in-depth case studies in different areas across the country. The full research programme can be found in the ODPM's website at: http://www.odpm.gov.uk/index.asp?id=1136876. The final report of this phase of the evaluation will be published in the new year.

In addition, since 2004 all LSPs in receipt of Neighbourhood Renewal Fund resources have been required to develop a performance management framework. This is a self assessment process based on a framework of three core requirements—the review of outcomes, partnership working and improvement planning. To ensure the process is robust, regional Government offices have undertaken annual reviews with those LSPs, challenging their assessments to ensure they are an accurate reflection of performance. Government offices provide the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister with a report on each of the 87 LSPs in September each year.

London Underground (Fire Safety)

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to the answer of 11 November 2005, Official Report, column 842W, on London Underground (Fire Regulations), if he will make a statement on the Government's plans to revise legislation dealing with general fire safety on the London Underground. [33212]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Government have, with the support of all sides of the House, brought forward a reform of general fire safety legislation in the form of the Regulatory Reform (Fire Safety) Order 2005 (SI 2005 No. 1541). The Select Committees that considered the draft order (the Regulatory Reform Committee and the Delegated Powers and Regulatory Reform Committee in another place) considered that continuance of the necessary protections afforded by the Fire Precautions (Sub-surface Railway Stations Regulations 1989 (as amended) by the Regulatory Reform (Fire Safety) Order 2005 could be demonstrated by guidance. The Government are firmly of the view that all necessary protections are either continued or enhanced by the new regime. However, in the light of the consideration given by the hon. and noble Members of the Committees, the Government decided to withdraw revocation of the 1989 regulations until such time as guidance was in place which shows how the protections are continued.

Although the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is convinced that the case is made, we always listen to concerns about fire safety. We therefore propose to run the new regime in tandem with the old so that ample evidence of the efficiency and broad ranging nature of the new regime can be shown. Once that evidence has been gathered we expect to proceed to remove the 1989 regulations. However, the evidence shows there to be a gap, or a problem we have not foreseen, then we will work to make sure any such gap or risk is fully addressed before the 1989 regulations are removed.

We believe the Regulatory Reform (Fire Safety) Order, addressing as it does all general fire safety risks and placing prevention of fire and mitigation of the effects of fire as of equal standing to safe evacuation is the right way forward. However, the safety of the public using and staff working on the underground railway systems is of vital importance and it is not something we will compromise.

Lyons Inquiry

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether the Lyons inquiry remit includes (a) reviewing the financial case for two-tier local government and (b) the merits of unitary local authorities. [33496]

Mr. Woolas: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member on 17 October 2005, Official Report, column 813W.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the decision to broaden the Lyons inquiry's remit to include local government pay and salaries. [33503]

Mr. Woolas: The extended remit of Sir Michael Lyons' independent inquiry was announced on 20 September, and a copy of the extended terms of reference was made available in the Library of the House. The remit includes consideration of the mechanisms in place to manage pressures such as pay. There has been no decision to broaden this remit.

Norman Baker: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much has been spent in each year from 1 May 1997 on ministerial travel, broken down by (a) provision and running costs of vehicular transport, (b) first class travel by rail, (c) standard class travel by rail, (d) first class travel by air, (e) club or equivalent class travel by air and (f) economy class travel by air. [27677]

Jim Fitzpatrick: All Ministerial travel is undertaken in accordance with the rules set out in the 'Ministerial Code and Travel' by Ministers, copies of which are available in the Libraries of the House.

(a) My hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary at the Cabinet Office has asked Roy Burke, chief executive of the Government Car and Despatch Agency (GCDA) to write to the hon. Member with details of the costs of ministerial vehicles provided to departments in 2004–05. Copies of his letter will be made available in the Library of the House.

For information for the financial years 2000–01 to 2003–04 I refer the hon. Member to the letters from the chief executive of the GCDA to the hon. Member for Buckingham (John Bercow) dated 10 January 2005 and to the then hon. Member for Arundel and South Downs dated 13 September 2003. Copies of these letters are available in the Library of the House.

(b) and (c) During the financial year 2004–05, expenditure on rail travel by Ministers in the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister was £17,772. Information on the class of tickets obtained is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Detailed information in respect of rail travel taken by ministers since the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister was created on 29 May 2002 until 2003–04 can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

(d), (e) and (f) In respect of overseas travel by Ministers, since 1999 the Government have published an annual list of all visits overseas undertaken by Cabinet Ministers costing £500 or more during each financial year. The Government have also published on an annual basis the cost of all Ministers' visits overseas. Copies of the lists are available in the Libraries of the House. These report information for the financial years 1995–96 to 2004–05. Information for 2005–06 will be published as soon as it is ready after the end of the current financial year.

During the financial year 2004–05, expenditure on domestic flights by ministers in the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister was £4,378. Information on the class of tickets obtained is not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Detailed information in respect of domestic air travel taken by Ministers since the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister was formed on 29 May 2002 until 2003–04 can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mike Penning: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list, for each year since 1995, the number of flights, including helicopter flights, taken by Ministers within his Department for UK and overseas visits; on how many occasions (a) charter flights were used and (b) first and club class tickets were obtained; and if he will indicate who accompanied the Ministers on each trip. [27809]

Jim Fitzpatrick: All ministerial travel is undertaken in accordance with the rules set out in the 'Ministerial Code and Travel' by Ministers, copies of which are available in the Libraries of the House.

In respect of overseas travel by Ministers, since 1999 the Government have published an annual list of all visits overseas undertaken by Cabinet Ministers costing £500 or more during each financial year. The list indicates when non-scheduled flights were used-and shows how many officials accompanied ministers in those circumstances. The Government have also published on an annual basis the cost of all Ministers' visits overseas. Copies of the lists are available in the Libraries of the House. These report information reaching back to 1995–96. Information for 2005–06 will be published after the end of the financial year.

During the financial year 2004–05, Ministers in the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister have taken 19 domestic flights. Detailed information in respect of flights taken by Ministers since the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister was created on 29 May 2002 until 2003–04 can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Revaluation

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has to allow local councils to revalue properties which have been extended for the purpose of calculating council tax; and if he will make a statement. [35091]

Mr. Woolas: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has no plans to allow local councils to revalue properties which have been extended. This is the statutory responsibility of listing officers employed by the Valuation Office Agency. Properties will be placed in a higher band for council tax purposes only after a sale and only where the increase in value merits this.

Sustainable Communities Plan

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what guidance his Department provides to (a) regional planning bodies and (b) regional assemblies on (i) the allocation of funds for capital programmes and (ii) co-ordination with local authorities covered by the sustainable communities plan. [33474]

Mr. Woolas: Regional assemblies, who are also the regional planning bodies, comprise members from local authorities in their region and other regional stakeholders. They have no responsibilities for allocating funds to bodies in their regions.

In July 2005 the Government invited the regional bodies, the Government Offices, regional development agencies and the regional assemblies, to between them provide advice on regional funding allocations. Guidance on preparing advice issued at the time is available on the HM Treasury's website at:

http://www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/Consultations_and_Legislation/devolvingdecision_making/regional_funding_allocations.cfm

Torbay Mayor

Mr. Steen: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister following the affirmative referendum on a Torbay mayor in September, what consultative and other processes were needed to implement the proposal; and how long after the referendum the post of mayor was established. [32164]

Mr. Woolas [holding answer 29 November 2005]: Before holding a referendum on whether to have a directly elected mayor, a local authority is required to draw up and consult its electorate and other interested parties on proposals for its governance arrangements.

The referendum on whether Torbay should have a directly elected mayor was held on 14 July 2005. Torbay implemented the proposals endorsed by that referendum result immediately following the mayoral election on 20 October 2005.

Valuation Office Agency

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to the answer of 23 November 2005, Official Report, column 2063W, on council tax revaluation, whether the Valuation Office Agency continues (a) to collect and (b) to collate (i) dwelling house code data and (ii) value significant code data following the postponement of the English council tax revaluation. [33449]

Mr. Woolas: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on the 23 November 2005, Official Report, column 2063W.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

British Technology Group Act

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the operation of the British Technology Group Act 1991. [28270]

Alan Johnson: The British Technology Group Act 1991 was a paving measure to provide for the privatisation in early 1992 of the British Technology Group, a body formed in 1981 by an amalgamation of two public bodies known as the National Research Development Corporation and the National Enterprise Board.

Several of the provisions of the 1991 Act, including those dealing with the nomination of the new privatised company[1] and the arrangements whereby the Government would acquire a shareholding in that company[2] were repealed by the Statute Law (Repeals) Act 2004. Also repealed were provisions for extinguishing certain outstanding reserves and liabilities of the two public bodies[3], financial provisions relating to the new company[4], a provision as to the status of shares in the new company for trustee investment purposes[5] and a provision relating to parliamentary scrutiny of orders made by the Secretary of State[6].

[1] Section 1(2) and (5). In schedule 1, paragraph 1.

[2] Sections 3 to 7

[3] Section 2

[4] Sections 8 (2) in part; 8 (3) and 9

[5] Section 13

[6] Section 14 (2) (reference to the repealed order making power of Section 6)

Business Start-ups (Women)

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the impact of changes to Phoenix funding on his target of 20 per cent. of business start-ups being undertaken by women by 2006, with particular reference to the Women's Employment, Enterprise and Training Unit in the Norwich North constituency. [33911]

Alun Michael: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is confident that the target of 20 per cent. of businesses being female owned by 2006 will be reached.

The Phoenix Fund was introduced as a time-limited programme to help build good practice on business support for under-represented groups including women. The Small Business Service is working with the Regional Development Agencies to pull through this good practice to improve access to the full range of business support services for women.

Carbon Management Programme

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer of 9 November 2005, Official Report, columns 527–8W, on carbon management programme, if he will place in the Library a copy of the Carbon Trust's survey report. [31831]

Malcolm Wicks: DTI have made arrangements for the Carbon Trust report to be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Climate Change

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the oral statement of the Energy Minister of 11 November 2005, column 621, on climate change, if he will make a statement on the £83.5 million for micro-generation installations since 2002; how this funding was split across the programmes run by his Department; when funding started under each programme; how much was granted under each micro-generation scheme for each year since their commencement; and how much funding granted under each micro-generation scheme is expected to be provided up to March 2007. [33963]

Malcolm Wicks: The Government have committed the following funding to microgeneration installations since 2000:

£10 million since 2000 on the PV Field Trials

£31 million since 2002 on the Major Demonstration PV programme

£12.5 million since 2003 on Clear Skies programme

£30 million recently announced for the Low Carbon Buildings programme which is due to start in April 2006, subject to state aid clearance. £1.5 million of which has been brought forward to extend the Clear Skies and PV programmes.

I regret that due to an administrative error, my statement on 11 November 2005 inadvertently referred to an incorrect date. Since 2000 the total committed to microgeneration installations was £83.5 million, as set out.

Coal Production

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on current coal production in the United Kingdom. [34796]

Malcolm Wicks: Coal production in the UK in the three months to September 2005, at 4.8 million tonnes, was 19.5 per cent. lower than in the corresponding period of 2004.

Deep mined production was down 27.7 per cent. and opencast production was down 12.4 per cent.

Common Fund for Commodities

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the outcome of the recent meeting to discuss the Common Fund for Commodities. [33944]

Ian Pearson: The Governing Council of the Common Fund for Commodities met on 29–30 November 2005 in Amsterdam. As well as a number of administrative and financial issues, the meeting also considered a report on the mid-term review of the Fund's five-year action plan 2003 to 2007.

Companies Act Regulations

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list meetings between his Department and the Treasury at which the decision to remove the obligation on businesses to publish operating and financial reviews was discussed. [35015]

Alun Michael: There are frequent meetings between DTI and the Treasury. Policy in relation to corporate governance and reporting frequently crops up directly or indirectly.

Consultants

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps his Department takes to ensure that consultancies do not claim excessive expenses while working for the Department and its agencies. [29058]

Alan Johnson: The Department fully supports the joint Management Consultancies Association (MCA), Institute of Management Consultancy (IMC) and Office of Government Commerce (OGC) statement of best practice document "Delivering world-class consultancy services to the public sector". This document emphasises the working relationships that the public sector client and consultant will seek to achieve in the development and execution of a consultancy contract.

The Department's standard Invitation to Tender (ITT) document requires potential consultants to provide documentary evidence of their proposed expenses, with which the Department must be satisfied prior to entering into contract. The Department's contract documentation stipulates that only travelling and other expenses that are properly and necessarily incurred in providing the services will be reimbursed.

I have asked the Department's Executive Agencies to respond directly to the hon. Member.

Letter from Desmond Flynn, dated 6 December 2005:

The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has asked me to reply to you directly on behalf of The Insolvency Service in respect of your question (1813/2005) asking what steps the Department takes to ensure that consultancies do not claim excessive expenses whilst working for the Department and its agencies.

The Insolvency Service only allows for 'reasonable' expenses. Expenses submitted by consultants should generally be in line with amounts that we would pay our own staff in terms of travel and subsistence.

Letter from Claire Clancy, dated 6 December 2005:

I am responding to your recently tabled Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on behalf of Companies House, which is an Executive Agency of the DTI.

When placing any contracts Companies House would include within the overall contract value details of allowable expenses. These would therefore be subject to the same value for money evaluation that is applied to the agreed daily rates.

Letter from Dr. Jeff Llewellyn, dated 6 December 2005:

The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has asked me to reply on behalf of the National Weights and Measures Laboratory (NWML) to your question regarding what steps the Department takes to ensure that consultancies do not claim excessive expenses whilst working for the Department and its Agencies.

NWML agrees fee rates, including expense rates, with consultants prior to commissioning work. All claims for payment, including expense claims, are checked for accuracy and reasonableness prior to payment.

Letter from Jeanne Spinks, dated 6 December 2005:

House of Commons Parliamentary Question 2005/1813

You asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, what steps the Department takes to ensure that consultancies do not claim excessive expenses whilst working for the Department and its agencies.

The Employment Tribunals Service policy is that wherever possible consultancy services are provided through the Office of Government Commerce (OGC) approved "Catalist" arrangements. All the Service Providers under these arrangements are committed to a standard travel and subsistence policy, based on either OGC buying solutions rates for its public servants, or the individual customers rates.

Letter from Ron Marchant, dated 6 December 2005:

House of Commons Parliamentary Question: 2005/1813

I am responding to this parliamentary question, tabled on 14 November 2005, regarding What steps the Department of Trade and Industry takes to ensure that consultancies do not claim excessive expenses whilst working for the Department and its agencies.

All contracts issued to consultancies by the Patent Office have a clause in them specifying that reasonable or civil service level expenses only may be claimed. Any invoices submitted are checked by the contract manager and any claims considered to be excessive are disallowed.

Developing Countries (Trade)

Mr. Pelling: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action is being taken to use the EU presidency to promote trade that will benefit developing countries. [33874]

Ian Pearson: The needs and interests of developing countries are at the heart of the current round of World Trade Organisation negotiations. The UK Government's priority for the WTO ministerial conference in Hong Kong is to secure to a package that is pro-development, helps build a more competitive European economy and allows a conclusion to the round by the end of 2006.

As presidency, the UK supports the European Commission in its role as negotiator, and is working with member states to ensure a flexible EU position that will help progress negotiations in the run-up to, and at, Hong Kong.

Electricity Prices

Mr. MacNeil: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the current price is of electricity per unit generated from (a) nuclear, (b) offshore wind, (c) onshore wind, (d) wave and (e) tidal energy. [33437]

Malcolm Wicks: The cost of producing electricity by generator class is a commercial matter for generating companies.

Mr. MacNeil: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the price is per unit of electricity generated from (a) gas-fired, (b) hydro and (c) coal-fired power stations. [34352]

Malcolm Wicks: The cost of producing electricity by generator class is a commercial matter for generating companies.

Energy Levy

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received, and from whom, regarding the introduction of a levy on energy bills to assist with the development of nuclear power generation; and if he will make a statement. [34775]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 5 December 2005]: The Department has received no representations regarding a levy on energy bills to assist with nuclear power.

Energy Supplies

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the impact on carbon dioxide emissions of an increase in the use of gas and oil to supply energy demands. [35529]

Malcolm Wicks: I refer the right hon. Member to our published projections, which can be found on the DTI website, at http://www.dti.gov.uk/energy/sepn/uep2004.pdf. (An addendum extending these projections to 2020 can also be found at http://www.dti.gov.uk/energy/sepn/uep_addendum.pdf.) It is intended that these estimates will be revised and published in due course.

Enterprise Grants

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many small and medium-sized enterprises applied for a grant for research and development in 2004–05 in (a) the UK and (b) each region; how many applicants received funding; what the average value of a grant was; and what the total value of the funding allocated was. [33470]

Alun Michael [holding answer 5 December 2005]: DTI grant for research and development is available to businesses in England while the Devolved Administrations offer their own forms of support to businesses undertaking research and development projects.

In 2004–05 grants for research and development worth a total of £30,401,452 were offered to 352 small and medium-sized businesses in England as shown on the following table:

Region	Number of Applications	Number of Grants Offered
East	98	65
East Midlands	102	22
London	75	47
North East	41	27
North West	155	51
South East	140	43
South West	84	19
West Midlands	52	29
Yorkshire and Humber	154	49
Total	901	352

The average level of grant support was £86,367.

Flexible Working Hours

Lynda Waltho: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what assessment he has made of the willingness of employers to offer family-friendly working hours to male employees; [33415]

(2) what recent estimate he has made of the number of male employees requesting family-friendly flexible working hours. [33416]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The "Second Work-Life Balance Study: Results from the Employers' Survey Main Report Working Employee Survey" (published October 2003) shows that 86 per cent. of employers, with five or more employees, had some type of flexible working provision available to their staff. Employers were not asked whether these provisions were made available to both male and female staff.

The "Second Flexible Working Employee Survey" (published April 2005) shows that over the past two years 10 per cent. of male employees have asked to work flexibly. 62 per cent. of these requests were fully accepted by employers, compared with 72 per cent. of requests from female employees. 43 per cent. of women, compared to 22 per cent. of men, cited childcare needs as the reason for requesting flexible working.

Fuel Poverty

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many (a) households were in fuel poverty and (b) vulnerable households were in fuel poverty in each of the last five years for which figures are available; and what proportion each represented of all households in (i) London and (ii) each London borough. [34724]

Malcolm Wicks: Figures for the number of households in fuel poverty in England are produced from analysis of the English House Condition Survey. From 2003, the survey is being carried out on a continuous rolling basis. Prior to 2001, however, this survey was conducted on a five-yearly basis. Hence, the number of households in fuel poverty is not available for all of the last five years. The figures for both all households and vulnerable households for 2001 and 2003 are available, with an estimate available for 2002, as detailed in the following table.

Fuel poverty figures for England: 2001—2003

(millions)

	2001	2002	2003
Number of households in fuel poverty	1.7	1.4	1.2
Number of vulnerable households in fuel poverty	1.4	1.2	1.0

Due to the sample sizes involved it is not possible to break the vulnerable category down further by local area. Similarly, it is not possible to provide details for any of the London boroughs. However, analysis of actual data for the years when the EHCS was carried out for each of the nine Government offices for the regions shows that, for London, figures for 2001 and 2003 are as follows:

Fuel poverty figures in the Government office for London region: 2001-03

	2001	2003
Number of households in fuel poverty	148,000	108,000
Total number of households in region	2,993,000	3,011,000
Percentage in fuel poverty	5.0	3.6

Independent Schools

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the recent Office of Fair Trading report on independent schools. [34150]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Office of Fair Trading is the United Kingdom's independent competition regulator. It has a duty to investigate and address anti-competitive conduct and enforce competition law. It has investigated the exchange of information between independent schools about the fees they charge. Its provisional findings are that fifty schools have breached chapter one of the Competition Act which prohibits anti-competitive agreements. This is a matter for the Office if Fair Trading. The Government have no substantive role in individual cases.

IT Projects

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many of the IT projects costing over £1 million in use in his Department and introduced since 1997 have been scrutinised by the Public Accounts Committee; and if he will list them. [26612]

Alan Johnson: The Public Accounts Committee has not scrutinised any of the Department's IT projects since 1997.

Low Carbon Building Programme

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the latest position on obtaining EU approval for the Low Carbon Building Programme; and what the deadline is for submission of any future funding for approval by the EU under this scheme. [33952]

Malcolm Wicks: Officials are currently preparing a submission to the EU for the Low Carbon Buildings Programme state aid approval. We aim to have this clearance in time to start the programme in April 2006. There is no deadline for any future funding.

Miners' Compensation

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many hearing loss claims have been (a) submitted and (b) settled for miners from the Bassetlaw constituency. [35284]

Malcolm Wicks: In the Bassetlaw constituency, 1,603 hearing loss claims from miners have been registered of which 1,464 have been settled.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much has been paid in costs to the Union of Democratic Mineworkers for miners' hearing loss claims. [35340]

Alun Michael: The UDM has been paid £5.9 million in costs for handling 8859 settled miners' hearing loss claims.

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many claims for vibration white finger have been (a) processed and (b) settled in each year of the scheme. [34801]

Malcolm Wicks: The following table provides the number of vibration white finger claims registered and settled to date each year since 1995.

	Registered	Settled
1995	1,202	—
1996	8,524	204
1997	9,300	1,117
1998	12,068	2,335
1999	23,631	6,313
2000	60,297	8,741
2001	18,311	14,218
2002	33,490	19,266
2003	2,694	27,662
2004	71	18,088
2005	23	14,819

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects the issue of crossover of claims relating to different conditions to be resolved in relation to claims under the miners' compensation scheme. [34862]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 5 December 2005]: Agreement in principle has been reached with the Claimant Solicitor Group (CSG) on how these claims should be processed. Revised examples of the complex calculation determining compensation were sent to the CSG on 14 November 2005. These incorporate all of the negotiated changes to the calculation. We await acceptance from the CSG. Once we have this, it will take 6 weeks to make the necessary system changes before offers can be made.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will take steps to recover from solicitors moneys paid from the public purse following the judicial ruling of October in the case of Walker v. UK Coal. [34863]

Malcolm Wicks: The judgement is currently being clarified and we are monitoring the position. If there have been any overpayments then action will be taken to recover them where the Department is so advised.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many hearing loss claims involving Vendside Ltd have been (a) registered and (b) paid out since the beginning of the summer parliamentary recess 2005. [34867]

Malcolm Wicks: 56 hearing loss claims have been received from Vendside Ltd since 22 November 2005. None of these claimants have received payment yet.

Multi-Fibre Agreement

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the impact of the ending of the Multi-Fibre Agreement on (a) Taiwan, (b) Mauritius and (c) Costa Rica; and if he will make a statement. [28416]

Ian Pearson: The end of the MFA will bring significant benefits to the world economy over the longer term, but entail adjustment pressures for some producing countries. It is too early to assess the precise impact on individual economies.

National Minimum Wage

Kelvin Hopkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer of 8 November 2005, Official Report, column 296W, on the national minimum wage, whether the 1.3 million figure quoted for those benefiting from the increase in the minimum wage refers to (a) individuals and (b) jobs. [34642]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The DTI estimated that 1.3 million individuals will be covered by the October 2005 uprating of the National Minimum Wage. This estimate was based on the Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings 2004 taking into account earnings inflation from spring 2004 and October 2005.

Oil Stocks

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects the EU to repeal the directives requiring member states to keep minimum oil stocks, as stated in COM (2005) 535. [32896]

Malcolm Wicks: Currently, there are seven directives relating to oil stocking. Later directives amend paragraphs from the earlier versions. The proposal set out in COM (2005) 535 is to simplify the legislation by recasting these seven directives into a single directive and says that it is the intention to do this at some stage in 2006. There is no intention or plan to reduce the level of EU emergency oil stocks.

Renewable Energy

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps his Department is taking to provide continuity of grant support to (a) schools and (b) other community renewable energy projects pending the launch of the new low carbon buildings programme in financial year 2006–07. [32846]

Malcolm Wicks: £1.5 million has been brought forward from the £30 million for the low carbon buildings programme to minimise any potential funding gap between the existing and new programme. The Department is also looking to work in partnership with major private sector players in the energy field in order to expand the micro generation sector, with a particular emphasis on renewable energy technologies on schools.

Colin Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will provide additional funds to enable (a) schools and (b) other community buildings to benefit from renewable energy technologies. [33986]

Malcolm Wicks: £1.5 million has been brought forward from the £30 million for the low carbon buildings programme to minimise any potential funding gap between the existing and new programmes. We will continue to support school and community buildings renewable projects under the new programme, which will start in April 2006, subject to EU state aids clearance. The Department is also looking to work in partnership with major private sector players in the energy field in order to expand the micro generation sector, with a particular emphasis on renewable energy technologies on schools.

Secondments

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many staff in his Department are seconded from accountancy houses; and how many of his officials have worked on secondment to outside accountancy houses. [20554]

Alan Johnson: Departmental records show that DTI currently has nine people seconded from accountancy firms and three members of staff have worked on secondment to accountancy firms.

South West Regional Venture Capital Fund

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many ventures have been backed by the South West Regional Venture Capital Fund; and what funds have been committed. [34420]

Alun Michael: The number of ventures backed by the fund is nine and in total £1.95 million has been committed.

Statutory Adoption Pay

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment has been made of the impact of paying statutory adoption pay for 26 weeks at £106 per week and statutory maternity pay at six weeks at a level of 90 percent. followed by 20 weeks at £106 per week on (a) the number of people coming forward to be adopters and (b) the impact of adoption on families of a reduced income; what plans he has to review the levels of payment; and if he will make a statement. [33601]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The number of adoptions of children from care increased by 38 percent. between 1999–2000 and 2004–05. In 2004–5 there were 3,800. Although assessing social workers do look into the income and money management skills of prospective adopters, they do not classify families on the basis of income and none of the statutory returns asks for this kind of information.

Statutory adoption pay (SAP) was introduced in 2003 as a measure of income replacement to help adopters to take time off work when a child is placed with them. Since its introduction the standard rate of SAP has been the same as the standard rate of statutory maternity pay (SMP) and maternity allowance (MA). The Work and Families Bill will enable us to increase the payment period of both maternity and adoption pay from the current 26 weeks to 39 weeks from April 2007 with an ambition to increase to one year by the end of this parliament. It is also our ambition to increase the flat rate of SAP, SMP, MA and statutory paternity pay over time.

SAP needs to be considered as part of the overall package of support for adoptive families. Adopters have a right to be assessed for financial support under the Adoption Support Services Regulations 2003 (which will be replaced on 30 December 2005 by the Adoption Support Services Regulations 2005). We have provided nearly £70 million of ring fenced grant to local authorities over the three year period 2003–04, 2004–05, 2005–06 to fund adoption support services and special guardianship support services. In addition, adoptive families will benefit from other support available to families, including working tax credit and child tax credit.

Tariffs

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what position he will be taking in the forthcoming Doha trade talks in Hong Kong on reducing agricultural tariffs. [34149]

Ian Pearson: The Government's long-term goal is to abolish progressively all barriers to agricultural trade in the forms of both tariffs and quotas. The Government aims to take an important step towards this goal through the Doha development agenda.

The European Commission negotiates in the World Trade Organisation on behalf of the European Union's twenty-five member states, within the parameters of a negotiating mandate laid out in a succession of council conclusions. The current EU offer on agriculture, representing an average tariff reduction of 38.9 percent., is close to the edge of the mandate.

Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the timetable is for the implementation of the waste electrical and electronic equipment directive; and what progress has been made to date on implementation. [34295]

Malcolm Wicks: The Government intend to make a policy announcement shortly on the implementation of this EU waste electrical and electronic equipment directive, including the timing of the WEEE regulations. The Government have been working towards practical implementation arrangements for the UK in extensive discussions with stakeholders. The Department has conducted three policy consultations in preparation of these regulations and development of the practical implementation arrangements. It has also consulted on proposals for cost recovery fees to cover the environment agencies' planned roles in relation to the registration of producers and monitoring of obligations, primarily producers' obligations, under the WEEE regulations. The Department for Environment Food and Rural Affairs and the Northern Ireland Office have conducted separate consultations on draft regulations to implement the directive's requirements for the permitting of WEEE treatment facilities. The Environment Agencies have jointly consulted on draft technical guidance for the treatment of WEEE.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list (a) (i) retailers and (ii) producers of electrical goods, (b) trade bodies and (c) associated organisations which the Department consulted during the (A) drafting and (B) implementation of the waste electrical and electronic equipment directive. [34296]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department has been in contact with the main affected sectors of business and other stakeholders both throughout the negotiation of the waste electrical and electronic equipment directive and since it was agreed and published in February 2003. Since the publication of the directive, the Department has conducted four public consultations in relation to its transposition and implementation, in March 2003, in November 2003, in July 2004 and in May 2005. There were 316 responses to the DTI's first consultation; 219 to the second; 225 to the third and 50 to the fourth. The lists of respondents to the first three consultations have been published on the DTI website at http://www.dti.gov.uk/sustainability/weee/ A summary of responses to the fourth consultation will be published on the website shortly.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he is taking to ensure that implementation of the Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment Directive does not have an adverse impact on manufacturers of electrical goods and equipment, with particular reference to (a) profitability and (b) competitiveness. [34297]

Malcolm Wicks: The Government are committed to achieving an implementation of the EU Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment Directive which delivers its environmental objectives whilst safeguarding the competitiveness of UK manufacturers of electrical and electronic equipment which falls within its scope.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether his Department plans to meet retailers and producers of electrical goods and equipment to discuss their concerns over the implementation of the Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment Directive. [34298]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department has had intensive discussions with retailers and producers over the arrangements for the implementation of the Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment Directive. It expects to continue these.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the estimated recycling cost per electrical item is under the Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment Directive. [34299]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department has not published an estimated recycling cost per item. The Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment Directive covers a wide range of electrical and electronic equipment, which is highly diverse in nature and composition.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action his Department is taking to ensure that the cost of recycling items under the Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment Directive is transparent to (a) businesses and (b) consumers. [34300]

Malcolm Wicks: The costs of recycling waste electrical and equipment will be a matter for producers in the contractual arrangements they make with operators of recycling and other recovery processes on a commercial basis. The Government will implement the provisions of article 8 of the Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment Directive which provides that the costs of recycling of old waste equipment from private households may be shown to consumers at the point of sale for a transitional period after the directive's implementation.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what his Department's estimate is of the tonnage of waste electrical and electronic equipment goods which will be processed in each of the next five years; and what tonnage he estimates will be goods manufactured by companies that are no longer in business. [34301]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department has assumed, in its partial regulatory impact assessments for the UK implementation of the Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment Directive (which may be viewed on the Department's website at http://www.dti.gov.uk/sustainability/weee/), that total arisings of waste equipment (WEEE) from UK private households will be in the region of 1 million tonnes in 2006, according to the estimates published by the Industry Council for Electronic Equipment Recycling (ICER); and that the volume of WEEE arisings in the UK will rise by 4 per cent. each subsequent year, based on estimates in the European Commission's Explanatory Memorandum to the Directive. It is not know what proportion of this WEEE will result from equipment put onto the UK market by companies which have gone out of business.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he will take to ensure that manufacturers of electrical goods and equipment will be allocated waste electrical and electronic equipment directive responsibilities on a fair and equitable basis. [34302]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department will be making an announcement shortly on the plans for the UK implementation of the waste electrical and electronic equipment directive.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the proportion of UK waste electrical and electronic equipment goods which will be recycled in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) other EU states and (c) elsewhere over each of the next five years. [34303]

Malcolm Wicks: The waste electrical and electronic equipment directive requires target levels of recycling to be achieved, which vary according to the different categories of waste equipment. The Department's partial Regulatory Impact Assessments for the UK implementation of the Directive, which may be viewed on the Department's website at http://www.dti.gov.uk/sustainability/weee/, take account of these targets. The Directive is to be reviewed in 2008 and its requirements, including the targets, are expected to be revised as a result.

The Department has made no estimates of levels of recycling in other member states; or for other countries outside the EU.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps are being taken to ensure that civic amenity sites are able to collect and separate waste electrical and electronic equipment for collection and transportation to recycling facilities. [34304]

Malcolm Wicks: The Government are facilitating the development of a retail compliance scheme, which, subject to Government approval, will offer funding to local authorities to upgrade their civic amenity sites to provide facilities for the collection of waste electrical and electronic equipment separately from the rest of the municipal waste stream.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he is taking to ensure manufacturers have proper access to civic amenity sites and designated collection facilities to enable them to fulfil their recycling obligations under the Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment Directive. [34380]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department has facilitated discussions between representatives of local authorities and producers of a code of practice between site operators and producers collecting from the designated collection facilities for household WEEE.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps are being taken by his Department to inform consumers of the new recycling arrangements for waste electrical goods under the waste electrical and electronic equipment directive. [34381]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department expects that retailers will have obligations under the intended WEEE implementing regulations to inform consumers about the separate collection of WEEE for subsequent treatment and recycling; including about the local collection facilities and services available to them.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry why the waste electrical and electronic equipment directive's provision that manufacturers of electrical goods and equipment may make the cost of recycling historic equipment visible to the consumer is not being permitted in the UK. [34382]

Malcolm Wicks: The Government intend to implement the directive's provisions that producers may show, for a transitional period, the costs of recycling 'historical' waste electrical goods and equipment from private households to consumers at the point of sale of new equipment.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether steps are being taken by the Government to prevent profit-taking by third parties with no obligations under the waste electrical and electronic equipment directive. [34647]

Malcolm Wicks: The Government expect to implement the obligations under the waste electrical and electronic equipment directive on a basis which allows producers to procure treatment and recycling services for the waste equipment for which they have responsibility on a commercially contracted basis.

Wave Energy

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much has been spent in each year from 1980 to date on the research and development of wavepower; and what further sums are planned to be spent. [30923]

Malcolm Wicks: Spend on wave research under the Technology programme (and predecessors) is:

1997–98	0
1998–99	157,000
1999–2000	175,000

2004–05	1,050,000

Note:
Figures dating back to 1980 could not be provided without disproportionate cost.

Under the Engineering and Physical Sciences Research Council's Supergen programme, £2.6 million was awarded to the Marine Energy Research Consortium. The award, which commenced in October 2003 for four years, will fund research into marine renewable energy conversion and delivery. The Research Councils also support energy research, including aspects of marine and tidal power, through the work of the UK Energy Research Centre, which has funds of £13 million for 2004–09. No firm plans exist at present for additional managed activity in this area, so in the near future Research Council investments will depend on the quality of bids through responsive mode; although EPSRC will consider the potential renewal of the Supergen Marine Consortium at the relevant time.

In addition the Government have put in place the £50 million Marine Renewables Deployment Fund that will support the continued development of the marine renewables sector. At the core of those proposals is a £42 million wave and tidal stream energy demonstration scheme.

Work and Families Bill

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations his Department received from small business organisations concerning the effects of the Work and Families Bill. [33545]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 5 December 2005]: We received over 200 formal responses to the "Work and families: choice and flexibility" consultation, which preceded the Work and Families Bill. Around a third of these were from individual employers and 18 of these were from small employers. In addition 26 employer groups, many of which represent small employers, responded. These include the Federation of Small Business, the Forum of Private Business and the Small Business Council.

A summary of the responses is available in Annex A of the Government Response to the consultation, a copy of which is available in the Libraries of the House. The individual responses are available on the Work and Families page of the DTI website.

Over 20 meetings were held during the consultation period with small business and their representatives, including a focus group.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Academy Schools

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the pay level is of the head of each established academy school; and what the average pay for heads in the public sector is. [35327]

Jacqui Smith: No reliable figures are held with respect to the pay level of head teachers in academy schools.

In March 2004, the latest information available, it is provisionally estimated that the average salary of full-time head teachers in maintained secondary schools was £60,330. The average salary for all head teachers in the maintained sector was £46,890.

Adult Education

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make it her policy to increase adult education funding in Essex to its highest historical real terms level. [31225]

Bill Rammell: On the 21 October, I wrote to all MPs setting out the Government's strategic direction for the learning and skills sector for the coming period. The purpose of the announcement was to ensure the 2006/07 funding allocations process began with a clear and concise message on the principles that will underpin funding over the next two years. While total funding going into the learning and skills sector will increase over the next two years there is a need to rebalance spending toward priority areas which include helping disadvantaged adults gain basic and Level 2 skills for employability and progression to Level 3.

We are also maintaining the value of Government funding for personal and community development learning through a specific safeguard of £210 million in 2006/07.

Funding allocations for adult education providers in Essex will reflect these priorities that build upon our funding investment across the whole lifelong learning and skills sector, which has seen Government funding for; FE, work based training for young people, adult skills and lifelong learning increase by more than £4 billion since 1997-equivalent to over 60 percent. in real terms.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what average percentage of their fees was paid by adult education students in each of the last five years; and what the estimate is of fees they will pay in (a) 2005–06 and (b) 2006–07. [31231]

Bill Rammell: On the 21 October 2005, we made an announcement, setting out the Government's strategic direction for the learning and skills sector for the coming period. Our main purpose for doing so was to ensure the 2006/07 funding allocations process began with a clear and concise message on the principles that will underpin funding over the next two years. This follows record investment in Further Education; since 1997 total Government funding has risen by around 48 per cent. in real terms.

The Skills Strategy White Paper set out a vision for transforming the way in which the Learning and Skills Sector can support higher national investment in skills, which included a rebalancing of responsibilities so that the state, employers and individuals all contribute to the costs of their learning in line with the benefits they each receive. These funding principles do not affect the existing arrangements whereby my Department funds free tuition for all young people; those taking literacy and numeracy or aiming for their first full level 2; and learners receiving income based benefits, the pension (guarantee) credit and those on higher levels of the working tax credit.

In the last five years adult learners in Further Education (FE) were assumed to contribute 25 per cent. of the basic course cost of their learning unless fees were remitted because of the reasons stated above. This proportion increased to 27.5 per cent. in 2005/06 and will rise again to 32.5 per cent. in 2006/07 and 37.5 per cent. in 2007/08. In average terms this means a rise from an hourly rate of £1.42 to £1.94 by 2007/08.

The responsibility for setting and collecting fees rests with the college. However, we know that historically many FE providers choose to waive the fees for some of these 'fee-paying' learners:

In 2003/04, FE providers collected £152 million out of an 'expected' £261 million

In 2004/05, £159 million was collected out of an 'expected' £277 million.

In order to increase the levels of fees collected, from 2005/06 the LSC agreed a fee income measure with each FE funded provider. To assist providers in developing a strategic approach to fees policy, the LSC published a good practice guide to fee income earlier this year.

Clearly with the increase in fee assumption, it will be important that FE providers recover as much money as possible from learners as employers.

Alcohol Education

Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether there are plans to increase alcohol education in schools; and if she will make a statement. [33482]

Jacqui Smith: The statutory National Curriculum Science Order requires that all pupils should learn about the effects of alcohol and other drugs. In addition, schools are expected to use the non-statutory frameworks for Personal Social Health Education (PSHE) and Citizenship at key stages 1 and 2, PSHE at key stages 3 and 4 and the Citizenship programme of study at key stages 3 and 4 as the context for developing drug and alcohol education further. It is for schools to decide how much curriculum time is necessary to meet these requirements.

We are supporting schools to deliver better alcohol education. In 2004, we issued all schools with new guidance on all aspects of drug education, including alcohol. We have invested in the development of the PSHE certificate for teachers which supports standards in the teaching of PSHE, including alcohol education. We have made up to 2,000 places available in both 2004–05 and 2005–06.

Together with the Home Office and Department of Health, we are supporting a national five year research programme called "Blueprint" to test the effectiveness of drug education initiatives in schools. It will make a significant contribution to developing a UK evidence base for drug, alcohol and tobacco education.

AS-levels

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans she has for AS-level examinations; and if she will make a statement. [34500]

Jacqui Smith: AS level examinations will continue to make up 50 per cent. of an A level. It will also continue to be certificated as a qualification in its own right.

Bullying

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what financial commitment her Department plans to make to combat bullying in schools in the next 12 months. [33420]

Jacqui Smith: Funding for anti-bullying work during the financial year 2005/06 is £1,145,000. Work during this period includes conferences and events to disseminate good practice, alongside the development of guidance and resources for schools.

This amount also includes funding for external organisations to undertake specific projects:

£600,000 has been provided to the Anti-Bullying Alliance (ABA) to sustain the momentum for change generated by the Make The Difference Conference series;

The Department has provided £200,000 to Parentline Plus to support their helpline for parents on anti-bullying issues.

Funding for CHIPS (ChildLine in Partnership with Schools) is £200,000. The CHIPS scheme encourages young people to set up programmes, with the help of ChildLine and their teachers, to support their peers and to create safe environments in which to learn.

The Department has also shown its continuing support for the Diana Memorial Award for anti-bullying, by contributing £50,000 of funding. The award highlights the achievements of young people trying to tackle bullying in their school or community.

Funding for anti-bullying work during 2006/07 is yet to be agreed.

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what guidance her Department issues to schools to encourage children to report acts of bullying. [34790]

Jacqui Smith: We attach a high priority to encouraging pupils to report bullying, and to supporting schools to encourage their pupils to do so.

A key message of our guidance pack for schools, "Bullying: Don't Suffer in Silence", is that children should report bullying to someone they trust. The pack also provides information on monitoring bullying through the use of school surveys drawn up with the help of pupils.

We have created anti-bullying postcards and posters in a variety of community languages to help pupils, especially newly arrived pupils, to report acts of bullying. These have been made available to schools through conferences and can be downloaded from the DfES website.

The anti-bullying Charter for Action, which was re-issued to each school in November 2005, includes suggestions for safe and effective reporting of bullying.

Information is made available directly to children through our public information films. 'Tell Someone' encourages children who are being bullied to tell someone, and not suffer in silence. The film 'I Am' uses celebrities to show young people that they are not alone if they are being bullied, and should tell someone. We have encouraged schools to use these films.

Education Act

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on the operation of section 43 of the Education (No. 2) Act 1986. [29848]

Bill Rammell: We remain committed to the principles of freedom of expression and thought in universities and colleges as they are essential to modern democracy. The principles underpinning these are encapsulated in Article 10 of the European Convention on Human Rights as well as legislation more specific to particular education sectors. However, such freedoms also bring responsibilities, and we have to balance freedom of speech with the need to protect national security and the rights of citizens not to be put at risk from criminal and violent acts. We therefore continue to look to universities and colleges to uphold the safeguards for freedom of speech set out in legislation, and to take such action as they see fit to allow their students and staff to operate in safety on campus.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many (a) males and (b) females were (i) charged and (ii) convicted of offences under section 466 of the Education Act 1996 in (A) Essex and (B) England and Wales in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available; [33530]

(2) if she will make a statement on the operation of sections (a) 464, (b) 465 and (c) 466 of the Education Act 1996. [33531]

Jacqui Smith: Sections 464, 465 and 466 of the Education Act 1996 have been replaced by sections 158, 159 and 160 of the Education Act 2002. The main difference between the 1996 and 2002 provisions is that independent schools may no longer open unless they meet minimum standards which are set out in regulations made under the Education Act 2002.

Any proprietor who operates an unregistered school is doing so illegally and could face prosecution under section 159 of the 2002 Act, formerly section 466 of the 1996 Act. In the last 10 years there have been no prosecutions under section 466 of the Education Act 1996 or section 159 of the Education Act 2002.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on the operation of sections (a) 7, (b) 8 and (c) 9 of the Education Act 1996. [33532]

Jacqui Smith: This Government are committed to improving levels of attendance at school. Figures published in September for 2004/05 show that the level of absences from school have fallen for the fourth consecutive years to a record low level. The equivalent of 12,500 more pupils are in school each day on average in 2004/05 than in 2003/04. There are 50,000 more pupils in school each day on average than would be the case if absence rates were still at 1996/97 levels.

This Government believe that, for most children, school is the right place in which to receive education. However, we respect parents' fundamental right, under section 7 of the Education Act 1996, to educate their children at home if they so wish. Where that happens, the parents must take responsibility for ensuring that the education provided is suitable and, for children of compulsory school age, is full-time. We have no plans to change this right.

We have no current plans to amend section 8 of the 1996 Education Act which sets out when a person is of compulsory school age.

Section 9 sets out the general principle that pupils are to be educated in accordance with their parents' wishes. The courts have ruled that, while local authorities must "have regard to the general principle that pupils are to be educated in accordance with the wishes of their parents ... ...", that this is subject to other considerations, and that there are many things to which the education authority may have regard and which may outweigh the wishes of (particular) parents'.

How this operates in relation to school admissions is that section 86 of the school Standards and Framework Act 1998 gives parents a right to express a preference for the school they want their child to attend, and to give their reasons for that preference. If a school is oversubscribed, then the school's published admission arrangements (or 'oversubscription criteria') are applied to determine which applicants should be offered the available places. Those who are unsuccessful have a statutory right of appeal to an independent appeal panel.

Education (Southend-on-Sea)

James Duddridge: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what percentage of pupils in Southend-on-Sea achieved level 4 or above in 2005 in (a) English and (b) Mathematics at key stage 2; [34814]

(2) what percentage of pupils in Southend-on-Sea achieved level 5 or above in 2005 in (a) English and (b) mathematics at key stage 3. [34815]

Jacqui Smith: Information on the attainment of pupils in the 2005 key stage 2 and key stage 3 tests are published on the Department's research and statistics website in two Statistical First Releases (SFR). Figures for key stage 2 are available at: http://www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/DB/SFR/s000618/index.shtml. Figures for key stage 3 are available at: http://www.dfes.gov.uk/rsqateway/DB/SFR/s000599/index.shtml.

James Duddridge: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many pupils in Southend-on-Sea achieved five or more A*-C grades at GCSE in 2005. [34816]

Jacqui Smith: 1,229 pupils in Southend-on-Sea local authority achieved the level 2 threshold (the equivalent of five or more grades A*-C) in GCSE and equivalent qualifications in 2005 out of a total of 2,014 pupils, i.e. 61.0 per cent.

Notes:

1. These figures are provisional, and may be subject to change.

2. The coverage of these local authority level figures is maintained mainstream and maintained special schools only; including city technology colleges and academies but excluding hospital schools and pupil referral units where these occur within the local authority.

3. These figures relate to pupils at the end of key stage 4 in the 2004/05 academic year.

4. Figures include achievements of pupils in previous academic years.

5. These figures are adjusted for pupils recently arrived from overseas.

Education Funding

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what her most recent estimate is of how much money is spent per child each year in (a) state schools, (b) private schools and (c) special schools. [32764]

Jacqui Smith: The Department does not split its unit costs into (a) state schools, (b) private schools and (c) special schools. However, the available information for local authority maintained schools for 2003–04 is given in the following table.

Primary	2,750
Secondary	3,550
Special schools	14,050

My Department does not collect information on the money spent per child at private schools.

Notes:

1. The information was taken from section 52 outturn statements for 2003–04, as reported by LEAs.

2. School based expenditure includes only expenditure incurred directly by local authority maintained schools. This includes the pay of teachers and school-based support staff, school premises costs, books and equipment, and certain other supplies and services, less any capital items funded from recurrent spending and income from sales, fees and charges and rents and rates.

3. In addition to any school based expenditure, combined local authority and school based expenditure per pupil also includes all elements of related central local authority expenditure and was £3,890 per pupil in England in 2003–04. It is not possible to disaggregate this figure into mainstream and special school costs and consequently this figure includes all expenditure on the education of children in local authority maintained establishments and any expenditure on pupils educated by the authority other than in maintained establishments.

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the per pupil funding was in 2004–05 in (a) the East Riding of Yorkshire and (b) England. [33558]

Jacqui Smith: Total funding per pupil aged three-19 years (cash terms) for 2004–05 was £3,670 for East Riding of Yorkshire, and £4,030 for England.

Between 1997–98 and 2004–05, funding per pupil in East Riding increased by 34.3 percent. in real terms, compared with the England average of 34.4 percent. over the same period.

Notes:

Price base—Cash and real terms at 2004–05 prices, based on GDP deflators as at 28 September 2005.

Figures reflect relevant sub-blocks of education formula spending settlements. The cash figures include the pensions transfers to EFS and the Learning and Skills Council from 2003–04. The real terms series, and the increase quoted, exclude this transfer so that all years are comparable.

Total funding also includes all revenue grants in DfES departmental expenditure limits relevant to pupils aged three-19 years and exclude education maintenance allowances (EMAs) and education grants not allocated at an authority level.

The pupil numbers used to convert £ million figures to per pupil are those underlying the SSA/EFS settlement calculations plus PLASC three year-old maintained pupils and estimated 3–4 year-olds funded through state support in maintained and other educational institutions where these are not included in the SSA pupil numbers.

Rounding—Figures are rounded to the nearest 10.

Status—2004–05 figures are provisional as some grants have not yet been finalised/audited.

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what response she has made to the representations made by the F40 group of local authorities on school funding. [33570]

Jacqui Smith: I met representatives of the F40 group of authorities in June 2005 and listened to their presentation about the funding model which the group supports, and subsequently wrote to the group's chair following my statement to the House of 21 July 2005 about the new school funding arrangements to be introduced from April 2006. My department has recently replied to the group's request for a further meeting about the funding model, indicating that officials will be happy to meet representatives of the group as part of the longer term review of the school funding arrangements announced in my statement of 21 July. We will announce in the new year the terms of reference for the review and our detailed proposals for engagement with individual local authorities, their representative organisations and special interest groups, including the F40 group, and with other key stakeholders.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 26 October 2005, Official Report, column 389W, on education funding, if she will make a statement on the benefits to private sector sponsors of contributing to academy start up costs; and when she expects those benefits to accrue. [33753]

Jacqui Smith: Sponsoring an academy is an act of philanthropic giving. Sponsors contribute up to 10 per cent. of the capital costs of a new academy (to a maximum of £2 million), but their contribution is not just financial. More importantly they bring an experience of success, a personal commitment, energy, drive and ambition, as well as a whole new set of skills and experience. The 2005 PricewaterhouseCoopers evaluation found "strong confidence in the role of sponsors", with 78 per cent. of staff surveyed in academies agreeing that the sponsor brings expertise that would not otherwise be available to the academy, and 82 per cent. of staff agreeing that the sponsor's resources had a positive impact on pupils' learning.

The benefit that sponsors derive from their involvement in the programme is entirely personal and generally motivated by a desire to give something back to the community or from a sense of corporate responsibility.

Education Maintenance Allowance

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many people in each local authority are in receipt of the education maintenance allowance for 2005–06. [17814]

Phil Hope: The information requested has been placed in the House Libraries.

Failing Authorities

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list the date of (a) inspection, (b) report and (c) receipt of action plan by her Department for each local education authority found to be failing by Ofsted in 2004–05; what the date was of second (i) inspection, (ii) report and (iii) receipt of action plan by her Department in each case; and what the date was of subsequent milestone events. [34217]

Jacqui Smith: Ofsted inspections since April 2004 have found the overall efficiency of two local education authorities to be unsatisfactory. An action plan from Torbay council received in December 2004 responded to Ofsted's September 2004 report of its May 2004 inspection. An action plan from North East Lincolnshire received in April 2005 responded to Ofsted's December 2004 report of its October 2004 inspection. Both authorities' education services will be inspected in 2006–07, in joint area reviews of children's services carried out by Ofsted with other inspectorates and commissions.

The Department issued a direction to North East Lincolnshire council on 1 June 2005, under the Education Act 1996, to contract with North East Lincolnshire Children First to provide assistance to the council in the delivery of its children's services. The first annual performance assessments of children's services, issued by Ofsted and the Commission for Social Care Inspection on 1 December 2005, judged North East Lincolnshire's education services to remain below minimum requirements, but its children's services, including education, to have good capacity to improve. Torbay's education services were found to meet minimum requirements, and children's services to have good capacity to improve.

Geography Focus Group

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 21 October 2005, Official Report, column 1265W, on geography, whether she has received the report from the Geography Focus Group. [34832]

Jacqui Smith: The Geography Focus Group discussed their findings with Lord Adonis on 9 November, and put forward broad recommendations to improve the teaching and learning of geography. The Royal Geographical Society and Geographical Association, who lead the focus group are now developing more detailed proposals.

Higher Education

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps are being taken to ensure that the removal of the right to appeal of international students who apply for initial entry clearance will not disadvantage UK universities when competing in the overseas market of the UK higher education sector. [34564]

Bill Rammell: We are determined to ensure that UK universities remain attractive study destinations for international students. The current process of submitting an appeal and hearing a decision is bureaucratic and time-consuming and can sometimes drag on beyond the start date of a student's course. Under the new system, students who are refused a visa will be able to re-apply with the benefit of guidance and advice. This will be much faster and easier than at present.

In addition, the Home Office and UKvisas are working together to make sure that the quality of initial decision making on visa applications is of a high standard. UKvisas are enhancing the role of the Independent Monitor to review the standard of decision making on visas, improving the training for entry clearance officers, and are recruiting a network of regional managers to spread good practice.

Identity Cards

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate she has made of the (a) total and (b) net cost of (i) integrating the proposed identity card scheme into her Department's IT systems and (ii) the ongoing operation of the scheme within her Department. [31107]

Bill Rammell: The Department for Education and Skills has, in consultation with the Identity Cards Programme, developed its current best estimate of the cost of using the ID Cards Scheme to support the services which it oversees and these costs have been incorporated into the business case. The Department is represented on the Ministerial Committee on Identity Cards which oversees the work on benefits planning and realisation.

In deriving these estimates account has to be taken of the types of use required to support the particular services which this Department oversees. Not all services will require a high degree of integration between the ID Cards Scheme and other IT systems. Where there may be a need for integration, some costs can be absorbed into the usual cycles of system upgrades and technology refreshes.

We cannot release the detailed estimated costs for integrating IT systems and the ongoing operation of the Identity Cards Scheme within the Department and the services which it oversees at this stage as these elements may be acquired from the market. The estimates are therefore commercially sensitive and to release them may prejudice the procurement process and the Department's ability to obtain value for money from potential suppliers.

Learning and Skills Council

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much has been allocated to 14 to 19 skills and quality reform by the Learning and Skills Council in (a) 2005–06, (b) 2006–07 and (c) 2007–08. [35185]

Bill Rammell: The Learning and Skills Council (LSC) is funded by the Department for Education and Skills (DfES) through an annual Grant Letter that sets out the Government's key priorities for the LSC.

The following table sets out the information requested, as allocated to the LSC for 2006–07 and 2007–08 as part of the 2006–07 Grant Letter issued on 31 October 2005. Allocations for 2005–06 were included in the LSC document "Priorities for Success" October 2005.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to her most recent grant letter to the Learning and Skills Council (LSC) in which funding blocks A to E replace the previous five funding blocks set out in the grant letter; and if she will break down the LSC budgets proposed in November 2004 by the same categories used for this year's budget. [30817]

Bill Rammell: The information requested on the LSC budgets proposed in the November 2004 grant letter, by the categories used in the 2006–07 grant letter which was issued on 30 October 2005 are as follows:

Revised figures as in the 2006–07 grant letter, issued on 30 October, are shown in the following table.

[1] Final total do not agree with the aforementioned table because of roundings.

The aforementioned table excludes AME expenditure (education maintenance allowance) which is a separate line (Block E) in the grant letter.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 9 November 2005, Official Report, column 599W, on the Learning and Skills Council, what the amount of funding was from each source referred to in the last 12 months for which figures are available; and why this funding is delivered via the Learning and Skills Council. [31258]

Bill Rammell: Further education colleges and other providers responsible for the delivery of post-16 learning opportunities offer a wide range of provision that is fully funded by the LSC.

They also offer provision where funding does not come from the LSC but comes directly from a range of sources including those in my earlier reply to the hon. Gentleman. The following table shows the volume of funding from each source for provision that is delivered by colleges but not funded by the LSC for the academic year 2004/05. Most of this funding is provided directly to providers by these organisations, or generated directly by the providers themselves, without reference to the LSC.

Literacy

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many people in (a) Southend, (b) Essex, (c) Hertfordshire, (d) each London borough and (e) England she estimates were illiterate (i) at the last date for which figures are available and (ii) in each year since 2000. [34219]

Bill Rammell: The Skills for Life Survey: A national needs and impact survey of literacy, numeracy and ICT skills (DfES, October 2003) provides the latest estimates of literacy levels across England. The survey assessed the literacy, numeracy and ICT skills of around 8,000 adults aged 16 and above in England. The estimates are available to individual education authority area; however they are only available for 2003 and not every year since 2000.

The survey findings are shown in the tables following for the regions requested. The assessment levels correspond to the literacy and numeracy National Standards: these were introduced in 2002 to provide a framework for all adult screening tests, diagnostic tools, programmes of study and qualifications. Learners are assessed for levels of literacy from Entry Level 1 to Level 2. Level 2 is broadly equivalent to a higher grade GCSE (A*-C).'

Oral Hygiene (Children)

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) if the Government will fund the provision of toothbrushes and toothpaste to Sure Start nurseries in deprived areas; [34234]

(2) if the Government will support the Stop-the-Rot campaign to encourage nurseries to help prevent tooth decay in small children. [34237]

Beverley Hughes: Many Sure Start settings offer a diverse range of activities to improve oral health in very young children, for example, by issuing free toothbrushes and toothpaste packs to families, free information leaflets and advice sessions. This is in addition to the Department of Health's pilot scheme 'Brushing for Life' where Health Visitors are giving free packs containing a tube of fluoride toothpaste, toothbrushes and a leaflet on oral hygiene to families with children aged eight and 18 months living in areas with the highest level of tooth decay and in areas served by a Sure Start Local Programme where fluoride is not added to the water supply.

The pilot scheme has been the subject of a positive evaluation and, when the pilot concludes, primary care trusts wishing to participate in the scheme will be able to order packs through the NHS purchasing and supply authority's catalogue.

The Stop-the-Rot scheme and associated website was publicised in the November edition of Sure Start News which is a regular newsletter e-mailed to all Sure Start settings and other early years providers.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps she is taking to encourage primary school children to brush their teeth at lunchtime. [34235]

Jacqui Smith: Promoting oral hygiene in children is a responsibility for the Department of Health, with whom we liaise and seek advice from in health matters. The Department of Health has not recommended that it is necessary for primary schools to encourage all pupils to clean their teeth at lunch.

Middle Schools

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills which local education authorities operate a middle school system; how many middle schools there are; and which of these are for children aged nine to 13 years. [34604]

Jacqui Smith: As at January 2005 there were 24 local authorities in England that had a total of 367 middle schools, 235 of which were for children aged 9 to 13. The table lists the 24 local authorities and details of numbers of schools for each.

New Deal

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what incentives are offered for people (a) to attend and (b) to complete the New Deal's Gateway to Learning scheme. [24419]

Margaret Hodge: I have been asked to reply.

When participants on new deal for young people (NDYP) and new deal 25 plus (ND25 plus) join the new deal, they enter a 'Gateway' period, lasting up to four months, in which a personal adviser works with them to improve their job prospects. At the outset, personal advisers consider whether it is appropriate to refer participants for a formal basic skills assessment and if a need is identified, participants can be referred to relevant provision aimed at addressing this.

The new deal for young people is mandatory for all 18–24 year olds who have been claiming jobseeker's allowance (JSA) for 6 months. New deal 25 plus is mandatory for people aged 25 and over claiming JSA for 18 months or 18 out of the last 21 months. During their time on the Gateway, participants continue receiving the same rate of benefit they were receiving prior to joining the Gateway.

Subsequent weekly Gateway interviews focus on moving people into work. Part of this process is the Gateway to Work course. Jobseeker's allowance (JSA) regulations state that it is mandatory for all NDYP customers, who are still unemployed by week four of the Gateway, to attend the two-week Gateway to Work course. ND25 plus customers can be required to attend the course if it is considered they will benefit from attendance. The two week course is designed to improve a person's employability and enhance their prospects of moving into full-time employment and off jobseekers allowance (JSA).

NDYP participants who do not secure a job before the end of the four month Gateway period must then enter one of the four NDYP Options: the Subsidised Employment Option; the Full Time Education and Training Option; the Voluntary Sector Option or the Environment Task Force Option, all of which are aimed at helping people into work and off JSA. ND25 plus participants must enter an Intensive Activity Period which can combine work experience, work-focused training and help with motivation and job search, to help people into employment and off benefit.

Popular Schools Expansion Programme

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many applications have been made under the popular schools expansion programme; and how many (a) have been (i) approved and (ii) rejected and (b) remain under consideration; [32311]

(2) what the total budget is for the popular schools expansion programme; and how much has been spent to date. [32312]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 28 November]: The number of applications submitted to the Department for funding under the expansion of successful and popular school programme is set out in the following table:

	Number
Withdrawn	1
Under consideration	8
Rejected	6
Approved	7
Total applications	22

As the successful and popular schools is demand led, no separate budget has been allocated for this programme. Funding arrangements for the seven successful applications are being finalised.

Since the introduction of local decision making in September 1999 there have been, separate to this programme, over 450 approvals of proposals for primary and secondary school expansions.

Primary School Training Courses

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many users of the online application service for primary school training courses have reported that they have not been able to (a) contact the helpline, (b) submit applications online and (c) give references online; and what allowance will be made for applicants who have missed the deadline as a consequence of operational problems with the service; [34805]

(2) what the duration is of the contract with the Graduate Teacher Training Registry for the online application service for primary school teachers; what the value of the contract is; whether there are penalty clauses in the contract relating to the system being unavailable; and how many companies tendered for the contract to provide the online application system; [34806]

(3) what discussions she has had with the Graduate Teacher Training Registry about the online application system for those seeking to train as primary school teachers; [34808]

(4) if she will make a statement on the effectiveness of the online application system provided by the Graduate Teacher Training Registry for primary school training courses. [34813]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 5 December 2005]: The Graduate Teacher Training Registry (GTTR) contracts directly with initial teacher training institutions. There is no contract between GTTR and TDA for the online application service for primary school teachers. The application service is funded by payments from these member institutions and from applicant fees.

My Department and the Training and Development Agency for Schools (TDA) are aware of the recent difficulties that have been experienced at GTTR. The TDA has been in regular contact with the registry. It is satisfied that GTTR is now taking all the action it should to remedy the problems experienced earlier.

There were some initial difficulties when processing applications while the GTTR were bedding in a new IT system. These difficulties have now been resolved and measures have been established to ensure applications reach institutions as soon as possible. The server that handles the on-line applications is now running smoothly. GTTR is not experiencing any new operational issues at this stage, and the backlog is now being cleared. The great majority of applications are submitted on-line and the remaining paper applications are being turned around within five working days. It is not possible to say how many individual users experienced problems as multiple attempts may have been made by the same people to make contact, submit applications and give references.

GTTR will be providing additional help-line and technical support to enable applicants to submit their forms to meet a new deadline for primary applications, which has been extended by three days to midnight on 4 December. The extension will help applicants who would otherwise have needed to submit their applications by Thursday 1 December.

Private Members Bills

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to her answer of 26 October 2005, Official Report, column 393W, on private Members' Bills, whether the information was collected at any time; and if she will make a statement. [33881]

Jacqui Smith: As far as I am aware, the information has never been collected.

Reading

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many reading recovery teachers are employed in schools in England (a) in total and (b) broken down by local education authority; and how many schools are involved. [34744]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Information on reading recovery can be found on the Institute of Education website at the following address: http://ioewebserver.ioe.ac.uk/ioe/cms/get.asp?cid=9263.

School Budgets (Ribble Valley)

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in Ribble Valley are expected to have a budget deficit in the 2005–06 financial year. [34067]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested is not yet available. The Department is due to collect the section 52 outturn data relating to the 2005–06 financial year from October 2006.

School Care (Disabled Children)

Ed Balls: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much money has been spent on the provision of extended school care for children with disabilities in each year since 1997 in (a) West Yorkshire, (b) Wakefield district and (c) Normanton constituency; and how much has been allocated in these areas in each of the next three years. [34540]

Jacqui Smith: My Department does not collect this information.

School Finance

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what funding has been allocated to (a) school sixth forms and (b) 16 to 19 further education for (i) 2005–06, (ii) 2006–07 and (iii) 2007–08 in relation to (A) Level 1, (B) Level 2, (C) Level 3 and (D) Level 4 qualifications; [33346]

(2) what funding has been allocated to 16 to 19 further education in (a) 2005–06, (b) 2006–07 and (c) 2007–08 in (i) sixth form colleges, (ii) general further education and tertiary colleges and (iii) other colleges for (A) Level 1, (B) Level 2, (C) Level 3 and (D) Level 4 qualifications. [33347]

Bill Rammell: My Department allocates funds for post-16 education in school 6th forms and further education colleges to the Learning and Skills Council (LSC) which is the planning and funding body for post-16 education and training in England.

For school 6th forms the LSC allocated £1.6 billion in 2005/06 to local authorities in England. A precise breakdown by level of qualification is not available but it is estimated that 90 per cent. of provision is at Level 3. Allocations for 2006/07 and 2007/08 have not yet been made.

For Further Education the LSC distributes funds regionally for each academic year. LSC Regions and local offices allocate funds to providers based on locally-agreed provider development plans, which are designed to reflect Government policy, priorities and targets. These funds are allocated in blocks to reflect activity supporting '16–18' and '19+' learners. There is considerable local flexibility to move funds around within the region each year and so it is not possible to say at this stage how those funds will eventually be used to support learning at each 'Level'. However, information (from the Individualised Learner Record') shows that for the most recently completed academic year, 2004/05, '16–18' funds were used in the following way:

Use of Further Education funds 2004/05

	sub level 2	Level 2	Level 3	Level 4 +	£ Total
GFEC	28,127,000	26,625,000	47,896,000	1,336,000	103,984,000
Sixth Form Colleges	529,781,000	486,687,000	805,083,000	23,933,000	1,845,484,000
Other FE providers[1]	29,360,000	66,150,000	441,719,000	3,982,000	541,211,000
Total	587,268,000	579,462,000	1,294,698,000	29,251,000	2,490,679,000

Minimum standards of learner success (based on achievement and retention) for colleges and work based learning providers.

Education maintenance allowances designed to encourage young people to stay in learning by offering up to £30 per week payments for remaining at school or college.Payments and bonuses are stopped for absenteeism.

Adult Learning Grant (ALG) which is payable on the basis of satisfactory attendance at a course of learning, with the allowance being withdrawn if people do not attend.

School Location

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many primary age pupils are obliged to travel more than three miles to school; and how many did so in the school year before key stage 1 and 2 classes were limited to 30. [34130]

Jacqui Smith: The information available has been provided in the following table.

Number of pupils residing more than three miles[1] from the primary[2] school they attend—England

	Number and percentage
2002
Number	124,439
Percentage	3.6
2005

It is not possible to address the second part of the question because information of this type has only been available from the Annual School Census since 2002.

School Non-attenders

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 7 November 2005, Official Report, column 127W, on school non-attenders, what mechanisms are in place to ensure that (a) 16 to 19 year olds and (b) adults on publicly funded courses do not absent themselves from those courses. [31257]

Bill Rammell: Attendance in learning over the age of 16 is voluntary. However our aim is that all young people should stay in learning up to age 19, and continue in learning throughout life, to secure the skills that they, and the economy, need. Participation and attendance in post-16 education and training depends on the quality, relevance, effectiveness and perceived value of the provision and outcomes for each learner alongside sound information, advice, guidance and pastoral care.

Improved retention and attainment is underpinned by general funding principles and individual incentives and sanctions-to earn free funding for leavers, an institution must ensure that they both complete the course and achieve their qualification aims. Among the incentives and sanctions are:

School Toilets

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) why the regulations governing school toilets in day and residential schools are different; [34822]

(2) what work the Department's School Building and Design Unit has undertaken to review the regulations governing toilets in day schools; [34825]

(3) what plans she has to review the regulations governing the design and maintenance of day school toilets to take account of her plans for extended schools. [34826]

Jacqui Smith: The Education (School Premises) Regulations 1999 recognise the different needs of pupils in day and residential schools. A greater provision is required in the latter because washroom facilities must be located near to sleeping accommodation, with easy access, in addition to the facilities required convenient to teaching accommodation. Some of the daytime provision may count towards that required for boarders if it is in an appropriate location and offers good access to residential pupils.

The regulations do not specify the number of toilets that should be provided for staff and visitors, but do state that they should be separate from those provided for pupils. However, the Department's design team is producing new design guidance for extended schools. This does say that additional facilities may be needed to cope with a wider range of adult and child users, and gives the example of additional adult toilets being needed in a primary school. This should be published early in 2006. A review of the Education (School Premises) Regulations 1999 has not been undertaken and is not currently planned.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment she has made of the impact of the level of toilet provision in schools on the implementation of her policy on encouraging children to drink water. [34870]

Jacqui Smith: The requirements for toilet provision in schools are set out in the Education (School Premises) Regulations 1999. A review of these requirements has not been undertaken and is not currently planned.

Schools Commissioner

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many staff will be employed by the Schools Commissioner; and what the Commissioner's annual budget will be. [35144]

Jacqui Smith: The Schools Commissioner will be a senior civil servant within the Department for Education and Skills. We envisage that the Schools Commissioner will be supported by existing DfES staff engaged in work connected with the Commissioner's areas of responsibility. The costs of the Commissioner will be met from existing DfES running cost and programme resources.

Science

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps she is taking to encourage more students to study science at advanced level. [33943]

Jacqui Smith: The Government 10-year Science and Innovation Investment Framework outlines our plans to increase the number of young people choosing to study science, engineering and technology at A-level. We are taking this forward by improving teaching and learning through all school phases by:

introducing a new programme of study for science at key stage 4, leading to new GCSEs. The new programme maintains the breadth, depth and challenge of the current curriculum, while catering for a wide range of students' interests and aptitudes which will ensure that the science taught in schools inspires learners to pursue further study; reviewing science at key stage 3, especially in relation to the new science programme at key stage 4;

providing innovative and exciting continuing professional development for teachers and technicians through the national network of Science Learning Centres; improving teacher recruitment in science by increasing the value of the teacher training bursaries for science graduates and 'golden hellos' for new science teachers.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) GCSE and (b) A level entries there were in science subjects from each specialist science school in each of the last 10 years, including years before the school acquired specialist status. [33057]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested is not readily available and can only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Service Schools

Alison Seabeck: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what discussions her Department has had with the Ministry of Defence on the publication of the key stage results of children of service personnel who transfer from service schools to the state sector. [34961]

Jacqui Smith: No discussions have taken place between my Department and the Ministry of Defence regarding the publication of key stage results of children of service personnel who transfer from service schools to the state sector.

Sexual Health (Sheffield)

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many NHS establishments in Sheffield declined to participate in the "Working Together to Safeguard Children" Protocols pilot on sexual health. [28652]

Mr. Byrne: I have been asked to reply.

There has not been a pilot of "Working Together to Safeguard Children" protocols in Sheffield.

Supply Teachers

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many supply teachers are on the register; and how many were on the register in each of the past five years. [34133]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested is not held centrally.

Schools have various ways of sourcing supply teachers depending on local conditions. They may maintain their own list, or use a local authority register or an independent agency.

Sweets

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what guidance she has issued to schools on teachers using sweets to reward pupils' good behaviour or work. [34487]

Jacqui Smith: Our advice on whole school behaviour policy, published as part of the Secondary National Strategy tool kit for schools, does not recommend the use of sweets as a reward. It states:

> 'A more formal reward system of credits, merits and prizes can be used to recognise and congratulate all pupils when they set good examples or show improvement in their own behaviour or attendance. Letters to parents and carers and special privileges are among many particularly effective ways of demonstrating praise for good behaviour'.

Schools themselves are in the best position to choose the exact form of reward that positive behaviour merits.

Teacher Recruitment

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent assessment she has made of the impact of the local cost of living on teacher recruitment and retention. [34230]

Jacqui Smith: Recruitment and retention strategies continue to have a positive impact on the number of teachers in England, including London and the south east where cost of living and vacancy rates have always been higher. The latest published figures show a continuing decrease in the number of teachers leaving the profession, while the numbers joining is continuing to grow. In January 2005, 431,900 full-time equivalent regular teachers were employed in maintained schools in England, over 4,000 more than the same time last year.

Telecommunications Masts

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether she plans to change departmental guidance to schools on objections that schools may raise in connection with telecommunications masts. [34055]

Jacqui Smith: My Department has not issued any guidance to schools in relation to objections that schools may raise in connection with telecommunications masts. We are reviewing information on our Teachernet website about the Stewart Report, the Government response to it, and the Mobile Operators' Association advice, to see if we want to update any of this.

Water Coolers

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans she has to audit the availability of mains-linked water coolers in schools; and if she will make a statement. [34824]

Jacqui Smith: The Department does not have any plans to audit water coolers in schools. Regulation 22 of the Education (School Premises) Regulations 1999 requires that every maintained school shall have a wholesome supply of water for domestic purposes, including a supply of drinking water. The regulation does not specify how drinking water should be provided for pupils. However, in our guidance note "Standards for School Premises" (DFEE 0029/2000), we say that those responsible should consider the pattern of demand within schools, which can be concentrated within quite short breaks.

Yellow School Buses

Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent discussions she has held with the Secretary of State for Transport with regard to yellow school buses. [33880]

Jacqui Smith: The Secretary of State for Education and Skills has not held any discussions with the Secretary of State for Transport on the subject of yellow buses in recent months. However, my Department and the Department for Transport share the view that well-designed yellow bus schemes have the potential to reduce car dependency for journeys to school and the traffic congestion that results from this. We would anticipate that, subject to the will of Parliament, some local authorities might include proposals for yellow bus provision in their bids for the pathfinder schemes envisaged by the recent White Paper—Higher Standards, Better Schools for All.

WALES

Departmental Tendering Policy

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what his policy is on including (a) ethical and (b) environmental factors in tenders for services. [33344]

Mr. Hain: In June 2003 the Wales Office became a separate entity within the Department for Constitutional Affairs (DCA) and shares their policies in line with guidance set by the EU Community law.

The Department acquires contracts in accordance with the general principles of EU Community law, which are non-discrimination, equal treatment, transparency, proportionality, and mutual recognition.

All Environment factors in contracts are considered on a case by case basis relative to the subject matter of the contract, and the requirements of EU Community law.

Freedom of Information

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many Freedom of Information applications his Department has received; how many have taken more than 20 days to process; and how many of these gave rise to complaints about the time taken. [31229]

Mr. Hain: Statistics about requests received under the Freedom of Information Act are published by the Department of Constitutional Affairs on a quarterly basis. In the first six months since January 2005 (when the Act came into force) the figures show that the Wales Office received 49 requests. 42 were answered within the 20 day deadline and four were answered within an agreed extended deadline.

The Wales Office has not received any complaints about the timeliness of responses to Freedom of Information requests.

Winter Deaths

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with his colleagues in the Cabinet and the Welsh Assembly regarding excess winter deaths of those aged over 65 years in Wales. [32086]

Mr. Hain: I regularly meet with the Assembly Ministers to discuss a range of issues such as tackling excess winter deaths of those over 65 in Wales.

The Welsh Assembly Government has policies and actions in place to reduce the impact of colder winter weather on the health of older people. For instance, it funds the Home Energy Efficiency Scheme, which provides the installation of central heating in homes, and runs the annual 'Keep Well This Winter' campaign. This campaign encourages older people to take extra measures to look after their health during the winter such as having the flu vaccination, eating properly and taking appropriate exercise, and by keeping warm and safe.

In addition, in winter 2004–05 over 464,000 households in Wales benefited from winter fuel payments of at least £200. Out of these households, 110,000 with someone aged over 80 received £300 winter fuel payment.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Airspace (Extraordinary Rendition)

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what (a) oral and (b) written representations he has made to his US counterpart on behalf of the European Union regarding the use of EU airspace for extraordinary rendition flights of those accused of terrorist activities; and if he will make a statement. [33707]

Ian Pearson: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 5 December 2005 (UIN 33818).

Burma

Mr. Binley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his policy is towards resolution RC-B6–0592/2005 of the European Parliament of 17 November on Burma; and if he will make a statement. [33401]

Ian Pearson: We agree with the European Parliament's conclusion in resolution RC-B6–0592/2005 that the UN has a vital role to play in Burma. We strongly support the UN Secretary General's efforts to promote national reconciliation and democratisation in Burma, and agree with his most recent 'good offices' report of 10 October. Human rights violations have been highlighted in successive highly critical UK co-sponsored UN resolutions on Burma, most recently at the UN General Assembly in November. These issues remain a focus for the UN Special Rapporteur for Human Rights in Burma, Professor Sergio Pinheiro, and the UN Secretary General's special envoy to Burma, Tan Sri Razali Ismail, whom we urge the State Peace and Development Council (SPDC) to allow to return to Burma.

We fully support US efforts to secure discussion of Burma by the UN Security Council. We believe that such a discussion, including covering the human rights situation, would increase the pressure on the Burmese regime to effect genuine change. It would send a powerful signal to the Burmese leadership that the UN Security Council—the body with primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security—is concerned about the situation in Burma.

We believe that it is essential for the SPDC to enter into a constructive dialogue with all legitimate representative bodies, including Daw Aung San Suu Kyi and the National League for Democracy, and the ethnic groups to promote national reconciliation.

We share the European Parliament's concerns about the continuing detention of Daw Aung San Suu Kyi. We have repeatedly called for her immediate release and that of all political prisoners in Burma, most recently in a statement on behalf of the European Union on 28 November.

Ethiopia/Eritrea

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps the Government are planning to take to respond to the tension between Ethiopia and Eritrea; and what action it plans to take to support the United Nations Security Council resolution imposing economic sanctions on the two nations if they do not return to the conditions of the peace plan signed in 2000. [33795]

Ian Pearson: We remain concerned at the continuing tensions between Ethiopia and Eritrea over their disputed border. We continue to underline to both parties that there must be no return to war; that the decision of the Boundary Commission is final and binding, and must be implemented; and that they should engage in dialogue on all the issues that divide them.

United Nations Security Council Resolution 1640 (2005) allows Ethiopia and Eritrea 30 days to respond to the demands made of them in the resolution to withdraw troops from the border area, and for Eritrea to lift the ban on UN helicopter flights. After that period, the Security Council will consider imposing sanctions in the form of an arms embargo. We will continue to assess how an arms embargo would affect the situation, including the wider impact of an embargo, as the situation develops. We are working closely with UN and Security Council partners to find a way forward for this problem. The use of economic sanctions has not been specifically raised by Security Council members and we believe this action is unlikely to be proposed.

European Court of Human Rights

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what sanctions can be employed to ensure member states of the Council of Europe implement the judgments of the European Court of Human Rights. [33723]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: As I said in my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Pendle (Mr. Prentice), on 14 October 2005, Official Report, column 642W, there are several courses of action available to the Council of Europe.

The Council of Europe's Committee of Ministers can adopt interim resolutions expressing concern with respect to the slow or non-execution of a judgment. Peer pressure is increased to encourage rapid compliance with the court's judgment. In the vast majority of cases, this is sufficient to ensure compliance.

At the request of the Committee of Ministers, the Chairman in Office can write to or hold meetings with the Minister of Foreign Affairs of the respondent state.

The ultimate measure available to the Committee of Ministers is recourse to article 8 of the Council of Europe's statute: suspension of voting rights in the Committee of Ministers, or even expulsion from the organisation. But this is an extreme measure, which would prove counter-productive in most cases.

In order to strengthen the measures available, protocol 14 to the European Convention on Human Rights empowers the Committee of Ministers to bring infringement proceedings in the European Court of Human Rights against a state that refuses to abide by a judgment. We are urging all member states of the Council of Europe to ratify the protocol as soon as possible, as the UK has done, so that it can enter into force.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the member countries of the Council of Europe which are failing to comply with decisions of the European Court of Human Rights; and if he will make a statement on the UK Government's policy in respect of such failure to comply. [33725]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The Council of Europe's Committee of Ministers is currently supervising the execution of judgments against 41 member states of the Council of Europe. They are:

Albania,
Andorra,
Austria,
Belgium,
Bulgaria,
Croatia,
Cyprus,
Czech Republic,
Denmark,
Estonia,
Finland,
France,
Georgia,
Germany,
Greece,
Hungary,
Iceland,
Ireland,
Italy,
Latvia,
Liechtenstein,
Lithuania,
Luxembourg,
Malta,
Moldova,
The Netherlands,
Poland,
Portugal,
Romania,
Russia,
San Marino,
Serbia and Montenegro,
Slovakia,
Slovenia,
Spain,
Sweden,
Switzerland,
the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia,
Turkey,
Ukraine and the United Kingdom.

Responsibility for supervising the execution of judgments lies with the Committee of Ministers of the Council of Europe, and the UK works through the Committee of Ministers (where the UK is represented) to encourage full implementation of the court's judgments.

Former Residence (Cape Town)

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) whether the former residence of the British high commissioner in Cape Town is for sale; [34935]

(2) what the open market value is of the former residence of the British high commissioner at Upper Hillwood Road, Bishopscourt, Cape Town; [34991]

(3) what the total cost was of the repair and refurbishment of the Cape Town residence of the British high commissioner after the fire in 1999; and what proportion of the cost was met by (a) the high commission, (b) the Government and (c) third parties. [34992]

Ian Pearson: The Cape Town Residence of the British high commissioner is not in the sales programme. The open market value of the property when it was last valued in June 2005 was £1.57 million (Rand 19 million). The final account value for repair and refurnishing the Residence after the 1999 fire amounted to some £700,000. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office successfully claimed against third parties involved, receiving some £530,000 in compensation.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his Department's rules are for the sale of former residences of British high commissioners overseas; and if he will make a statement. [34993]

Ian Pearson: I refer the hon. Member to the discussion of estate issues in the Government's response to the Foreign Affairs Committee report on the Foreign and Commonwealth Office Annual Report 2003-04 (Cm 6415), which is available in the Library of the House. Where properties are under-performing or unsuitable, selling and reinvesting is part of normal estate business.

Morocco-Spain Tunnel

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what funding is being provided by the EU to build a tunnel between Morocco and Spain; and if he will make a statement. [35300]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: No EU funding has been allocated to this project.

UK Overseas Posts (Disabled Access)

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate he has made of the cost of providing access for disabled people to all UK overseas posts. [34373]

Ian Pearson: Information in the form requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. In all new Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) building projects, provision is made in the overall budget to ensure full accessibility to people with disabilities, both members of the public and FCO staff. In major refurbishment of existing buildings, improvements to access are made whenever possible, and provision made in the overall budget.

In addition, overseas posts are aware of their responsibilities under the Disability Discrimination Act Part III and have been instructed to review disabled access, make information about accessibility available and, where possible, make improvements. Where access is limited, posts seek alternative ways of providing accessible services.

West Papua

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking to satisfy himself of the appropriate use of British-made arms equipment in West Papua; and if he will end the granting of licences for arms exports to Indonesia. [34176]

Ian Pearson: We follow up any credible allegations that British supplied military equipment has been used for human rights abuses. All export licence applications, including those for Indonesia, are rigorously assessed on a case by case basis against the Consolidated EU and National Arms Export Licensing Criteria taking account of the circumstances prevailing at the time.

World Trade Organisation

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what role he will play in the World Trade Organisations talks in Hong Kong. [33888]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary will not attend the World Trade Organisation Ministerial Conference in Hong Kong (13–18 December). He will be at the European Council in Brussels on 15 and 16 December.

The UK delegation at Hong Kong will be led by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (Alan Johnson), whose Department leads on trade issues within the Government. He will be accompanied by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (Margaret Beckett), my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for International Development (Hilary Benn) and my hon. Friend the Minister for Trade (Ian Pearson). Representatives from a number of Select Committees of the House, will be part of the UK delegation. The Confederation of British Industry, the Trades Union Congress and development non governmental organisations will also be represented.

Zirconium Silicate (Iran)

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when his Department became aware that the Bulgarian authorities at the beginning of September had intercepted a truck travelling from the UK to Iran containing zirconium silicate; when other United Kingdom authorities were alerted to this event; what the subsequent involvement of his Department in the investigation was; and if he will make a statement. [34699]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The truck was stopped on 31 August by the Bulgarian authorities. This was reported in the Bulgarian press on 2 September. Our embassy in Sofia informed the relevant authorities in London on 7 September. We arranged for the carrying out of necessary checks and confirmed on 28 October that the cargo was legitimate. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office therefore had no further involvement.

Bridget Prentice: The Department currently has one employee currently on extended sick leave who is also within one year of normal retirement age. The Department is committed to managing all sickness absence promptly and effectively, including absences of those near to normal retirement age, and to putting in place the recommendations of the recently published "Managing Sickness Absence in the Public Sector" to ensure that all such absence management is in line with current guidance and best practice.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Corporacion Fischel

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) whether during the period in which the Commonwealth Development Corporation had a shareholding in Corporacion Fischel Corporacion Fischel entered into an agreement with the Finnish company Instrumentarium to supply medical equipment to Costa Rica. [35298]

(2) whether the company O. Fischel R. was a controlled subsidiary of Corporacion Fischel during the period in which the Commonwealth Development Corporation had a shareholding in Corporacion Fischel. [35299]

Hilary Benn: Corporacion Fischel did not enter into an agreement with Instrumentarium during the period in which the Commonwealth Development Corporation (CDC) had a shareholding in Corporacion Fischel.

The CDC is aware of two companies called O. Fischel R: one Costa Rican; the other Panamanian. The Costa Rican company was a controlled subsidiary of Corporacion Fischel, in which the CDC had a shareholding. The Panamanian company had no connection with Corporacion Fischel.

Departmental Staff

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many staff in his Department have been relocated into London and the South East in each of the last five years for which records are available. [31758]

Mr. Thomas: This information is not held centrally. DFID has two headquarters offices in London and in East Kilbride, and offices in some 67 locations overseas. It is normal for a number of UK based staff to transfer between offices each year, mainly between headquarters and overseas. We do not hold a central record of these postings. We have not however, transferred any jobs into our London headquarters. Our relocation plans are in keeping with Government policy with 85 posts being relocated to our office in East Kilbride over the periods 2004–05 and 2005–06.

HIV/AIDS

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what action he is taking to ensure that International Monetary Fund conditions allow increases in spending of money provided by the IMF on health in countries fighting HIV/AIDS. [34783]

Mr. Thomas: DFID is working with the International Monetary Fund (IMF) and other donors to improve the predictability of aid flows, the effectiveness of IMF signalling, and countries own expenditure management capacity. This will ensure that countries are better able to plan for increased spending in health and other key sectors identified in their Poverty Reduction Strategies, while maintaining the fiscal sustainability and macroeconomic stability which are essential to long term growth and poverty reduction.

DFID has supported a series of High Level Meetings on the health related Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) over the past 18 months. These meetings have brought together senior representatives of Ministries of Health and Finance from developing countries, donors and international organisations including the World Bank and the IMF. The meetings have looked to develop solutions to the systematic barriers to faster progress in realising the MDGs.

The IMF's focus is appropriately, on maintaining fiscal sustainability and overall macroeconomic stability, as an essential underpinning to planned Government programmes and economic growth. Within these objectives, DFID has worked with the IMF on the issue of creating 'fiscal space'—that is increasing the financial scope for countries to expand their allocations to provide critical services such as health and HIV/AIDS services. The IMF has led much of this work.

The UK has also worked with the IMF to improve its role in 'signalling' and donor co-ordination. The unpredictability of future aid flows from donors is a significant constraint on countries' ability to plan future spending, creating uncertainty about both overall budgets, and about the availability of resources to finance individual programmes, including in the health sector. The IMF has a role to play in supporting countries' own budget processes, and in working with donors to improve the predictability of their aid.

The UK is pushing for greater predictability and less volatility of aid and longer-term financial commitments. This would provide confidence to Ministries of Finance to establish more ambitious financial frameworks and take on the long term recurrent costs associated with, for example, scaling up comprehensive HIV/responses. Malawi is a good example where the IMF has worked effectively with the Ministry of Finance to support the implementation of an ambitious emergency human resource programme for health.

Mr. Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps his Department has taken over the last 12 months to ensure a long-term supply of affordable paediatric drugs for HIV in developing countries; what discussions he has had with the pharmaceutical industry on this; and if he will make a statement. [35204]

Mr. Thomas: The UK Government, led by DFID, has done a great deal of work to increase access to medicines for people in developing countries, including for children.

In 2004 we published the UK Government's policy and plans on increasing access to medicines, which focused on: support to developing countries to build health services; support to countries to understand and appropriately use the flexibilities contained in the World Trade Organisation (WTO) Trade Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights (TRIPS) agreement that governs intellectual property rights; new work to increase investment in research and development (R and D) for diseases affecting developing countries; and direct engagement with the pharmaceutical industry to increase access. In DFID's 2004 HIV and AIDS Treatment and Care Policy, we made a commitment to focus on the needs of children, women and the poor.

In March of this year we published jointly with the Department of Health (DH) and Department for Trade and Industry (DTI) a 'good practice' framework, building on good practice in the pharmaceutical industry and the work of the World Health Organisation, the (WHO) and others to set out recommended actions companies could take around pricing, Research and Development investments and how they work in developing countries, to help increase access to medicines. The framework had clear recommendations around the importance of ensuring medicines, including ARVs, were available in appropriate paediatric formulations. In the context of this work, DFID has convened a series of meetings with the industry, at which this issue has been addressed.

The UK also played a key role in the 30 August 2003 decision by the WTO TRIPS Council to allow developing countries with no pharmaceutical industry of their own to import copies of patented medicines under compulsory licence in accordance with the provisions of the decision. This historic decision will help developing countries to negotiate with drug producers, and help to maintain access to cheaper copies, including for paediatric formulations where they exist.

The UK has also taken a lead internationally to support more research into treatments and vaccines for diseases affecting developing countries, including for children. In the UK's AIDS strategy "Taking Action" (2004) the UK committed to increase our support for research into: microbicides; treatments and new technologies for the poor, women and young people including children; and the social, economic and cultural impact of AIDS.

DFID continues to support Product Development Public Private Partnerships (PDPs) for the development of HIV vaccines. DFID has also funded research on the appropriate use of existing medicines in developing country settings including, clinical trials demonstrating the efficacy of co-trimoxazole prophylaxis in reducing mortality among children, and co-funding trials with the Medical Research Council (MRC) accelerating the development and evaluation of ARV treatment protocols that are simple to use, but remain safe, effective and relevant to the needs of people with HIV and AIDS, including women and children, in resource poor settings.

More does need to be done to ensure a long-term supply of affordable paediatric drugs for the treatment of HIV and AIDS in developing countries. We will therefore continue our work with the pharmaceutical industry, to support appropriate use of TRIPS and to increase R and D investment, and work to ensure that children are able to access the drugs they need in the formulations they need.

Montserrat

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what plans his Department has to re-house residents displaced by the volcanic activity in the south of the island of Montserrat. [33676]

Mr. Thomas: Between 1997 and 2001, DFID funded over 1,000 housing units in Montserrat for displaced residents. Further housing assistance, agreed with the Government of Montserrat (GoM) in October 2001, focused on provision of 200 serviced residential lots, sheltered housing for the elderly and mentally ill, a self-build materials grant scheme for poorer households, and refurbishment of temporary housing. Additional support, including the preparation of serviced lots and the construction of 60 houses, is being funded by the European Union.

Most displaced residents, who remained on the island, now have satisfactory accommodation. However, some still live in sub-standard conditions; and inadequate access to permanent housing is cited as one of the major factors deterring displaced Montserratians overseas from returning.

DFID officials held talks in Montserrat in November about the outstanding needs, especially improving housing for the most vulnerable and those still living in shelters. We will be reviewing our assistance in the light of those discussions.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what measures have been taken to reduce the impact of future eruptions from the Soufriere Hills volcano on development plans in Montserrat. [33677]

Mr. Thomas: Volcanic activity on Montserrat is monitored on a day to day basis by the staff of the Montserrat Volcano Observatory, which is run under contract by the British Geological Survey. Their reports are analysed at regular intervals by a Scientific Advisory Committee. The resulting information and advice is conveyed to the Governor and the Montserrat Government, as well as to residents, visitors and other interested groups. It is fully taken into account in all development plans. The most obvious outcome has been the focusing of development activities in the 'safe zone' in the north of the island.

Turks and Caicos Islands

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps his Department is taking to control the environmental impact of the tourist developments occurring on the Turks and Caicos islands. [33758]

Mr. Thomas: The responsibility for such issues rests with the Turks and Caicos Island authorities. Between 2001 and March 2005, however, we funded an Environmental Adviser to the Protected Areas Department of the Turks and Caicos Islands Government. His responsibilities included provision of advice on tourism development control and the formulation of policies relating specifically to development activities within protected areas. The Turks and Caicos Islands graduated from the need for UK development assistance in March of this year.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Absenteeism

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps he is taking to reduce absenteeism in his Department. [24668]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department has taken a range of steps in line with the recommendations in the report from the Ministerial Task Force for Health, Safety and Productivity, "Managing Sickness Absence in the Public Sector", which was published in November 2004. These include:

The policies for dealing with sickness absence were revised and re-launched earlier this year;

Progress in reducing the levels of absence feature strongly in management discussions about performance;

A new IT system was introduced which provides managers with quicker and better data about absence levels, and action being taken;

Through use of the HSE's stress management standards, the Department is addressing the causes of stress;

A pilot is being run to test whether being more flexible in giving time off at short notice reduces the level of sickness absence;

We are exploring the scope for using incentives to reward good attendance.

Air Miles

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many air miles were accrued by ministerial travel in 2004–05, broken down by Minister; how many were (a) foregone and (b) donated to charity, broken down by charity; and whether air miles accrued by officials were required to be (i) foregone and (ii) given to charity. [17325]

Mrs. McGuire: Ministerial travel is conducted in accordance with the Ministerial Code and Travel by Ministers. I can confirm that no air miles were accrued, foregone or donated to charity through ministerial travel by this department in 2004–2005.

The Department's Travel and Subsistence Guidance is clear that any air miles accrued by officials should be used solely against future business travel wherever possible. However the vast majority of our business travel is booked through a third- party contract and no air miles are accrued through this service.

Benefit Claimants (Medical Examination)

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what factors underlay his decision to propose changes to the system of medical examination for benefit claimants; and if he will make a statement. [29335]

Mrs. McGuire: A range of proposals are still under consideration to ensure that the process of assessment provides the most appropriate outcome for benefit claimants.

Details of our proposals for welfare reform will be published in the forthcoming Green Paper.

Child Support

Jo Swinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the number of Child Support Agency cases which are being handled where the non-resident parent has yet to be assessed because their employer is being traced. [21106]

Mr. Plaskitt: The ability to trace an employer does not in itself prevent a calculation or assessment from being made. This is because, in terms of calculating maintenance payments, the onus is on the non-resident parent to provide the Agency with verification of earnings.

Where this does not happen, a default maintenance decision (for new scheme cases) or an interim maintenance assessment (for old scheme cases) may be imposed. If the non-resident parent does not comply in paying this, the Agency will attempt to trace the employer so that a Deduction from Earnings Order can be considered.

We do not currently have management information which records the volume of such trace work undertaken.

In the event that the Agency is unable to verify earnings or trace an employer, the default maintenance decision or interim maintenance assessment will remain in effect and the Agency will consider alternative methods for enforcing the maintenance owed.

Consultants

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list departmental projects conducted by consultants in each year since 2000; what the cost was in each case; and what the total cost of employing consultants was in each year. [29094]

Margaret Hodge: Information on departmental projects conducted by consultants in each year since 2000 and the costs in each case is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate costs.

The total cost of employing consultants in 2000–01 is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate costs.

The total cost of employing consultants in each year for the remaining years is as follows.

£ million

	Management consultancy	IT consultancy
2001–02	23.79	70.67
2002–03	47.57	93.47
2003–04	223.35	83.37
2004–05	98.64	69.73

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps his Department takes to ensure that consultancies do not claim excessive expenses while working for the Department and its agencies. [29095]

Margaret Hodge: Expenses claims for consultants engaged by the Department are actively managed and are based upon the same arrangements as those of civil servants.

Consultants/Special Advisers

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many (a) consultants and (b) special advisers were employed by his Department in each year since 1997; what the cost of each was in each year; and if he will make a statement. [27409]

Margaret Hodge: Consultants are not employed by this Department but are engaged under contractual arrangements. We are unable to provide an answer to how many consultants were engaged by this Department in each year since 1997 without incurring disproportionate cost.

The cost to the Department of consultants engaged in each year is given in the table. Please note DWP was formed in June 2001, therefore there is no expenditure for this Department prior to this date.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what training in (a) literacy and (b) numeracy is offered to employees of his Department. [21124]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department for Work and Pensions (DWP) makes a number of learning resources available to meet the work-related literacy and numeracy needs of its staff. These resources address specific business needs such as effective briefing and written communication with customers and are provided either as face-to-face courses or as blended learning solutions. All staff have a Personal Development Plan which is reviewed twice yearly with their manager and any development needs, including literacy and numeracy needs, are identified and addressed.

In addition, DWP has entered into a partnership with its main trade union, the Public and Commercial Services Union (PCS), to address the basic literacy and numeracy needs of its staff. Since March 2004 this has been the main focus of activity of the union learning representative (ULR) network that has been established within DWP.

ULRs encourage staff to assess their skills and support them to address any learning need they identify through a local college or Learndirect. The DWP is committed to help staff by providing any necessary time off to attend learning designed to bring their skills up to level 2 of the national qualifications framework.

The PCS has made provision for staff at our offices in Newcastle and Leeds to access learning to level 2 at their workplace. This type of internal provision is likely to increase as more staff assess their basic skills using an online diagnostic tool that will be available to them in the new year.

Gershon Review

Mr. Francois: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what progress has been made, in terms of (a) headcount reductions and (b) cost savings, in achieving the efficiency objectives set for the Department by the Gershon review. [21292]

Mrs. McGuire: Progress was reported in Budget 2005 and in the departmental annual reports. Further progress will be reported in the autumn performance reports and at aggregate level in the pre-Budget report.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many full-time equivalent employee reductions there have been in his Department as a result of the Gershon review; what cost savings relating to IT projects were achieved; what value of efficiency savings (a) were achieved in 2004–05 and (b) are expected to be achieved in 2005–06; and if he will make a statement. [24333]

Mrs. McGuire [holding answer 3 November 2005]: Staffing within the Department at the end of September 2005 was 116,417 full-time equivalents, an overall reduction in headcount of 14,215. In order to meet the efficiency challenge, the Department has implemented business change programmes and projects that are enabled by changes to our IT systems. These programmes and projects have provided savings of around £150 million for 2004–05. The Department has an efficiency target for 2007–08 but no intermediate target for 2005–06.

Edward Miliband: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many incapacity benefit claimants there are in Doncaster, North; how many claimants there were in each year since 1984; and what proportion of the working age population this represented in each year. [29336]

Mrs. McGuire: The information is not available in the format requested. A breakdown of figures by parliamentary constituency is not available prior to 1997. Working-age population estimates are not available by parliamentary constituency. Figures broken down by local authorities are available from 1995 together with working-age population estimates.

The available information is in the tables.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many claimants of incapacity benefit were medically examined in each year since 1997 [29337]

(2) how many applicants for incapacity benefit (a) were medically examined as part of their claim and (b) received benefit in each year since 1997. [29338]

Mrs. McGuire: The total number of claimants of incapacity benefit and severe disablement allowance who were medically examined is shown in the following table.

	Exams
September 1999 to August 2000	397,284
September 2000 to August 2001	402,302
September 2001 to August 2002	509,831
September 2002 to August 2003	524,894
September 2003 to August 2004	467,256
September 2004 to August 2005	483,084

Notes:
1. Figures for the number of medical examinations performed are only available for complete years from September 1999.
2. Volumes include severe disablement allowance cases which cannot be identified separately.

Initial awards of benefit are normally made on the basis of medical evidence from a GP rather than a medical examination. Medical examinations take place at a later date, according to the person's condition and likely duration of incapacity, to decide whether or not they remain incapable of work and whether or not benefit can continue. Income support may continue for other reasons after a person has been found to be no longer incapable of work.

Information about how many of the people examined were receiving benefits is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Independent Living Taskforce

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when the Independent Living Task Force will be established; whether it will include expertise on the provision of housing for disabled people in its membership; what its terms of reference will be; and if he will make a statement. [29027]

Mrs. McGuire: The Prime Minister's strategy unit report "Improving the Life Chances of Disabled People", a copy of which is in the Library, recommended a Task Force should be established by December 2005. We are now planning to establish a Task Force for independent living by spring 2006. This has enabled us to focus immediate activity on setting up an office for disability issues and selecting an advisory group to inform the development of a national forum for organisations of disabled people. The membership and terms of reference of the Task Force will be announced when it is established.

Jobcentre Plus

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what provision is made for (a) notification and (b) consultation before the closure of a Jobcentre Plus office. [28694]

Margaret Hodge: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 6 December 2005:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question regarding notification and consultation on office closures. This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

All office closures are currently managed as part of the rollout of the new Jobcentre Plus service. Consultation with local stakeholders is an integral part of the planning process for rollout. Local managers are required to share their early plans for new service delivery arrangements with a wide range of local stakeholders and the communication will describe any proposals for site closures. The manager replies to comments and views received during the consultation. We try to respond positively to alternative proposals, but we do have to operate an efficient service and I am sure you will understand that we are not always in a position to meet everyone's expectations.

Jobcentre Plus managers write again to inform stakeholders of firm plans, explaining if necessary why they may have changed from those initially circulated and will also explain the reasons behind the changes. Where a site is planned for closure, the manager will write again around six weeks before the site closes to remind stakeholders of the new arrangements being put in place.

The consultation process is a mandatory one that takes place before implementation activity progresses into a detailed design phase. The consultation exercise should be seen in the context of broader ongoing communications with stakeholders as part of our routine business.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many jobcentres including Jobcentre Plus offices, have (a) opened, (b) closed and (c) been relocated in each of the past three years. [28703]

Margaret Hodge: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 6 December 2005:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question regarding the number of offices we have opened, closed and re-located in the past three years. This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

The information on the number of offices that have opened and closed each year can be found in the table below.

Operational year (April to March)

	2002–03	2003–04	2004–05	2005[1]
Offices opened	157	223	115	112
Offices closed	[2]105		130	59

[1] From 1 April 2005 to 4 November 2005.
[2] A combined closure figure is given for 2002–03 and 2003–04 as it is not possible to accurately separate figures for these years.
[3] From 1 April 2002 to 31 March 2004.

The number of offices opened includes those sites we have refurbished and sites we have built from new or newly acquired. We do not have figures for the number of offices being relocated because we are closing Jobcentres and social security offices and introducing an entirely new Jobcentre Plus service supported by new processes and modern IT and telephony. Where a site is closing, our staff are likely to relocate to the new offices and contact centres. This has occurred in Daventry where the former Jobcentre has closed to be replaced by a Jobcentre Plus office in a new location.

The total number of offices opened to date to support delivery of the new service is 663. This total includes the original 56 Pathfinder offices opened in the autumn of 2001. Rollout will be substantially complete next summer. When complete, customers will have access to our service in around 1,000 locations. Around 880 of these will be Jobcentre Plus sites. The remainder will be locations where we deliver services in conjunction with partner organisations. This flexible approach to service delivery might, for example, include locating a touch-screen Jobpoint and telephone in Local Authority premises, or delivering information and advisory services through third party premises.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Anthony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what consultation with customers was undertaken prior to implementation of Jobcentre Plus's Customer Management System. [30355]

Margaret Hodge: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 6 December 2005:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question concerning what consultation with customers was undertaken prior to the implementation of the Customer Management System (CMS). This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

It may be helpful if I explain that CMS is an Information Technology system used by staff in our contact centres to gather information from customers when they make a claim to benefit. To make a claim the customer calls a contact centre where CMS is used. Contact centre staff ask the customer a series of questions to assess their potential eligibility to Jobcentre Plus benefits and then arrange to call the customer back at a mutually agreed time, to assist in completion of a claim form. This removes the need for customers to complete a lengthy claim form and instead allows the customer to provide information by telephone.

Jobcentre Plus did not consult with customers about the introduction of CMS as it is an IT system used by staff. However, we do conduct an annual customer satisfaction survey which canvasses the views of our customers across the full range of our services, including the channels we provide. The surveys give us a clear picture of how our services are perceived by customers, including how well delivered they are, and how easy or difficult they are to access. These provide baseline information on customer expectations and satisfaction and also provide the basis for tracking, over time, how customer perceptions of the service change as Jobcentre Plus implementation is rolled out, helping to drive the process of performance improvement.

The results of the 2004 survey were published on 30th September 2004. The 2005 survey commenced in September. In addition, representatives from Jobcentre Plus routinely speak to groups and have meetings with stakeholders in order to better understand customer perception.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Anthony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what the total cost has been of staff re-training associated with the implementation of Jobcentre Plus's Customer Management System to date; [30356]

(2) what the total cost has been of consultancy fees associated with the implementation of Jobcentre Plus's Customer Management System to date; [30357]

(3) what the cost has been of the Information Technology element of Jobcentre Plus's Customer Management System to date; and what the predicted final cost is; [30451]

(4) what the overall cost has been of implementing Jobcentre Plus's Customer Management System to date. [30452]

Margaret Hodge: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 6 December 2005:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions about the costs of implementing the Customer Management System (CMS). This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

The total cost of re-training staff associated with the implementation of Jobcentre Plus' CMS is £2.7m up to 31 October 2005.

You asked about the total consultancy fees associated with the implementation of CMS. To date the Agency has spent £2.5m on consultancy support for this specific project.

The IT element of CMS has incurred a cost to date of £205m against a predicted total cost of £289m for development and live running through to 2012/2013.

As at 31 October 2005, the overall total cost of implementing CMS is £243.6m.

I trust this information is helpful.

Mr. Anthony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the cost is of an (a) in-bound and (b) out-bound call to contact centres using Jobcentre Plus's Customer Management System; and what the cost of each was prior to the implementation of that system. [30358]

Margaret Hodge: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Leslie Strathie, dated 6 December 2005:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question concerning the cost of calls to contact centres using the Customer Management System (CMS). This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

It may be helpful if I first explain that to make a claim, the customer calls a contact centre. Contact centre staff ask the customer a series of questions to assess their potential eligibility to Jobcentre Plus benefits and then arrange to call the customer back at a mutually agreed time, to assist in completion of a claim form. This removes the need for customers to complete a lengthy claim form and instead allows the customer to provide information by telephone.

With regard to the cost of the initial call to all Jobcentre Plus contact centres, a local BT rate 0845 number is available. Customers using mobile telephones or other landline networks are charged at their network provider's normal tariff for 0845 calls. Customers can also use "warm phones" in local Jobcentre Plus offices to make this call free of charge.

The average length of the inbound call is 11 minutes. BT call prices for 0845 numbers vary dependant on the time the customer calls, and can range from 1p to 3p per minute. Based on this information the cost of the inbound call would be on average between 11p and 33p.

In order to gather all the information for the customers claim to benefit, the outbound call is made from the contact centre to the customer. There is no cost to the customer for this call.

Prior to implementation of CMS, customers wishing to claim social security benefits were required to either telephone a local office or visit an office to request a claim form. It would then be necessary for them to complete the form and return it by post or take it back to an office. If there was any need for further information, forms would be sent back to customers, who would then need to re-submit them, prior to their entitlement to benefit being established. Individual customer circumstances vary, as did standards of self-completion of forms and, therefore, the cost of this process for individual customers would vary greatly. It would particularly depend on the extent to which further information was needed following initial submission of claim forms.

I hope this is helpful.

Learndirect

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many cases have been referred by Jobcentre Plus to (a) learndirect and (b) private sector organisations for the supply of equivalent training; what proportion of each have (i) returned to employment and (ii) re-registered for jobseeker's allowance within 12 months; and what evaluation he has conducted of the effectiveness of learndirect courses in fitting people for employment. [33429]

Margaret Hodge: The information requested in not available.

At local level, Jobcentre Plus works in partnership with many different intermediary organisations that can help jobless people move from welfare to work and independence. University for Industry (Ufi) learndirect is one such organisation. Ufi learner surveys show that over 80 per cent. of jobseekers feel their learndirect learning will lead to a new job.

Literacy and Numeracy

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much his Department spent on in-house training on (a) literacy and (b) numeracy (i) in total and (ii) per head in each year since 2002. [23359]

Mrs. McGuire: The information requested is not available.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many employees in his Department requested training to improve their (a) literacy and (b) numeracy skills in each year since 2002. [23401]

Mrs. McGuire: To date some 1,435 staff have taken screening tests offered by Union Learning Representatives—ULRs. The information available does not allow us to identify how many of those screened requested help to improve their literacy or numeracy skills in particular.

Not all staff will approach ULRs for support. Learning needs may be identified during the course of the bi-annual review, for all staff, of their Personal Development Plan with their line manager. Figures are not available for the number of staff requesting help with their literacy or numeracy skills via this route.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps he is taking to promote uptake of the national tests in adult literacy and numeracy among employees in his Department. [23444]

Mrs. McGuire: The promotion of basic literacy and numeracy skills for all staff is integral to the Department for Work and Pensions' Skills Development Plan.

The plan assumes that 10 per cent. of staff who choose to address a literacy or numeracy need will go on to take the national tests and subsequently demonstrate their competency to level 2 on the national qualifications framework.

Since March 2004, basic literacy and numeracy has been the main focus of activity of the union learning representative (ULR) network that has been established within the Department. ULRs encourage staff to assess their skills and support them to address any learning need. Part of this process is to make staff aware of the availability of the national tests.

Where provision has been made for staff to access learning to level 2 at their workplace, the national tests are also available.

Lyons Review

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in his Department (a) were relocated in 2004–05 and (b) are expected to be relocated in 2005–06 as a result of the Lyons review of public sector relocation; to which locations they have been relocated; and if he will make a statement. [24640]

Mrs. McGuire: [holding answer 7 November 2005]: The basis of the department's relocation strategy resulting from the Lyons review is to relocate posts rather than people. Information on the number of posts relocated, and expected to be relocated, and the locations concerned is contained in the following tables.

Milton Keynes

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much funding was allocated by his Department to Milton Keynes for (a) capital projects and (b) revenue funding in each of the last five years. [23501]

Hemel Hempstead

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much funding was allocated by his Department to Hemel Hempstead constituency for (a) capital projects and (b) revenue funding in each of the last eight years. [25739]

Mrs. McGuire: The information is not available to the requested level of detail. I refer the right hon. Member to the answer provided by the Financial Secretary to the Treasury on 1 November 2005, Official Report, column 988W.

National Minimum Wage

Ms Katy Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many employees in his Department were affected by the rise in the national minimum wage on 1 October. [28971]

Mrs. McGuire: There are no staff within the Department for Work and Pensions who were affected by the rise in the national minimum wage.

New Deal

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on the introduction of quarterly interviews for lone parents of children over 14 years under the New Deal programme; how many departmental staff are involved in these interviews; and what funding has been allocated. [26817]

Margaret Hodge: Quarterly work focused interviews (WFIs) were introduced in October 2005 for lone parents claiming income support (IS) with a youngest child aged at least 14. For lone parents who remain on IS until their youngest child reaches 16, this will involve a series of up to eight work focused interviews over a two year period, which is six more than under previous arrangements. The interviews aim to help as many lone parents as possible move into work, or closer to the labour market, before their child reaches 16 by providing information, advice and guidance on work opportunities and the range of help on offer.

We estimate a total expenditure of approximately £4.3 million on this initiative during 2005–06, £0.7 million of which represents the cost of an anticipated increased participation in new deal for lone parents resulting from the WFIs.

Potentially all Jobcentre Plus lone parent advisers could be involved in delivering these quarterly work focussed interviews, but funding for the initiative is based on a planning assumption of the equivalent of an additional 65 full-time staff for the period October 2005 to March 2006 or 130 for a full year.

Note:

1. Expenditure and staffing figures are planning assumptions based on anticipated volumes of lone parents participating in quarterly WFIs.

Office for Disability Issues

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when the Office for Disability Issues will be established; and if he will make a statement. [29026]

Mrs. McGuire: The Office for Disability Issues was launched on 1 December. The Office for Disability Issues will provide a new cross-Government focus on disability, helping to ensure that Government Departments work together more effectively to deliver improved outcomes for disabled people.

Older Workers

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps his Department is taking to encourage employers to employ older workers. [32757]

Margaret Hodge: We are encouraging employers to employ older workers through our Age Positive campaign and with leading business organisations through the Be Ready guidance campaign.

Age Positive is using publications, websites, exhibitions and awards initiatives to promote good practice standards. Employers large and small are supporting Age Positive as Champions, sharing their positive employment practices, and reporting the business benefits of employing older workers as part of an age-diverse workforce-higher retention rates, lower absenteeism, increased motivation, greater flexibility and a wider pool of skills.

We are working with leading business organisations in the Age Partnership Group to develop and promote the 'Be Ready' national guidance campaign. We launched the campaign in May this year, with a newsletter mailed to 1.4 million employers offering a range of guidance materials. Next spring we will be offering a further wave of guidance products. We will continue working alongside our business partners, such as ACAS, to help employers to prepare for age legislation, which is due in October 2006.

The Be Ready and Age Positive websites, featuring practical information and employer case studies, are attracting over 100,000 visits per month.

Pension Reform

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the latest report of the Pensions Commission; and if he will make a statement on the Government's plans for pension reform. [33632]

Mr. Timms: The Government welcome the broad framework of the Pensions Commission's proposals and options and believe they are the right basis for the debate to come.

As far as the specific recommendations are concerned, the Government are ruling nothing in and nothing out. Ministers have asked the Pensions Commission to continue their involvement in the public debate over the next few months. The Government will work towards the publication of a White Paper in the spring which will set out their response.

Pensioners

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in (a) Southend, (b) Essex, (c) Hertfordshire, (d) Greater London and (e) England and Wales (i) are of pensionable age and (ii) receive a state pension; and what the equivalent figures were in (A) 1992, (B) 1996, (C) 1997, (D) 1998, (E) 2001 and (F) 2004. [33655]

Notes:

1. State pension age is 60 for a woman and 65 for a man. State pension does not have to be claimed at state pension age. A person can also stop claiming it once they have claimed it.
2. A woman may not be entitled to a state pension based on her own national insurance contributions when she reaches her state pension age. She may be able to get a state pension based on her husband's contribution record but will have to wait until he starts claiming it.
3. Local authorities are assigned by matching postcodes against the relevant Office for National Statistics (ONS) postcode directory.
4. The figures for March 2000 and March 2001 are based on data from the 5 per cent. samples. These figures have been adjusted to make their totals consistent with the later WPLS data. These figures are subject to a degree of sampling variation.
5. The figures for May 2002 to May 2005 are directly from the WPLS 100 per cent. data.
6. The pensioner population figures are the ONS mid-year population estimates.
7. All figures are rounded to the nearest 100.
8. The data are taken from extracts of PSCS as at 31 March and 31 May for the appropriate years.
9. The total figures for Hertfordshire and Essex are composed of the sum of the relevant local authorities shown in notes 10 and 11. Due to overlap in geographical boundaries, these figures may not include all cases within these counties.
10. The local authorities for Essex are: Basildon; Braintree; Brentwood; Castle Point; Chelmsford; Colchester; Epping Forest; Harlow; Maldon; Rochford; Tendring; Uttlesford.
11. The local authorities for Hertfordshire are: Broxbourne; Dacorum; East Hertfordshire; Hertsmere; North Hertfordshire; St Albans; Stevenage; Three Rivers; Watford; Welwyn Hatfield.
12. The pensioner population is defined as the sum of all females aged 60 or over and all males aged 65 or over.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many and what proportion of pensioners were eligible for (a) housing benefit, (b) council tax benefit and (c) pension credit on the latest date for which figures are available; and what the forecasted figures are for 2050 assuming that eligibility rules remain the same. [35203]

Mr. Timms: The latest estimates of the number and proportion of pensioners entitled to the main income-related benefits relate to financial year 2002–03 (before the introduction of pension credit). Estimates for housing benefit, council tax benefit and minimum income guarantee—the predecessor to pension credit—can be found in the DWP report entitled "Income Related Benefits Estimates of Take-Up in 2002–03". Copies of the publication are available in the Library.

Estimates of the number of people entitled to pension credit will be published on 19 December 2005 and will include the first six months of pension credit. Estimates for the full year 2004–05 are expected to be published in May 2006.

The numbers entitled to income-related benefits in the future will depend on a wide range of factors including the ways Governments choose to uprate benefits. The following table shows entitlement estimates if the current uprating approaches are continued in the future.

Table 1: Indicative estimates of entitlement to income related benefits in 2050

	Entitled households (million)	Entitled individuals (individual)	Proportion of individuals over pension age entitled (percentage)
Pension credit	8.8	12.3	70
Housing benefit	2.0	2.4	15
Council tax benefit	5.1	6.8	40

Notes:

1. Entitlement estimates are subject to a wide range of uncertainty; they are rounded to the nearest 100,000 and the proportions of individuals over pension age are rounded to the nearest 5 per cent.
2. Individuals entitled include a small number of partners below state pension age.
3. The pension credit projections assume the continuation of the current uprating of the standard minimum guarantee by earnings, although the Government is not committed to this beyond 2008.

4. Estimates of the number of households and individuals eligible for pension credit, housing benefit and council tax benefit in the future are available for Great Britain. These are based on a long term version of the Department's Policy Simulation Model, which uses Family Resources Survey data for 2003–04 projected forward into the future to estimate the extent of eligibility for each pensioner household on the survey.

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in Beverley and Holderness received overpayments of pension credits in 2003–04; what the total sum overpaid was; and how much of this has been written off. [33456]

Mr. Timms: One person was overpaid pension credit in the Beverley and Holderness constituency during the financial year 2003–04, amounting to £126.82. Information relating to the amount written off is not available at the constituency level.

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what research he has evaluated on the long-term sustainability of pension credit. [33458]

Mr. Timms: The long-term sustainability of pension credit depends on the decisions of successive Governments about the level at which it is set and the entitlement rules that apply. However, the Government have undertaken to increase the guarantee credit in line with average earnings until 2008.

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in the East Riding of Yorkshire were entitled to pension credit in the most recent month for which figures are available. [33559]

Mr. Timms: The information requested is not available.

The latest available estimates of the number of pensioners entitled to the main income-related benefits relate to financial year 2002–03 and predate the introduction of pension credit. They are available on a national basis only, as estimates cannot be reliably disaggregated into lower geographies. Estimates for minimum income guarantee—the predecessor to pension credit—can be found in the DWP report entitled "Income Related Benefits Estimates of Take-Up in 2002/2003". Copies of the publication are available in the Library.

Estimates for pension credit will be published on 19 December 2005; this publication will include the first six months of pension credit. Estimates for the full year 2004–05 are expected to be published in May 2006.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many pensioners in Tamworth constituency were entitled to an income-related benefit in each year since 1997; and what proportion of pensioners claimed this benefit in each year since 1997. [29292]

Mr. Timms: The information requested is not available.

Estimates of the number of pensioners entitled to the main income-related benefits are available on a national basis only. These can be found in the DWP report series: "Income Related Benefits Estimates of Take-Up"; copies of which are held in the Library.

The following table contains the number of pensioners in receipt of pension credit introduced in October 2005.

Pension credit recipients in the parliamentary constituency of Tamworth

	Number of recipients
October 2003	2,600
October 2004	3,800
June 2005	3,900

Notes:

1. Caseloads are rounded to the nearest hundred therefore totals may not sum.
2. Pension credit (PC) replaced minimum income guarantee (MIG) on 6 October 2003. Existing MIG recipients were automatically converted onto pension credit on that date (assuming they still met the eligibility criteria)
3. Data from the Generalised Matching Service (GMS) 100 per cent. scans taken on 17 October 2003, 15 October 2004 and 10 June 2005. All figures have been rated up to give month-end estimates.
4. These figures are early estimates. Operational processing times mean that a number of claim commencements and terminations are not reflected in the figures. The final figures incorporated within the Work and Pensions Longitudinal Study (WPLS) will take account of such cases.
5. Parliamentary constituencies are assigned by matching postcodes against the relevant ONS postcode directory.

Pensions

Mr. Forth: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions at what age (a) male and (b) female civil servants become eligible for the state pension. [33913]

Mr. Timms: The state pension age for all citizens is 65 for men and 60 for women born on or before 5 April 1950. However, from 2010 the state pension age for women will begin to increase and will equalise at age 65 by 2020 for all citizens.

Anne Moffat: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many female pensioners in East Lothian are in receipt of the full basic state pension. [34006]

Mr. Timms: The number of female pensioners in the East Lothian parliamentary constituency who are in receipt of a full basic state pension as at 31 March 2005 is 6,000.

Notes:

1. Data are taken from five per cent. extract of Pension Service computer system, therefore figures are subject to a degree of sampling variation. They are also adjusted to be consistent with the overall caseload from the Work and Pension Longitudinal Study.
2. The figure for the number of recipients is rounded to the nearest hundred.
3. A full basic state pension (£79.60 in 2004–05) is paid to those who fully satisfy the contribution conditions either in their own right or where applicable, on the basis of their late or former spouse's contributions.
4. Parliamentary constituencies are assigned by matching postcodes against the relevant Office for National Statistics postcode directory.

Predictive Diallers

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many calls were made from call centres in his Department in 2004–05 using predictive diallers; how many such calls resulted in contact being made with the recipient without a Government agent available to talk to them; and what assessment he has made of the likely impact of Ofcom's policy on silent calls on the use of predictive diallers in departmental call centres. [28168]

Mrs. McGuire: No DWP contact centres currently use predictive diallers.

One of DWP's debt management centres did use a predictive dialling system during 2004–05. The total volume of calls made using the predictive dialling system is not available, nor are figures available for the number of 'silent calls' members of the public would have received as a result of the use of this system. This system was withdrawn from use in April 2005 in preparation for a new IT system.

Debt management have reviewed the position in light of Ofcom's policy on silent calls. A new telephony system is due for operational implementation in debt management from January 2006. Current plans are that predictive dialling will then be replaced by outbound dialling campaigns in which the system will only make an outbound call if an agent is available to take that call.

Private Members' Bills

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions on what occasions since 1997 Ministers from his Department have (a) authorised parliamentary counsel to assist in preparing amendments to private Members' Bills on behalf of other private Members and (b) authorised officials to instruct parliamentary counsel to prepare amendments which were subsequently passed to private Members. [20138]

Mrs. McGuire: The information requested is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Retread Tyres

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many vehicles for which the Department is responsible are fitted with retreaded tyres. [17983]

Mrs. McGuire: All vehicles used by departmental officials are supplied in accordance with the Departmental Procurement Policy and are fitted with new tyres.

Cars used by Ministers, the Permanent Secretary and the chief executive of Jobcentre plus are provided by the Government Car and Despatch Agency (GCDA). For information on the use of retread tyres on vehicles provided to the Department by the GCDA I refer the hon. Member to the letter of 11 October 2005 which he received from the chief executive of the GCDA, reference UIN15087 & UIN15088. Copies of this letter are available in the Library.

Staff Relocations

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the answer of 12 September 2005, Official Report, column 2479W, what plans there are to relocate staff to frontline duties between 2004–05 and 2008–09. [18860]

Mrs. McGuire: As part of the Department's plans to meet the efficiency challenge, we are increasing the number of posts that have regular, direct contact with customers by 10,000 by March 2008, The increase in posts will occur principally within Jobcentre Plus and they will be resourced through a combination of existing staff within the Department and new recruits. As at the end of September 2005, the Department had created and resourced around 4,000 new customer-facing posts.

Telephone Helplines

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many telephone calls were made to each helpline operated by the Department and its agencies in each month from April 2003 to September 2005; and how many of these calls (a) received an engaged tone, (b) were abandoned by the caller, (c) were handled and (d) had another outcome; and if he will make a statement. [24543]

Mrs. McGuire: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Video Conferencing Units

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many video conferencing units are installed in (a) the Department and (b) each agency of the Department; what percentage of offices have these facilities in each case; and what plans he has to increase the number. [14254]

Mrs. McGuire: The information is as follows:

(a) There are currently 236 video conferencing units (VC) installed across the Department, of which 214 are portable units and 22 are fixed.

(b) A breakdown by building and agency is in the table.

Business/Agency	Number of buildings	Number of VCs installed	Number of buildings with VC unit	Percentage of buildings with facilities
Corporate and Shared Services	57	74	30	53
Job Centre Plus[1]	1,564	70	52	3
The Pensions Service	69	63	31	45
The Appeals Service	33	15	12	36
Child Support Agency	146	13	10	7
Debt Management	17	1	1	6
Total	1,886	236	136	7

[1] VC figures for Disability and Carers Service are now included in the totals for Job Centre Plus, since the VC units concerned are administered together.

Some buildings are occupied by more than one business unit so may have been counted more than once. All of our business units are free to utilise the VC facilities across all sites. Some offices have more than one unit installed.

There are no current plans to increase the number of video conferencing units further across the Department.

HEALTH

Ashford and St. Peter's NHS Trust

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will assess the impact of the delay in the implementation of payment by results on the financial position of Ashford and St. Peters' NHS Trust; [28613]

(2) if she will assess the cumulative impact of the delay in implementation of payment by results for non-foundation hospitals on the aggregate financial position of NHS trusts within the Surrey and Sussex strategic health authority area. [28614]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not held centrally.

Blood Stocks

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the level of blood stocks available to NHS hospitals in (a) Southend Primary Care Trust area and (b) England. [20706]

Caroline Flint: The NHS Blood and Transplant Authority (NHSBT)[1] is responsible for managing blood supplies in England and North Wales.

Blood stocks are currently good and NHSBT have been meeting demand for blood from hospitals. All NHSBT stock is available to any hospital in England and North Wales. Blood stocks are continually reviewed and redistributed as necessary across the country to ensure that all orders for blood are met.

The table shows red cell stocks as at 30 November 2005.

[1] From 1 October, the National Blood Service and UK Transplant were merged to form the new organisation NHSBT.

Total red blood cell stocks

	Red cell stocks
Number of validated units	38,875
Equivalent number of days supply	6.10

In addition to NHSBT stocks, each hospital blood bank will keep an appropriate

Carbon Monoxide Poisoning

Jon Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what training is provided to ambulance personnel on identifying injury caused by carbon monoxide poisoning. [28957]

Mr. Byrne: Ambulance emergency medical technician and paramedic qualifying training includes recognition and treatment of poisoning, including reference to carbon monoxide. It is also covered by the clinical practice guidelines for use in United Kingdom ambulance services, produced by the Joint Royal Colleges Ambulance Liaison Committee.

Care Homes

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will bring forward legislation to provide security of tenure in (a) local authority and (b) other publicly funded care homes; and if she will make a statement. [29719]

Mr. Byrne: It is important for people who need and want residential care to be accommodated in appropriate settings. Homes may close for different reasons, including deregistration of poor quality homes. It is also only appropriate for a person to remain in a care home for as long as it meets their needs. It would not therefore be practicable or appropriate to give care home residents security of tenure.

We are concerned to ensure that residents' rights and welfare are protected when home closures take place or residents need to move to a new home, by ensuring care home contracts are fair and local authorities have procedures in place to ensure care home closures are handled with the minimum of disturbance.

Cheshire and Mersey Strategic Health Authority

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what opportunities will be afforded to hon. Members to influence the reconfiguration plans of Cheshire and Mersey strategic health authority. [32914]

Mr. Byrne: The Cheshire and Merseyside strategic health authority (SHA) reports that all hon. Members in the area have been sent details of the work being undertaken to enable all NHS trusts in its area to achieve foundation trust status. This includes the aims and objectives of the work it is taking forward. Arrangements are also in place for the SHA chief executive to meet with hon. members so that they have the opportunity to raise issues and discuss progress with her directly.

Chief Medical Officer

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what overseas visits the Chief Medical Officer has made in the last two years; where his interests are recorded; what meetings he has had with the Prime Minister in the last two years; and which of the chief scientific advisers to Government Departments he has met in the last 12 months. [24390]

Jane Kennedy: Details of overseas visits made by the Chief Medical Officer (CMO) for England, Sir Liam Donaldson, during the period 1 November 2003 until 31 October 2005 are shown in table 1.

His meetings with the Prime Minister in the same period and his meetings with the chief scientific advisers to Government Departments during the period 1 November 2004 until 31 October 2005 are set out in table 2. In the day-to-day progress of his work the CMO meets or hears the views of a wide range of scientists who advise Government Departments on policy and risk. These extensive contacts have not been itemised.

His interests are recorded on the Department of Health's Register of Interests, held by the Department's Senior Civil Service Unit.

Children's Hospices

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much public funding children's hospices received in each of the last five years. [30388]

Mr. Byrne: The Department does not collect information on the funding of children's hospices and palliative care services for children.

Children's hospice services are funded from a number of sources, including services commissioned by primary care trusts based on their assessment of children's needs and their priorities. They are best placed to make decisions on the local need for palliative care and are able to take into account the needs of individual families' and their preferences. There is no ceiling to the amount of funding which the national health service can provide.

The Department continues to encourage children's hospices to engage actively with local NHS bodies over the contribution hospices can make to the overall pattern of palliative care commissioned for children and young people in their localities.

Our manifesto pledge to increase funding for end of life care will also include children who have life-threatening or life-limiting conditions.

Contagious Diseases

James Duddridge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what contingency plans her Department has in place to prevent individuals who have contracted a highly contagious disease from passing that disease to others. [33321]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 1 December 2005]: The national health service has facilities and procedures in place for caring for people with infectious diseases in ways which minimise the risk of infecting others, and a wide range of advice is available to the public on how they can avoid spreading infection. In cases of last resort, local authorities have powers in certain circumstances under infectious disease legislation to apply to a justice of the peace for orders requiring a person suffering from a specified disease to be removed to, and detained in, hospital.

James Duddridge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what powers her Department has to enforce the isolation in the interests of public safety of an individual who has contracted a contagious disease. [33322]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 1 December 2005]: Powers under the Public Health (Control of Disease) Act 1984 and associated regulations for the most part rest with local authorities. Local authorities have powers, in certain circumstances, to apply to a justice of the peace for orders requiring a person suffering from a specified disease to be removed to, and detained in, hospital (sections 37 and 38 of the Act and the Public Health (Infectious Diseases) Regulations 1988).

The diseases specified are, in the Act: cholera, plague, relapsing fever, smallpox, and typhus; and, in the regulations, acquired immune deficiency syndrome (with section 38 applying in a modified form); acute encephalitis; acute poliomyelitis; anthrax; diphtheria; dysentery (amoebic or bacillary); leprosy; leptospirosis; measles; meningitis; meningococcal septicaemia (without meningitis); mumps; paratyphoid fever; rabies; rubella; scarlet fever; tuberculosis of the respiratory tract in an infectious state; typhoid fever; viral haemorrhagic fever; viral hepatitis; and whooping cough.

[1] Represent provision entitling the making of regulations which may create offences.

Note:

Offences created in subordinate legislation have not been listed.

Digital Hearing Aids

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in the (a) Adur, Arun and Worthing primary care trust area, (b) West Sussex and (c) England have been fitted with a digital hearing aid through the NHS; and what estimate she has made of the numbers remaining in each area to be switched over from analogue aids. [33108]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not held centrally. The modernising hearing aid services programme estimates that approximately 500,000 people have now been fitted with digital hearing aids.

Disabled Care

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will bring forward legislation to ensure that a national standard of care is available to all disabled people based on nationally agreed criteria for assessing individual needs and risks; and if she will make a statement. [29715]

Mr. Byrne: There are a range of different models for assessing people's needs across different client groups and in different local authorities. In taking forward the Green Paper 'Independence, Wellbeing and Choice', we will consider the extent to which needs assessment could be streamlined.

Under the Care Standards Act 2000, all care homes in England are regulated by the Commission for Social Care Inspection in accordance with statutory regulations and national minimum standards, to ensure consistency and improve the quality of life and level of protection for the most vulnerable people in society.

East Sussex Hospitals NHS Trust

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to increase the funding of the East Sussex Hospitals NHS Trust; and if she will make a statement. [32143]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 28 November 2005]: The Department does not allocate funding to national health service trusts. Primary care trusts (PCTs), with their specific local knowledge and expertise, are now responsible for the commissioning of all health services and, to reflect this responsibility, funding is allocated to PCTs. Funding for NHS trusts is therefore dependant on the level of services they are able to contract with commissioning PCTs.

Significant levels of resources have been made available to the NHS. The latest round of revenue allocations to PCTs, covering the period 2006–07 and 2007–08, represents £135 billion investment in the NHS. Over the two years covered by this allocation PCTs will receive an average increase of 19.5 per cent.

Each NHS trust has a statutory duty to break-even over a three-year period. While the financial situation for 2005–06 is challenging, the trust has a financial recovery plan in place and is forecasting to break-even in the current financial year.

Expenses Claims

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether (a) hospital consultants, (b) general practitioners and (c) nurses are entitled to make an expense claim for their travelling costs to attend NHS hospitals; and if she will make a statement. [27983]

Mr. Byrne: The NHS Employers organisation is now responsible for maintaining and publishing pay and terms and conditions of national health service staff. The information requested can be found on their website at www.nhsemployers.org.

For consultants appointed before 2003 details of entitlements to expenses can be found in the 2002 terms and conditions handbook for Hospital Medical and Dental Staff and Doctors in Public Health and the Community, in paragraphs 277 to 308.

For consultants appointed after 2003 the entitlements are within the 2003 Consultant Contract, Schedule 21. Alternative provisions may be made locally.

Copies of both sets of terms and conditions can be found in the Library.

For those general practitioners on a general medical service contract, any payment for travelling expenses will be by agreement between the two parties concerned. There is no provision in the GMS contract relating to payment for travel expenses.

The NHS terms and conditions handbook, which applies to staff, including nurses, employed on the new Agenda for Change pay system contains information on entitlement to expenses in chapter three. A copy is also available in the Library.

Finished Consultant Episodes

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many finished consultant episodes there were in (a) 1994–95 and (b) 2004–05 where the primary diagnosis was coded as (i) F10, (ii) K70 and (iii) T51 for each strategic health authority for those aged (A) over 18, (B) those under 18, (C) those under 16 and (D) those under 14 years. [18656]

Caroline Flint: The nearest approximation to the data requested is shown in the table.

1. The data only cover 2003–04 because the 2004–05 data will not be ready for release before December 2005.
2. The data shown are only for 1996–97, rather than 1994–95, for two reasons: international classification of diseases (ICD) 10 codes as requested are not applicable for 1994–95 because ICD10 was only introduced in 1995–96. Attempts to back reference the codes to the ICD9 code list do not reveal a comparable data set. Secondly, strategic health authorities (SHAs) were introduced from 2002–03 and we have done a mapping exercise to apply the new boundaries back to 1996–97. Before this point, SHA breakdowns are not applicable. As such, 1996–97 has been presented as the earliest year where both diagnosis and geographical conditions can be met.

Frenchay and Southmead Hospitals

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many letters her Department has received regarding the proposed reconfiguration of Frenchay and Southmead hospitals; and how many of these supported the retention of Frenchay as a major acute hospital site. [34205]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 2 December 2005]: As at 22 November 2005, the Department had received 706 letters about the proposed reconfiguration of Frenchay and Southmead hospitals.

While the majority of letters voiced general support for the retention of services at Frenchay hospital, there were many different points of views as to how this might best be achieved.

Hospital Mergers

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the potential effect the mergers of hospitals across Liverpool and Southport and Ormskirk will have on patient choice. [32902]

Mr. Byrne: National health service trusts in Liverpool, Sefton, Southport and West Lancashire have begun formal discussions to review the configuration of trusts in the area in order to determine whether the current organisational structure is best placed to deliver the best possible services to meet the needs of patients. Cheshire and Merseyside strategic health authority advises that it has not pre-determined the outcome of the work and any conclusions will be pursued if they are demonstrably in patients' interests.

Hull and East Yorkshire Hospitals NHS Trust

Ms Diana R. Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the future capital investment programme is for the Hull and East Yorkshire Hospitals NHS Trust. [31428]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 30 November 2005]: The trust's confirmed capital investment programme to 2009–10 is as follows:

	£ million
2005–06	30
2006–07	[1]58
2007–08	[2]59
2008–09	11

[1] Including £25 million private finance initiative.
[2] Including £35 million private finance initiative.

These cost-totals include the £75 million oncology and £45 million cardiac/elective surgical developments under way at Castle Hill hospital.

Hull Royal Infirmary

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many acts of (a) verbal and (b) physical abuse have been recorded against staff at the Hull Royal Infirmary since 1997. [32955]

Mr. Byrne: The information is shown in the table.

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many beds were operational at Hull Royal infirmary in each year since 1997. [32977]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not available at hospital level.

Informal Carers

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many informal carers are registered with social services departments, broken down by local authority area. [33266]

Mr. Byrne: This information is not collected centrally.

Intensive Care Units

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many intensive care units there were in NHS hospitals in England (a) in 2001 and (b) at the latest date for which figures are available. [28279]

Mr. Byrne: The Department does not collect information on the hospitals which have intensive care units.

Necrotising Fasciitis

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many people (a) contracted and (b) died of necrotising fasciitis in each year since 1997; [27990]

(2) how many (a) NHS staff and (b) patients caught necrotising fasciitis in each year since 1997. [27991]

Mr. Byrne: The information is not available in the format requested. The information available is as follows.

There are two main types of necrotising fasciitis. One type caused by group A streptococci (GAS) and the other type by a mixed infection of aerobic and anaerobic bacteria.

The Health Protection Agency (HPA) began a study of severe GAS infections through enhanced surveillance as part of a European surveillance initiative (strep-EURO) on 1 January 2003. Preliminary analyses show that in 2003 and in 2004, 5 per cent. of cases of severe GAS infections manifest as necrotising fasciitis. Overall, 37 per cent. of cases of necrotising fasciitis were reported to have died within seven days of initial diagnosis. Data on the occupations of cases have not yet been analysed.

The information in table 1 is available from hospital episode statistics (HES) data. These counts only relate to admitted in-patients and do not represent the counts of all people contracted with this condition.

Table 1. Number of finished consultant episodes and patients where the primary diagnosis—Fasciitis, not elsewhere classified (ICD-10= M72.5) in NHS hospitals in England, 1997–98 to 2003–04

2001–02	431	269
2002–03	510	298
2003–04	595	360

Notes:

1. An FCE is defined as a period of admitted patient care under one consultant within one health care provider. Please note that the figures do not represent the number of patients, as a person may have more than one episode of care within the year.
2. Patient counts are based on the unique patient identifier is derived based on patient's date of birth, postcode, sex, local patient identifier and NHS number, using an agreed algorithm. Where data are incomplete, HESID might erroneously link episodes or fail to recognise episodes for the same patient. Care is therefore needed, especially where duplicate records persist in the data. The patient count cannot be summed across a table where patients may have episodes in more than one cell.
3. The primary diagnosis is the first of up to 14 (seven prior to 2002–03) diagnosis fields in the hospital episode statistics (HES) dataset and provides the main reason why the patient was in hospital.
4. Figures are grossed for both coverage and missing/invalid clinical data, except for 2003–04, which is not yet adjusted for shortfalls.

The information in table 2 shows the number of deaths where necrotising fasciitis[1] was mentioned on the death certificate in England and Wales from 1997 to 2004[2].

NHS Finance

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS trusts have not met the requirement to break even over a five year period. [28615]

Mr. Byrne: Ashford St. Peters' national health service trust is the only NHS trust that has not met the requirement to break even over a five-year period.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 7 November 2005, Official Report, column 266W on NHS Finance, how the size of the uplift will be calculated. [28693]

Mr. Byrne: The uplift will be calculated dependant on the size of the underspend and the point at which during the financial year, the underspend is declared.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 7 November 2005, Official Report, column 266W, on NHS Finance, when in the course of a financial year her Department typically set control totals for strategic health authorities. [28695]

Mr. Byrne: Financial plans are agreed at the start of the financial year. Control totals are set during the year where it becomes apparent that national health service organisations are unable to deliver against their financial plans.

NHS Hospital Trusts (Public Consultation)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance she issues to NHS hospital trusts concerning the nature and duration of public consultation exercises related to proposals to reconfigure services. [29398]

Mr. Byrne: The Department has issued:

"Strengthening Accountability: Involving Patients and the Public—Policy Guidance Section 11 of the Health and Social Care Act 2001 (February 2003) and Overview and Scrutiny of Health—Guidance (July 2003)."

These advise that it is good practice for consultation to follow Cabinet Office guidelines, which state that full consultation should last for a minimum of 12 weeks. Both documents are available on the Department's website at www.dh.gov.uk/publications.

NHS Students Grant Unit

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what percentage of bursary applications to the NHS Students Grant Unit in 2005 have failed to meet the processing target of 20 working days; [29320]

(2) what percentage of inquiries to the NHS Students Grant Unit in 2005 by (a) telephone, (b) writing and (c) e-mail have failed to receive a response within 20 working days; [29321]

(3) what procedures the NHS Students Grant Unit has in place to monitor the response rates to (a) telephone, (b) writing and (c) e-mail inquiries; [29322]

(4) what the average waiting time is for telephone inquiries to the NHS Students Grants Unit. [29323]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 17 November 2005]: The following information has been provided by the NHS Pensions Agency.

35 per cent. of applications for bursary payments in academic year 2005–06 have failed to meet the processing target of 20 working days. However, as at 16 November 2005, 94 per cent. of students have been paid.

Since the beginning of the academic year 2005–06, all written correspondence and telephone inquiries received by the Student Grants Unit has received a response within 20 working days. All e-mail inquiries have received an acknowledgement and update from the unit within 20 working days of receipt.

The unit has introduced four additional e-mail addresses that are query specific, in order to filter types of inquiry and improve response times.

The unit obtains daily and weekly reports of telephone call volumes and response rates.

The unit collates weekly reports on volumes of written correspondence and e-mail inquiries that includes the number of those cleared, within and outside of 20 working days.

There is technology in place that enables the unit to record telephone activity. From the start of the academic year 2005–06 to date, the average waiting time for telephone inquiries on hold on the student helpline number is approximately five minutes. Due to the complexity of many of the inquiries an operator spends approximately five minutes handling each call.

There are also separate dedicated telephone lines for universities who are able to contact their designated Student Grant Unit colleagues direct.

NHS Trust Finances

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what were the (a) 2004–05 and (b) 2003–04 financial positions reported for each English NHS trust; and if she will make a statement. [28386]

Mr. Byrne: A copy of the 2003–04 and 2004–05 audited financial positions for all national health service trusts is available in the Library.

NIHCE

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects the revised proposals for a rapid appraisal system for life-saving drugs by the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence to be (a) issued for consultation and (b) implemented. [24139]

Jane Kennedy: I announced on 3 November 2005 proposed changes to enable the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) to produce faster guidance on life-saving drugs. This new single technology appraisal (STA) process has already been implemented, on an interim basis, with NICE starting work on five topics as a first tranche.

On 11 November 2005, NICE published a consultation document on the new STA process. The consultation will end on 6 February 2006. A copy of the consultation document is available on NICE's website at www.nice.org.uk.

Nurses

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps her Department (a) is taking and (b) plans to take up to 2008–09 to recruit nurses. [28597]

Mr. Byrne: The Government has substantially increased the national health service work force and numbers entering training. The number of nursing posts in the NHS continues to expand—there are over 390,000 nurses in the NHS and there are 78,660 or 25 per cent. more qualified nurses employed in the NHS than there were in 1997.

Responsibility for recruiting and retaining the healthcare work force locally, including nurses, has been devolved to local employers. The national strategies are already in place to support trusts to recruit and retain staff, promote training and development and redesign their work forces.

Obesity

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures she is implementing to improve the provision of obesity treatment by primary care organisations. [21094]

Caroline Flint: The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence has been commissioned to prepare definitive guidance on the prevention, identification, management and treatment of obesity. This is due in early 2007.

Meanwhile, as part of its wider obesity public service agreement programme, the Department is assisting primary care trusts (PCTs) in improving their obesity services by developing guidance on the following tools; an obesity care pathway, a tool to assist health professionals, a weight loss guide and height and weight guidance for primary school children. These will be published in December 2005-January 2006.

As an enhanced role for better coordination between the regional tiers and sub-regional tiers of administration, the Department exercises a performance management function for strategic health authorities and PCTs.

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research she has evaluated on the obesity treatment provided by primary care organisations. [21096]

Caroline Flint: We recently reviewed evidence on the effectiveness of obesity interventions in developing our primary care quality and outcomes framework bid for new adult obesity quality indicators. Although there is limited research on the treatment of obesity by primary care organisations preliminary indicative results from the counterweight programme, an evidence-based weight management model, show that implementation of a structured model for weight management is feasible and effective in the primary care setting. The Department has commissioned the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence to prepare definitive guidance on the prevention, identification, management and treatment of obesity which is due in early 2007.

Payment by Results

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost has been to Barking, Havering and Redbridge NHS Trust of implementing the payment by results programme. [18006]

Jane Kennedy: There are no data available centrally that identify the cost of implementing the payment by results programme.

PCT/SHA Finances

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list in descending order the deficit or surplus of each (a) primary care trust and (b) strategic health authority at the most recent date for which the information is available; and what the change in funding per head of population since 2000 is in each case. [29956]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 21 November 2005]: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Pension Liabilities

Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate has been made of total pension liabilities in (a) England and (b) Durham following the reorganisation of primary care trusts. [29437]

Mr. Byrne: The total value of pension liabilities for the NHS pension scheme as at 31 March 2005 is £127.9 billion, subject to audits.

The NHS pension scheme covers the whole of England and Wales. A breakdown by individual organisations or area is not available as the scheme is a national scheme.

Primary Care Trusts

Mrs. Dean: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment she has made of the likely impact of the reorganisation of primary care trusts on the commissioning of specialist services, with particular reference to renal services; [29008]

(2) what steps are planned following the reorganisation of primary care trusts to ensure that services which may be under-prioritised by commissioners are effectively provided, with particular reference to renal services. [29009]

Mr. Byrne: A review into commissioning arrangements for specialised services has been set up and asked to report in spring 2006. My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, will consider the review group's recommendations at that point. A key objective of the review is to assess the potential impact of national health service system reform on specialised services, including renal services, so as to ensure that proposals keep specialised services commissioning in step with wider NHS reforms and generate consistent arrangements across the country.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients from Ribble Valley were treated by Lancashire primary care trust in Lancashire hospitals in (a) 2003–04 and (b) 2004–05. [33044]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 29 November 2005]: The available information requested is shown in the table.

Count of finished consultant episodes (FCE) and patients by selected providers of treatment primary care trust responsible for patient in Hyndburn and Ribble Valley and Preston national health service hospitals in England, 2003–04

Provider code	Provider description	FCE	Patient counts
RXL	Blackpool, Fylde and Wyre Hospitals NHS Trust	1,249	950
RJX	Calderstones NHS Trust	6	[1]—
RXR	East Lancashire Hospitals NHS Trust	32,187	17,649
RW5	Lancashire Care NHS Trust	857	631
RXN	Lancashire Teaching Hospitals NHS Trust	36,820	22,638
RTX	Morecambe Bay Hospitals NHS Trust	109	94

[1] Due to reasons of confidentiality, figures between one and five have been suppressed.

Notes:

1. An FCE is defined as a period of admitted patient care under one consultant within one health care provider. Please note that the figures do not represent the number of patients, as a person may have more than one episode of care within the year.

2. Patient counts are based on the unique patient identifier hospital episodes statistics identification (HESID). This identifier is derived based on patient's date of birth, postcode, sex, local patient identifier and NHS number, using an agreed algorithm. Where data are incomplete, HESID might erroneously link episodes or fail to recognise episodes for the same patient. Care is therefore needed, especially where duplicate records persist in the data. The patient count cannot be summed across a table where patients may have episodes in more than one cell.

3. Figures have not been adjusted for shortfalls in data, that is, the data is ungrossed.

Primary Care Trusts (Oxfordshire)

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate her Department has made of the likely redundancy costs of (a) reconfiguring primary care trusts (PCT) in Oxfordshire into a single PCT and (b) awarding the contracts to manage such a PCT to the private sector. [20397]

Caroline Flint: In July, we asked strategic health authorities (SHAs) to engage their stakeholders to develop proposals which could then be subject to consultation. The draft proposals from the SHAs were submitted to the Department and have been assessed by an independent external panel against published criteria. The panel has offered its initial comments to Ministers.

These are currently being considered and we will write to SHAs shortly. No decisions on the final configuration of primary care trusts (PCTs) will be taken until after the three-month public consultation exercise, to begin in December. It would not be possible to provide accurate estimates of likely redundancy costs until the final configurations are known.

It is important to note that Thames Valley SHA's proposal to outsource the commissioning function of the newly proposed Oxfordshire PCT will not be considered as part of the consultation process. This is because we want the new PCTs, not the existing organisations, to make decisions on how they handle their responsibilities.

Primary Sclerosing Cholangitis

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment she has made of the prevalence of primary sclerosing cholangitis in (a) England and (b) Gloucestershire; [29612]

(2) what steps she is taking to raise awareness amongst health professionals of primary sclerosing cholangitis. [29611]

Mr. Byrne: Estimates on the prevalence of primary sclerosing cholangitis (PSC) in England range between 20 to 90 cases per million of population. No estimates have been made for the prevalence of PSC in Gloucestershire.

The Department is not responsible for setting curricula for health professional training. However, we do share a commitment with statutory and professional bodies that all health professionals are trained, so that they have the skills and knowledge to deliver a high quality health service to all groups of the population with whom they deal. Post-registration training needs for national health service staff are determined against local NHS priorities, through appraisal processes and training needs analyses informed by local delivery plans and the needs of the service.

Road Traffic Accidents

Kitty Ussher: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the relationship between ambulance journey times to hospital intensive care units and survival rates following serious road traffic accidents. [26123]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 29 November 2005]: Data is not collected centrally on road traffic accidents attended by national health service ambulances and no assessment can be made of the relationship between ambulance journey times and the eventual transfer to hospital intensive care units and survival rates following serious road traffic accidents.

Social Services (Young Adults)

Mr. Neil Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many younger adult clients per 10,000 younger adults were seen by social services in (a) Inner London local authorities, (b) Outer London local authorities, (c) English metropolitan authorities outside London, (d) Wigan Metropolitan borough council area, (e) Salford city council area, (f) Knowsley metropolitan borough council area, (g) South Tyneside council area, (h) Leeds city council area and (i) Wolverhampton city council area in 2004–05. [29474]

Mr. Byrne: The following table shows the number of adults aged 18 to 64 who were assessed and/or reviewed per 10,000 population by councils with social services responsibilities (CSSRs) in 2003–04 for the areas requested.

Specialised Services Commissioning

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how the forthcoming review of specialised services commissioning will fit into the wider reorganisation of primary care trusts and strategic health authorities; and if she will make a statement; [28361]

(2) what the timetable is for the review of specialised services commissioning; [28648]

(3) whether the recommendations from the forthcoming review of specialised services commissioning will be binding on all primary care trusts. [28649]

Mr. Byrne: The review looking into commissioning arrangements for specialised services has been asked to report in spring 2006. The review will assess the potential impact of national health service system reform on specialised services and treatments, ensure that proposals keep specialised services commissioning in step with wider NHS reforms and generate consistent arrangements across the country.

Waiting Lists/Times

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many operations have been rescheduled because of lack of resources over the last eight years. [28599]

Mr. Byrne: The number of rescheduled operations is not collected centrally.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Accident Data

Dr. McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether minimum data have been set for the collection of data by IT systems relating to home accidents in (a) accident and emergency departments and (b) minor injury units in Northern Ireland, as specified under Action 13 of the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety Home Accident Prevention Strategy 2004–09. [33563]

Mr. Woodward: A minimum dataset has been agreed by DHSSPS in conjunction with the Royal Society for the Prevention of Accidents (RoSPA) in Northern Ireland for the collection of information by IT systems on patients who attend accident and emergency departments and minor injuries units as a result of home accidents.

Apple Production

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he is taking to promote apple production in County Armagh. [34552]

Angela E. Smith: There are no measures to promote apple production anywhere in Northern Ireland. The Department of Agriculture and Rural Development provides a range of support measures to existing producers throughout Northern Ireland, including financial support through the EU Producer Organisation Scheme, research and development and industry training and technology transfer programmes.

Assets Recovery

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how money recovered by the Assets Recovery Agency in Northern Ireland has been distributed. [35336]

Mr. Woodward: The proceeds of all assets recovered under the Proceeds of Crime Act and earlier legislation are paid to the Consolidated Fund and an element is dispersed for a variety of asset recovery purposes under the auspices of the Home Office. For example, the Police Service of Northern Ireland has received £270,000 in incentive payments under a police incentive scheme introduced in 2004–05. Additional financial investigators in the Police Service of Northern Ireland are also being funded with £240,000 over two years from recovered assets receipts.

From 2006–07 all asset recovery agencies including the Police Service of Northern Ireland will be able to get back 50 per cent. of the assets they recover and are encouraged to invest it in boosting asset recovery.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how the money allocated to the new assets recovery incentive scheme in Northern Ireland will be distributed. [35337]

Mr. Woodward: From 2006–07, under a new incentive scheme all asset recovery agencies in England, Wales and Northern Ireland will be able to get back 50 per cent. of the assets they recover. There are no conditions attached on how the money should be spent but agencies are encouraged to invest a portion in boosting asset recovery and, where appropriate, in local crime fighting projects.

Autism

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate he has made of the number of individuals aged 16 years and above in the Province with autistic spectrum disorders; and how many of these are estimated to be deemed of school age. [34648]

Mr. Woodward: The information requested is not available.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what provision is made in the Province for those aged 16 years and above who suffer from autistic spectrum disorders. [34649]

Mr. Woodward: Health and social services boards and trusts provide a range of mainstream and specialist health care services for children and adults with autism including diagnostic and assessment services, family support services, respite services, date care services, befriending schemes, mental health services, learning disability services and specialist services contracted from voluntary organisations such as PAPA (Parents and Professionals and Autism) and PEAT (Parents' Education as Autism Therapists).

Car Parks

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps (a) Translink and (b) each Northern Ireland Department is taking to encourage departmental employees in Northern Ireland to use public transport to and from their workplace. [31453]

Mr. Woodward: Translink has advised me that it operates a corporate commuter initiative which encourages both public and private sector employees to use public transport to and from their workplace. Under this, Translink works in partnership with several Northern Ireland Departments and other Government bodies and provides incentives such as subsidised public transport and personalised travel plans.

The Travelwise scheme operated by the Roads Service provides advice about alternatives to car use, including the use of public transport. It has promoted the scheme to all Northern Ireland Departments. In addition to these measures, Northern Ireland Departments may offer advances of salary to assist staff with the purchase of season tickets.

Confiscated Computers

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many computers have been confiscated in relation to offences reported to (a) East Belfast District Command Unit and (b) Castlereagh District Command Unit in each year since 1998; how many reports led to (i) prosecution and (ii) conviction; and what this figure is as a percentage of the total. [31990]

Mr. Woodward: No central record is maintained to identify the number of computers confiscated in a particular District Command Unit. To obtain this information would involve a manual trawl of records at disproportionate cost. Statistics relating to prosecutions and convictions resulting from the confiscation of computers is not recorded.

Cardiac Care

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many trained medical (a) doctors and (b) nurses specialising in cardiac care there were in each hospital in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years. [31971]

Mr. Woodward: The information required is provided in the following tables.

Cardiomyopathy

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people have been diagnosed with cardiomyopathy in the Province in the last five years, broken down by age. [34650]

Mr. Woodward: The number of people diagnosed with cardiomyopathy in Northern Ireland is not available.

Information is available on the number of cardiomyopathy sufferers admitted as in-patients to hospitals in Northern Ireland. The following table details the number of admissions to hospital with a primary or secondary diagnosis of cardiomyopathy by age band, for each of the last five years available. It should be noted that any individual could have been admitted to hospital more than once over the course of a year or over a number of years and would therefore be counted more than once in the table.

Child Support Agency

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the (a) effectiveness and (b) improvement on its predecessor of the Child Support Agency system introduced in 2003. [34560]

Mr. Hanson: The Great Britain Child Support Agency's chief executive, Stephen Geraghty, is currently undertaking a root and branch review of the Agency. He will report to Ministers in Great Britain and will make announcements shortly. I will decide what action to take in Northern Ireland in the light of these announcements.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he expects Northern Ireland residents on the old Child Support Agency system to be transferred on to the new system. [34561]

Mr. Hanson: In line with the Child Support Agency in Great Britain, the Northern Ireland Child Support Agency has been processing new applications using the new computer system and the new legislation since March 2003.

The introduction of the new computer system has not been without its problems. Therefore, existing cases will be transferred to the new scheme only when the Minister for the Department of Work and Pensions is satisfied that the new computer system is working well. No decision has been made as to when this will happen.

Crime Clear-up Rates

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the clear-up rate was for (a) burglary, (b) car theft and (c) possession of illegal

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) burglaries, (b) vehicle thefts, (c) assaults, (d) violence against the person offences and (e) violent crimes have been reported to (i) East Belfast District Command Unit and (ii) Castlereagh District Command Unit in each year since 1998; how many reports led to (A) prosecution and (B) conviction; and what this figure is as a percentage of the total. [31992]

Mr. Woodward: The information requested in relation to the number of offences reported to East Belfast and Castlereagh DCU's in each year since 1998 is contained in the following tables. Data relating to prosecutions and convictions for these type of offences are currently only available in the period 2000 to 2003 (2000 and 2003 being the earliest and most recent dates for which this information is available). Prosecutions and convictions cannot be linked to offences reported, therefore it is not possible to provide a meaningful percentage of one against the other.

Drug Offences

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people were (a) cautioned and (b) convicted in relation to a drugs offence in each district command unit in Northern Ireland, broken down by age group, in each of the last five years. [31945]

Mr. Hanson: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Housing

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he has taken to assist first time homebuyers in Northern Ireland. [34547]

Mr. Hanson: The Department for Social Development provides assistance to first time buyers through the Co-ownership Scheme which helps those on marginal incomes to become home owners. The Department has recently increased its funding level by £23 million over the next three years to provide almost £39 million and this will help support around 2,400 applicants over the period.

The social housing house sales scheme also makes an important contribution in providing an opportunity for those in the social rented sector to become home owners. The scheme was extended to housing association tenants last year.

Cyclists

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many cyclists were (a) injured and (b) killed in road traffic accidents in each district command unit in Northern Ireland in each of the last 10 years. [31978]

Mr. Woodward: The following tables provide details of how many cyclists were injured and killed in road traffic accidents in Northern Ireland during the period 1998—2004 (1998 being the earliest date for which this data is available and 2004 the most up-to-date data).

Electronic Human Resources Services

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will widen the Gateway Review of the Electronic Human Resources contract procurement procedure planned for December into an independent peer review of the whole process for this contract. [34414]

Angela E. Smith: The e-HR project has been subject to five reviews under the peer review process allied to the Office of Government Commerce (OGC) Gateway process:

		Date
Gate 0	Strategic Assessment	November 2002
Gate 1	Business Justification	February 2003
Gate 2	Procurement Strategy	May 2003
Gate 2a	Health Check Review	December 2003
Gate 2b	Health Check Review	June 2004

The peer review process has been conducted in accordance with OGC Gateway guidance, led by an OGC member of staff and supported by public sector panel members independent of the e-HR project and who are trained in carrying out Gateway Reviews.

A further three reviews will be carried out, these are:

		Date
Gate 3	Investment Decision	December 2005
Gate 4	Readiness for Service	—
Gate 5	Benefits evaluation	—

The procurement process has been undertaken in accordance with European Union procurement law and the Department of Finance and Personnel has been guided by best procurement practice as recommended by the Office of Government Commerce and Central Procurement Directorate (Department of Finance and Personnel).

The purpose of the forthcoming Gate 3 review will be to confirm whether the recommended investment decision is appropriate before the contract is placed with a supplier or partner. It will also be to seek assurances on the processes used to select a supplier and assess whether the process has been well managed; whether the business needs are being met; that both the client and the supplier can implement and manage the proposed solution; and that the necessary processes are in place to achieve a successful outcome after a contract award.

The peer review scheduled for December will be conducted in accordance with OGC Gateway guidance and consequently will not be widened.

High Hedges

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to introduce legislation to tackle problem high hedges in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [35316]

Angela E. Smith: The Department of the Environment's recent public consultation to collect information about the number of nuisance high hedges in Northern Ireland supports the need for legislation to address this issue and the Department will take that legislation forward when a place can be secured in the legislative programme.

Fraud and Forgery

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) fraud and (b) forgery offences have been reported to (i) East Belfast District Command Unit and (ii) Castlereagh District Command Unit in each year since 1998; how many reports led to (A) prosecution and (B) conviction; and what this figure is as a percentage of the total. [31989]

Mr. Woodward: The following tables detail how many fraud and forgery offences have been reported to East Belfast and Castlereagh DCU's in each year since 1988 together with the number of prosecutions and convictions relating to fraud and forgery offences in the period 2000 to 2003 (2000 being the earliest date and 2003 the most current date for which this information is available). As prosecutions and convictions data cannot be linked to offences reported data, it is not possible to provide a meaningful percentage of one in relation to the other.

Illegal Drinking Dens

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many illegal drinking dens have been closed down in Northern Ireland in each of the last 10 years; [32229]

(2) how many people have been prosecuted for operating illegal drinking dens in Northern Ireland in each of the last 10 years. [32230]

Mr. Woodward: The Police Service of Northern Ireland does not hold a central record of the number of illegal drinking dens closed down in Northern Ireland in

The closest prosecution information available relates to offences for selling or supplying intoxicating liquor in unlicensed premises or unregistered clubs, or permitting persons on unlicensed premises.

Juvenile Ill Health

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people in Northern Ireland under the age of 20 years have been found to have (a) high cholesterol levels, (b) high blood pressure, (c) heart conditions and (d) diabetes in each of the last 10 years. [34553]

Mr. Woodward: Information is not available on the number of people in Northern Ireland who have been found to have the aforementioned conditions. However, information is available on the number of admissions to hospital where high blood pressure, heart conditions and diabetes have been diagnosed.

(a) There is no information available on the number of people found to have high cholesterol. It has not been possible to identify patients suffering from high cholesterol who have been admitted to hospital.

Lakeview Hospital, Derry

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on medical staffing levels at Lakeview hospital, Derry. [33970]

Mr. Woodward: Recruitment of staff is a matter for individual health and social services trusts taking into account factors such as service needs, available resources and in keeping with the need to maintain high quality services. Lakeview hospital has been experiencing difficulties recently recruiting a Consultant Psychiatrist, and the Trust has taken steps to minimise any adverse impact and is making every effort to recruit a replacement.

The numbers in training in the relevant specialty have been increased in recent years to provide candidates for Consultant vacancies as they arise. Trusts need to take all necessary steps to ensure their posts are attractive to potential candidates.

Motoring Offences

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) males and (b) females were convicted of motoring offences in each district command unit in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years for which figures are available, broken down by offence. [31979]

Mr. Hanson: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what provision exists in Northern Ireland for the prosecution of drivers from the Irish Republic who have been identified as (a) driving (i) illegally and (ii) without tax and insurance and (b) parking illegally. [32253]

Mr. Woodward: Drivers of vehicles in Northern Ireland, where the driver is not resident in Northern Ireland, or where the vehicle is not registered in the United Kingdom, are subject to the provisions of the Road Traffic (Northern Ireland) Order 1981.

A community licence holder (i.e. a person who holds a licence issued by any of the member states of the European economic area—EEA) may drive a vehicle which that licence authorises him to drive, provided he is not disqualified from holding or obtaining a licence in Northern Ireland (e.g. he may be subject to a disqualification imposed by a NI court). However, that person is not so authorised where the licence is not valid in the state which issued it (e.g. the RoI authorities may have imposed a disqualification—this would prevent that person from applying for an NI licence or from driving on the basis of the disqualified RoI licence). Article 15A of the Order refers.

A person from outside the United Kingdom driving in Northern Ireland must be insured or secured against third party risks as prescribed by article 90 of the Order, and to the standard prescribed by article 92 of the 1981 Order. Under article 181 of the Order, police have the power to arrest without warrant and detain a person resident outside the UK for committing an offence under article 90 until he enters into a recognisance under the Magistrates Courts (Northern Ireland) Order 1981 to appear before a magistrates court to answer a complaint charging that offence.

Failure to comply with any of the requirements specified aforementioned is an offence. These offences, and the punishments associated with them, are specified in schedule 1 to the Road Traffic Offenders (Northern Ireland) Order 1996.

Vehicles that are parked illegally are issued with a non-endorsable fixed penalty notice (FPN) irrespective of the country of origin. However, it is not possible to summons to court the owners of vehicles resident in the Republic of Ireland for the non-payment of FPNs.

Neurology

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many neurologists were employed by the NHS in Northern Ireland on the last date for which figures are available. [34777]

Mr. Woodward: The information requested is provided in the following table.

Number of neurologists employed within the NI HPSS by trust as at November 2005

Altnagelvin Group HSS Trust	1	1.00

Source:
NI HPSS Trusts.

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what his most recent assessment is of how many neurologists are required by the NHS in Northern Ireland. [34778]

Mr. Woodward: Current numbers of consultant neurologists are in line with the recommendations of the Review of Adult Neurological Services published in 2002. This recommended that there should be 10 consultant neurologists in post by 2003 and 16 by 2008. However, the position is reviewed annually and it is recognised that further increases may be required to take account of ongoing service developments.

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to increase the number of neurologists employed by the NHS in Northern Ireland. [34779]

Mr. Woodward: The recruitment of staff is a matter for individual health and social services trusts taking into account factors such as service needs and available resources. The Department has a role in ensuring that sufficient suitably qualified staff are available to meet the needs of the service. There are currently five specialist registrars in training who are expected to be available to fill consultant posts over the next six years.

Obesity

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he is taking to tackle obesity in (a) adults and (b) children in Northern Ireland. [34554]

Mr. Woodward: Obesity is being tackled principally through policies and programmes to increase levels of physical activity, particularly among those who are least active, and by encouraging healthy eating. An advertising campaign, Get a Life Get Active, to encourage people to undertake regular physical activity, and a community grants programme have been introduced as part of Northern Ireland's cross-departmental physical activity strategy, Be Active-Be Healthy. In addition, the Health Promotion Agency, Food Standards Agency and local health and social services boards, with the support of partner organizations, have developed a range of programmes to encourage active living, promote healthy eating and to support people to make healthy choices.

The Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety also supported the development of guidelines by the clinical resource efficiency support team (CREST) on the management of obesity in secondary care. The CREST guidelines, which were published in June 2005, include advice on the assessment and management of obesity in both children and adults.

The Northern Ireland Priorities and Budget 2005–08 report established a cross- departmental public service agreement target to stop the increase in levels of obesity in children by 2010. In August 2004, a taskforce initiative was established under the aegis of the ministerial group on public health to examine options for tackling childhood obesity and to make recommendations on how the stop the rise in levels of obesity in children. The recommendations of the fit futures taskforce will be published early in 2006 and will inform revised strategies and action plans on food and nutrition and physical activity.

Paramilitary-related Exiles

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people are estimated by the security forces to have been exiled from Northern Ireland by paramilitary organisations in each of the last 10 years. [32138]

Mr. Woodward: I have been advised by the PSNI that no reliable record has been made on the number of people exiled from Northern Ireland as a result of paramilitary intimidation, as not all incidents have been reported.

However, in evidence to the NI Affairs Committee, a Christian organisation, 'The Maranatha Community' claims to have dealt with c. 4,500 persons between 1980 and 2005. Since July 2003 they have dealt with 77 cased which as been in the region of over 144 to 145 persons. Website address:

Parole

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many of those eligible for parole (a) were granted parole and (b) broke the conditions of parole in Northern Ireland in each year since 1998. [31996]

Mr. Woodward: The term 'parole' in Northern Ireland is taken to refer to home and resettlement leave.

2,931 periods of home and resettlement leave were granted from prison establishments throughout the 2004–05 financial year. Of that number, four failed to return and all currently remain at large.

It is not possible to provide information on the number of prisoners who broke the conditions of home and resettlement leave, other than those unlawfully at large, as this data are kept on individual prisoner files and is not centrally collated. This is also applicable for preceding years. Numbers granted parole in previous years were similarly not centrally collated.

Securing the information requested for the preceding years could be achieved only at a disproportionate cost.

Passports

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the average waiting time was for a (a) new passport, (b) replacement passport, (c) new full or provisional driving licence and (d) replacement driving licence in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years. [34558]

Angela E. Smith: The information is as follows:

Passports

It is not possible to separate the average waiting times for new passports and replacement passports. However the average waiting times for all straightforward, single, properly completed applications processed at the Belfast Passport Office for the last five years are:

	Turnaround (Days)
2000–01	4.1
2001–02	3.8
2002–03	4.3
2003–04	4.3
2004–05	4.6
2005–06[1]	4.3

[1] To date

Belfast Passport Office processes all Northern Irish passport applications and in addition to this processes any applications from the Brighton and Hove, East Sussex and West Sussex area. Work transfers between regional offices commenced in March 2005 and since this date Belfast have processed an additional 45,000 applications from various other catchment areas.

Driver licensing

Performance is not recorded separately for each category of driving licences issued and is reported in percentages not average waiting times. It excludes those applications which need further scrutiny for medical or conduct reasons.

Planning Applications

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps are being taken (a) to process area plans and (b) to expedite the processing of outstanding planning applications. [35335]

Angela E. Smith: All aspects of the development control process have been reviewed to identify areas for efficiencies including internal procedures, arrangements for council consultations, and working with other statutory bodies. ePIC the central e-planning project will allow online applications and provide a facility for applicants and objectors to track application progress. New legislation will also tackle delaying factors in the process.

The planning service has an ambitious programme to provide complete and up to date development plan coverage for Northern Ireland and has made considerable progress in implementing this challenging programme. Within the past three years the Planning Service has published three adopted plans and four draft plans, including the draft Belfast metropolitan plan 2015. Collectively, this covers 16 of the 26 council areas in Northern Ireland. Draft plans for a further eight council areas are under preparation. The remaining two council areas are already covered by up to date adopted area plans.

Through the modernising planning processes the planning service has an ongoing programme to improve and streamline the plan process. The planning service will continue to keep the process and programme under review and will seek where possible to improve procedures and practices in order to deliver area plans efficiently in accordance with planning and environmental legislation and policy and in general conformity with the regional development strategy.

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many police officers use bicycles while patrolling in each Police Service Northern Ireland district. [31955]

Mr. Woodward: The number of bicycles on issue to each DCU as of October 2005 is detailed in the table.

Patrolling by bicycle is just one patrol method used by DCUs across Northern Ireland. The bicycles may be used by more than one officer, at different times of the day-shift.

No central record of officers who use bicycles to patrol is held.

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans there are to rationalise the number of police district command units in Northern Ireland before completion of the review of the public administration; and if he will make a statement. [35045]

Mr. Woodward: A working party, headed by the Assistant Chief Constable responsible for change management, is currently considering the future structure of the Police Service of Northern Ireland. This work will take time to complete.

No final decisions have been made with regard to timeframe for implementation of any agreed changes. Any proposals will require careful consideration, and will be subject to consultation with the Policing Board.

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the average length of service was of police officers in Northern Ireland in (a) 2005 and (b) 1995. [34447]

Mr. Woodward: The information requested is provided in the following table.

Prostate Cancer

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much money has been ring fenced for research into treatment for prostate cancer over the last five years in Northern Ireland. [32106]

Mr. Woodward: There have been no funds allocated by the DHSS&PS R&D Office for research into treatment for prostate cancer over the last five years in Northern Ireland.

Radioactive Waste

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what the procedure is for notification of instances of dumping of radioactive waste at sea to (a) Parliament, (b) relevant local authorities, (c) relevant local NHS boards, (d) local industries that may be affected and (e) local residents; [22766]

(2) if he will list the sites where radioactive waste has been dumped in the Irish Sea over the last 10 years. [22794]

Angela E. Smith: I understand from my right hon. friend the Secretary of State for DEFRA that, in-line with Government policy there has been no disposal of solid radioactive waste at sea since 1982. Any need to notify instances of disposal of radioactive waste at sea has therefore not arisen. In the unlikely event that such unauthorised disposals did arise, these would need to be reported to the appropriate environmental regulator as they would be in breach of the Radioactive Substances Act 1993, and therefore would constitute an illegal act. The environmental regulator in Northern Ireland would be the Environment and Heritage Service; in England and Wales, the Environment Agency; and in Scotland, the Scottish Environment Protection Agency.

Road Accidents

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many children have been (a) injured and (b) fatally injured while crossing roads outside schools in the past five years. [32102]

Mr. Woodward: The information is unavailable in the format requested. The Police Service of Northern Ireland records details of road traffic collisions by road name and not specific locations e.g. schools.

Seat Belts

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the seat belt wearing rate was in each province in Northern Ireland (a) in the last period for which figures are available and (b) in each month since 1990. [34754]

Angela E. Smith: Seat belt surveys are carried out by the Northern Ireland Statistics and Research Agency on behalf of the Department of the Environment. The series began in 1994 and was conducted biannually, in April and October, until 1997 from when it has been conducted in April only. The survey was again carried out in both April and October in 2001 on a one off basis to inform the launch of a new seatbelt publicity campaign. The nature of the data collection means that it is not possible to provide figures at a sub-regional level. The following table provides details of seat belt wearing rates in each year since the surveys began in 1994.

Sexual Offences and Robberies

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) sexual offences and (b) robberies have been reported to (i) East Belfast District Command Unit and (ii) Castlereagh District Command Unit in each year since 1998; how many reports led to (A) prosecution and (B) conviction; and what this figure is as a percentage of the total. [31988]

Mr. Woodward: The following tables show the number of sexual offences and robberies reported to East Belfast and Castlereagh DCU's in each year since 1998 together with the number of prosecutions and convictions relating to sexual offences and robberies in the period 2000 to 2003 (2000 being the earliest date and 2003 the most recent date for which this information is available). As prosecutions and convictions data cannot be linked to offences reported data, it is not possible to provide one as a meaningful percentage of the other.

Smoking Ban

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what assessment he has made of the impact on health inequalities of implementing the proposed ban on smoking in enclosed public places in Northern Ireland; [34723]

(2) what assessment he has made of the impact on health inequalities of implementing an (a) comprehensive and (b) partial ban on smoking in enclosed public places. [35006]

Mr. Woodward: Evidence from elsewhere suggests that, in addition to protecting the public and employees from exposure to second-hand smoke, comprehensive controls help to reduce smoking prevalence which is greater among lower socio-economic groups. During the course of my fact-finding visits to Dublin and New York in July, I was struck by the strength of the argument that partial controls would, in effect, create a two-tier work force whereby some employees would be protected and others would not.

There is widespread support for comprehensive controls in Northern Ireland with local trades' unions stressing the need to protect all of their members in the hospitality sector, many of whom are among the lower paid.

Sudden Cardiac Death

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the national service framework recommendations on sudden cardiac death; and what plans he has to implement them in the Province. [34652]

Mr. Woodward: The Department has not formally adopted the national service framework on coronary heart disease (NSFCHD), but recognises the need, as outlined in chapter 8 of the NSFCHD, to provide timely treatment to patients with irregular heart rhythm or who are at risk of sudden cardiac death. Many of these patients are young and may suffer from inherited cardiac disorders.

Services for people with inherited cardiac disorders are provided by consultants at the Regional Genetics Centre, Belfast City hospital, and a cardiologist at the Royal Group of Hospitals who has particular expertise in this area. Staff at the two trusts work together to provide quality care to patients and families affected by inherited cardiac disorders. They are currently exploring the potential of developing a more integrated service in line with recommendations contained in chapter 8 of the NSFCHD.

Talented Athlete Initiative

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what consideration has been given to introducing a programme in the Province similar to England's talented athlete support scheme. [33271]

Mr. Hanson: Athletes in Northern Ireland can access funding to support their development through their Governing Bodies in two ways:

(1) By inclusion in the athlete support scheme operated by the lottery.

(2) Under the Governing Body plan submitted to Sports Council for Northern Ireland's sports development unit.

The Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure, with Sports Council for Northern Ireland, is presently considering further arrangements for the identification of sporting talent. This is being addressed in the context of the strategy for sport and the Northern Ireland strategy for London 2012 Olympics and Paralympics.

Taxis

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the average waiting time is in Northern Ireland for a taxi licence plate to be issued following a successful public service vehicle test. [34559]

Angela E. Smith: The average waiting time for issuing taxi plates following a successful public service vehicle test is eight days.

Water Rates

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how the system of water rates will be based on the level of local rates levied on a domestic property. [33494]

Mr. Woodward: Water charges will not be based on the level of local rates levied on a domestic property. However, it is planned that domestic water charges will be introduced from April 2007 on the basis of a hybrid charging regime. This will mean that separate charges for water and sewerage services will be based on a standing charge, together with a variable charge based on the discrete capital value of the property. The charges will be levied and collected by the water company and will be entirely separate from local rates.

The Valuation and Lands Agency (VLA) is currently valuing all domestic properties in Northern Ireland as part of the reform of the domestic rating system. The capital value used in the calculation of water and sewerage charges will be the valuation determined by VLA.

Water Service Telemetry Centre

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what changes there have been in the number of staff working at the Water Service telemetry centre in Derry in each of the last three years; and what plans he has to re-locate the Water Service telemetry operations to one site. [33974]

Mr. Woodward: The chief executive of Water Service (Mrs. Katherine Bryan) has been asked to write to the hon. Lady in response to this question.

Letter from Mrs. Katherine Bryan, dated 6 December 2005:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland a Parliamentary Question about what changes there have been in the number of staff working at the Water Service telemetry centre in Derry in each of the last three years, and what plans he has to re-locate the Water Service telemetry operations to one site (33974). I have been asked to reply as this issue falls within my responsibility as Chief Executive of Water Service.

Water Service has four telemetry centres, based in Londonderry, Belfast, Ballymena and Craigavon, which monitor water and sewerage installations across Northern Ireland. There has been no change over the last three years to the number of Water Service staff working in the Londonderry telemetry unit based at Altnagelvin.

Following a review of telemetry operations, Water Service decided to centralise the telemetry function on one site to achieve efficiencies and standardisation of practices. This will be introduced through a phased approach with the four units reducing to two at Londonderry and Belfast in early 2006 and centralisation on one site in early 2007. The site for the centralised telemetry operation has not yet been identified. In conjunction with this centralisation the hardware and software of the telemetry monitoring system will be upgraded.

The centralisation of telemetry services will provide significant benefits for Water Service and its customers including standardised telemetry practice, improved monitoring services and savings on manpower costs.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

HIV/AIDS

6. Mark Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what actions his Department is taking towards delivery of the 2010 target for universal access to antiretroviral treatment for HIV and AIDS agreed by the G8 at Gleneagles and confirmed at the UN World Summit. [34888]

Mr. Thomas: Together with UNAIDS we will co-chair a Global Steering Committee on Scaling Up Towards Universal Access, the first meeting will be held in January 2006 to plan the steps to achieve universal access. The Committee will deliver this plan to the high level UN General Assembly Special Session in June 2006.

13. Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps he is taking to tackle HIV/AIDS in the developing world. [34896]

Mr. Thomas: Over the next three years the UK will spend at least £1.5 billion to implement the UK strategy "Taking Action". This year, the UK has made AIDS a centrepiece of our G8 and EU presidencies, focusing on the importance of more and better aid for AIDS, maintaining HIV prevention momentum, and scaling up towards universal access to AIDS treatment by 2010.

As EU President the UK hosted a high-level meeting that launched the EU Statement on HIV Prevention for an AIDS Free Generation. The UK will co-chair with UNAIDS, the Global Steering Committee on scaling up towards universal access to enhance international action to meet the G8 and World summit agreement on AIDS.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) what action his Department has taken to ensure delivery of the 2010 target for universal access to antiretroviral treatment for HIV and AIDS agreed by the G8 at Gleneagles and confirmed at the UN World summit; [33998]

(2) what steps his Department is taking to ensure delivery of the 2010 target for universal access to antiretroviral treatment for HIV and AIDS agreed by the G8 at Gleneagles and confirmed at the UN World summit. [33989]

Mr. Thomas: Gleneagles secured an important agreement

> "to develop and implement a package for HIV prevention, treatment and care, with the aim of as close as possible to universal access to treatment for all those who need it by 2010"'

Progress has been swift since Gleneagles. The universal access commitment was also agreed by members states at the Millennium summit in September. The UK convened a rapid follow-up meeting (2 September), bringing together members of the G8, developing countries, civil society, together with the Joint United Nations Programme for HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS), the World Health Organisation (WHO), the World Bank and UNICEF to start mapping out how to deliver against the commitment.

The 2 September meeting showed a strong, shared commitment to joint action and agreed that efforts must:

> be country-owned and country-led;
> develop a package which balances treatment, prevention and care—a comprehensive response is essential to achieve the ambitious 2010 goal;
> situate actions to achieve Universal Access in wider efforts to eradicate poverty, strengthening broader services, including health systems;
> involve all key players: civil society, private sector, donors and affected countries.

UNAIDS have been tasked with co-ordinating efforts and have now set up a Global Steering Committee (GSC), co-chaired by the UK and UNAIDS. The GSC will meet for the first time in Washington DC on 9/10 January 2006 and is expected to report to the High level UN General Assembly Special Session in mid 2006.

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps he is taking to tackle HIV/AIDS in the developing world. [34820]

Mr. Thomas: The UK has made a strong commitment to tackling HIV and AIDS in the developing world. Globally we are the second largest bilateral funder of AIDS-related activities. Last year saw the publication of the UK's Strategy "Taking Action: The UK's strategy for tackling HIV and AIDS in the developing world". This commits DFID to spending at least £1.5 billion over the next three years, to step up the international response to AIDS, including spending to at least £150 million to meet the needs of children affected by AIDS. This year, the UK has made AIDS a centrepiece of our G8 and EU presidencies, focusing on the importance of more and better aid for AIDS, maintaining HIV prevention momentum, and scaling up towards universal access to AIDS treatment by 2010, with the ultimate aim of achieving an AIDS-free generation.

We secured a landmark agreement at Gleneagles

> "to develop and implement a package for HIV prevention, treatment and care, with the aim of as close as possible to universal access to treatment for all those who need it by 2010."

Progress has been swift since Gleneagles. The universal access commitment was also agreed by member states at the Millennium summit in September. The UK convened a rapid follow-up, bringing together members of the G8, developing countries, civil society, together with the Joint United Nations Programme for HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS), the World Trade Organistaion (WHO), the World Bank and UNICEF to start mapping out how to deliver against the commitment.

UNAIDS have now set up a Global Steering Committee (GSC), co-chaired by the UK and UNAIDS. The GSC will meet for the first time on 9–10 January 2006 to discuss and prepare a plan of action to be considered at the high level UN General Assembly Special Session in June 2006.

In September 2005, the UK hosted the third and final Replenishment conference for the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, TB and Malaria, chaired by UN Secretary-General, Kofi Annan. The Secretary of State confirmed that the UK is doubling support for the global fund in 2006 and 2007 to £100 million in each of these two years. The UK's pledge amounted to 10 per cent. of the US $3.7 billion pledged to the global fund for the two-year period by international donor. The amount pledged by 29 donors represents more than half of the global fund's total resource needs for the two-year period.

The global fund conference also addressed the context within which the global fund operates. These discussions built on the 'Three Ones' principles and the UK co-hosted 'Making the Money Work' meeting, which had established a global task team (GTT) to improve AIDS co-ordination among multilateral and international donors. As a result of the GTT, the UK expects significant improvements in how the UN and international donors such as the global fund work together to support countries develop and lead effective responses to AIDS. To support this work, the UK doubled our contributions to UNAIDS for the next two years.

EU Ministers met in London on 30 November under the UK presidency, confirmed their commitment to increased prevention by issuing a statement on a vision for an AIDS free generation—the first pan-European pledge of its kind. The statement backs efforts to give people around the world better access to condoms and effective information. It advocates a comprehensive and evidence-based approach to HIV prevention including sexual and reproductive health information and services, harm reduction programmes for injecting drug users and reliable access to sexual reproductive health commodities.

For World AIDS day, the UK also published a cross-governmental briefing paper on harm reduction: "Tackling drug use and HIV in the developing world". This confirms the UK Government's commitment to harm reduction as an important part of the overall HIV prevention strategy in countries with serious HIV epidemics among injecting drug users, as well as in countries without serious HIV epidemics where harm reduction interventions help maintain low prevalence rates.

As part of our commitment towards stepping up efforts on HIV prevention, DFID announced on World AIDS day (1 December) that it is giving an extra £20 million to the International AIDS Vaccine Initiative, and £7.5 million to the International Programme on Microbicides. This re-affirms the UK's long-standing commitment to developing new prevention technologies, and brings our total investment in mircobicides to over £50 million.

G8 Commitments

7. Ms Diana R. Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps his Department is taking to implement the development commitments made at the G8 summit; and if he will make a statement. [34889]

Hilary Benn: The Government attach considerable importance to seeing that the Gleneagles commitments are fully implemented.

On Africa, we have already seen good progress on debt relief, tackling preventable diseases and HIV/AIDS, and promoting investment and infrastructure. But there is a great deal more still to do, so we are working closely with our G8 partners, other donors and African governments.

10. Albert Owen: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how his Department intends to turn the commitments made at the G8 summit into action on development. [34893]

Hilary Benn: The Government attach considerable importance to seeing that the Gleneagles commitments are fully implemented.

On Africa, we have already seen good progress on debt relief, tackling preventable diseases and HIV/AIDS, and promoting investment and infrastructure. But there is a great deal more still to do, so we are working closely with our G8 partners, other donors and African governments.

WTO Negotiations

8. Helen Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what development outcomes he aims to secure from the World Trade Organisation negotiations in Hong Kong. [34891]

Hilary Benn: The World Trade Organisation ministerial meeting being held next week in Hong Kong is an opportunity to make real progress on the Doha Development Round. We will be working hard to achieve the best possible result. We want an outcome which leads to global economic growth, including through better access to markets for developing countries, and in particular for the poorest nations in the world. We also want an outcome which reflects the Millennium Development Goals, and which allows the DDA to be completed during 2006.

Afghanistan

9. Mr. MacDougall: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will make a statement on the humanitarian situation in Afghanistan. [34892]

Hilary Benn: Afghanistan has made remarkable progress over the last four years and with strong commitment from the Government of Afghanistan and the international community has moved away from a predominantly humanitarian situation. To date 3.5 million refugees have returned home, the number of functioning health clinics has increased by 60 per cent., and over 5 million children are now in school. Many Afghans however remain vulnerable. During the winter in particular many suffer the effects of nature, lacking basic elements of protection. The Government of Afghanistan have begun contingency planning and drawn up a work plan to help minimize the impact of this winter upon the most vulnerable through the provision of basic relief supplies. In line with Afghanistan's needs, DFID's support has evolved from a humanitarian focus to supporting the Government in creating the conditions for sustainable development and poverty reduction.

14. Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much his Department spent in the re-building of the infrastructure in Afghanistan in each year since 2002; and if he will make a statement. [34897]

Hilary Benn: Since 2002, DFID has committed £35 million in support of the development of infrastructure in Afghanistan: £17 million of support through the National Solidarity Programme for small scale rural infrastructure; and £18 million to the National Rural Access Programme for roads construction and maintenance. Of this, £3 million was spent in 2004–05, £27 million will be spent in 2005–06 and £5 million is planned to be spent in 2006–07. Support to larger scale infrastructure is not a major focus of DFID's programme: we believe other donors are better placed to do it than DFID.

Latin America

11. Chris Bryant: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will make a statement on his Department's funding for Latin America in 2005–06. [34894]

Mr. Thomas: DFID expects to provide £10.3 million to Latin America in 2005–06 through its bilateral programme and £36 million through centrally funded activities. In addition, DFID contributes to the expenditure of multilateral organisations in the region (£91 million in 2003, the last year for which data are available).

DFID's Regional Assistance Plan for Latin America 2004–07 sets the framework for its bilateral programme involvement in the region (copies are available in the Libraries of the House). Funding in 2005–06 comprises of regional programmes (£3.5 million) to tackle regional issues such as HIV/AIDS and to improve the impact of the Inter-American Development Bank and World Bank on poverty; and bilateral programmes in Nicaragua (£3.8 million), Bolivia (£1.5 million) and Brazil (£1.5 million). Programmes in Bolivia and Brazil are in their final year.

DFID centrally funded activities benefiting Latin America in 2005–06 include over £10 million for UK non-governmental organisations (NGOs) through the Civil Society Challenge Fund and the additional regional allocation for six Partnership Programme Arrangement NGOs; at least £1 million of research programmes; debt relief of £23 million; humanitarian relief of £250,000; and co-financing of the Global Conflict Reduction Pool (a total of £1.8 million from all Government Departments).

Gaza

12. Mrs. Riordan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps he is taking to assist the Palestinian Authority to reopen the airport at Gaza. [34895]

Hilary Benn: The Government fully supports the work of the Quartet Special Envoy, James Wolfensohn, to ensure that Israeli Disengagement is a success. Mr. Wolfensohn has identified six priority areas for joint Israeli and Palestinian work on movement and access, which include the construction of an airport for Gaza. We welcome the 15 November agreement between the Palestinian Authority and the Government of Israel and their commitment to continuing discussions about restoring the airport. To lend support, the UK has seconded two experts to the Special Envoy's team to help move forward progress on Gaza disengagement.

Africa

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps his Department is taking to improve food (a) productivity and (b) security in Africa on a sustainable basis. [33987]

Hilary Benn: DFID has always recognised the importance of agriculture to reducing poverty. A new DFID agricultural policy paper will be launched on shortly which will set out how we will do more and improve the benefits to poor people.

Examples of current support include:

Agricultural research to develop new technologies. We currently spend some £25 million per year on this.

Expansion of infrastructure to link producers to markets. Three out of five rural Africans live in areas with good agricultural potential but little access to markets. For example, we are providing $20 million to the Infrastructure Consortium for Africa, which will enable G8 and multilateral donors make more effective infrastructure investments.

Increasing public expenditure on agriculture and rural development such as crop and livestock services through support to Governments' central and agricultural budgets.

DFID has responded quickly to address hunger in the immediate term in Africa. This year we have provided £64 million through the UN, other agencies and some of the Governments in the region. Zimbabwe, Malawi, and Zambia are the worst-affected countries, although Mozambique, Lesotho and Swaziland also face shortages.

DFID is also helping to build longer term food security. For example, we are currently supporting a programme for 5 million people affected by chronic hunger in Ethiopia with £25 million per year. This programme provides regular payments of cash and food to 5 million chronically hungry people. This meets their immediate food needs but is also designed to help them climb out of poverty in the longer term, as it allows them to become more productive by purchasing assets such as seeds, goats or oxen, knowing they will still have a safety net in times of crisis. DFID proposes to scale up this national safety net approach for those affected by hunger in Malawi, Zambia, Lesotho, and Kenya over the next year.

Asian Tsunami

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent progress has been made in the relief effort for the areas affected by the Asian tsunami of December 2004; and if he will make a statement. [34543]

Mr. Thomas: The relief phase of the response has ended, and the international community is now supporting the affected Governments as they work towards the longer-term recovery and reconstruction of affected areas.

The UK allocated £75 million for the immediate humanitarian relief effort following the tsunami. A total of £68.7 million of this has been committed, while the remainder has been set aside for disaster risk reduction projects.

DFID allocated £65 million to meet reconstruction needs in the tsunami affected countries. From this allocation £31 million has been committed to the Multi Donor Trust Fund in Indonesia, of which £6 million has so far been paid out. A further £5 million has been committed for technical assistance in Indonesia to help ensure timely, accountable and equitable provision of reconstruction assistance and rebuilding of livelihoods. A total of £2 million has been committed to Sri Lanka to help speed up implementation of reconstruction programmes and to ensure equitable distribution of assistance, and £1.5 million of this has been allocated to the North East Provincial Council to increase their capacity to deliver services to affected communities.

A total of £3 million has been committed to India to provide technical assistance aimed at ensuring effective, transparent and equitable programming of tsunami reconstruction efforts. The use of the balance will depend on evidence of where this funding can be most appropriately used.

Bilateral Aid

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much and what proportion of his Department's spending on bilateral aid has been allocated to (a) Africa, (b) Sub-Saharan Africa, (c) Iraq and (d) Afghanistan in each year since 1997. [34842]

Hilary Benn: Details of DFID's spending on bilateral aid to Africa, Sub-Saharan Africa, Iraq and Afghanistan in each financial year since 1997 are set out in the following table along with the proportion that each represents of DFID's bilateral aid programme.

Statistics on International Development

Commonwealth Development Corporation

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the total amount of compensation paid to (a) UK and (b) foreign employees of CDC/the Commonwealth Development Corporation has been since 1997; if he will list the cases concerned; and how much was awarded in each case. [33806]

Hilary Benn: There were four deaths of Commonwealth Development Corporation (CDC) employees in service during this period, all due to medical conditions. They received normal death-in-service payments of four times their salary, spouse pension and child allowance where appropriate. There were five medical retirements of CDC employees during the period, who received accelerated medical pensions from the CDC pension scheme. The exact details of these cases are confidential.

One employee left the CDC with a stress related illness and received a compensation payment of £10,300.

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will list the team-building exercises undertaken by CDC/the Commonwealth Development Corporation since 1997; and what the cost was of each such exercise. [33807]

Hilary Benn: I refer the member for Hemel Hempstead to the reply given on 4 October 2004, Official Report, column 1775W.

Information prior to 2002, covering the former Commonwealth Development Corporation from 1997 to 1999, and CDC Group plc since 1999, is not readily available. There has been no expenditure on team-building by the CDC since June 2004.

Departmental Expenditure

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much the Department and its agencies have spent on (a) the design and production of new logos and (b) employing external (i) public relations and (ii) graphic design agencies in each year since 2000, broken down by project. [33221]

Mr. Thomas: The Department for International Development (DFID) has spent nothing on the design and production of new logos; or on public relations in the years in question. Spending on graphic design agencies are as follows:

Owing to changes in the DFID accounting system figures for the years 2000–01 to 2002–03 could be extracted only by incurring a disproportionate cost.

Departmental Projects

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many projects his Department is engaged in; in which developing countries; and at what total cost. [34656]

Hilary Benn: DFID's Performance Reporting Information System for Management (PRISM) contains details of our current portfolio of projects and programmes. There are currently over 3,300 projects/programmes shown as operational on the system. The total commitment value of these projects/programmes is £9 billion.

Within the portfolio we have projects/programmes operational in 130 countries. There are also a number of projects/programmes focused on regions and in some cases these will benefit countries not included above.

Note:

The figures given exclude core funding provided by DFID to multilateral agencies.

Information on the amount of money spent in different countries by year can be found in DFID's annual publication 'Statistics on International Development'. The 2005 edition was published in October and is available from DFID's website address at: www.dfid.gov.uk and in the Libraries of the House.

Departmental Tendering Policy

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what his policy is on including (a) ethical and (b) environmental factors in tenders for services. [32335]

Mr. Thomas: DFID expects to let all its contracts in accordance with ethical principles, and would consider any case where evidence to the contrary was presented. All DFID initiatives over £1 million are automatically subject to environmental screening processes. DFID purchasing staff and procurement agents are required to follow DFID's environmental procurement policy, which is in line with UK policy on sustainable procurement.

Free Trade

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps he is taking to promote free trade; and if he will make a statement. [34821]

Mr. Thomas: The UK Government are committed to the development of an open and rules-based international trading system that fulfils its potential to contribute to the reduction of poverty in poorer countries. Our key policy commitments on trade and development, as well as our objectives for the current Round of multilateral trade talks, are set out in the Government's White Papers, Making Globalisation a Force for Good (July 2004) and Eliminating World Poverty: Making Globalisation Work for the Poor (December 2000). The UK Government are working hard to support the poorest and most vulnerable producers, be it through multilateral negotiations in the World Trade Organisation (WTO) or regional trade agreements such as the Economic Partnership Agreements.

The UK Government do not support forced liberalisation or unfettered free trade but trade that is fair as well as free. The UK Government supports the view that developing countries need to decide on the timing, pace and sequencing of any market opening in line with their own national development and poverty reduction plans. In the context of the WTO negotiations we are firmly committed to ensuring that developing countries are given appropriate flexibility to adjust to trade reforms.

In the longterm, the removal of trade barriers, if managed properly, can help developing countries gain better access to developed country markets and more competitively priced inputs. By increasing Aid for Trade, (AFT) the UK hopes to help poorer countries seize the opportunities presented by more open markets. DFID will treble its support to £100 million a year by 2010 to help boost poor countries' capacity to trade. This shows the UK re-affirming the commitment at the G8 summit to help developing countries trade their way out of poverty.

At the WTO ministerial in Hong Kong we are working with international partners to deliver on the ambition of Doha and build on G8 commitments. The UK Government are working to achieve an outcome that delivers real gains for developing countries, including the poorest.

Global Fund

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions he has had with his G8 colleagues about funding for the Global Fund since the London conference on 5 and 6 September 2005, what assessment he has made about the level of money pledged to the Global Funds as a result of the London conference; what firm pledges have been received from donor countries to the Global Fund who were unable to make commitments at the London conference; and if he will make a statement on the UK's commitment to the Global Fund. [33994]

Mr. Thomas: Since the London Replenishment Conference for the Global Fund, the UK has continued discussions with G8 partners, through G8 officials' meetings, to ensure that the Gleneagles commitment to the Global Fund is met. We will also re-double our efforts to make Global Fund resources work better and demonstrate good results. This is crucial if the Global Fund is to widen its funding base and achieve the longer term sustainability it needs.

At the London conference, donors pledged US$ 3.7 billion for the two-year period 2006–2007, more than half the estimated US $7 billion needed to replenish the Global Fund for this period. This is a significant achievement which has enabled all existing Global Fund projects to continue plus provided funding for a small number of new projects. The Replenishment conference also focused on improving the Global Fund performance at global and country level. To make the Global Fund's money work effectively, the UK also pledged at the Replenishment conference, to double our contribution to the Joint United Nations Programme for HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS) from £8 million to £16 million for the financial year 2005–6. Replenishment of the Global Fund is an on-going process. A follow-up Conference will be held in June 2006 to secure additional pledges.

Donors who were unable to make pledges at the London conference (due to their funding cycles) included Canada, the US and the EC. Since the conference, Canada announced a firm pledge of Can$ 250 million (around US$ 213 million) (this was included in the US$ 3.7 billion pledging figure). The US House and Senate Conference Committee have now approved US$ 450 million for the Global Fund for 2006. This is US$150 million more than was anticipated in London. In addition, the US may appropriate more through the forthcoming Health and Human Services Bill. The European Commission's 2006 budget is still being finalised and the Financial Perspectives governing the budget from 2007 are yet to be agreed. Currently the European Union (including the Commission and members states) has pledged almost 60 per cent. of the commitments made at the conference to the Global Fund's finances for 2006 and 2007.

At the Replenishment Conference, the UK doubled its funding to the Global Fund from £51 million for 2006 and £51 million in 2007, to £100 million for 2006 and £100 million for 2007. Our contribution amounted to some 10 per cent. of the total US$3.7 billion pledged. Overall the UK has pledged 359 million (US$ 640 million) to the Global Fund over seven years (2002–08). DFID will continue to encourage donors to do as much as they can to substantially increase their contributions to the Global Fund.

Global Tariffs

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the likely implications for developing countries of President Bush's recent comments on reducing global tariffs. [34882]

Mr. Thomas: DFID would welcome moves to reduce tariffs, subsidies and other barriers to the free flow of goods and services. The UK has made assessments based on studies from the World Bank, the United Nations and the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) that suggest substantial gains for developing countries resulting from developed country liberalisation of agricultural and industrial trade. Of course, the level of gains for developing countries depends on the level of reform in developed country agriculture policies and liberalisation efforts undertaken by developing countries themselves. If the current round of trade talks are really to deliver their Development objectives, then clearly, as the Prime Minister has said, all sides need to move further and allow poor countries to trade their way out of poverty.

Humanitarian/Reconstruction Assistance

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much and what proportion of his Department's spending has been allocated to humanitarian and reconstruction assistance in (a) Africa, (b) Sub-Saharan Africa, (c) Iraq and (d) Afghanistan in each year since 1997. [34843]

Hilary Benn: The amounts and proportion of DFID spending allocated to humanitarian assistance in Africa, sub-Saharan Africa, Iraq and Afghanistan are shown in the table.

DFID does not centrally track specific expenditure on reconstruction assistance. It would incur a disproportionate cost for all country offices to undertake this analysis.

Maladministration

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many payments for maladministration have been made by (a) his Department, (b) its agencies, (c) its non-departmental public bodies and (d) other bodies for which his Department has responsibility in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [32242]

Hilary Benn: It is the policy of DFID to make financial redress for maladministration in accordance with the guidance set out in Chapter 18.7 and Annexes 18.1 and 18.2 of Government Accounting.

The number of payments made by DFID in each of the last five years is set out in the following table. It should be noted that of these cases, over the five year period, only six related to DFID operation, the remaining majority related to payments to pensioners and dependants through the Overseas Superannuation Department:

DFID	2000–01	2001–02	2002–03	2003–04	2004–05
Department	4	21	6	7	12
Agencies[1]	—	—	—	—	—
NDPBs[1]	—	—	—	—	—
Bodies sponsored by Department[1]	—	—	—	—	—

[1] DFID has no agencies, non-departmental public bodies, or other bodies for which it has responsibility, to be included in this report.

Malawi

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps the UK has taken (a) to respond to (i) the food shortages and (ii) other humanitarian needs in Malawi and (b) prevent further food crisis in the country in 2006. [33988]

Hilary Benn: The UK Government have contributed £18.2 million to address Malawi's food shortages this year. These funds will pay for around 55,000 tons of maize with pulses and oil to provide a balanced diet. This food will be distributed with the help of non-governmental organisations on the ground to poor people whose harvests have failed and who do not have money to buy food. Our funds also paid options for the Government of Malawi on a further 60,000 tons of maize, the purchase of seeds for the harvest in 2006 and Government capacity building, including financing a logistics unit to distribute food on behalf of the Government.

On other humanitarian requirements, the UK Government are providing support to UNICEF for the treatment of severely malnourished children. In addition, the £100 million that the UK Government are contributing to the health sector over six years is helping to address related health problems, such as cholera outbreaks, which have been dealt with successfully.

The prospects for food production in 2006 depend principally on the weather, for which the long-term forecasts are encouraging. The UK and other donors are meeting with the Government of Malawi on 7 and 8 December to examine the effectiveness of existing policies for agriculture and safety nets and to identify new approaches that will be more effective in addressing the underlying problems through faster growth and better support to reduce chronic problems of hunger.

Millennium Development Goals

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development pursuant to the answer of 9 November 2005, Official Report, column 473W, on the Millennium Development Goals, by how much each of the targets are likely to be achieved or missed. [34734]

Mr. Thomas: Globally, the Millennium Development Goals (MDG) targets for reducing extreme poverty by half, for equal enrolment of girls and boys in primary school, and for halving the proportion of people without access to improved drinking water are on track to be met by 2015.

The target to halt and reverse the spread of HIV/AIDS is off track.

Progress towards the other targets is reported as 'lagging' by the United Nations Statistics Division. Progress is being made, but not fast enough to reach the targets by 2015.

For all the goals, progress is varied across the globe. Sub-Saharan Africa is not on track to meet any of the goals. The number of people living on less than $1 a day in Sub-Saharan Africa increased from 227 million in 1990, to 313 million in 2001, while numbers decreased from 936 million to 703 million in Asia, due to sustained growth in China and acceleration of the economy in India.

Pakistan

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps the Government have taken to hasten the release of aid containers for the areas affected by earthquake from retention by Pakistani customs. [34542]

Mr. Thomas: DFID is not aware of any widespread concerns about aid being held up, although we are aware that a consignment from an Irish non-governmental organisation has been held up during the customs clearance process. The United Nations are supporting the organisation concerned in approaching the Pakistan authorities to have the supplies cleared.

Race Equality Impact Assessments

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many Race Equality Impact Assessments his Department completed between (a) April 2004 and March 2005 and (b) April 2005 and November 2005; and how many assessments in each period resulted in a change of policy. [32823]

Mr. Thomas: The information requested is provided in the following table:

	Number of race equality impact assessments	How many resulted in a change of policy
April 2004 to March 2005	0	0
April 2005 to November 2005	1	[1]0

[1] Impact assessment currently underway—outcome still uncertain.

Sick Leave

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many of his Department's employees who are within one year of the official retirement age are on extended sick leave. [32593]

Mr. Thomas: None of DFID's employees who are within one year of the official retirement age are on extended sick leave. The official retirement age within DFID is 60, although staff may choose to serve on until age 65, subject to continued capability and satisfactory service. My Department is committed to managing sickness absence effectively and to putting in place the recommendations of the 2004 "Managing Sickness Absence in the Public Sector" report to reduce long-term sickness absence.

St. Helena

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the expenditure by the UK Government on conservation of St. Helena's biodiversity has been in each year since 1997. [34082]

Mr. Thomas: DFID does not keep statistics that separate out conservation of biodiversity from other conservation work on St. Helena.

DFID provides St. Helena with funding through both direct budget support (to fund the budget deficit) and through development aid projects. St. Helena Government's expenditure in each financial year on conservation is shown in the following table, and this includes DFID funding in the form of direct budget support.

	St. Helena Government conservation budget
1997–98	67,614
1998–99	68,821
1999–2000	66,977
2000–01	70,323
2001–02	69,373
2002–03	72,893
2003–04	76,818
2004–05	75,090

In addition, the joint DFID/FCO Overseas Territories Environment Programme (total budget £1.5 million over three years), a development aid project that covers all the UK Overseas Territories, spent £67,311 in 2004–05 and £41,000 in the current financial year on projects in St. Helena.

A number of development aid infrastructure projects funded by DFID on the island also contribute directly and indirectly to the conservation of the island's biodiversity: the Drip Irrigation Project (£198,000 over three years) and Water Development Phase II Project (£1.25 million over five years) being good examples. The development aid programme has also included projects on forestry, water catchment, fishing, flora conservation and rodent control during the period.

St. Helena has also received modest amounts of financial support for conservation from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office Environmental Fund, the Worldwide Fund for Nature and the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds. Many activities under a United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) Tourism Project also involve aspects of conservation.

Trade Barriers

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps he is taking to encourage the EU to reform its agricultural policies to remove the trade barriers affecting developing countries. [34441]

Mr. Thomas: The Government acknowledges the damaging impact that dumping and trade-distorting subsidies have on developing countries, particularly on their agriculture sectors. We fully support the commitment made at the World Trade Organisation (WTO) Doha ministerial meeting in 2001, which agreed that agriculture negotiations would aim to achieve: substantial improvements in market access; reductions of, with a view to phasing out, all forms of export subsidies; and substantial reductions in trade-distorting domestic support.

The package of reforms to the EU's common agricultural policy (CAP) agreed in June 2003 and May 2004 mark a significant shift in the EU's agricultural policy. The de-coupling of subsidies from production should connect European farmers much more closely to the market and have real impacts on reducing excessive production, which harms developing countries. The Government will continue to be at the forefront of those pushing for further reform of the EU's agricultural policy and I welcome the fact that the EU Commission has reaffirmed its commitment to ensuring that the EU plays a full and constructive role in the WTO agriculture negotiations. I also welcome the commitment in the WTO to agree to set an end date for all export supports.

The Doha Development Agenda and specifically the WTO ministerial conference in Hong Kong represent an important opportunity to make a significant contribution to reducing global poverty. The UK Government are working to achieve an outcome that delivers real gains for developing countries, including the poorest. These gains should include improved participation by developing countries in the world trading system, through substantially increased market access for developing countries and the dismantling of trade-distorting agricultural subsidies by industrialised countries.

UN Population Fund

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many (a) males and (b) females are employed by the United Nations Population Fund in India; and what their core duties are. [34747]

Mr. Thomas: DFID does not provide funding in country to the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) and as such does not have any influence on or knowledge of the numbers of staff it has. This question should therefore more appropriately be addressed to the UNFPA in India directly.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development whether the United Nations Population Fund is involved in sex selection abortions in India; and if he will make a statement. [34748]

Mr. Thomas: Sex selection abortions are illegal in India. The Pre-Conception & Pre-Natal Diagnostic Techniques (Prohibition of Sex Selection) Act and Rules 1994 (amended 2002) prohibit sex selection by any means, before or after conception.

The United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) in India has a mandate to promote gender equality and to address practices that harm women. As such the UNFPA is working closely with the Government of India to support them in implementing the Prohibition of Sex Selection Act.

The UNFPA's support takes the form of public advocacy campaigns targeted at policy-makers and the public in order to raise awareness of gender imbalance across India as a result of illegal sex selection practices. The UNFPA has been intensifying its awareness-raising efforts recently to include the media and entertainment industries.

Further information on UNFPA's work on this issue in India can be obtained by contacting them directly: www.unfpa.org

PRIME MINISTER

Correspondence

Sarah Teather: To ask the Prime Minister when he will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Brent East dated 7 July on behalf of Ms Susan Llewellyn. [33859]

The Prime Minister: My Office has informed the office of the hon. Member that the letter has not been received.

Departmental Tendering Policy

Martin Horwood: To ask the Prime Minister what his policy is on including (a) ethical and (b) environmental factors in tenders for his Office's services. [33339]

The Prime Minister: For these purposes my Office forms part of the Cabinet Office. I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him on 6 December 2005, Official Report, column 1128W by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary for the Cabinet Office (Jim Murphy).

Donated Asset Reserve

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the 20 most expensive gifts he has received which are held as part of the donated asset reserve. [34357]

The Prime Minister: The Government has published an annual list of gifts received by Ministers in an official capacity valued at more than £140 since 2001. Copies of the lists are available in the Libraries of the House. The list makes clear which gifts are held by Government Departments.

Meetings

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Prime Minister when he last met the Prime Minister of Canada; and what was discussed. [34702]

The Prime Minister: I last met the Canadian Prime Minister, Paul Martin, at the G8 summit at Gleneagles in July. We discussed a wide range of issues including those on the G8 agenda: Africa, climate change and the Middle East Peace Process. For further details I refer my hon. Friend to the No. 10 website.

I also held a video-conference with the Canadian Prime Minister, in my capacity as presidency of the European Union, on 24 November. We discussed a range of issues including the Canada/EU strategic partnership. I refer my hon. Friend to the joint statement made after the conference. This is available on the No. 10 website.

Ministerial Pensions

Gregory Barker: To ask the Prime Minister (1) what the value of his ministerial pension is expected to be at the end of (a) November 2005, (b) December 2005 and (c) December 2006; and if he will make a statement; [34810]

(2) what the total cost of contributions to his ministerial pension has been since 1997; [34811]

(3) how much from public funds has been used to fund his ministerial pension in each month since 1997. [34812]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Yeovil (Mr. Laws) on 3 November 2005, Official Report, column 1245W.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Corporate Responsibility

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on her policies to promote corporate responsibility. [35031]

Mr. Morley: The Department for Trade and Industry has primary responsibility for corporate responsibility issues.

The Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (DEFRA) works to improve the UK's environmental performance, including that of UK business. This is a particularly important theme of DEFRA's strategic priority on sustainable consumption and production.

On the narrower issue of corporate responsibility, we will shortly publish "Environmental Key Performance Indicators: Reporting Guidelines for UK Business". These guidelines will assist companies in fulfilling their obligations for an enhanced business review under the EU accounts modernisation directive, and in producing sustainability, corporate responsibility or environmental reports.

DEFRA also promotes robust and credible environmental management systems (EMSs). In September 2005, we published a position statement setting out the qualities of a good EMS, and the steps Government are taking to encourage wider take up of these.

GM Crops

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the latest advice being offered by the Department is on separation distances between genetically modified (GM) and non-GM crops. [35105]

Mr. Morley: No GM crops are currently being grown in the UK. We will issue a consultation paper in due course on proposals to manage the co-existence of GM and non-GM crops. This will include proposed separation distances reflecting the latest scientific evidence.

Opinion Polls

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the (a) subject matter and (b) dates were of opinion survey research undertaken by the Department since its inception; if she will place copies of the results of each survey in the Library; which companies were used in conducting the research; and how much each was paid. [27919]

Jim Knight: Since inception, Defra's Communications Directorate has commissioned an omnibus tracking survey to measure public awareness of DEFRA, knowledge of its responsibilities and opinions on its performance.

Surveys conducted as follows;

Date	Company	Cost (£)
February 2002	Taylor Nelson Sofres	42,000
April 2004	Taylor Nelson Sofres	14,950
October 2005	Taylor Nelson Sofres	26,000

Copies of all three surveys will be available in the Library.

River Beds (Ownership)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the ownership status of a river bed is where both banks are in private ownership. [33891]

Mr. Morley: A riparian owner (a landowner with a frontage along a watercourse) is presumed to own the land up to the centre of the watercourse, unless it is known to be owned by others. If the watercourse flows through land where the owner owns both banks, then the presumption will be that that the owner owns the whole of the bed.

The presumption may be displaced by actual proof that the riparian owner does not own the bed. This may occur when the land adjoining the watercourse has been sold without the vendor conveying his part of the bed as a result of an oversight in conveyancing. Sometimes the bed itself may be bought separately from the adjoining land, perhaps to allow access by boat to other land owned by the purchaser. In other cases the ownership of the bed is vested in, for example, the navigation authority by a local Act of Parliament in order to give control over the use of the river.

School Milk

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs why the Rural Payments Agency's inspection report on the operation of the school milk subsidy scheme on the Isle of Wight has not been published; and if she will place a copy in the Library. [35440]

Jim Knight: The Rural Payments Agency (RPA) is dealing with a request for information under the Freedom of Information Act from the Dairy Products Champion for the south east region, which includes making available the inspection report of the school milk subsidy scheme on the Isle of Wight. The report will be made available in the next few days.

A copy of the report will be placed in the Library of the House.

SSSI Sites (Stroud)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list sites of special scientific interest in Stroud constituency. [35179]

Jim Knight: There are 25 sites of special scientific interest in the Stroud constituency. Details of those sites are set out in the following table.

Site	Area in Stroud constituency (ha)

MINISTER FOR WOMEN

Company Boards

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Minister for Women and Equality what steps she is taking to assist women in reaching more senior positions on company boards. [34645]

Meg Munn: Government take improving board effectiveness very seriously and that's why it is vital to encourage more women into the senior roles and ultimately, top executive positions. This year's female FTSE 100 report revealed that 78 FTSE 100 companies now have women directors, up 13 per cent. from last year.

However, there is still more work to be done which is why Government support initiatives such as the FTSE 100 cross company mentoring scheme—'Women Directors on Boards', which is backed by 29 Chairman and CEOs.

"Building Better Boards", published by the DTI one year ago, spells out the business case for diversity and the different ways in which companies can recruit and develop and a wider range of talent.

Non-working Mothers

Mr. Bone: To ask the Minister for Women and Equality what measures the Government propose to take to encourage women to stay at home and look after their children rather than returning to work. [33640]

Meg Munn: Parents are the best people to make decisions about the interests of their children. The Government's role is to support families and to ensure they have meaningful choices about how they live their lives. The core aim of the Work and Families Bill is about helping to give children the best start in life and how to enable all families to have genuine choices about how they balance their work and family caring responsibilities.

The 2005 budget announced a commitment to increase the child element of child tax credit at least in line with average earnings up to and including 2007–08. It is currently worth up to £1,690 a year per child, benefiting 7 million children in 3.6 million families.

Pension Inequality

Stephen Hesford: To ask the Minister for Women and Equality what recent steps the Government have taken to tackle women's pension inequality. [35170]

Meg Munn: The Department for Work and pensions published a report entitled 'Women and pensions: The evidence' in November. This will inform the ongoing National Pensions Debate.

The Pensions commission published their report on 30 November 2005, and we will wish to analyse the evidence and consider the options and recommendations put forward by the commission and involve every section of our community as we work towards the publication of a White Paper in the spring.

This will help us to build on the achievements we have already made in lifting £1.9 million pensioners out of absolute low income 1.3 million of whom are women.

Student Loans

Mr. McGovern: To ask the Minister for Women and Equality whether the provision of student loans for postgraduate students will be covered by the clauses of the Equality Bill on age discrimination. [33959]

Meg Munn [holding answer 2 December 2005]: There are currently no clauses in the Equality Bill on age discrimination. Age discrimination in the provision of goods, facilities and services is currently being considered as part of the Discrimination Law Review, announced in February. We expect to publish a Green Paper in late spring 2006.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Departmental Finance

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the real terms percentage increase in allocated resources for his Department (a) was for the period 1997–98 to 2004–05 and (b) is estimated to be between 2005–06 and 2007–08 (i) for each period and (ii) for each year. [31041]

Alan Johnson: The information requested is as follows.

(a) The real terms percentage increase in allocated resources for the Department of Trade and Industry for period 1997–98 to 2004–05 was 5 per cent.

(b) The estimated real terms increase in allocated resources for the Department of Trade and Industry between 2005–06 and 2007–08:

(i) is estimated to be 3 per cent. on average over the period 2005 to 2008; and

(ii) for each year is estimated to be a 7 per cent. increase in 2005–06 over 2004–05, a 1 per cent. increase in 2006–07 over 2005–06 and a 2 per cent. increase in 2007–08 over 2006–07.

Departmental Staff

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many staff in his Department have been relocated into London and the South East in each of the last five years for which records are available. [31741]

Alan Johnson: The Department does not hold records on staff that have been relocated into London and the South East in each of the last five years. Following the Lyons Review of Public Sector Relocation and the Spending Review 2004 the Government set Departments targets to relocate 20,000 posts from London and the South East by 2010. The Department has committed to relocate 685 posts by 2010 and 194 posts had been relocated by end October 2005.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to relocate staff in his Department and related agencies into London and the South East. [31748]

Alan Johnson: The Department has no plans to relocate staff in the Department and related agencies into London and the South East. Following the Lyons Review of Public Sector Relocation and the Spending Review 2004, the Government set Departments targets to relocate 20,000 posts from London and the South East by 2010. The Department has committed to relocate 685 posts by 2010 and 194 of these posts had been relocated by end of October 2005.

Doha Trade Talks

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recommendations he will be proposing on agricultural tariffs to the Doha trade round talks in Hong Kong. [33641]

Ian Pearson: The Government's long-term goal is to abolish progressively all barriers to agricultural trade in the forms of both tariffs and quotas. The Government aims to take an important step towards this goal through the Doha Development Agenda.

The European Commission negotiates in the World Trade Organisation on behalf of the European Union's 25 member states, within the parameters of a negotiating mandate laid out in a succession of council conclusions.

Export Credits Guarantee Department

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many investigations into companies have been undertaken by the Export Credits Guarantee Department (ECGD) in each of the last five years; and what steps the ECGD takes following an allegation of corruption or bribery against a company to which it has provided guarantee support. [33930]

Ian Pearson: ECGD makes Inquiries appropriate to each case before providing support for a transaction. ECGD reports any allegations of wrongdoing, or other suspicious circumstances which come to its attention, to the appropriate investigatory authorities, where a decision can be made regarding investigation by the appropriate criminal investigative bodies. ECGD has made enquiries in two instances, in 2003–4 and 2004–5, where companies have been convicted or admitted to bribery.

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many export credit guarantees have been entered into by subsidiaries of Halliburton since 2004; what the terms were of the deals for each of these guarantees; and if he will make a statement. [33932]

Ian Pearson: I refer the hon Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Twickenham (Dr. Cable) on 22 February 2005, Official Report, column 556W. ECGD has not provided any guarantees for subsidiaries of Halliburton since 2004.

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry for which transactions related to agent's commissions the Export Credit Guarantee Department (ECGD) requested an independent value for money check in each of the last 10 years; which countries were involved in each such transaction; what the value of each of the relevant contracts was; which exporters were involved in the transactions; and what conclusion the ECGD reached in each case. [33962]

Ian Pearson: ECGD does not carry out independent value for money checks of the amount of agent's commission. Where there is agent's commission payable, in respect of transactions for which ECGD support is being requested, the Department has a system in place for checking the legality of any such agent's commission and whether the amounts involved conform with normal market practice in the country concerned. ECGD also reserves the right to ask further questions of the exporter if the level of the agent's commission appears excessive compared to the services being provided.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the sum is of Nigeria's debt to the UK Export Credits Guarantee Department which is scheduled to be removed by arrears payments and buy-backs by Nigeria and cancellation by the Government by April 2006; what the purpose of the loans was; and who the original lenders were. [34178]

Ian Pearson: The total debt owed to ECGD by Nigeria, which is the subject of the latest debt agreement, is £3.4 billion plus US$1.8 billion.

The majority of this debt, relating to a number of large capital goods contracts and diverse smaller, short-term business, accrued during the 1980s debt crisis. Because it arose from ECGD support for many thousands of contracts and hundreds of exporters, details about individual contracts could be supplied only at disproportionate cost.

Female Business Women

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps his Department is taking to encourage women to start their own businesses. [34693]

Alun Michael: In every area it is the role of the local Business Link to advise and signpost women to the range of help and support that is now available to them. The Government are developing the economic argument for Women's Enterprise and earlier this year published the booklet, "Promoting Female Entrepreneurship", which captures headline facts and has been used to stimulate thinking across Government and the regional development agencies.

The Government have been working with partners within the Business Support arena to improve understanding of the support requirements of female entrepreneurs. This has resulted in a training programme for Business Link advisers called 'the Case', which is currently being rolled out and completes early next year.

In October 2004 the Government reinforced their commitment to Women's Enterprise development with joint Hewitt/Brown formation of the Women's Enterprise Panel. The panel has: (i) developed an action plan to achieve a target of 20 per cent. female business ownership; and (ii) made a recommendation to Government to establish a National Women's Enterprise Task Force.

The Government are working with the British Bankers Association to raise awareness of the full range of finance options available to female entrepreneurs.

There is now a cross-Regional Development Agencies Group on Women's Enterprise. We also have an ongoing programme of work with RDAs and Black and Minority Ethnic women's networks to ensure that women from ethnic minority communities have improved access to Business Support.

To give just one local example, in Coventry, Leigh-Anne Kirby and Lisa Tedds with help from Business Link, the Women's Business Development Agency and the Prince's Trust have successfully set up their Children's Activity Centre business called Monster Mayhem.

There are over 40,000 more women in self-employment now than in spring 1997.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the number of companies with women on their boards. [34694]

Meg Munn: The Female FTSE figures for 2005 were published in November and showed an increase in the number of women on the boards of FTSE 1,000 companies. This index revealed that 78 companies have women on their boards and reflects an increase of 13 per cent. since 2004. Women now make up 10.5 per cent. of board members compared to 5.8 per cent. in 2000.

Similar information for other companies is not available.

Flexitime Rules

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proportion of staff in his Department have flexitime included as a provision of their contract of employment. [28731]

Alan Johnson: Staff appointment contracts set out the total number of hours that staff are required to work and do not include specific provisions for flexitime working. It is a matter for local agreement how these hours are worked, either on the flexibility of start and finish times or allowing staff to work a more formal flexible working hours scheme-so long as an agreed central core time is worked each day and conditioned hours worked each week. Since it is a matter of local agreement, the Department does not keep a central record of those staff who work under a formal flexible working hours scheme. Information on each member of staffs local flexible working arrangements could therefore only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Literacy and Numeracy

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many employees in his Department requested training to improve their (a) literacy and (b) numeracy skills in each year since 2002. [23414]

Alan Johnson: Figures for literacy and numeracy take up in the Department are not held centrally. These items are discussed and dealt with locally in each group within DTI. Individuals discuss and review their training and development needs with their line managers as part of the performance management process. Any skills gaps in literacy or numeracy are identified and the appropriate help in a number of ways, for example, through training courses, on the job training or the Skills for Life Programme at an external learning establishment. Staff can also approach their union learning representative for advice and sources of help on how to improve their literacy and numeracy.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much his Department spent on in-house training on (a) literacy and (b) numeracy (i) in total and (ii) per head, in each year since 2002. [23437]

Alan Johnson: The Department does not run any specific in-house training on basic literacy or numeracy skills although courses in finance and in writing skills which will cover literacy and numeracy are available. DTI training budgets are devolved among groups, therefore figures for how much DTI spends on in-house training are not available.

Ministerial Travel

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on how many occasions since 7 July 2005 he has used the London Underground in connection with his official duties. [35020]

Alan Johnson: None. Just as before 7 July 2005, I walk to official engagements where possible and use the Government Car Service when necessary.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will answer questions (a) 26315, (b) 26316 and (c) 26317 tabled by the hon. Member for Stratford-on-Avon on 3 November 2005. [33009]

Alan Johnson: I refer the hon. Member to his questions which were answered on 23 November 2005, Official Report, column 2045W and 2 December 2005, Official Report, column 884W.

Small Firms Loan Guarantees

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the expenditure was on the small firms loan guarantees scheme in each financial year from 2000–01 (a) in total and (b) in each (i) region and (ii) county in (A) cash and (B) real terms; and what this was in (1) cash and (2) real terms expenditure per head of population. [34400]

Alun Michael: Expenditure on the small firms loan guarantee (SFLG) occurs when a borrower defaults and the participating lender affected makes a claim against the Government's guarantee.

The overall expenditure in each of the last five years is set out in table 1, both in cash terms and in real terms, ie reduced by the amount of the SFLG premiums collected from borrowers and recoveries arising from previous claims, as well as the real terms expenditure per head of population. Regional distributions of the percentage of cash costs for each of the last four years are provided in table 2.

Because of the way in which data are collated disproportionate cost would be incurred to provide county level expenditure and cost per head details for the whole of the United Kingdom.

Table 1: Annual SFLG expenditure 2001–05 before and after borrowers' premiums

Notes:

1. Loan values are rounded to nearest £100,000 for regional figures and nearest £ million for totals.
2. Prior to 1 April 2003 a guarantee rate of either 70 per cent. or 85 per cent. applied to SFLG loans dependent upon the age of the borrowing business. A single guarantee rate of 75 per cent. applied to all loans guaranteed from 1 April 2003 but the change in guarantee rate was not applied retrospectively to loans guaranteed prior to that date.

SFLG Cost: Liability Ratios

The ratios of the gross and net costs of SFLG to the extent of the Department's potential exposure (contingent liabilities) for 2003–04 were 8.5 per cent. and 6.5 per cent. respectively, based on gross and net expenditure on demands of £53.563 million and £41.053 million respectively during the year and liabilities assessed at £633.8 million as at 31 March 2004.

The ratios of the gross and net costs of SFLG to the extent of the Department's potential exposure (contingent liabilities) for 2004–05 were 7.7 per cent. and 5.3 per cent. respectively, based on gross and net expenditure on demands of £58.720 million and £40.360 million respectively during the year and liabilities assessed at £764.3 million as at 31 March 2005.

Tariffs

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the cost to the British economy of tariffs on industrial goods. [34148]

Ian Pearson: There are many estimates of the cost of tariffs on industrial goods. These estimates suggest that global costs of tariffs on industrial goods exceed $100 billion. Precise estimate of the share of these global costs borne by the UK economy vary, but could be up to $5 billion.

World Trade Organisation

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action the Government plan to take at the World Trade Organisation talks in Hong Kong to ensure fair treatment for the world's poorest farmers. [34501]

Ian Pearson: The Government are committed to achieving an ambitious, pro-development package at the WTO ministerial conference in Hong Kong, which will allow for a successful conclusion to the Doha Development Agenda (DDA) by the end of 2006.

The DDA has the potential to deliver a freer and fairer trading system, benefiting farmers in developing countries and least developed countries through increased market access and the dismantling of trade-distorting subsidies by industrialised countries. The UK will press for poor countries to be given the flexibility to decide, plan and sequence trade reforms through effective special and differential treatment and, in the agriculture negotiations, designation of special products and use of a special safeguard mechanism.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will break down the cost of the administrative merger of the Community Fund and the New Opportunities Fund by main cost area. [35052]

Mr. Caborn: The break down of costs of the administrative merger of the Community Fund and the New Opportunities Fund are in the table.

Correspondence

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when she will respond to the letter from the hon. Members for Croydon, South (Richard Ottaway) and for East Surrey dated 5 September regarding Kenley Airfield. [30474]

James Purnell [holding answer 21 November 2005]: I replied to the hon. Members on 5 December with apologies for the delay in responding.

Damages

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport pursuant to the answer of 21 November 2005, Official Report, column 1608W, on damages, if she will list those cases where the litigation has been brought to a Minister's attention owing to the (a) nature and (b) scale of the damages sought. [34391]

Mr. Lammy: This information could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Staff (Chronic Back Pain)

Mr. Pelling: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what initiatives are being taken in her Department to help civil servants with chronic back pain. [34973]

Mr. Lammy: DCMS has a duty of care to all staff and provides staff with Desk Assessments to highlight any physical problems they may have, including back problems. The Department undertakes reasonable adjustments to physical features staff work areas, including desk, chair and IT equipment and alternative working patterns. If the back problem is more severe the Department arranges for a more specialised Occupational Health Desk Assessment to be carried out.

Digital Switchover

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps her Department is taking to increase awareness about digital switchover. [33626]

James Purnell: Digital UK, a not-for-profit organisation, has been set up to co-ordinate the UK's switch to digital television and will make sure that everyone is aware of what is happening and what they need to do. The switchover process will take place between 2008 and 2012, ITV region by ITV region. Digital UK launched its national switchover public awareness campaign in the national press in September. It has also set up a website and call centre for enquiries and leaflets, produced jointly with the Government, have been distributed to libraries, CAB offices and retailers across the UK. Digital UK plans to begin targeted regional campaigns three years prior to switching and communications activity is already underway in the borders region.

Additionally, the Government are continuing to run its own media campaign to inform consumers of the benefits of digital switchover and why it is happening.

To help make digital television options clear to consumers, the Government launched the digital switchover Certification Mark in 2004. It certifies products and services that are designed to help consumers through switchover. This helps to raise awareness of digital switchover, and is now visible in retailers across the UK and also on TV and recording equipment of most leading brands.

John Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps her Department is taking to increase awareness of digital switchover in the Leeds West constituency. [35135]

Leeds West receives Yorkshire Television, which will switch over in 2011 and localised communications will start in 2008.

Additionally, the Government are continuing to run their own media campaign to inform consumers of the benefits of digital switchover and why it is happening.

To help make digital television options clear to consumers, the Government launched the digital switchover Certification Mark in 2004. Licensing

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what advice and guidance her Department has given to local authorities on how premises licensed under the Licensing Act 2003 should be treated if they open for hours which are outside those permitted by virtue of their planning permission when their Licensing Act 2003 premises licence allows for them to open. [33169]

James Purnell: Guidance issued to licensing authorities under section 182 of the Licensing Act 2003, which was also circulated to every police chief constable, includes advice on the integration of planning and licensing regimes. It emphasises that applications for premises licences should normally be made by businesses with planning consent- should not be a re-run of the planning application; and should not cut across decisions taken by the local authority planning committee or following appeals against decisions taken by that committee.

The guidance also notes that the giving of a temporary event notice does not relieve the premises users from any requirements under planning law for appropriate planning permission where it is required.

The enforcement of planning law is a matter for individual local authorities.

Ministerial Travel

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport on how many occasions since 7 July she has used the London Underground in connection with her official duties. [35023]

Mr. Lammy: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has used the London Underground three times since 7 July in connection with her official duties.

Queen's Diamond Jubilee

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment her Department has made of the merits of linking London's 2012 Olympic games with celebrations for Her Majesty the Queen's diamond jubilee. [34438]

Mr. Caborn: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport has not made any assessment of linking the London 2012 Olympic and Paralympic games with the Queen's diamond jubilee in 2012. Any announcement of plans will be made closer to the time.

Television Licences (Exemptions)

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many businesses in Kettering constituency are exempt from requiring a television licence under the exemption scheme for people aged over 75 years. [34435]

James Purnell: The over-75 concession is not an exemption from the television licensing requirements but an entitlement to a free licence. It is available only to people aged 75 or over for their sole or main residence. It is not intended for business premises and there are accordingly no records of free licences issued for such premises.

Video Lending

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport who is responsible for regulating and inspecting libraries to ensure compliance with the age restrictions on videos for loan. [35597]

Mr. Lammy: The display and loan of age restricted items is the management responsibility of library authorities who are bound by the laws for sale or loan of age restricted items within the terms of the Video Recordings Acts 1984 and 1993. Enforcement is the responsibility of local trading standards departments.

CABINET OFFICE

Prime Ministerial Staff

Chris Grayling: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what proportion of posts in (a) the Prime Minister's Delivery Unit and (b) the No.10 Policy Unit (i) is occupied by non civil-servants and (ii) was filled after open competition recruitment processes. [32491]

Mr. Jim Murphy: There are no non-civil servants working in either the Prime Minister's Delivery Unit or the No.10 Policy Directorate. Permanent civil service appointments are filled in accordance with the requirements of the civil service commissioners' recruitment code and the civil service management code. The job of the head of the PMDU is currently the subject of an external open competition. Under the terms of the Civil Service Order in Council, special adviser appointments are exempt from the normal civil service recruitment processes.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Lenient Sentences

Mr. Amess: To ask the Solicitor-General how many sentences were challenged for being unduly lenient in each year since 2000; and what the result was in each case. [34505]

The Solicitor-General: The following table shows the numbers of cases considered by the Law Officers as potential unduly lenient sentences in each year since 2001, and the outcomes.

Unduly Lenient Sentences[1]

ULS referral stage	2001	2002	2003	2004	2005[2]
Cases referred to the Law Officers	209	261	248	318	270
Cases referred to the Court of Appeal	120	112	86	105	78
Cases found to be unduly lenient	95	87	73	81	37
Cases where sentence increased	78	68	65	64	28
Cases not yet heard	0	0	0	0	14

[1] As of 1 December 2005.
[2] Part of year.

Prosecutions

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Solicitor-General how many prosecutions were dropped in each government region in England in each quarter since April 2004; what percentage of all cases each figure represents; what the total cost of cases dropped was; what the total cost of all cases was; and what the reason recorded on the Compass Case Management System was for each case dropped. [35413]

The Solicitor-General: I have placed in the House of Commons Library the number, percentage and costs of prosecutions dropped over the period from April 2004 to September 2005 in respect of magistrates courts cases and that of the Crown court. The detail is too lengthy to provide in a simple parliamentary answer.

Broad average costs of prosecutions dropped have been calculated by applying the CPS activity based costing model, using average staff input times which enable costs for dropped cases in the magistrates court and the Crown court to be calculated. The broad average cost to CPS of a case dropped in the magistrates courts is £208, and for a case dropped in the Crown court is £1,840. The cost figures represent the internal cost to the Service but do not include disbursements such as counsel fees or witness expenses.

The total cost of cases dropped over the 18 month period was £79 million. The cost of prosecuting all cases including cases dropped was approximately £450 million. Again, these figures exclude disbursements such as counsel fees and witness expenses.

0870 Numbers

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the occasions in the last five years on which 0870 telephone numbers have been used by his Department as contact numbers for members of the public; and how much revenue was received from the use of 0870 contact numbers in each of the last five years for which records are available. [24459]

Ms Buck: DfT HQ buildings do not have any centrally provided 0870 numbers. The following DfT Agencies do use 0870 numbers.

VOSA—have one 0870 number (0870 60 60 440) providing a national inquiry service which was activated on 21 November 2000. The revenue received until 15 April 2004 was on average £380 per calendar month. From 15 April 2004, VOSA have received £41,924.29.

MCA—have used only one 0870 number in the last five years—0870 600 6505—for the 'One Stop Shop' (also known as the 'Infoline'). This number is not revenue generating.

DVLA—have fronted over 50 public services with 0870 numbers during the last five years. Currently DVLA use 10 0870 numbers to front public services. Rebate figures for the last five years are as follows:

	Amount (£)
2000–01	76,763
2001–02	247,807
2002–03	656,164
2003–04	1,109,719
2004–05	2,285,528

DSA—have used the following numbers over the past five years:

0870 01 01 372—English Language Theory and Practical Test Booking Line

0870 01 00 372—Welsh Language Theory and Practical Test Booking Line

0870 01 02 372—Number used for faxed test bookings

2004–05	1,268,007
2005–06	[1]350,838

[1] To June 2005.

[25704]

Derek Twigg: A table showing the nature and value of the contracts/orders placed with the above accountancy firms has been placed in the House of Commons Library.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with Birmingham airport regarding the establishment of an (a) additional and (b) extended runway. [34706]

Ms Buck: The Secretary of State for Transport has not had any discussions with Birmingham airport regarding the establishment of either an additional or an extended runway since the publication of the Air Transport White Paper in December 2003.

Bedfordshire Transport Plan

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what funding the Government will provide to support the delivery of the Bedfordshire Local Transport Plan for 2006–07 to 2010–11; and if he will make a statement. [34483]

Ms Buck: The Government has announced indicative highways capital maintenance allocations for 2006–07. For Bedfordshire this figure is £6.001 million. It will announce the remainder of the 2006–07 settlement and finalised forward planning guidelines to 20010–11 soon.

Damages

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which buildings and sites used by his Department and related agencies (a) have ceased to be used in the last year and (b) will be closed under current plans for relocation. [31779]

Ms Buck: There are no buildings or sites that have ceased to be used in the last year as part of our relocation plans. The Vehicle and Operator Services Agency have reported that their occupation of Great Eastern House (Cambridge) will cease with effect from March 2006 as a result of the relocation of work to Bristol.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many staff in his Department have been relocated into London and the south east in each of the last five years for which records are available. [31780]

Departmental Tendering Policy

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what his policy is on including (a) ethical and (b) environmental factors in tenders for services. [33342]

Ms Buck: The Department for Transport follows Office of Government Commerce guidelines on ethical and fair trading, and the Office of Government Commerce and Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs joint note on environmental issues in purchasing, having regard to the rules and general principles of EU law deriving from the treaty of Rome and the Single European Act. These include non-discrimination, equal treatment, transparency, proportionality and mutual recognition, and apply to all procurement by public bodies.

Specific knowledge or expertise in the environmental field can be a legitimate criterion for assessing technical capacity in the selection of tenderers, and environmental factors or requirements may be included in conditions of contract or specifications where relevant to the contracted service and subject to compliance with European Community law.

Disabled People (Transport Access)

Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he plans to include services which cater for disabled people unable to use public transport in the provisions for free travel from April 2006. [33211]

Ms Buck: The Government are committed to achieving an accessible transport system. We are implementing the transport provisions of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 so that public transport, including new trains, buses and coaches and newly licensed taxis will be accessible to disabled people, including those who need to travel in wheelchairs.

The statutory minimum entitlement for concessionary travel covers off-peak local bus services. Authorities will continue to have the discretion to extend the entitlement to community transport services and/or offer travel token schemes for taxi travel based on their judgment of local needs and circumstances and their overall financial priorities.

DVLA (Clamping Companies)

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information regarding car registration details the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency is entitled to provide to vehicle clamping companies; and if he will make a statement. [35092]

Dr. Ladyman: [holding answer 6 December 2005]: DVLA is entitled under regulations to provide information from the vehicle register to those who can provide evidence of 'reasonable cause' to have it. Provisions regarding the release have been in force for over 40 years. Data from DVLA is not normally required for wheel clamping purposes. However, the name and address of a vehicle keeper is usually provided where criminal damage has been done to a wheel clamp.

I made a statement regarding a review of the release of information from the DVLA vehicle register on 2 December 2005, Official Report, columns 50–51WS.

Identity Cards

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the (a) total and (b) net cost of (i) integrating the proposed Identity Card Scheme into his Department's IT systems and (ii) the ongoing operation of the scheme within his Department. [31115]

Ms Buck: The Department has not finalised current best estimates of the cost of using the ID Cards Scheme to support the services which it oversees. The Department is represented on the Ministerial Committee on Identity Cards which oversees the work on benefits planning and realisation.

Lamberhurst Bypass

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how much money was used to pay for the Lamberhurst bypass; and from which fund: [35302]

(2) what Government regional funds have been used to pay for the Lamberhurst bypass; and if he will make a statement; [35303]

(3) what funding was used to pay for the Lamberhurst bypass along the A21 in East Sussex; and if he will make a statement. [35304]

Dr. Ladyman: The estimated final cost of the A21 Lamberhurst bypass is £25.24 million. The funds allocated to the scheme were from the Government's 10-year Targeted Programme of Improvements (TPI).

The scheme was funded from the Highways Agency budget, which is part of the Department for Transport's voted expenditure.

No Government regional funds have been used to pay for the A21 Lamberhurst bypass.

Light Rapid Transit

Peter Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when a decision will be announced on the funding of the Fareham-Gosport-Portsmouth light rapid transit scheme. [33619]

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what main forms of national road pricing the Department is considering. [34073]

Dr. Ladyman: I refer the hon. Member to the written statement made by my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Transport, on 28 November 2005, Official Report, columns 3–4WS about the Transport Innovation Fund.

Olympics

Greg Mulholland: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what account was taken of the potential call on resources of the transport infrastructure associated with the 2012 London Olympic games in his decision not to allocate funding to the (a) Merseytram, (b) South Hampshire rapid transit and (c) Leeds supertram schemes. [35213]

Derek Twigg: None.

Public Service Agreements

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will introduce more user-friendly reporting of progress against 2004 public service agreement target 6. [29802]

Ms Buck: The Department provides regular performance updates against its outstanding public service agreement targets through its annual departmental report and its autumn performance report published in spring and autumn respectively. The 2005 departmental report (Cm6527), which is the most recently published, is available in the House Libraries and online at: www.dft.gov.uk/stellent/groups/dft_about/documents/divisionhomepage/038323.hcsp.

The DfT's 2005 autumn performance report is due for publication in mid-December and this will be the first time the Department has reported against its 2004 spending review targets.

Railways

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will list the (a) technical and financial contracts, (b) technical consultants used on a call-off basis and (c) financial consultants used on a call-off basis by (i) HM Railway Inspectorate and (ii) the Office of the Rail Regulator since 1 November 2003; what the nature of the assignment for each consultant was; and what the value of work done by each consultant was; [25699]

(2) if he will list the (a) technical and financial contracts, (b) technical consultants used on a call-off basis and (c) financial consultants used on a call-off basis by the Office of Rail Regulation since 5 July 2004; what the nature of the assignment for each consultant was; and what the value of work done by each consultant was. [25700]

Derek Twigg: Contracts let by HM Railway Inspectorate are a matter for the Department for Work and Pensions. Figures for the Office of Rail Regulation have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the (a) technical and (b) financial consultants used by the Strategic Rail Authority since 1 November 2003 on a call-off basis; what the total amount paid to each consultant was; and what the nature was of each project undertaken by each such consultant. [25702]

Derek Twigg: The information requested has been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will list the (a) technical and financial contracts, (b) technical consultants used on a call-off basis and (c) financial consultants used on a call-off basis by his Department carrying out work relating to the railways since 1 November 2003; what the nature of the assignment for each consultant was; and what the value of work done by each consultant was; [25703]

(2) if he will list (a) the consultants used in connection with the transfer of the Strategic Rail Authority to DfT Rail, (b) the (i) private finance initiative and (ii) public-private partnership external consultants used by (A) his Department and (B) each of its agencies in each of the last two years and (c) the external consultants used by (1) his Department and (2) each of its agencies, excluding public-private partnership and private finance initiative contracts, in each of the last two years; and what the (y) nature and (z) cost of the work done by each consultant was in each case. 10. VOSA non-PPP/PFI contracts in 2003–04 and 2004–05[1]

[1] MCA, VGA and VOSA had no PPP/PFI contracts in these financial years.

Each of the tables includes an indication, inserted for internal record-keeping purposes, of the nature of the work involved. In view of the number of entries, more specific descriptions could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Details of technical and financial contracts in the form requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many dismantled railway lines have been reopened since 2000; and at what cost in each case. [28278]

Derek Twigg: In England, approximately 12 miles of former freight line between Leeming Bar and Leyburn on the Wensleydale Railway were reopened for passenger use in 2003. A further five miles were re-opened in 2004. The work was funded by the Wensleydale Railway plc. The Department for Transport does not have information on the costs involved.

Some 10 miles of former railway alignment were re-opened for use as part of Croydon Tramlink in 2000, and approximately six miles as part of the Nottingham Express Transit in 2004. Separate costs for the elements of these projects relating to former railway alignments are not available.

In Scotland, Greenburn rail link opened in May 2004 at a cost of £6.3 million. This was funded by the Scottish Executive and Keir Mining. Through the Larkhall to Milngavie project, the Anniesland to Maryhill line re-opened in September 2005 and the line from Hamilton to Larkhall is expected to re-open in December 2005 at a total cost of £34.5 million. This project is mainly funded by the Scottish Executive, with contributions from Strathclyde Passenger Transport Executive and South Lanarkshire Council.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the costs of developing passenger services on the Coventry-Nuneaton railway line. [34704]

Derek Twigg: Services on the Coventry to Nuneaton line are among those that will be reviewed as we draw up the specification for the new West Midlands franchise. Consultations on the draft specification are expected to begin in the summer of 2006.

Roads

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress has been made with initiatives to reduce road congestion. [34156]

Dr. Ladyman: Significant progress has been made putting measures in place to tackle congestion through targeted improvements and new methods of managing traffic. Since 2001 we have completed 32 major strategic road schemes. A further 15 major schemes are currently under construction, including widening of the M25 between Junctions 12 to 15 around Heathrow.

Uniformed Highways Agency Traffic Officers are now patrolling the motorway network in five regions of the country (West Midlands, South East, North West, North East, and East of England), having taken over some responsibilities from the police for managing incidents and keeping traffic moving. They now have powers to stop and direct traffic in live carriageways, and will be operational on all motorways by next summer.

Regional control centres are assuming responsibility for scheduling road works, monitoring road conditions, establishing diversion alternatives, setting variable message signs for real-time traffic management, and supporting traffic officers. Five regional control centres are currently operational, and all seven will be live by summer 2006.

Britain's first High Occupancy Vehicle (carpool) motorway lane will be trialled on the M1 between junctions 6A and 10 (St. Albans to Luton) in 2008, following widening of the motorway. As part of an Active Traffic Management pilot on the M42 corridor between junctions 3a and 7 to the east of Birmingham, mandatory variable speed limits became operational in November, with other aspects of the pilot to follow in 2006, including strictly controlled use of the hard shoulder as a running lane, and access management. Both schemes will operate at peak times to help minimise delay and congestion for road users.

Transport Direct, the Government's real-time web-based travel information and journey planning service for public and private transport, allows travellers to check the likelihood of delays and see whether choosing a different route, departure time or transport mode might suit them better. The service has now recorded 2.5 million user sessions since formal launch in December 2004. The Highways Agency's "Traffic England" website is now operational with real-time information about traffic conditions on motorways and trunk roads.

The Traffic Management Act 2004 gave local authorities a duty and new powers to do all that is reasonably practicable to keep roads clear and traffic moving, including appointing traffic managers to manage local roads; powers to co-ordinate utility and telecoms companies' road works to minimise disruption, enforce parking and bus lanes, and some moving traffic offences from police.

In June the Government announced a Transport Innovation Fund to help local authorities develop local charging schemes. Up to £200 million per annum will be made available to support such schemes. Alistair Darling announced on 28 November that seven local authorities will share over £7 million in advance of the main fund to explore new ways to tackle local congestion.

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on progress in reducing road congestion. [34968]

Dr. Ladyman: I refer the hon. Member to my answer given today, to the hon. Member for Windsor (Adam Afriyie) UIN 34156.

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what the mean number of days was that road gritting took place in each county in England in 2004–05; [32468]

(2) what the costs of road gritting were in 2004–05, broken down by local authority; [32469]

(3) how many miles of roads were gritted (a) within 24 hours of the onset of wintry conditions and (b) in winter 2004–05, broken down by local authority area. [32648]

Ms Buck: This information is not collated centrally. The duration, amount, cost and timing of gritting will depend upon each local authority's individual winter service operational plan, and the weather conditions they experience.

The Department for Transport strongly recommends that local highway authorities carry out winter maintenance in accordance with Section 13 of "Well-maintained Highways: Code of Practice for Highway Maintenance Management" published by the UK Roads Liaison Group earlier this year.

John Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the percentage of daily journeys taken by road in the Leeds area from (a) 1980 to 1997, (b) 1997 to 2001 and (c) 2001 to the latest date for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [35143]

Dr. Ladyman: The information requested is not available.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what guidance the Government have given local authorities on (a) the width of roads and (b) the width of parking spaces. [33492]

Ms Buck: The "Design Manual for Roads and Bridges" (DMRB) sets the design standards, including road widths, for motorways and other trunk roads throughout the UK. Where it is used for local road schemes, it has the status of guidance only, and it is for local highway authorities to decide on the extent to which it is used in any particular situation.

Guidance on the width of residential roads and footpaths is contained in "Design Bulletin 32: Residential Roads and Footpaths", and in "Places, Streets & Movement: A companion guide to Design Bulletin 32". In due course these two documents will be superseded by the "Manual for Streets", currently expected to be published by the Department for Transport in late 2006.

The dimensions for parking bays are specified in Schedule 6 to the "Traffic Signs Regulations and General Directions 2002" (SI No. 3113). Guidance on use of the markings for different categories of user is given in section 20 of Chapter 5 of the "Traffic Signs Manual". Bays for general use can be varied in width between 1,800mm and 2,700mm at the local authority's discretion, to take account of local conditions. These bays may also be marked wholly or partially on the footway if the traffic order provides for this. Bays for disabled badge holders are normally required to be a minimum of 2,700mm wide (3,600mm maximum), but this minimum may be reduced to 1,800mm in a case where, on account of the nature of the traffic using the road, the overall width of the carriageway is insufficient to accommodate a wider bay. Echelon parking bays, set at an angle to the kerb, are required to be between 2,000mm and 2,500mm in width.

Staff Discipline

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many employees have been dismissed by his Department in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [29135]

Ms Buck: Since the establishment of the Department for Transport in May 2002 the numbers of employees dismissed are:

	Number
2002	66
2003	82
2004	88
2005	85

The Department has procedures in place to deal with misconduct, unsatisfactory performance or attendance. The procedures are published in our internal Staff Handbook that is readily available to staff.

Stretch Limousines

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received on (a) licensing of and (b) other regulations relating to stretch limousines; and whether specific regulations apply to them. [34104]

Ms Buck: Over recent years we have received a number of representations from numerous individuals and organisations about the licensing, operation and use of stretch limousines. Many of those concerns were aired in the House of Lords Report Stage debate on the Road Safety Bill 29 November 2005, Official Report, columns 122–26W. We are very much aware of the issues and concerns surrounding the operation of stretch limousines and officials are actively looking at what can be done to clarify the position for all parties.

Transport Staff (Abuse)

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many reported incidents of (a) verbal abuse and (b) physical attack on train drivers, guards and ticket inspectors there have been in each year since 1997. [31178]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 22 November 2005]: The number of crimes recorded for verbal abuse is not available as the British Transport police (BTP) does not record these offences separately. However, the number of crimes for fear or provocation of violence, harassment, alarm or distress and other public order offences is shown as follows. These numbers include all offences of verbal abuse.

The number of incidents of assaults on all rail staff while on duty, recorded by the BTP from April 1998, is also shown in the following table. A breakdown of these figures by train drivers, guards and ticket inspectors is not available.

BTP has recognised that staff assaults are a major concern for the train operating companies and their employees and subsequently view this crime as a policing priority. BTP continue to explore different methods of preventing and detecting staff assaults.

Number

	Public order offences	Staff assaults recorded
1998–99	420	1,225
1999–2000	566	1,433
2000–01	678	1,329
2001–02	692	1,438
2002–03	961	1,925
2003–04	1,011	2,240
2004–05	1,198	2,769

A change in counting rules occurred in 1998. This was built upon by changes in the National Crime Recording Standards (NCRS) in 2002. With the shift to a more customer focused approach and the recording of crime based upon the perception of the victim rather than the police satisfying themselves that a crime had taken place; it was inevitable that there would be a rise in the number of crimes recorded. This point was acknowledged by the Home Office in their publication, "Crime in England and Wales 2002/03".

Notes:

1. Data are not available prior to April 1998, as the comparison is not meaningful due to a change in Home Office counting rules.

2. It should also be noted that changes in the National Crime Recording Standards (NCRS) in 2002 led to a rise in the number of crimes recorded, with the biggest impact on the 'Violence against the person' grouping equating to an average 23 per cent. increase in this crime recorded by police forces across England and Wales.

Travel Subsidies

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much has been spent on subsidies for rail and bus travel in each of the last five years. [34705]

Derek Twigg: Central Government spending on bus and heavy rail services for the period in question are set out in the following table.

£ billion

	Bus	Rail
2000–01	1.1	1.2
2001–02	1.4	1.8
2002–03	1.9	2.5
2003–04	2.0	3.6
2004–05[1]	2.0	4.2

[1] Budget estimates

Spending on rail includes payments to franchised rail operators, grants to PTEs, grants to rail freight operators and capital grants to infrastructure operators.

The figures in the table for buses show spending in respect of English services—(following devolution, the Scottish Parliament and the Welsh Assembly assumed responsibility for buses). The majority of bus subsidy in England (outside London) is funded by local authorities from their own resources, including the revenue support grant from Government. Local authorities also provide concessionary fares reimbursement to bus operators. Financial support for bus services in London is provided by the Mayor and Transport for London (TfL). The Department for Transport also provides rural bus subsidy grant (RBSG) and, to 2003–04, Urban and Rural Bus Challenge funding. The figures in the table show local authority and TfL expenditure on provision of bus services and concessionary fares on buses for each of the five years to 2004–05 as well the DfT's RBSG allocations bus challenge awards and capital investments in bus related projects.

Tyne and Wear (Financial Bids)

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place in the Library (a) the bid from Tyne and Wear authorities for support from the Transport Innovation Fund and (b) his response to the bid. [34376]

Dr. Ladyman: Both documents have been placed in the Library. All 33 applications for Transport Innovation Fund pump-priming, including that of the Tyne and Wear authorities, are available on the Department's website at: http://www.dft.gov.uk/stellent/groups/dft_foi/documents/divisionhomepage/610460.hcsp

UK Air Passengers

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the increase in UK passengers using no-frills carriers has been since 1998. [35240]

Ms Buck: Airlines commonly referred to as no-frills carriers include Ryanair, easyJet, bmibaby, Jet2, MyTravelLite, Thomsonfly and flyGlobespan.

In 1998 the total number of passengers using the no-frills carriers listed above (together with Debonair, which ceased operations in 1999) at UK airports was 7.7 million. This had risen to 53.4 million by the end of 2004. The number of UK based passengers travelling on these carriers rose from 4.4 million in 1998 to 37.9 million in 2004.

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the change in United Kingdom passenger numbers in (a) 2010, (b) 2020 and (c) 2030 if air fares were to remain constant in real terms compared with 2005. [35242]

Ms Buck: The only estimate that has been made was an illustrative sensitivity test included in Air Traffic Forecasts for the United Kingdom produced by DfT in 2000. This considered the impact of fares remaining constant in real terms throughout the 1998–2020 period in place of the central assumption of a 1 per cent. annual decline. This sensitivity test showed that passenger traffic at UK airports in 2020 would fall from the central forecast of 401 million to 301 million. However, this was based on the very simple assumption that a 10 per cent. rise in fares would lead to a 10 per cent. fall in demand. In practice, rising real incomes at home and overseas are likely to have a substantial positive impact on the demand for air travel.

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the annual reduction in air fares has been in the UK since 2000 for the (a) business, (b) leisure and (c) no-frills carrier sectors; and what assessment he has made of these figures in relation to the forecast assumptions contained in the Air Transport White Paper. [35243]

Ms Buck: The average fare paid on international no frills flights has dropped by 16 per cent. over the 2000–04 period. Other international leisure fares (excluding those included as part of a holiday package) have only fallen by 2 per cent. Average fares paid by international business passengers have fallen by 20 per cent. between 2000 and 2004, but this in part reflects the relative weakness of the long haul sector after 2000, and reduced use of premium cabins by business passengers on short haul flights. The headline reduction in fares in the national forecasts supporting the White Paper was on average a 1 per cent. fall per annum in real terms over the period 1998–2020.

Alcohol-related Deaths

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many deaths in which alcohol was the primary cause there were in each local authority area in each of the last eight years. [35462]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 7 December 2005:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many deaths in the local authorities of England and Wales were primarily caused by alcohol. (35462)

The latest year for which figures are available is 2004. I am placing in the House of Commons Library, a table showing the numbers of deaths among residents of England and Wales where the underlying cause of death indicated a condition directly related to alcohol use in the years 1997 to 2004.

[35130]

Dawn Primarolo: Estimates of the number of families who were receiving family credit broken down by region are not available. Estimates of the number of recipient families of working families' and disabled person's tax credits from 2001–2002 broken down by constituency appear in the quarterly WFTC and DPTC Geographical Analyses. Comparable estimates of the number of in-work families (broken down by families with and without children) in each region, local authority and constituency with tax credits for 2003–04 awards, based on final family circumstances and incomes for 2003–04, appear in the HMRC statistical publication "Child and Working Tax Credits statistics. Finalised Awards 2003–04. Geographical analyses."

More recent provisional estimates for in-work families, as at selected dates in 2004–05, in each such area appear in the publication "Child and Working Tax Credit Statistics Geographical Analyses."

Both of these publications can be found on the HMRC website at:

Departmental Tendering Policy

Martin Horwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his policy is on including (a) ethical and (b) environmental factors in tenders for services. [33343]

John Healey: The Treasury and HM Revenue and Customs follow common procurement policies.

(a) Ethical factors:

Fair and Ethical Trading

There is scope under the Government's procurement policy and the EU procurement rules to encourage the inclusion of fair trade options in tenders for catering services and supply contracts, but under the EU rules, specifications cannot be framed exclusively in terms of fair trade requirements.

The opportunity to purchase Fair Trade goods is considered on a case-by-case basis, and in accordance with the OGC Guidance on Fair and Ethical Trading http://www.ogc.gov.uk/embedded_object.asp?docid=1001597

When tendering for services, staff follow the procurement guidance in Government Accounting Chapter 22 http://www.government-accounting.gov.uk/current/content/qa_22_4.htm. which requires Departments to preserve the highest standards of honesty, integrity, impartiality and objectivity in all dealings with suppliers and potential suppliers.

(b) Environmental factors:

The Treasury and HMRC are committed to Sustainable Development and the policy followed by both Departments on environmental purchasing is set out at http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/about/supguide.htm#11:

Environmental issues are included in the tender documents as appropriate and where a contract is deemed to have an environmental impact, there is a questionnaire that is issued to potential suppliers.

Drugs Overdose

Tony Lloyd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, how many deaths resulted from an overdose of (a) methadone, (b) heroin and (c) other classified drugs in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [35477]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 7 December 2005:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many deaths resulted from an overdose of (a) methadone, (b) heroin and (c) other classified drugs in each of the last five years for which figures are available. (35477)

Figures readily available from death certification relate to deaths due to drug poisoning, not the total number that were attributable to drug use. These figures are produced from a special database which contains deaths where the underlying cause was drug poisoning. The most recent year for which figures are available is 2003. The table below shows the number of deaths due to drug poisoning where methadone, heroin/morphine or any drug controlled under the Misuse of Drugs Act were mentioned on the death certificate for the five years 1999 to 2003.

Number of deaths from drug-related poisoning[1] where methadone, heroin/morphine, or other controlled drugs were mentioned on the death certificate[2]
England and Wales: 1999–2003[3]

2000	238	926	405	1,593
2001	207	889	338	1,447
2002	216	790	343	1,356
2003	175	591	264	1,052

[1] Cause of death was defined using the International Classification of Diseases, Tenth Revision (ICD-10) codes F11-F16, F18-F19, X40-X44, X60-X64, X85 and Y19-Y14.
[2] Some deaths may be counted in more than one category of this table, for example if heroin and methadone are recorded on the death certificate, the death will be recorded once under methadone, once under heroin and once under any controlled drug.
[3] Data are for deaths occurring in the calendar year.

Earnings Statistics

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people earned (a) less than £5,000, (b) between £5,000 to £10,000, (c) between £10,000 to £13,000, (d) between £13,000 to £17,500, (e) between £17,500 to £27,000 and (f) over £27,000 in (i) 1988–89 and (ii) in each year from 2001 to 2004. [34679]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 7 December 2005:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many people earned (a) less than £5,000, (b) between £5,000 to £10,000, (c) between £10,000 to £13,000, (d) £13,000 to £17,500, (e) between £17,500 to £27,000 and (f) over £27,000 in (i) 1988–89 and (ii) in each year from 2001 to 2004. (34679)

Currently average earnings are estimated from the Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings (ASHE), and are provided for full time employees on adult rates whose pay for the survey period was not affected by absence. This is the standard definition used for ASHE. The ASHE does not collect data on the self employed and people who do unpaid work.

The attached table shows the percentage of employees in the United Kingdom for each year between 2001 and 2004 earning between the specified pay bands. Annual pay has only been published since 1999; therefore I have been unable to supply data for 1988–89.

The ASHE, carried out in April of each year, is the most comprehensive source of earnings information in the United Kingdom. It is a one per cent sample of all employees who are members of pay-as-you-earn (PAYE) schemes.

HM Revenue and Customs

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many staff in HM Revenue and Customs have been redeployed to tax credit work in each month since January; what the total staffing of the tax credit department was in each quarter since Q1 2003; and if he will make a statement. [28997]

Dawn Primarolo: The number of full-time equivalent staff in post in the tax credit office, (TC) at the end of each quarter since April 2003 was around:

Quarter ending	Staffing
June 2003	3500
September 2003	3400
December 2003	3300

Quarter ending	Staffing
March 2004	3200
June 2004	2850
September 2004	2800
December 2004	2750
March 2005	2800
June 2005	2950
September 2005	2800

In addition to TCO employees extra staff are also employed to work on tax credits at certain times, depending on the variable tax credits workload, for example staff employed in HMRC contact centres. Such staff are not included in the aforementioned table , and figures for their staff are not readily available.

Income Tax

David Mundell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people in Scotland pay income tax. [35035]

Dawn Primarolo: The number of taxpayers in Scotland can be found on National Statistics table 2.2 'Number of income taxpayers, by country' on HM Revenue and Customs' website:
http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/income_tax/table2-2.xls

Mr. Maude: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he has plans to increase the nil rate income tax band for trusts. [35150]

Dawn Primarolo: A £500 standard rate band was introduced in Finance Act 2005, below which trust income is subject to no more than the basic rate of tax. We keep all matters of taxation under review as part of the Budget process.

Mr. Maude: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he plans to introduce differential income tax rates for protective trusts, with particular reference to those formed under section 42 of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987. [35151]

Dawn Primarolo: As announced in the Chancellor's pre-Budget report we are considering a relief for registered social landlords holding sinking funds in trust for tenants.

Infant Deaths

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many infant deaths there were in the UK in (a) the latest year for which records exist and (b) each of the preceding three years; and what the rate per 10,000 was for the last four years for which figures are available. [34688]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 7 December 2005:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent question asking how many infant deaths there were in the United Kingdom and the rate per 10,000 for the last four years that data are available. (34688)

The most recent year for which figures are available is 2004. Figures for the latest year are based on provisional number of occurrences in that year (published in the November edition of Health Statistics Quarterly). These update earlier provisional 2004 figures which were based on number of registrations. I refer you to the answer given in Official Report 437, 10th October, Column No. 299.

Figures requested for the years 2001–2004 are given in the table below.

Infant mortality, numbers and rates per 10,000 live births, United Kingdom, 2001–04[1]

	Number	Rate per 10,000 live births
2001	3,664	54.8
2002	3,497	52.3
2003	3,686	53.0
2004[1]	3,607	50.4

Inflation

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the average rate of inflation was in each year since 1978–79. [34680]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 7 December 2005:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question requesting the average rate of inflation in each year since 1978–79. (34680).

The information requested is shown in the table below which gives average annual inflation rates for the consumer prices index (CPI) and retail prices index (RPI).

The CPI is the main domestic measure of inflation for macroeconomic purposes in the United Kingdom. It forms the basis of the government's inflate target that the Bank of England's Monetary Policy Committee is required to achieve.

The CPI index is available from January 1996, with estimates available back to 1988.

The RPI is available from 1947 and its uses include the indexation of pensions, state benefits and index-linked gilts.

Both the CPI and RPI measure the average change from month to month in the prices of consumer goods and services purchased in the UK, although there are differences in coverage and methodology. These differences are summarised in the background notes to the Consumer Price Indices First Release in which these figures are published monthly. It is available to download from the National Statistics website at: http://www.statistics.gov.uk/StatBase/Product.asp?vlnk=868.

[1] The annual average inflation rate is the percentage change in the annual average index from the previous year. The annual average index is defined as the arithmetic mean of the twelve monthly values from January to December for the year in question calculated using the published rounded monthly indices.

[2] Prior to 1997 the annual inflation rates for the CPI are estimates.

Maintenance Service Charges/Sinking Funds

Mr. Maude: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish internal guidance issued by the Inland Revenue in (a) 1998 and (b) 2000 aimed at clarifying the tax treatment of (i) maintenance service charges and (ii) sinking funds. [35153]

Dawn Primarolo: The information contained in the internal guidance issued by the Inland Revenue in 1998 and 2000 relating to the tax treatment of maintenance service charges and sinking funds, other than information whose disclosure would be likely to prejudice the assessment or collection of tax, has already been published by the Inland Revenue and may be found on the HMRC website.

Manufacturing

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many manufacturing jobs have been lost since May 1997. [34590]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the national statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 7 December 2005:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question about manufacturing employment. (34590)

While statistics for the number of jobs created or lost are not available, survey data allows us to provide a measure of the change in the number of jobs. Using the Workforce jobs series for the United Kingdom, the net decrease in the number of jobs in manufacturing from June 1997 to June 2005 was 1,078,000.

Politically Exposed Persons

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what measures the Government have put in place to require financial institutions to conduct enhanced due diligence on accounts of politically exposed persons with a view to detecting and reporting transactions which may involve proceeds of foreign corruption; and if he will make a statement. [35402]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Money Laundering Regulations 2003 require financial institutions along with all other regulated firms, to have adequate systems to prevent money laundering and terrorist financing including knowing your customer. The regulations are supported by the Joint Money Laundering Steering Group (JMLSG) Guidance, which state that enhanced scrutiny and monitoring needs to be conducted on politically exposed persons. This guidance is approved by the Treasury and therefore must be considered by a court in deciding whether a person has committed an offence. In assessing a firms' compliance with their anti-money laundering obligations, the Financial Services Authority will have regard to the relevant provisions of the JMLSG Guidance Notes for the Financial Sector.

The third money laundering directive includes a specific requirement that firms should have adequate systems in place to identify politically exposed persons and perform enhanced due diligence on them. The directive was adopted in October and will need to be implemented into UK legislation by the end of 2007.

Research and Development Tax Credits

John Battle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of small and medium-sized enterprises in Leeds constituency were eligible for research and development tax credits in the last five years; and what the take-up was. [35133]

John Healey: The information requested in relation to enterprises in Leeds is not available.

For information generally on take-up of research and development tax credits I refer the right hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Luton, South (Margaret Moran) of 1 November 2005, Official Report, column 991W, on tax credits.

Revenue Evasion

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the value of revenue evasion prevented by HM Revenue and Customs was in (a) 2003–04 and (b) 2004–05; what value of revenue evasion has been prevented in 2005–06; and how much related to customs duties in each case. [33646]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Revenue and Customs do not maintain this information, and it would involve disproportionate cost to produce.

Sick Leave

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many of his Department's employees who are within one year of the official retirement age are on extended sick leave. [32591]

John Healey: There are no employees working in HM Treasury who are within one year of the official retirement age on extended sick leave

[34603]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the national statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 7 December 2005:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question about employment in the Southend West constituency. (34603)

The attached table shows the number of employee jobs in the manufacturing industry, in the Southend West parliamentary constituency for 1997, 2001 and 2003; the latest period for which information is available. Estimates for agriculture and fishing are not shown in order to avoid potential disclosure of information that is supplied in confidence under the 1947 Statistics of Trade Act. Figures at the parliamentary constituency level are not available for the earlier years requested.

Tax Allowances

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will list the tax allowances which are operative; [34675]

(2) what tax allowances have been abolished since 1997. [34677]

Dawn Primarolo: The main rates and allowances are set out each year in the Economic and Fiscal Strategy Report and Financial Statement and Budget Report. Copies of this are available in the House Library. More detailed information on individual tax allowances and reliefs with an estimate annual cost of at least £50 million can be found in the HM Treasury publication, "Tax ready reckoner and tax reliefs". Recent versions can be found on the HM Treasury website and historic copies are held in the House Library.

Information on minor tax expenditures and structural reliefs where the costs are less than £50 million is published on the HMRC website. Historic versions are published in "Inland Revenue Statistics".

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the total cost was of tax allowances in terms of revenue foregone in each year since 1997. [34676]

Dawn Primarolo: Information on allowances and reliefs with an estimated annual cost of at least £50 million is published in the HM Treasury publication "Tax ready reckoner and tax reliefs". Recent versions can be found on the HM Treasury website and historic copies are held in the House of Commons Library.

An updated version will be available on 5 December 2005.

Information on minor tax expenditures and structural reliefs where the costs are less than £50 million is published on the HMRC website. http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/tax_expenditures/menu.htm.

Historic versions are published in "Inland Revenue Statistics".

These tables only contain details relating to former Inland Revenue taxes. The data on minor tax expenditures and structural reliefs will be updated on 30 December 2005 and will cover all HMRC taxes.

All historic estimates were correct at the time of publication. These do not necessarily constitute a consistent time series for all allowances and reliefs.

Tax Credits

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the cost of awarding credits through home responsibilities protection on a weekly basis; and how many (a) women and (b) men he estimates would benefit from such a change. [18646]

Dawn Primarolo: The available information is as follows:

Estimated cost of converting home responsibilities protection (HRP) into a weekly credit for people reaching state pension age from 2005–06, and estimated number of people who would benefit from such a change:

Estimated additional gross expenditure in 2005–06	37,000,000
Estimated number of women who would benefit in 2005–06	160,000
Estimated number of men who would benefit in 2005–06	2,000

Dr. McCrea: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he is taking to ensure cases of disputed overpayment of tax credits are resolved quickly; and what are the average processing times for cases referred to the disputed overpayments team. [28418]

Dawn Primarolo: I would refer the hon. Member to my statement to the Treasury sub-committee of 26 October 2005, HC 524-ii.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) in how many tax credit awards in 2003–04 income rose by (a) up to £1,000, (b) £1,000 to £1,999, (c) £2,000 to £2,499, (d) £2,500 to £2,999, (e) £3,000 to £3,499, (f) £3,500 to £3,999, (g) £4,000 to £4,999, (h) £5,000 to £5,999, (i) £6,000 to £9,999, (j) £10,000 to £14,999, (k) £15,000 to £19,999, (l) £20,000 to £24,999, (m) £25,000 to £29,999 and (n) over £30,000; [29982]

(2) in how many tax credit awards in 2003–04 where there had been an increase in income it would have been disregarded had the disregard been set at (a) £3,000, (b) £3,500 and (c) £5,000. [29983]

Dawn Primarolo: The following table shows the total number of tax credit awards in 2003–04 split by income rise in each specified band.

Income rise	Number of awards (thousands)
Up to £1,000	438.2
£1,000 to under £2,000	365.2
£2,000 to under £2,500	158.6
£2,500 to under £3,000	139.2
£3,000 to under £3,500	126.1
£3,500 to under £4,000	117.0
£4,000 to under £5,000	200.9
£5,000 to under £6,000	156.7
£6,000 to under £10,000	377.9
£10,000to under £15,000	197.4
£15,000 to under £20,000	85.5
£20,000 to under £25,000	43.2
£25,000 to under £30,000	24.3
£30,000 and over	34.4
All	2,464.6

Income rise is derived using 2001–02 and 2003–04 incomes used to finalise the award.

In response to the second question, the information requested has been derived from the above table. The number of tax credit awards in 2003–04 where there had been an increase in income, which would have been disregarded had the disregard been set at (a) £3,000, (b) £3,500 and (c) £5,000 is:

(a) 1.10 million

(b) 1.23 million

(c) 1.55 million

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer for how many families their tax credit award would have fallen in 2003–04 had there not been the £2,500 disregard. [29985]

Dawn Primarolo: Around 1.5 million families would have had a reduction in entitlement for their tax credit award in 2003–04 if there had not been a £2,500 disregard.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many claimants of tax credits since April 2003 who have mistakenly paid back money to the Department for overpayments that were subsequently found not to exist had the money returned to them within (a) two, (b) four, (c) eight, (d) 16 and (e) 32 weeks. [31522]

Dawn Primarolo: This information is not available.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether his Department recovers overpaid tax credits where the claimant has launched an investigation of his tax credit case through the parliamentary ombudsman. [31524]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Revenue and Customs deal with all complaints and disputes about the recovery of tax credits in accordance with their procedures.

Cases referred to the parliamentary ombudsman are considered in the same way as any other case.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer in how many tax credit awards, in Scotland, in 2003–04 income rose by (a) up to £1,000 to £1,999, (b) £2,000 to £2,499, (c) £2,500 to £2,999, (d) £3,000 to £3,499, (e) £3,500 to £3,999, (f) £4,000 to £4,999, (g) £5,000 to £5,999, (h) £6,000 to £9,999, (i) £10,000 to £14,999, (j) £15,000 to £19,999, (k) £20,000 to £24,999, (l) £25,000 to £29,999 and (m) over £30,000. [33022]

Dawn Primarolo: The following table shows the total number of tax credit awards in 2003–04 in Scotland, split by income rise in each specified band.

Income rise	Number of awards (thousands)
Up to £1,000	41.8
£1,000 to under £2,000	34.4
£2,000 to under £2,500	15.1
£2,500 to under £3,000	12.7
£3,000 to under £3,500	11.2
£3,500 to under £4,000	10.8
£4,000 to under £5,000	18.0
£5,000 to under £6,000	14.0
£6,000 to under £10,000	32.8
£10,000 to under £15,000	16.2
£15,000 to under £20,000	6.6
£20,000 to under £25,000	3.2
£25,000 to under £30,000	1.9
£30,000 and over	2.5
All	221.2

The income rise has been derived by using the 2001–02 and 2003–04 incomes which were used to finalise the award.

Taxation

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much was paid in direct and indirect taxation by companies with (a) fewer than 200 employees and (b) fewer than 100 employees in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available. [34674]

Dawn Primarolo: Figures on receipts from individual taxes are available in tables 2.1A to 2.1E in Financial Statistics published by the Office of National Statistics. www.statistics.gov.uk/statbase/tsdtables1.asp?vbik=fsf.

It is not possible to apportion total tax receipts between corporate and individual taxpayers because a number of taxes (for example fuel duty) are paid by both companies and individuals.

VAT (Demolition Costs)

Chris Huhne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the revenue cost in (a) 2005–06 and (b) 2006–07 of exempting demolition costs from value-added tax. [35076]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Revenue and Customs does not collect data on VAT from individual goods and services. Supplies of demolition services are standard-rated for VAT. However, where demolition services are provided as part of a single supply contract for the construction of new zero-rated buildings and are supplied immediately before construction starts, the liability of the entire supply contract (including the demolition services) follows that of the zero-rated buildings. VAT charged in relation to demolition on most commercial developments will be reclaimed.

HMRC has no data on the amount of VAT charged on demolition services and is unable to identify developments where recipients are unable to reclaim VAT charged. As such, it is not possible to make such an estimate.

Vegetable Oil

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what fiscal measures his Department is taking to encourage the use of vegetable oil as an alternative fuel; [34611]

(2) what legal advice his Department has received on whether pure vegetable oil should qualify for the lower biodiesel rate of duty; [34612]

(3) if he will list the fuels that are classed as biofuels. [34613]

John Healey: A reduced rate of duty for biodiesel was introduced in July 2002 in recognition of its environmental benefits and its higher production costs than conventional diesel. Fuel produced from vegetable oil is eligible for this lower rate (currently 27.10 pence per litre) if it meets the legal definition of biodiesel for tax purposes set out in section 2AA of the Hydrocarbon Oil Duties Act 1979. As with all legislation, this definition was drawn up taking account of legal advice from the Government's legal advisers.

The term "biofuels" is not defined in legislation for tax purposes. It is a generic term covering energy products derived from biomass. A lower duty rate of 27.10 pence per litre is also applied to bioethanol (a petrol substitute).

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Academy Schools

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many and what proportion of existing heads of school were re-appointed when their school gained academy status. [35325]

Jacqui Smith: There are currently 27 open academies. Of these, seven appointed as principal a head from the predecessor school, or one of the predecessor schools, on opening. Two academies were built as brand new schools. The proportion of heads re-appointed is therefore 28 per cent. In many cases, appointing a new principal when the academy opens is an important part of bringing about the educational transformation needed.

Adult Education/Vocational Courses

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what representations she has received on the impact of funding changes by the Learning and Skills Council on (a) the numbers enrolling and (b) the level of fees charged for adult and community learning courses. [24373]

Bill Rammell: On the 21 October, I made an announcement, setting out the Government's strategic direction for the learning and skills sector for 2006/7 and 2007/8. Although more public funding will be going into the sector, we will focus funding even more strongly on key priorities of raising participation and achievement 14–19 and driving down the skills deficit in the adult workforce. I reaffirmed our commitment to safeguard the funding for personal and community development learning in mainstream further education and local authority funded adult education (adult and community learning) with a budget of £210 million in 2006/7.

I and ministerial colleagues have received representations on a number of issues, including enrolments and fees, from hon. and right hon. Members. We have also met with and received comments from the sector including principals and chief executives of colleges, other post-16 providers and from learners and representative organisations, including the Association of Colleges, the Local Government Association, the National Federation of Women's Institutes and the National Institute of Adult Continuing Education (NIACE).

We expect to have information available in the new year about the initial take-up of learning in 2005/06, and the Learning and Skills Council will publish this through a statistical first release in March 2006.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will increase funding for (a) adult education and (b) vocational courses. [35509]

Bill Rammell: The Government's Skills Strategy, reaffirmed in the White Paper published on 22 March, sets clear priorities for public funding to support the drive to ensure that employers have the skills they need to be successful, and individuals have the skills they need to be employable and personally fulfilled. Funding for Further Education (FE) increased by 4.4 per cent. in 2005/06 Funding for non-vocational learning opportunities for adults, delivered mainly through local authority adult education services, has also increased. In 2004/05 we provided over £207 million to the Learning and Skills Council (LSC) in support of this learning. This has risen to £210 million in 2005/06.

This funding will enable colleges and other providers to deliver a wide range of learning opportunities to meet the needs of adults in local communities but those who are able to do so will need to pay higher fees in the future. I set out the Government's priorities for the learning and skills sector and the impact on funding in 2006–07 and 2007–08 on 21 October and full details can be found in 'Priorities for Success' on the LSC's website.

Child Care

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when she expects to be able to provide regulations to accompany the Childcare Bill. [33061]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 29 November 2005]: We aim to publish some illustrative regulations on the key provisions in the new year. We are aiming to publish papers describing our intentions in respect of the early years foundation stage and the registration requirements for the general childcare register so that the Childcare Bill Standing Committee has them available when it looks at the relevant provisions of the Bill. We will undertake a full consultation before regulations are finalised.

Children Act

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when she expects to publish information collected under the provisions of section 12 of the Children Act 2004. [34657]

Beverley Hughes: Section 12 of the Children Act 2004 gives the Secretary of State the power to make regulations to require the establishment and operation of an information sharing index or indexes. The purpose of an index is to improve early intervention by children's services to help children with additional needs. An index helps professionals to quickly identify the child they are working with and the services the child is receiving. This enables the professional to contact others working with the child, so they can then, where appropriate, share information to improve the provision of services for that child. An index would also enable quicker identification of children not receiving services they are entitled to such as education and primary health care.

In implementing any index approach, no information about any individual children would be published. The index would provide anonymised statistical information which might be used to assist with service planning and analysis at local and national level. Such information, when produced, would be publicly available, but we have no plans to produce or publish such information by a specific date.

Children's Centres

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when she expects to announce which communities within (a) Gloucestershire and (b) Stroud will be nominated for the location of new children's centres. [35212]

Beverley Hughes: All local authorities have a target number of Sure Start Children's Centres and a target number of children under five to reach between 2006–08. Gloucestershire county council has been asked to develop 23 Sure Start Children's Centres to reach 18,291 children under five by March 2008. Decisions on the location of Sure Start Children's Centres and the communities to benefit from their services are a matter for local determination and will not be formally announced by my Department. Gloucestershire county council is expected to set out its plans for the location of their new children's centres by February 2006.

Consultants

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what mechanisms are in place to assess the effectiveness of consultant-led projects in her Department; what sanctions are available to penalise consultants who run unsuccessful projects; how many projects conducted by consultants were assessed as unsuccessful in each year since 2000; and what sanctions were imposed in each case. [29114]

Bill Rammell: The planning, monitoring, control and delivery of programmes and projects in DfES is the responsibility of departmental management, not consultants and, therefore, all of the Department's programmes and projects are led by senior civil servants (acting as programme/project senior responsible owners). Consultants are engaged to assist in the successful delivery of these programmes and projects, and are subject to a raft of commercial, financial, procurement, technical and, programme and project quality assurance and standards. Additionally, the Office of Government Commerce's Gateway(tm) review process provides assurance at critical stages of a programme's or project's lifecycle.

Consultants who do not deliver the required services or advice to time, quality and cost, are subject to remedies appropriate to the shortcomings identified up to and including, as a last resort, contract termination and pursuit of damages.

From information held centrally, the Department is unaware of any programmes or projects that, in the years since 2000, could merit classification as unsuccessful as a direct result of consultants failing to deliver on their contract. No records are held centrally of sanctions applied to consultants engaged on DfES-led programmes and projects, and the information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Tendering Policy

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what her policy is on including (a) ethical and (b) environmental factors in tenders for services. [33330]

Bill Rammell: Department for Education and Skills (DfES) expects to let all its contracts in accordance with moral principles, and would consider any case where evidence to the contrary was presented.

Environmental factors in contracts let by DfES have been considered on a case by case basis relative to the subject matter of the contract, and the requirements of European Union law.

The Department will be making use of the "Sustainable Procurement Toolkit" due to be issued shortly by DEFRA which will enhance further the consideration of environmental factors in public sector contracts.

Education Funding

Kelvin Hopkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 23 November 2005, Official Report, column 2075W, on education funding, what research was conducted to enable the decision to be made that (a) a basic food hygiene certificate, (b) emergency aid for appointed persons, (c) lifesaver for babies and children and (d) preparing for an emergency: The British Red Cross response courses have limited benefits in terms of progression for learners. [35274]

Bill Rammell: The Learning and Skills Council conducted in depth analysis of learners attending very short courses. The analysis indicated that, in the case of the basic food hygiene, emergency aid for appointed persons, lifesaver for babies and children and the British Red Cross response courses, only 147 of the 31,260 learners enrolled in 2004/05 went on to further learning in that year.

The Learning and Skills Council's document "Priorities for Success" set out the Government's intention that in future, food hygiene and other health and safety courses taken by those in work should be fully funded by the employer wherever possible, in line with employers' statutory duty to meet the terms of relevant legislation. The LSC is consulting further on this proposition with key stakeholders. Where individuals are taking qualifications on their own account the expectation is that learners should cover the full cost, although colleges are of course still free to reduce or waive the course fee at their discretion. This is consistent with the principle set out in the Governments skills strategy that individuals should contribute more towards the cost of their learning in line with the benefits they receive. However, while the LSC will cease funding for very short courses below nine guided learning hours (excluding provision for personal and community development learning and learndirect courses), such learning may still continue if it is part of a larger programme that is more likely to lead to progression to further learning.

Extended School Services

John Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what provisions are being made to support extended services in schools in Leeds, West constituency. [35138]

Beverley Hughes: On 13 June 2005 my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced funding of £790 million over 2005–08 to support the development of extended services accessed in or through schools. £110 million of this was allocated in 2005–06 and Leeds local authority received £1,014,849. Of the £680 million to be allocated across 2006–08, £250 million will go direct to schools through the school standards grant and the formula for announcing each school's allocation for 2006–07 will be announced shortly. The remaining £430 million will be distributed to local authorities through the standards fund and the general sure start grant. Of this Leeds local authority will receive £2,144,841 in 2006–07 and £2,761,511 in 2007–08. Funding will be released to schools in accord[illegible] with each local authority's extended schools strategy.

Higher Education

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps are being taken by the Department to encourage graduates to work in higher education. [32760]

Bill Rammell: The responsibility for recruiting staff lies with higher education institutions (HEIs), as the employers. However, we have supported HEIs in developing their human resource capability through the rewarding and developing staff initiative (R and DS), which includes recruitment and retention as one of the priority areas for this funding. A recent evaluation carried out for the Higher Education Funding Council for England (HEFCE) by KPMG identified that about £72.9 million (of the total £370 million R and DS funding 2001–02 to 2003–04) had been spent on recruitment and retention.

The Department has also implemented, through HEFCE, a "Golden Hello" programme of funding to encourage new entrants into teaching shortage subjects. Each "Golden Hello" is worth £9,000 to an individual, over three years.

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much has been allocated to (a) full-time foundation degrees, (b) all foundation degrees, (c) full-time undergraduates and (d) part-time undergraduates (i) in total, (ii) for 18 to 21-years-olds and (iii) for over 21-year olds-by the Higher Education Funding Council for England in (A) 2005–06, (B) 2006–07 and (C) 2007–08. [35186]

Bill Rammell: The Higher Education Council for England (HEFCE) funds higher education institutions (HEIs) by way of block grant, and it is for each HEI how they allocate this within their own organisation. However, the allocation to HEIs makes assumptions about the pattern of student recruitment at each institution, and HEFCE are able, therefore, to provide a notional split between different programmes.

Figures for 2005–06 are shown in the following table. Although overall funding totals for the next two academic years were determined in the 2004 spending review, the allocation of this total between institutions is done annually by HEFCE, and allocations for years later than 2005–06 have yet to be made.

It is not possible to provide a notional allocation of funding by age: this is not a factor in determining grant allocations.

Notional HEFCE recurrent funding allocations for 2005–06

	£ million
Full-time and sandwich foundation degrees	103,910,188
All foundation degrees	171,159,771
Full-time and sandwich undergraduates	3,092,193,317
Part-time undergraduates	609,424,576

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of Higher Education Funding Council for England funding has been allocated to (a) medical students and (b) dental students for (i) 2005–06, (ii) 2006–07 and (iii) 2007–08. [35217]

Bill Rammell: The Higher Education Council for England (HEFCE) funds higher education institutions (HEIs) by way of block grant, and it is for each HEI how they allocate this within their own organisation. However, the allocation to HEIs makes assumptions about the pattern of student recruitment at each institution, and HEFCE are able, therefore, to provide a notional split between different programmes.

Figures for 2005–06 are shown in the following table, with overall allocations so that the proportion can be calculated. Although overall funding totals for the next two academic years were determined in the 2004 spending review, the allocation of this total between institutions is done annually by HEFCE, and allocations for years later than 2005–06 have yet to be made.

Influenza Pandemic

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when her Department plans to issue interim advice regarding an influenza pandemic to local emergency planners in respect of schools. [34726]

Jacqui Smith: This Department is contributing to further government guidance that will be issued in due course. It will build on initial advice that was issued to Regional Resilience Directors last spring.

Law Students

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps her Department plans to take in response to the recent report by the Higher Education Funding Council for England that ethnic minority candidates face a significantly lower chance of receiving an offer to study law. [34928]

Bill Rammell: The report "Higher Education Admissions: Assessment of the Bias", by the Higher Education Funding Council for England (HEFCE) re-works a previous study from 2002 (based on 1996/07 data) that found that applicants from ethnic minorities were disadvantaged. It is good news that the re-examination of the data does not show the same biases in HE admissions as suggested by the original research. HEFCE did however find that ethnic minority applicants had lower chances of receiving an offer when applying to study law than would be expected given their predicted grades and other factors. A certain amount of caution needs to be attached to these findings, due to the age and other inadequacies of the data. It is important to look at what has happened more recently, and HEFCE's proposals for more research in this area will do so.

It is not acceptable for any bias to be found for any subject or minority group. While admissions are the sole responsibility of institutions, the Government do have a legitimate interest in the fairness of the admissions process. That is why Professor Steven Schwartz was invited to lead an independent review of the HE admissions system. That review found that admissions processes are generally fair but established a number of underpinning principles that the sector has been encouraged to adopt. The Department, as requested by Professor Schwartz, plans to undertake a follow-up review of progress in 2007/08.

Institutions must not be complacent and must strive to eradicate biases as they develop their fair admissions policies and practices. Research such as this and the follow-up work that HEFCE is recommending will help institutions address the problems identified.

Learning and Skills Council

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment she has made of the implications for (a) the advice given to 16 to 18-year-olds and (b) the funding for the education of that age group of the restructuring of the Learning and Skills Council. [35452]

Bill Rammell: The LSC's proposed restructuring is designed to achieve better focus and more consistent delivery at a local level through the creation of 148 Local Partnership Teams. The provision of high quality advice and guidance will remain a key priority for the LSC, and the Local Partnership Teams will work with a range of partners, including services providing advice and guidance for 16 to 18-year-olds, to ensure an improved choice for learners. The LSC's funding priorities for 2006–07 and 2007–08 were published in its funding document "Priorities for Success" on 21 October 2005. Priority will be given to increasing the numbers of 16 to 18-year-olds engaged in learning and achieving a worthwhile qualification. These funding proposals allow for a significant increase in volumes for this age group.

School Care (Disabled Children)

Ed Balls: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how extended schools will cater for children with disabilities in (a) England, (b) Wakefield district and (c) Normanton constituency. [34541]

Beverley Hughes: This Government want all schools to provide access to a core offer of extended services by 2010, with half of all primary and a third of all secondary schools doing so by 2008. We have made clear that children with disabilities and special educational needs must be able to access all the services. The needs of children in particular schools and areas will vary. It will be for individual local authorities, in discussion with all schools in their area, to take a strategic approach to developing access to the core offer through schools. Schools will need to work closely with parents to ensure that services are shaped around the needs of children and the wider community.

We are making funding available to all local authorities and schools up to 2008 to support them in setting up and embedding services in mainstream and special schools.

School Location

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate she has made of the number of pupils attending state schools outside their own local education authority area each September since 2003. [34129]

Jacqui Smith: The information required to answer this question is not collected until January of each academic year. The information showing the position in the January of each year since 2002 is provided in the following table.

Percentage of pupils attending maintained schools outside of the local authority in which they reside[1]

	2002		2003		2004		2005

School Places

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children did not receive their first choice (a) primary and (b) secondary school place in each local education authority in the most recent year for which information is available. [34807]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 5 December 2005]: Information on pupils who did not receive their first choice of a primary or secondary school place is not collected centrally. Local authorities are required to co-ordinate admissions to secondary schools and, as a result of that process, many will have this information available for those that applied for entry in September 2005. Where co-ordination took place prior to 2005, it may also be available for those years. Local authorities are required to co-ordinate admissions to primary schools for entry in September 2006.

Specialist Language Schools

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) GCSE and (b) A level entries there were in modern languages from each specialist language school in each of the last 10 years, including years before the school acquired specialist status. [33056]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested is not readily available and can only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Truancy

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the levels of truancy were in (a) Lancashire and (b) England in each of the last three years; and if she will make a statement. [35512]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested on truancy in Lancashire 2002/03 to 2004/05 can be found as follows. 2004/05 data are provisional: they are currently in the process of being checked by schools and, therefore, may change as a result of this process.

Percentage of half days missed due to unauthorised[1] absence in maintained schools

2004/05	0.32	0.41	0.88	1.13
2005/06	0.34	0.43	0.95	1.25

[1] Unauthorised absence includes other forms of absence such as lateness, holidays during term time not authorised by the school, absence where reason is not yet established and truancy.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps she is taking to combat truancy. [35513]

Jacqui Smith: I refer my hon. Friend to the replies given on 2 November 2005, Official Report, column 1216W to a question from the hon. Member for Romford (Andrew Rosindell) and on 9 November 2005, Official Report, column 623W to a question from the hon. Members for Buckingham (John Bercow) and for Romford.

In September 2005, I announced a drive against 'serial truants' in 146 secondary schools which account for one in five of all instances of unauthorised authorised absence across the country. This drive will provide an intensive package of support and challenge to truants and their families. We have now extended this drive to cover 200 secondary schools and an estimated 13,000 pupils.

Key workers in the 200 schools and their local authorities will draw up an individual action plan and work with each truant to improve their school attendance. Where appropriate, truants and their families will be given co-ordinated support from children's services to tackle wider issues such as drugs, mental health or parenting skills that might be contributing to their truancy. Key workers will also consider referring parents of the most persistent truants onto the 'Fast Track to Attendance' scheme and, unless the youngster's attendance improves over a 12 week period, the parents will face a penalty notice or prosecution.

Under-achievement

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment she has made of the potential impact of the provision of mentoring upon underachievement by children from low socio-economic backgrounds. [26053]

Beverley Hughes: The scope and understanding of mentoring practice appears to vary widely depending on the intended aims of the programme. By and large, mentoring appears to have benefits on achievement, and generally such schemes are directed at those from low socio-economic groups almost by definition.

Our principle mentoring programme working with children from low socio-economic backgrounds is the learning mentor programme.

Excellence in Cities (EiC) is a targeted programme of support for schools in deprived areas of the country. Learning mentors are part of this programme, described by Ofsted (2003) as:

"the most successful and highly valued strand of the EiC programme".

Learning mentors are salaried non-teaching school support staff who work with school and college students and pupils to help them address barriers to learning. These barriers can be wide ranging and often very personal to the individual pupil. They include the need to develop better learning and study skills, personal organisation, difficulties at home, behaviour, bullying, or just general disaffection and disengagement from learning.

At present it is estimated that around 6,000 learning mentors are working in the secondary sector and 4000 in primary, funded through excellence in cities (EiC) provision. The numbers will be higher than this as an increasing number are being employed outside of EiC areas.

Learning mentors work with caseloads of pupils, largely on a 1:1 or small group basis, but also run clubs and "drop ins". They liaise closely with teachers and other support professionals, and often act as a supportive link between the family and school. One to one support may include developing coping strategies, enhancing motivation, raising aspirations and encouraging re-engagement in learning, taking account of a range of complex underlying issues that may impact negatively on learning and achievement (e.g. bereavement, lack of confidence/low self-esteem, low aspirations, mental health issues, relationship difficulties, bullying, peer pressure, family issues/concerns).

NFER (2004) Evaluation indicates positive impact of learning mentors on attainment outcomes for young people. Seeing a learning mentor was associated with a level of performance above that which might be anticipated from their prior attainment. In particular:

In low performing schools, young people who had seen a learning mentor in a low-performing school performed an average of 0.15 GCSE points better than their peers who had not seen a mentor.

In low performing schools, students with a learning mentor were also one and a half times more likely to have achieved five or more GCSEs at A* to C grades than young people with similar prior attainment and other characteristics who had not been mentored.

In high performing schools, mentees were three times more likely to have achieved three or more GCSEs at A* than those who had not seen a learning mentor

Regarding learning mentors' impact on behaviour, more than half of the identified group of 430 young people who had been mentored over two years demonstrated a positive change in either their attitudes (to school, to teachers and/or to learning) or their behaviour (in terms of improved attendance, punctuality and/ or completion of work).

In addition to their impact on academic performance, Ofsted (2003) found that:

"Learning mentors are making a significant effect on the attendance, behaviour, self-esteem and progress of the pupils they support".

Ofsted further reported that in 95 percent. of the survey schools, inspectors judged that the mentoring programme made a positive contribution to the mainstream provision of the school as a whole, and had a beneficial effect on the behaviour of individual pupils and on their ability to learn and make progress." (Ofsted 2003)

The behaviour improvement programme (BiP) evaluation report by the university of London, published in November 2005, states that "learning mentors were seen to fulfil one of the key roles in the programme and were highly valued by schools particularly at primary level. The BiP focuses on addressing behaviour and attendance issues in schools.

There are additional forms of mentoring provided within schools which are not provided by school learning mentors (employed by the school/local authority) e.g. peer and voluntary mentoring. There is also the work carried out by the mentoring and befriending foundation (ttp://www.mandbf.org.uk/).

DEFENCE

Afghanistan

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many troops have been contributed by each country contributing troops to Operation Enduring Freedom; and if he will make a statement. [27158]

Mr. Ingram: The UK contributes around 340 troops to Operation Enduring Freedom. The majority are either part of the Harrier GR7 detachment based in Kandahar or are conducting preparations for a possible UK deployment to southern Afghanistan. In addition, we provide an Afghan National Army Training Team which trains the NCO cadre of the Afghan Army, and there are a number of staff officers in the Coalition HQ.

The US provide information about other nations contributing troops and/or other support to Operation Enduring Freedom on the following website:

http://www.centcom.mil/Operations/Coalition/joint.htm

Any further information on numbers of troops currently deployed with Operation Enduring Freedom is a matter for the troop contributing nations.

Aircraft Carriers

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of the value of the aircraft carrier programme will be given to Swan Hunter. [34514]

Mr. Ingram: The decision on the ship build strategy for the two future aircraft carriers (CVF) and any associated contracts has yet to be taken but will form part of our main investment decision on CVF. This will happen when we are confident that the design is right, the contracts are right and we have sufficient understanding of cost, scheduling and risks involved.

Ammunition

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the (a) type and (b) quantity of ammunition which was acquired from outside the United Kingdom in 2004–05; and what the source was in each case. [24821]

Mr. Ingram: The information in the following table relates to general ammunition sourced directly from overseas for the financial year 2004–05. It does not include missiles, torpedoes or 'smart' munitions. The total figures provided amount to less than five per cent. of the volume of general ammunition purchased in 2004–05.

Army Uniform

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence who is responsible for the purchase of mess dress for (a) Senior Non-Commissioned Officers and (b) Warrant Officers on promotion to that rank. [29534]

Mr. Touhig: Mess kit for Non-Commissioned Officers (NCOs) is not mandatory uniform and is therefore not provided at public expense.

AWE Orion Laser

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will take steps to ensure that the plans for the AWE Orion Laser development at Aldermaston are tested by the normal planning process and that Crown immunity is not applied; and if he will make a statement. [34765]

Mr. Touhig: Under Crown exemption from planning legislation, the Ministry of Defence does not submit planning applications. In their place we use a consultation process under DOE Circular 18/84 which largely mirrors the statutory planning system. It is our normal policy to support any development proposals with the same level of background information that would be required under the statutory planning system.

The development at AWE Aldermaston is part of a scheduled programme of rebuilding works at the site. A range of background material has been submitted to West Berkshire council (the local planning authority) in support of these proposals mirroring the requirements placed on those which would be required of any private developer.

Chinooks

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place copies of the 14 annexes and nine enclosures listed on page 52 of the Chinook HC1 Airworthiness Review report, in the Library. [21752]

Mr. Ingram: I have placed a copy of the requested annexes and enclosures in the Library of the House. Third party information not relevant to the request has been withheld, together with a very small amount of information that relates to information supplied by bodies dealing with security matters.

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when each of the source software codes necessary for testing the airworthiness of the Chinook HC2 and Chinook HC2a helicopters was provided to his Department by the manufacturers in the US. [21753]

Mr. Ingram: Because of Intellectual Property Rights the source software codes have never been provided to the Ministry of Defence by the United States manufacturers.

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library copies of all (a) reports, (b) documents and (c) memoranda produced by or on behalf of Boscombe Down in 1988 concerning software in the Chinook HC2 helicopter. [21755]

Mr. Ingram: The mid-life update programme to produce the Chinook HC Mk 2 had not been initiated in 1988; there are therefore no relevant reports from Boscombe Down produced in that year.

Departmental Tendering Policy

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his policy is on including (a) ethical and (b) environmental factors in tenders for services. [33329]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence and the armed forces exist to defend the United Kingdom and its interests. MOD policy on procurement of goods, works and services will support sustainable development, including its environmental and social aspects, within the framework of the Government's procurement policy and its overarching aim of achieving value for money, and the EC procurement rules.

Falkland Islands

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the cost of the Falklands garrison has been in each of the last five years. [33905]

Mr. Ingram: The costs of maintaining the garrison in the Falklands for each of the last five years are as follows:

	£ million
2004–05	113.1
2003–04	110.6
2002–03	119.8
2001–02	115.3
2000–01	143.4

The reduction in costs from 2001–02 onwards is attributable, for the most part, to an adjustment to the accounts to reflect revaluations, resulting in a permanent diminution in the value of fixed assets.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many landmines in the Falkland Islands have been cleared in the last 10 years. [33907]

Mr. Ingram: Under the Ottawa Convention, the United Kingdom is required to clear all anti-personnel mines from its territory by March 2009. The only UK territory affected is the Falkland Islands. At present, only those landmines that are close to perimeter fences and may pose a danger to the civilian community are cleared. Within the last ten years, 274 anti-personnel mines and 69 anti-vehicle mines in this category have been destroyed.

Fire Fighting Duties

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence under what powers the Government have authorised the employment of members of the armed forces for fire fighting duties in the East Midlands area; and if he will make a statement. [29581]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 17 November 2005]: There has been no recent strike in East Midlands; the hon. Member probably intended to refer to the current strike in West Midlands. Section 2 of the Emergency Powers Act 1964 provides the statutory basis for deployment of members of the armed forces on non-military tasks. This enables the Secretary of State for Defence to authorise, through issue of a Defence Council Order, deployment of members of the armed forces on 'urgent work of national importance'. The deployment of armed forces personnel to provide emergency fire cover in the West Midlands was authorised by Defence Council Order on 7 November 2005 following a request from the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister, in support of a request from the Chief Fire Officer of the West Midlands.

Flight Lieutenant MacDonald

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the total cost to public funds has been to date of the court case Flight Lieutenant MacDonald v. Ministry of Defence. [34426]

Mr. Touhig: To date the Ministry of Defence's legal costs in the case involving Mr. MacDonald are £169,700 which includes counsel's fees. These costs reflect the legal complexity of the case brought by Mr. MacDonald.

Mr. MacDonald claimed he had been discriminated against unlawfully on grounds of sex, contrary to the Equal Treatments Directive 76/207/EEC and Section 6 of the Sex Discrimination Act 1976. On appeal to the House of Lords, the Law Lords handed down a unanimous judgment in favour of the Ministry of Defence on 19 June 2003 rejecting Mr. MacDonald's challenge to the interpretation of the Sex Discrimination Act 1976.

All attempts to settle the matter, including the offer to Mr. MacDonald to rejoin the Royal Air Force, have so far been unsuccessful.

Future Aircraft Carrier

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the latest dates would be to sign a main gate contract for the first Future Aircraft Carrier in order for it to be able to enter service in (a) 2012, (b) 2013, (c) 2014, (d) 2015 and (e) 2016. [33617]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 6 December 2005]: We are in discussion with companies over the details of the way in which the future aircraft carriers will be built and, the costs and the time-scales involved. While those discussions are ongoing, and until we have signed manufacturing contracts, which will be after the main investment decision, we are not prepared to speculate on in-service dates.

Landing Ships Dock (Auxiliary) Project

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress is being made on the second vessel to be built by Swan Hunter as part of the landing ships dock (auxiliary) project; and when he expects it to begin sea trials. [34028]

Mr. Ingram: Outfitting activities (for example, architectural work, furniture, pipework and deck coverings) on RFA Lyme Bay are continuing and sea trials are scheduled to commence in late 2006.

Panther Command and Liaison Vehicle

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the (a) available payload and (b) personnel capacity will be of the (i) armoured and (ii) unarmoured Panther Command and Liaison Vehicle when fitted with Bowman. [34369]

Mr. Ingram: PANTHER is only being procured as an armoured Command and Liaison Vehicle. The BOWMAN fit is designed to provide a range of configurations to meet the needs of the User. PANTHER has been designed to be operated with a minimum crew of two, however it has the capacity to carry a crew of four in some roles. The payload capacity after fitting BOWMAN varies between 590kg and 1100kg, dependant upon configuration and functionality such as the Overhead Weapon Station.

Puma

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library copies of the Airworthiness Review report into the Puma aircraft. [21754]

Mr. Ingram: I have today placed copies of the Puma Airworthiness Review report from March 1996 into the Library of the House. Third party information not relevant to the request has been withheld.

RAF Bases

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will undertake a comprehensive strategic review of the defence capability of the 50 national defence airfields. [30984]

Mr. Ingram: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 23 November 2005, Official Report, column 2055W.

Royal Navy

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will designate a new Royal Navy ship with the name HMS Shrewsbury. [35177]

Mr. Ingram: The Ships Names and Badges Committee has the task of assessing all the possible names for new ships before making their recommendation through the First Sea Lord and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence for final approval by Her Majesty the Queen.

The new class of Royal Navy destroyers (the type 45 or D class) are to bear names beginning with the letter 'D', so Shrewsbury cannot be a candidate for any of these. Similarly, the names for the new astute class of submarine will all begin with the letter 'A'. However, I shall ensure that Shrewsbury, of which there have been three ships previously with the name, who earned four battle honours, is among the names considered for future suitable vessels.

Service Medical Personnel

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service medical personnel are deployed in (a) Iraq and (b) Afghanistan; and if he will make a statement. [30929]

Mr. Touhig: There are currently 240 UK medical personnel (health professionals) serving in Iraq and 12 in Afghanistan. These figures exclude Regimental Medical Assistants, who deliver first line medical care within their own regiments.

Service Schools

Alison Seabeck: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether children in service schools are tested and assessed in a way comparable to state schools. [34962]

Mr. Touhig: All service children's education (SCE) schools follow the statutory requirements and guidance on the national curriculum assessment arrangements as outlined in the Education Act 2000. This includes assessing pupils for the foundation stage profile and attainment at the end of all key stages. Older pupils undertake GCSE and "A" level examinations in common with English state schools.

Alison Seabeck: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the (a) test and (b) examination results of pupils at service schools are published; and whether pupils' records are transferred when they move into the state sector. [34963]

Mr. Touhig: All performance data on Service Children's Education (SCE) Agency schools is published internally to schools and the Agency Owner's Board, on which the Department for Education and Skills (DfES) is represented. In addition, SCE Head teachers are responsible for ensuring that a written report is provided to all parents, detailing their individual child's performance. Information on the overall performance of the school is also provided directly to parents by way of a formal Annual Report. As SCE does not come under the jurisdiction of the DfES, SCE's school results are not included in the 'Achievement and Attainment Tables' published by that Department. However, the overall performance of the Agency against its Key Targets, which includes achievement at Key Stages 1 to 3 and GCSE and 'A' level, is published each year in the Agency's Annual Report and Accounts, copies of which are available in the Library of the House.

SCE schools follow the statutory requirement to send specified pupil records to the receiving school. This is the case for all pupils moving to either a local education authority (LEA) maintained or independent school.

Trident

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his answer of 28 November 2005, Official Report, column 124W, on Trident, if he will ensure that opportunities are provided for full and informed public and parliamentary debate prior to decisions being made on a replacement for the United Kingdom's Trident nuclear missile capability. [35333]

John Reid: The issue of the possible replacement of Trident has been raised on numerous occasions in the House of Commons, most recently during defence questions on 14 November and the 'Defence in the UK' debate on 17 November. I also discussed this issue with the House of Commons Defence Committee on 1 November.

Although decisions are likely to be necessary in the current Parliament they are still some way off and there will be many further opportunities for Parliament to debate the issue. It is too early to say what further formal or informal procedures might be used to underpin future decision-making by the Government in this area.

White Phosphorus

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the use of white phosphorus by the British Army. [33289]

John Reid: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given in another place on 29 November 2005, Official Report, column WA23, by my noble Friend Lord Drayson, the Parliamentary Under Secretary of State for Defence Procurement.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Appointments

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the date of appointment was of each member of the (a) Civil Renewal Practitioners Group, (b) Criminal Records Bureau Consultative Panel, (c) Insurance Cover Working Group, (d) Race Equality Advisory Panel, (e) Steering Group on the Lawrence Enquiry Action Plan, (f) Task Force on Child Protection on the Internet, (g) Correctional Services Accreditation Panel, (h) Animal Procedures Committee, (i) Police Arbitration Panel, (j) Surveillance Commissioners, (k) Criminal Injuries Compensation Appeals Panel, (l) Asylum Support Adjudicators, (m) Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs, (n) Independent Police Complaints Commission and (o) Office of the Immigration Services Commissioner; what the length of appointment is in each case; how much has been claimed in expenses by each person; and what the cost of each body was in (i) 2003–04 and (ii) 2004–05. [11951]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The information requested will be placed in the Library.

Asylum/Immigration

Annette Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many families subject to the pilot implementation of section 9 of the Asylum and Immigration (Treatment of Claimants) Act 2004 (a) are being supported as a family and (b) are receiving support for children only from their local authority. [31185]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 21 November 2005]: I have not been informed of any cases where, following a withdrawal of support by NASS because of lack of co-operation on a voluntary return, the local authority has made a formal decision to support the family as a unit.

There are a number of cases where a local authority is accommodating a family temporarily, pending an assessment of the children's needs under the Children Act. There are three cases where a local authority has decided to provide support to cover the children's needs only.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the cost of housing asylum seekers in (a) London, (b) Havering and (c) Romford was in the last five years. [33919]

Mr. McNulty: The information is not available in the precise format requested. Information on the costs of providing accommodation to asylum seekers supported directly by NASS for the years 2000–01—2003–04 is provided in the following table. Annual payments to local authorities by NASS from 1999–2000 can be found at:

http://www.ind.homeoffice.gov.uk/ind/en/home/applying/national_asylum_support/stakeholders/finance.html

We are unable to provide information on the amount of grant used to pay for accommodation.

Michael Jabez Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers have been prosecuted for document infringements under the rules introduced by the Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act 2002. [34204]

Mr. McNulty: Section 2(1) of the Asylum and Immigration (treatment of Claimants etc.) Act 2004 makes it an offence for a person not to have, at a leave or asylum interview, an immigration document which is in force and which satisfactorily establishes his identity and nationality or citizenship. The offence contained in Section two is not included in the list of offences covered by Section 31 of the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999.

The figures for prosecutions could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, according to locally collated management information, which may be subject to change, there have been 350 convictions under Section two of the Asylum & Immigration (Treatment of Claimants, etc) Act 2004 since it came into force on 22 September 2004 until 20 October 2005.

Council Tax Valuation

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate the Government has made of the number of people fined in England and Wales since 1997 for intentionally delaying or obstructing a Valuation Office Agency representative who is conducting a council tax valuation inspection. [33153]

Mr. Woolas: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Brent, East (Sarah Teather) on 23 November 2005, Official Report, column 2066W.

Basic Command Unit Fund

Mr. Pelling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of the Basic Command Unit Fund funding stream from the Government Office for London was made available to the London borough of Croydon in 2004–05. [33876]

Hazel Blears: The Government Office for London was allocated £9,995,862 from the Basic Command Unit Fund in 2004–05, of which £352,141 was made available to the London borough of Croydon.

Cannabis Possession

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were (a) arrested and charged with and (b) convicted of cannabis possession in (i) the Southend Police Authority area and (ii) each other police authority area in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [33643]

Paul Goggins: The available information relates to the number of police cautions and court convictions within each police force area.

Mr. McNulty: I replied to my hon. Friend on 6 December.

Clare Short: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Minister of State for Immigration will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Birmingham, Ladywood, to the Immigration and Nationality Directorate of 12 July 2005 on behalf of Samreen Mahmood (nee Akhtar) (Home Office Reference M1254489/correspondence reference B16243/5). [35173]

Mr. McNulty: The Immigration and Nationality Directorate wrote to my right hon. Friend on 5 December 2005.

Criminal Justice and Public Order Act

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will bring forward proposals to amend section 34 of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 to permit the courts to draw adverse inferences from the failure to mention facts in post-charge interviews for terror-related offences. [32904]

Hazel Blears: A detainee may not be interviewed about an offence after they have been charged with it or informed that they will be prosecuted for it unless the interview is necessary for the reasons set out in paragraph 16.5 of PACE Code C (Detention, treatment and questioning of persons by police officers).

We are considering whether such provision best suits the needs of achieving a successful outcome to an investigation and intend to publish a consultation paper on this issue in spring 2006. That paper will also consider the existing caution provided for in Code C, paragraph 16.5 and the potential for extending that to the caution given to a suspect during the pre-charge of the investigation.

Deaths in Custody

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people died while in the custody of the Essex Police Force in each of the last five years. [31432]

Hazel Blears: The total number of deaths in each of the last five years of people who have died during or following police contact is shown at annex A.

Deportees

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 28 November 2005, Official Report, column 40W, on deportees, whether the two individuals to which the Answer refers opposed the relevant extradition requests. [34243]

Mr. McNulty: The individual who was surrendered to Italy in 2002 did not oppose the decision to surrender him by way of Habeas Corpus, but did submit limited representations against his return. He also gave notice of his intention to seek a judicial review of the Secretary of State's decision to order extradition, but did not do so.

The individual who was surrendered to the Netherlands in July 2005 consented at the extradition hearing.

Domestic Violence

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what funding has been made available to support victims of domestic violence and their children in each year since 1997 in (a) England and (b) the Tees Valley. [32765]

Fiona Mactaggart: The information is as follows:

(a) Between 1999–2000 and 2003–04 the Home Office allocated funding for victims of domestic violence and their children through the violence against women (VAW) initiative within the crime reduction programme.

The allocated budget for England and Wales was: 2000–01—£5,000,000, 2001–02—£7,092,000, 2002–03—£6,355,000, 2003–04—£7,145,000 (£6 million allocated to VAW and £1 million allocated to a national awareness raising campaign. £145,000 was allocated for domestic violence victims with no recourse to public funds. 2004–05—£1,650,000 (£1.1 million allocated to regional directors fund for local delivery of support for victims of domestic violence and their children and £50,000 was allocated to implement the Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Act 2004. £500,000 was allocated to a national awareness raising campaign. 2005–06—£1,500,000 other Government Departments also fund support for domestic violence victims and their children. For example, the supporting people programme provides housing-related support for victims and their children.

The spending on this programme is as follows: 2003–04—£57 million, 2004–05—£56.9 million estimated spend also, in 2003 the Government announced major investment in refuge provision in England in 2003–06. A total of £32.1 million capital has been allocated. Specifically relating to children of domestic violence victims, the 2004 Spending Review provided the Sure Start Unit with additional investment of £769 million by 2007–08 to 'provide additional childcare support for at least 2,000 particularly disadvantaged children.

(b) The North East Region only began receiving funding for domestic violence from 2001 when the violence against women initiative commenced. The Tees Valley area comprises four CDRP/local authority areas. Funding for domestic violence within the Tees Valley is as follows: 2001–03—Middlesbrough was successful in bidding in the second tranche of violence against women initiative funding for £389,385 which was used to fund a successful one stop shop project—My Sister's Place which provides direct access, support and information to women experiencing or affected by domestic violence. 2003–04—Middlesbrough, was granted an additional year's funding of £57,802 from the VAW programme to continue My Sister's Place. During the same year Cleveland police were allocated £60,000. 2004–05—A total of £60,000 was allocated to the four areas to develop and pilot a perpetrator programme. 2005–06—£60,000 was allocated to continue and roll out the perpetrator programme to other localities in the Tees Valley area.

Drug Interventions Programme

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which areas are covered by the Drug Interventions Programme; and if he will make a statement. [33240]

Paul Goggins: The Drug Interventions Programme (DIP) provides a route out of crime and into treatment for drug misusing offenders, using their contact with the Criminal Justice System as an opportunity to engage them in treatment and support. The intensive elements of the programme, which include testing for class A drugs on charge for certain trigger offences, are operational in 97 basic command units (BCUs) (67 Drug Action Teams) within England and three drug/alcohol partnerships in Wales. Other key elements of DIP are delivered in all areas of England and are being rolled out in Wales.

The intensive areas are listed in table 1. Since the programme began, over 31,000 drug misusing offenders have entered treatment through DIP. Latest figures show that over 2,000 DIP clients entered treatment in October 2005 and that the programme is on course to achieving the target of 1,000 offenders per week entering treatment by March 2008.

From 1 December, the police in Greater Manchester, Nottinghamshire and South Yorkshire police force areas, are able to test for class A drugs on arrest for certain trigger offences as an alternative to on charge for those who test positive and require them to attend an assessment with a drug worker. These new powers will be expanded further on 31 March 2006. Acquisitive crime—to which drug related crime makes a substantial contribution—is going down and fell by 12 per cent. in the year to April 2005.

ECHR and ECJ Judgments

David Mundell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which domestic laws have been amended following judgment against the UK by the European Court of Human Rights and the European Court of Justice in the last 10 years. [30844]

Ms Harman: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

EU Travel Bans

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department further to the answer of 21 November 2005, Official Report, column 1748W, on EU travel bans, what mechanisms exist for (a) the Immigration and Nationality Directorate and (b) his Department to monitor compliance with travel bans. [34396]

Mr. McNulty: The Immigration and Nationality Directorate and the Sanctions Unit of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office liaise closely to ensure that the UK complies with its international obligations in respect of travel bans. Details of all those subject to EU, and UN, travel bans are placed on appropriate databases.

These databases are updated regularly and are available to UK immigration officials responsible for ensuring that those excluded individuals are refused leave to enter or remain in the UK. Section 8B(2) of the Immigration Act 1971 ensures that any leave to enter or remain in the UK is cancelled on becoming an excluded person.

Hunting

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what reports he has received of breaches of the Hunting Act 2004; and what steps were taken in response. [33350]

Hazel Blears: The investigation of reported breaches of the Hunting Act 2004 is a matter for the police. The Association of Chief Police Officers has issued guidance for police forces on the practical aspects of enforcing the Act and a training package.

Identity Cards

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether his Department has conducted (a) research studies and (b) tests on the prevention of data leakage of contactless technology via skimming and eavesdropping in relation to the identity card scheme. [32084]

Andy Burnham: The identity card scheme will secure information on the identity card through a number of methods, including the use of anti-skimming technology. The identity cards programme has reviewed technical methodologies for anti-skimming measures for contactless cards which are compliant with International Civil Aviation Organisation (ICAO) recommendations for machine-readable travel documents. It is also working with the Communications Electronics Security Group (CESG) as part of setting requirements for card and chip design. Ultimately, before the identity card can be launched, any card used by the scheme will undergo a full security accreditation to ensure that it is capable of protecting sensitive data to the appropriate level.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the (a) total and (b) net cost of (i) integrating the proposed identity card scheme into his Department's IT systems and (ii) the ongoing operation of the scheme within his Department. [31111]

Andy Burnham: The Home Office has developed its current best estimate of the cost of using the ID cards scheme to support the services which it oversees and these costs have been incorporated into the business case. The Ministerial Committee on Identity Cards which oversees the work on benefits planning and realisation, is chaired by my hon. Friend the Minister of State Tony McNulty and I represent the interests of Home Office and the services it oversees on the Committee.

In deriving these estimates account has to be taken of current and planned levels of investment in similar or related technologies and the types of use required to support the particular services which the Home Office oversees. Not all services will require a high degree of integration between the ID cards scheme and other IT systems. Where there may be a need for integration, some costs can be absorbed into the usual cycles of system upgrades and technology refreshes.

We cannot release the detailed estimated costs for integrating IT systems and the ongoing operation of the identity cards scheme within the Home Office and the services which it oversees at this stage as these elements may be acquired from the market. The estimates are therefore commercially sensitive and to release them may prejudice the procurement process and the Department's ability to obtain value for money from potential suppliers.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether his Department has conducted (a) research studies and (b) tests in accordance with national standards on basic access control on the durability of contactless chips and cards when they are subjected to regular swiping in order to disclose information kept on the card in relation to the identity card scheme. [32083]

Andy Burnham: The Identity Cards programme has conducted a review of studies into the use and durability of contactless chips and cards suitable for use in an identity cards scheme as well as wide-ranging market sounding survey to gain the views of a cross section of suppliers in the smartcard value chain.

This survey concluded that a ten year life for a contactless card was feasible. It should be noted that swiping, to enable basic access control, is only likely to be required when the card is used as an international travel document. Indeed, more recent reader technologies use a camera to read the machine readable characters on a card or passport and therefore do not require the document to be swiped.

International Arrest Warrants

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to his answer of 30 November 2005, Official Report, column 596W, to questions on international arrest warrants, (1) if he will consult (a) Parliament and (b) parties with an interest in the issuing of arrest warrants in international cases other than the Israeli Government on the issues raised by the case of General Almog; [35234]

(2) what changes to the procedure of dealing with arrest warrants in international cases are under consideration; and whether changes to the issuing of proposed arrest warrants in international cases will be reported to Parliament before a decision is made. [35235]

Andy Burnham: The Government are carefully considering the implications of this case. Procedures for issuing warrants in such cases are governed by section 25(2) of the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985. Any future proposals for amending this legislation would be submitted to Parliament in the usual way and would be open to public scrutiny.

KPMG Review

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to his answer to question no. 19871, whether the Government plan to publish (a) the review of the recommendations of the KPMG report and (b) the Government's proposed actions arising therefrom; and when he expects the outcomes to be announced. [23090]

Andy Burnham: The summary of KPMG's report and the Home Office's proposed actions arising from it were both published on the 9 November 2005. As the results of further iterations of the cost estimates are published the Government will make clear where they have acted on the recommendations.

Migrant Workers

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of migrant workers to the UK from the EU's new accession countries are women. [33997]

Mr. McNulty: The accession monitoring report for May 2004—September 2005 sets out the number of citizens from East European member states of the EU who have applied for registration with the worker registration scheme during this period. This report is available on the Home Office website:

via:http://www.ind.homeoffice.gov.uk/ind/en/home/0/reports/accession_monitoring.htm

Section three of the report, "Age and Gender of Registered Workers", shows that during the period May 2004 to September 2005, 43 percent. of the migrants from the new EU member states who applied for registration with the scheme were women.

This proportion has varied over the period. During the first quarter after accession the proportion of women applying for registration was 47 percent. During the second quarter of 2005 the proportion was 40 percent.

Passport Costs

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the cost of (a) a standard (32 page) passport, (b) a frequent traveller (48 page) passport, (c) a child passport (five years validity) and (d) an emergency passport was in each year since 1980. [33642]

Andy Burnham: Passport fees relating to each year since 1980 are set out in the following table. The fees are those which were appropriate at 1 January each year. An emergency same day service was only introduced from November 2001 and five year child passports were introduced in October 1998, the table below reflects the price of amending a parents passport before 1999. The decrease in frequent traveller costs in 1991 was due to a reduction in book size from 94 pages to 48.

Penalty Notices

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many penalty notices for disorder have been issued for (a) theft and (b) criminal damage in each month since November 2004; and if he will make a statement. [33598]

Hazel Blears: Offences under section one of the Theft Act 1968, for retail theft under the value of £200 and section 1(1) of the Criminal Damage Act 1971, for destroying or damaging property under the value of £500 can attract a Penalty Notice for Disorder. Both offences were included into the PND scheme from 1 November 2004. The numbers of penalty notices issued by month are provided in the following table.

Police Reorganisation

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what secondary legislation will need to be passed in order to facilitate the proposed amalgamation of police forces. [32858]

Hazel Blears: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to a question from the hon. Member for Mid Worcestershire on 22 November 2005, Official Report, column 1930W.

Ports

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans the Government have to increase the number of UK ports which are manned by immigration staff 24 hours a day. [34714]

Mr. McNulty: Immigration coverage of international flight arrivals is based upon a range of factors, including the nature and frequency of traffic and the numbers of passengers requiring leave to enter at each port. There are currently 41 manned ports, of which 16 are staffed 24 hours a day. Other ports are covered on a risk assessed basis. Officers are deployed to unmanned ports to meet specific arrivals where necessary.

The provision of advance passenger information by carriers under the e-Borders programme will increase the Border Agencies' ability to conduct risk assessments and deploy resources in a targeted manner. There are currently no plans to extend the number of UK ports which are manned 24 hours a day. We are however extending the Immigration Service mobile response capacity, based on intelligence, to respond to any new or emerging threats.

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures the Government have in place to record people who leave the UK through (a) UK ports, (b) UK airports and (c) the Channel Tunnel. [34715]

Mr. McNulty: UK Immigration Service checks at the embarkation control were put in place at key locations as an immediate response to the July attacks in support of the police. Since 15 September the Immigration service has operated intelligence led controls at major ports and this situation will continue in the medium term. In the longer term IND plans to introduce an electronic system of recording travellers in and out of the UK as part of the e-Borders programme.

Serious Organised Crime Agency

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made towards the establishment of the new centre for child protection on the internet affiliated to the Serious Organised Crime Agency; and if he will make a statement. [33238]

Paul Goggins: On 1 April 2005, the Home Secretary announced plans to create a new national centre to protect children from sexual exploitation and combat online child abuse. This new centre will be called Child Exploitation and Online Protection Centre and is on track to open on 1 April 2006.

The centre will take over the existing functions of the National Crime Squad (NCS) Paedophile Online Investigation Team (POLIT) and the National Criminal Intelligence Service (NCIS) Serious Sex Offenders' Unit (SSOU) and those functions of the NCS National Hi-Tech Crime Unit (NHTCU) that are focused on tackling online child abuse. It will also deliver a range of new functions. The new centre will:—receive, assess and disseminate intelligence on paedophiles and other serious sex offenders;—undertake proactive investigations into high risk targets. This will include targeting travelling sex offenders and seizing the assets from those who profit from the trade in indecent images;—provide a 24/7 cybertip line for reporting online child abuse;—deliver innovative crime prevention and crime reduction initiatives to reduce the harm caused by online abuse.

This will include public awareness and education campaigns;—manage the national database of child abuse images; and—provide information, advice, training and support. This includes specialist advice and guidance to law enforcement.

The centre will be affiliated to the Serious and Organised Crime Agency (SOCA) and included in the SOCA governance arrangements but will have full operational autonomy. We know the only way to tackle these issues effectively is in partnership. Putting the different experts together for the first time in an operational centre will allow us to make a step change in the work we do to protect children.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the objectives are of (a) the chair, (b) the director general designate and (c) each of the four executive directors of the Serious Organised Crime Agency; and if he will make a statement. [34326]

Paul Goggins: Under the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005, the functions of the Serious Organised Crime Agency are to: (a) prevent and detect serious organised crime, and (b) contribute to the reduction of such crime in other ways and to the mitigation of its consequences, and it is the objective of the chair and the director general to deliver them. The objectives of each of the four executive directors is an operational matter for the director general designate.

Stop and Search

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the London boroughs which have established a local monitoring group to scrutinise the use of stop and search and stop and account; and if he will make a statement. [34342]

Hazel Blears: The Metropolitan Police Authority have informed me that 23 London boroughs have indicated that they have established a local monitoring group to scrutinise the use of stop and search and stop and account. The 23 boroughs are detailed in the following list.

Terrorism Bill (Police Lobbying)

Mr. Hurd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the police forces which recommended that judicial oversight be sought during pre-trial detention every seven days, referred to by the Prime Minister on 7 November. [30333]

Hazel Blears: The content of the Terrorism Bill was discussed with the Metropolitan police, which has lead responsibility for terrorism matters, and ACPO, which speaks on behalf of all police forces in England and Wales.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Fire Training

Lynne Jones: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission how many (a) hon. Members, (b) hon. Members' staff and (c) other staff working in the Palace of Westminster have attended fire training in each of the last three years; and what proportion of the total this represents in each case. [33298]

Nick Harvey: Over the last three years the numbers attending fire safety awareness training were as follows:

	Members	Members staff	Staff of both Houses and contractors working on the estate
2003–04
Number	1	30	1,386
Percentage	0.3	2.72	54
2004–05
Number	62	223	1,967
Percentage	10	20.2	93
2005–06 to date
Number	0	11	840
Percentage	—	1	39

Further training will be carried out in 2005–06.

Parliamentary Estate (Lighting)

Peter Law: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Hornsey and Wood Green (Lynne Featherstone) of 30 November 2005, Official Report, column 571W, on light bulbs, whether the Commission plans to increase the use of energy efficient (a) fluorescent tubes and (b) lamps used on the parliamentary estate to 100 per cent. [35794]

Nick Harvey: Subject to aesthetic and heritage issues in the Palace, fluorescent bulbs are replaced with energy efficient equivalents during the refurbishment of each area. When light fittings come to the end of their life they are similarly replaced with energy efficient bulbs. This is not feasible in Central Lobby or St. Stephens Hall due to the age and design of the chandeliers but in all other areas the replacement programme is expected to be complete by 2007.

Project Costs

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission if he will list the projects costing over £100,000 undertaken on behalf of the Commission since 1997; and what the cost was of each project. [34417]

Nick Harvey: I regret that I am unable to do so, in the absence of a clear definition of what constitutes a project for the purposes of this request. Within an annual Administration Estimate cash budget of over £150 million, there are many developments in the services and facilities provided which might or might not be defined as "projects". There have for example been over 250 readily identifiable works and IT-related projects since 1997, many jointly funded with the House of Lords. Records of other projects and programmes are not held centrally, and compiling a comprehensive and authoritative list could be done only at disproportionate cost.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Criminal Cases (Competitive Tendering)

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will publish the advice provided by Frontier Economics to her Department in respect of its proposals to introduce competitive tendering in criminal legal aid; and if she will make a statement. [35084]

Bridget Prentice: We will consider the future of competitive tendering including publication of any advice we have received in light of the Carter report into legal aid procurement.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Departmental Tendering Policy

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his policy is on including (a) ethical and (b) environmental factors in tenders for services. [33345]

Mr. Plaskitt: It is the Department's procurement policy to (a) buy sustainable goods and services even if they cost more; (b) make sustainable procurement part of every commercial VFM decision which will be made on the basis of whole life costs; (c) undertake environmental risk assessments of contracting activities and (d) consider ethical and Fair Trade issues across the whole supply chain.

E-benefits Software

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what evaluation he has made of the use of e-benefits software in Rotherham; and if he will make a statement. [34285]

Jim Fitzpatrick: I have been asked to reply.

The e-benefits project is one of 22 local e-government national projects sponsored by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister. The project is led by Rotherham MBC. The project's software covers three benefits: housing benefit, council tax benefit and free school meals. These have been evaluated by ODPM, the Department for Work and Pensions (DWP) and Cabinet Office. Rotherham is currently working with the ODPM and a consortium of suppliers to make these products available commercially to other local authorities next year.

Financial Assistance Scheme

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the oral answer of 31 October 2005, Official Report, column 610, what progress has been made by the Financial Assistance Scheme Operational Unit; and whether he expects the first payments to be made by the unit by Christmas. [35486]

Mr. Timms: The Financial Assistance Scheme Operational Unit has been gathering information on pension schemes since 1 September. Over 250 schemes have been notified to FAS, of which 51 have so far been accepted as qualifying pension schemes.

The unit has now begun gathering data on individual members and hopes to be in a position to make initial payments to a number of members in December.

Jobcentre Plus

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many offers of (a) training and (b) other support have been made to individuals by Jobcentre Plus and subsequently rescinded for (i) budgetary or (ii) other reasons in the last 12 months. [28710]

Margaret Hodge: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 7 December 2005:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question regarding how many offers of (a) training and (b) other support have been made to individuals by Jobcentre Plus, and subsequently rescinded for either budgetary or other reasons in the last 12 months. This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

I assume that when referring to individuals that you are referring to staff members of Jobcentre Plus. On that basis, I can advise you that no offers of training or other support made to staff have been cancelled or rescinded during the last 12 months due to budgetary reasons. Some local training cancellations may have occurred due to operational reasons.

During 2004/05, 446,396 learning days were delivered to meet the needs of individual staff and the business of Jobcentre Plus. A further 521,220 learning days have been planned for delivery during 2005/06 across Jobcentre Plus, representing an average of 6 days per person for the year.

We also provide other support during the year which includes 'Working Together', our cultural change programme; use of our performance and development system to support staff development; our employee assistance programme; and leadership and manager development. All of these continue to be on offer.

Mr. Anthony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what consultations have been undertaken to assess the preferred method of contact for customers of Jobcentre Plus. [30359]

Margaret Hodge: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 7 December 2005:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question concerning what consultations have been undertaken to assess the preferred method of contact for customers. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

Jobcentre Plus conducts an annual customer satisfaction survey which canvasses the views of our customers across the full range of our services, including the channels of contact we provide. The surveys give us a clear picture about how our services are perceived by customers, including how well delivered they are, and how easy or difficult they are to access. They also provide baseline information on customer expectations and satisfaction and the basis for tracking, over time, how customer perceptions of the service change as Jobcentre Plus implementation is rolled out, helping to drive the process of performance improvement.

The results of the 2004 survey were published on 30th September 2004. The 2005 survey commenced in September.

I hope this is helpful.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the pilots that have been conducted in the Canvey Job Centre in the last five years. [30382]

Margaret Hodge: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 7 December 2005:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question concerning pilots that have been conducted in Canvey Island Jobcentre Plus during the last five years. This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

In answer to your specific question there have been two pilots conducted in Canvey Island Jobcentre Plus in the last five years. These pilots were not exclusive to Canvey Island Jobcentre Plus as they were run in Essex Jobcentre Plus District which covers Canvey Island.

From April 2004 Essex has been one of seven Jobcentre Plus districts delivering the Governments Pathways to Work pilot. The pilot targets help and support at customers claiming Incapacity Benefit by encouraging and promoting work where possible. As a result of the pilot, 1950 customers have been placed in work.

On 31 October 2005 the In Work Credit pilot was launched in Essex. The Credit gives extra help to lone parents, or parents whose partners are in receipt of Income Support or Jobseeker's Allowance, when they start work provided they meet certain criteria. This pilot is expected to run until 30 October 2006.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Annette Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what was the average time taken by local contact centres in England to call back applicants for jobseeker's allowance following the initial application in the last period for which figures are available; and what the target is. [23071]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 28 October 2005]: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 7 December 2005:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question concerning the average time taken by local contact centres in England to call back applicants for Jobseeker's Allowance. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus. In answer to your specific question, we do not keep separate figures for specific benefits. Also, whilst we do not have an official target for calling back customers who have made an initial application via our contact centres, we do have a stated aim to call 90% of customers back in 24 hours.

Jobcentre Plus is undergoing a massive change programme. Change on this scale does create challenges in maintaining levels of service and it has put our business under some pressure in this transitional period. As a result many customers claiming working age benefits have not received their call-back within our stated timescales.

We have put in place robust measures to improve performance including temporary adjustments to streamline the business process and ramping up recruitment plans, supported by robust training programmes. The latest figures that we have available are for the second week of October when 9.8% of customers received their call-back within 24 hours and on average customers were being contacted within 2.6 days of their initial contact. While this is clearly not acceptable it is a significant improvement from an average of 4.9 days at the beginning of September. Please note that this figure applies to all working age benefits that are made through contact centres based in England. We remain confident that the week on week improvements in customer service we have seen since the beginning of September will continue.

Learning Providers

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what recent discussions (a) his Department and (b) Jobcentre Plus have held with representatives of learning providers concerning (i) prime contractor status and (ii) other means of improving the cost-effectiveness of education and training in job placement. [31939]

Margaret Hodge: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 7 December 2005:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question asking what recent discussions (a) his Department and (b) Jobcentre Plus have held with representatives of learning providers concerning (i) prime contractor status and (ii) other means of improving the cost effectiveness of education and training in job placement. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

Jobcentre Plus holds regular formal discussions and meetings with representatives of the Employment Related Services Association (ERSA), the Association of Learning Providers (ALP) and the Provider Liaison Group.

All these bodies represent the interests of all actual and potential providers of employment related services under contract to Jobcentre Plus. The role of prime contractors and cost effectiveness of employment—related services have both been discussed at these meetings. There are of course other more informal meetings and discussions held with individual learning providers where these issues may be raised.

I hope this is helpful.

Pensioners (Beverley and Holderness)

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many people in Beverley and Holderness he estimates will be entitled to pension credit in 2025; [33454]

(2) how many pensioners he estimates will be entitled to pension credit in 2025. [33460]

Mr. Timms: The numbers entitled to pension credit will depend on a wide range of factors including how Government choose to uprate benefits in the future. If the current uprating approaches are continued in the future, projections suggest 5.2 million households or 6.9 million individuals in Great Britain will be entitled to pension credit in 2025. Projections are not available at constituency level.

Notes:

1. Figures are rounded to the nearest 100,000 and are subject to a wide range of uncertainty.

2. Individuals entitled include a small number of partners below pension age.

3. The projections account for the equalisation of state pension age between 2010 and 2020.

4. Estimates of the number of households and individuals eligible for pension credit are available for Great Britain. These are based on a long term version of the Department's Policy Simulation Model, which uses Family Resources Survey data for 2003–04 projected forward into the future to estimate the extent of eligibility for pension credit for each pensioner household on the survey.

Pensions

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the total value was of rebates for contracting out of the state second pension in each year since 2002–03; and if he will estimate the distribution of the value of the rebates for each income (a) decile and (b) quartile of the population. [34402]

Mr. Timms: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the table:

Estimated cost of national insurance contribution rebates

Tax year	Occupational schemes		Personal pension and stakeholder pension schemes	£ million
	Defined benefit	Defined contribution		Total
2002–03	6,300	600	3,500	10,400
2003–04	6,500	500	3,200	10,200
2004–05	6,600	500	3,000	10,100

Notes:
1. Figures are based on GAD estimates for the December 2005 pre-Budget report.
2. Figures are rounded to the nearest £100 million.
3. Figures cover Great Britain only.
4. Figures are accruals basis and are in cash terms.

Government Actuary's Department (GAD).

Sir Malcolm Rifkind: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many occupational pension schemes have started the process of winding up since 1997; [22188]

(2) how many occupational pension schemes have started winding up since 1997. [27978]

Mr. Timms: In April 2005 the Pensions Regulator took over the register of occupational pension schemes from the Occupational Pensions Regulatory Authority (Opra).

Information in the following table was provided by the Pensions Regulator and shows the number of schemes that have entered winding up each year since 1997 and which had not yet completed winding up. The table does not contain schemes that started winding up in the time period given and have since completed wind up. The Pensions Regulator only holds the present status of a scheme so only those winding up at the moment are captured.

Effective date scheme status was changed on register to 'Winding Up'	Number of schemes	Total membership
1 April 1997 to 31 March 1998	103	2,958
1 April 1998 to 31 March 1999	127	3,612
1 April 1999 to 31 March 2000	2,940	52,926
1 April 2000 to 31 March 2001	1,058	30,192
1 April 2001 to 31 March 2002	1,450	42,823
1 April 2002 to 31 March 2003	1,148	54,738
1 April 2003 to 31 March 2004	1,197	51,478
1 April 2004 to 31 March 2005	560	53,192
Total	8,583	291,919

Notes:
1. A winding up scheme is one which has notified the Pensions Regulator that it has commenced winding up procedures.
2. Schemes are required to notify the Pensions Regulator of changes in scheme status as soon as is reasonably practical. This means that the data for the year ended 31 March 2005 is provisional.
3. The figures are based on information held on the register as at 14 October 2005. The effective date for the commencement of wind up is based on the last scheme status change date.
4. Total membership includes active, deferred and pensioner members. It is not possible to provide a breakdown of these numbers.
5. During 2005–06 the Pensions Regulator will continue with its plans to issue all occupational pension schemes that are registered in the UK a scheme return form. This will provide the Pension Regulator with access to enhanced data on schemes that are in the process of winding up in future years.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the take-up of stakeholder pensions; and what the average employee contribution to stakeholder pension schemes has been. [25236]

Mr. Timms: Stakeholder pensions are now an established pension product. Figures from the Association of British Insurers (ABI) show that at 30 June 2005 over two-and-a-half million stakeholder pensions had been sold since their introduction in April 2001.

Official figures for the 2003–04 tax year confirm that 99 per cent. of sales have been to people in work and that the majority of stakeholder pensions are being bought by those on modest incomes; over three-quarters (1,080,000) of stakeholder pension plans with contributions in them in that year were for workers earning under £30,000 a year and around two-thirds (790,000) were for those workers earning under £20,000 a year.

Stakeholder pensions form an integral part of the range of Stakeholder Savings Products introduced in April 2005 and will benefit from the Government's Consumer Awareness Campaign launched in September. The main objective of the campaign is to raise people's awareness of the Stakeholder Range of Products; what they are and how they can help people save and accumulate assets.

Information on employee contributions alone is not available. The average contribution to stakeholder pension schemes held by employees in the 2003–04 tax year was £1,290 pa. This includes employee, employer and minimum contributions. (The national insurance rebate).

Swimming

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many deaths of children under the age of 18 years resulted from (a) swimming accidents and (b) swimming accidents in swimming pools in each of the last 20 years. [35043]

Mrs. McGuire: The information is not available in the form requested.

Tables 1 and 2 set out figures obtained from the Health and Safety Executive and the Office of National Statistics respectively. The two sets of data are not directly comparable as they are based on different reporting arrangements. The HSE data in Table 1 are based on a reporting year from April to March and only include accidents arising from activities within the control of an employer. The ONS statistics at Table 2 are collected over the calendar year and include all deaths from drowning as recorded on death certificates.

Swimming activities are identified from HSE's accident coding framework using the following process classifications: for the period 1996–97—2000–01, 4520' Education—Swimming activities (indoor) (including pools, diving)', 5470 'Entertainment-Swimming activities (indoor) (including swimming pools, diving)1, 5480 'Water sports activities (not elsewhere classified) including beach; for 2001–02 onwards, 0815 'Swimming pool activities', 0818 'Water Sports, boating, motor, boat, mooring at marinas'.

Access to older data is not readily available and would require restoration of archived databases.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Cash Machines

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate he has made of how many cash machines in Northern Ireland charge customers to withdraw money. [34548]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: I have been asked to reply.

There are 949 free ATMs in Northern Ireland. All basic bank account holders and many current account holders can also withdraw cash over-the-counter at the Post Office and 'cash-back' is now widely available in supermarkets and shops.

The latest LINK figures for October 2005 show that there are 418 surcharging ATMs in Northern Ireland. However, as we set out in our response to the Treasury Select Committee on Cash Machine Charges, most surcharging ATMs in the UK are new machines, in locations where previously there was no ATM.

Civil Service

Dr. McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many civil service posts in each Northern Ireland Government Department have been lost since 1 January. [33566]

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

Angela E. Smith: It is assumed that this question relates to staff reductions in Departments announced in Fit for Purpose in October 2004.

The following table sets out the number of civil service posts in each of the 11 Northern Ireland Departments, and their agencies, lost from 1 January 2005 to 30 September 2005 (latest figures held) as part of the above staff reductions.

The figures do not relate to any reductions outside the Fit for Purpose exercise ie those in business areas that are funded externally from the NI Budget and those lost as a result of restructuring such as those related to the creation of the Water Service GoCo.

NICS funded posts lost in the period January 2005 to September 2005 under the Fit for Purpose exercise

Department	Funded posts lost
Agriculture and Rural Development (DARD)	160
Culture, Arts and Leisure (DCAL)	12.5
Education (DE)	27.5
Employment and Learning (DEL)	17.3
Enterprise, Training and Investment (DETI)	21
Finance and Personnel (DFP)	137
Health, Social Services and Public Safety (DHSSPS)	23
Environment (DOE)	0
Regional Development (DRD)	102
Social Development DSD)	267
Office of First Minister and Deputy First Minister (OFMDFM)[1]	-1
Total	766.3

[1] While there has been a loss of four funded posts in OFMDFM during 2005, this was offset by a temporary intake of five staff to meet an urgent business need, giving a net increase of one for the full period.

Client Advice

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what guidelines exist for civil servants in Northern Ireland who receive client advice from a firm at a time when they might also be in a position to decide service contracts in which the same firm might have an interest. [34413]

Angela E. Smith: No specific guidelines exist for civil servants in Northern Ireland who receive client advice from a firm at a time when they might also be in a position to decide service contracts in which the same firm might have an interest.

All civil servants in Northern Ireland are, however, subject to Northern Ireland Government Accounting Guidance which among other issues sets out the general principles which apply to the acquisition of public works, supplies and services.

These principles are aligned to the 12 best value for money principles which govern the administration of public procurement in Northern Ireland.

One of the key principles is "Integrity" which addresses the issues of anti-corruption or collusion with suppliers and ensures that ethical standards of conduct are not compromised. Other relevant principles are transparency and fair dealing.

Under Northern Ireland Procurement Policy, procurement is undertaken by professionals within Centres of Procurement Expertise who oversee and manage the procurement process to ensure its compliance with regulations and the 12 guiding principles.

Domestic Electricity Costs

Dr. McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the cost of electricity was to customers in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years. [33793]

Angela E. Smith: The annual electricity bills for a typical domestic customer, small to medium enterprise customer (SME) and large industrial customer, supplied by Northern Ireland Electricity in each of the last five years, are shown in the following table.

	2001	2002	2003	2004	2005
Domestic	309	309	309	318	328
Small to medium enterprise	1,560	1,560	1,560	1,644	1,770
Large industrial	320,000	320,000	320,000	337,000	360,000

The annual bills for the SME and large industrial customers are indicative only because a proportion of those customers purchase their electricity from other suppliers in the competitive market for which full cost details are not publicly available.

Electronic Human Resources Services

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the equality impact assessment (EQIA) of the policy for outsourcing Electronic Human Resources services; when a final EQIA document is to be published; how many drafts he has seen; and what other advice his Department has sought on the EQIA from (a) inside and (b) outside Government. [34415]

Angela E. Smith: It is intended to publish the final EQIA Report at award of contract. The final report will be published in line with the arrangement set out in the DFP Equality Scheme.

To date, no Northern Ireland Minister has received any draft versions of the EQIA Report. However, Lord Rooker has been fully briefed on the equality issues arising out of the EQIA.

An EQIA Consultation Document was circulated for consultation between August and October 2004. Views were sought from the following groups: NICS and NIO HR staff (via questionnaires and focus groups), NICS and NIO staff in general, the general public and around 110 Section 75 groups. Three of the Section 75 groups responded to the Consultation exercise: Northern Ireland Public Service Alliance (NIPSA), Equality Commission for Northern Ireland (ECNI) and Northern Ireland Association for the Care and Rehabilitation of Offenders (NIACRO).

Advice was sought from our independent legal advisors and DSO in relation to employment law issues and issues in relation to redeployment. Advice was also sought from OFMDFM in respect of the need to conduct an eHR EQIA and also the EQIA process followed by the eHR Programme. An independent consultant was appointed by the Strategic Investment Board (SIB) to assist in carrying out the Equality Impact Assessment.

DFP is satisfied that it has fully discharged its legal obligations in relation to the Northern Ireland Act (1998) and its statutory Equality Scheme.

Equality Commission

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what allowance is provided to each member of the Equality Commission; and what additional expenses each is eligible for. [32094]

Angela E. Smith: The Chief Commissioner post of the Equality Commission is paid an annual salary of £70,000 based on a full-time appointment. The Deputy Chief Commissioner serves for one day per week and receives an annual allowance of £10,000. The other Commissioners each serve for two days per month and receive an annual allowance of £5,000 each.

Commissioners are also eligible for additional travel and subsistence expenses when carrying out Equality Commission business.

Foreign Direct Investment

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he is taking to increase foreign direct investment in Northern Ireland. [35034]

Angela E. Smith: I would refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given on 30 November 2005, Official Report, column 632W.

Free School Meals

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many schoolchildren in Northern Ireland are (a) eligible for free school meals and (b) in receipt of free school meals, broken down by (i) constituency and (ii) council area. [34550]

Angela E. Smith: A breakdown of the information requested at (a) is not available. However, the number of pupils whose entitlement to free school meals has been established following an application to their education and library board are as follows:

	Number
BELB	12,960
NEELB	8,213
SEELB	6,771
SELB	11,732

The Department continues, through the education and library boards, to take steps to encourage eligible pupils to take up their entitlement.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the average cost was of a school meal in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years, broken down by education and library board. [34551]

Angela E. Smith: The average cost of a primary and secondary school meal, in each education and library board area, for the last five years was as follows:

Jobskills Initiative

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people (a) have been disciplined and (b) are passing through a disciplinary process as a result of the recent criticisms of the jobskills initiative in Northern Ireland. [32134]

Angela E. Smith: No one has been (a) disciplined or (b) is passing through a disciplinary process as a result of the recent criticisms of the jobskills initiative in Northern Ireland. The Department has acknowledged the criticisms in the report and has already introduced significant changes to the jobskills programme.

Local Government Restructuring

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate he has made of the transitional costs of local government restructuring in Northern Ireland. [33493]

Angela E. Smith: It is not possible at this stage to give a reliable estimate of the transitional costs of restructuring local government in Northern Ireland.

Poppy Wearing

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the Equality Commission's advice to employers and employees in Northern Ireland is regarding the wearing of poppies in the workplace during the period immediately before Remembrance Day. [32251]

Angela E. Smith: I understand that the chief executive of the Equality Commission for Northern Ireland, Ms Evelyn Collins, has written to the hon. Gentleman in the following terms:

"The Equality Commission recognises the sensitivity surrounding the use of emblems and symbols within Northern Ireland and offers guidance on these issues based on the relevant legislation.

The Commission is of the view that the wearing of poppies by individuals in the workplace, in a respectful manner and within the appropriate period, should not be something which would cause offence.

Our advice to employers on the general issue of emblems in the workplace is that emblems which tend to distinguish one community from the other in Northern Ireland but are not directly connected with community strife are unlikely to be regarded as creating an intimidating or hostile working environment as described in the Code of Practice. In this category would fall marks of religious observance, ashes, crosses, crucifixes, pioneer pins, fainnes, as well as poppies and shamrocks when worn with decorum and at the appropriate period.

It would be unacceptable if an individual was made to feel uncomfortable for not wearing any particular emblem or if the emblem was being flaunted before or forced on someone not wearing it.

It is a part of the Commission's remit to give advice and guidance on the Fair Employment legislation. It is for the Fair Employment Tribunal and the courts to establish and interpret the law, and, of course, if any individual feels that the use of emblems has constituted an unlawful act they are free to apply to the Tribunal for a decision on that point."

Property Valuations

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) pursuant to the answer of 24 November 2005, Official Report, column 2199W, on property valuations, for what reasons the copies of the Equality Impact Assessment TSN analysis and Rural Proofing analysis have not been placed in the Library; [35093]

(2) pursuant to the answer of 29 November 2005, Official Report, column 393W, on the Valuation and Lands Agency, when the internal working documents and guidance will be placed in the Library. [35095]

Angela E. Smith: Copies of the documents referred to are now available in the Library.

Public Administration (Review)

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many local government jobs he estimates will be lost following implementation of the Review of Public Administration. [34444]

Angela E. Smith: It is not possible at this stage to give a reliable estimate of the number of jobs that might be lost in local government as a result of the implementation of the Review of Public Administration, but the Government will endeavour to keep any redundancies to a minimum.

Smoking Ban

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of proper ventilation in achieving the aims of the ban on smoking in enclosed public places in Northern Ireland. [34727]

Mr. Woodward: There is a clear consensus among health professionals and the international scientific community that there is no safe level of exposure to second hand smoke. Public health experts stress that while ventilation systems may improve comfort by removing the smell and visibility of smoke, they do not remove toxic carcinogens from the air. This was an important factor in my decision to introduce comprehensive controls to protect both the general public and employees.

Video-conferencing

Dr. McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which Northern Ireland departments have installed video-conferencing facilities; how many units have been installed in total; and at what cost. [30699]

Angela E. Smith: The information requested is as follows:

Department	Number of installed videoconferencing facilities	Cost of installation (£)
Office of First Minister and Deputy First Minister	0	0
Department of Agriculture and Rural Development	1	10,785
Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure	0	0
Department of Education	0	0
Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment	2	24,000
Department of the Environment	0	0
Department of Finance and Personnel	0	0
Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety	1	41,391
Department for Employment and Learning	1	14,528
Department for Social Development	0	0

In addition, a number of departments in the NI administration also possess video-conferencing units that do not require installation, that is, they are not purpose-built in one fixed location. At present, there are thirteen such 'portable' units in use across Northern Ireland departments.

Sustainable Development

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland for what reasons no appointment has been made to the post of deputy secretary to take forward environmental policy and sustainable development within the Department of the Environment; and if he will make a statement. [35343]

Angela E. Smith: The Department reviewed its top management structure following the retirement of the former deputy secretary. In recognition of the strategic importance of the work of the Environmental Policy Group, its two directors now report directly to the permanent secretary.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Arab League Reconciliation Conference

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the United Kingdom's response is to the joint statement of principles by the Arab-League Reconciliation Conference; and if he will make a statement. [33927]

Dr. Howells: The National Accord Conference Preparatory Meeting, hosted by the Arab League in Cairo on 19–21 November, was a useful initiative which provided a good opportunity for Arab and regional governments to review their relationship with Iraq and to plan future engagement. The National Accord meeting itself, which is due to take place in Iraq at the end of February/beginning of March, will be an opportunity for countries to follow-up this review with substantive commitments of assistance.

The joint statement of principles which followed the Preparatory Meeting contained a number of positive points. Among these were the calls for support of Iraq's political/electoral processes, the importance of increasing security, recognition that terrorism is not a legitimate form of resistance and a call for greater economic, technical, diplomatic and security support for Iraq from Arab countries.

The election of a new Iraqi government should herald a new era of international engagement with Iraq, with increased assistance for social and economic development as well as political and security development. Arab and regional governments should play a leading role in this—the National Accord Conference in February will be an early opportunity to carry forward this new international partnership.

British Citizens (Overseas Detention)

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many British citizens were held in (a) jails and (b) other detention facilities in countries (i) where the use of torture has been alleged, (ii) where human rights abuses have been alleged and reported, (iii) about which travel advice had been issued by his Department advising against all travel and (iv) about which travel advice had been issued by his Department advising against all but essential travel in each year since 2001; in how many cases in each category (A) consular support was requested and (B) no consular support was requested; and if he will make a statement. [34227]

Dr. Howells: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office maintains records of the numbers of British nationals detained overseas each year. However, our records do not distinguish between those detained in jails and in other detention facilities, nor do they indicate whether the detainee requested consular support or not. For information on British nationals detained overseas, I refer the hon. Member to the answers given to the hon. Member for Kettering (Mr. Hollobone) on 7 November 2005, Official Report, columns 168–70W.

We do not keep comprehensive records of allegations of torture or human rights abuses in country in the world. We do maintain records of all versions of travel advice on third countries. As this is not cross-referenced to information on numbers of detainees, this information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

British Virgin Islands

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps his Department is taking to help develop alternative industries to tourism and offshore finance in the British Virgin Islands. [33759]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: Responsibility for the development of industry in the British Virgin Islands (BVI) falls within the remit of the locally elected British Virgin Islands Government. However, the UK Government are committed to helping BVI develop new areas of industry. This year, the Government have supported BVI's agricultural industry by providing assistance for the expansion of an existing poultry processing plant, provided financial support for a telecommunications liberalisation programme, supported an innovative project in the field of alternative medicine and committed funds for the development of a maritime training school.

Chad

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the recent arrest and release of Hissène Habré, former President of Chad, in Senegal. [33926]

Ian Pearson: The Senegalese authorities, following an extradition request from Belgium, detained and subsequently provisionally released Hissène Habré pending further discussion with African partners at the Africa Union summit in January 2006.

China

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on human rights in China. [25317]

Ian Pearson: The Government have concerns about a wide range of human rights issues in China. These are set out in the current Foreign and Commonwealth Office Annual Human Rights report at:

http://www.fco.gov.uk/Files/kfile/HumanRights2005.pdf.

We raise our concerns with the Chinese Government regularly, including through the UK China Human Rights dialogue, ministerial engagement and EU mechanisms. The Government acknowledge that the Chinese Government have recently done much to reduce poverty and promote economic development.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will include reference to the Chinese One Child Policy in his Department's Human Rights Annual Report for 2006; and if he will make a statement. [33883]

Ian Pearson: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office's Annual Report on Human Rights provides an overview of the main challenges to human rights around the world and explains the Government's activities and policies. Although we are not yet in a position to decide on exactly what subjects we will cover in next year's report, we will consider including material assessing the reform and operation of China's population policies.

The Government have never questioned China's right or need to implement family planning policies but has made it clear that we believe they should be based on the principles of the International Conference on Population and Development; that is on consent not coercion. We have raised concerns about this policy, including reports of enforced sterilisation and abortion. We have also raised the case of the lawyer Chen Guancheng who is being held under house arrest after he highlighted abuses in the implementation of the one child policy in Shandong. The Chinese Government have admitted there have been occasional problems with maladministration of the policy, but insist that this is down to individuals rather than overall malign intent.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations to the Chinese authorities in relation to the safety of Gao Zhisheng and his family in continuing as the advocate for Pastor Cai. [33892]

Ian Pearson: We regularly raise human rights with the Chinese Government. As EU Presidency, the UK has launched a Freedom of Expression campaign, which has included making representations on behalf of Chinese lawyers who act in sensitive cases in China. We are aware of the case of Pastor Cai, which was raised in the context of the EU-China Human Rights Dialogue in October. Our embassy at Beijing is making further inquiries about the circumstances relating to Gao Zhisheng.

Damages

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for South Holland and The Deepings (Mr. Hayes) of 17 November 2005, Official Report, column 1480W, on damages, if he will make a statement on the three cases to which reference is made. [32047]

Ian Pearson: In my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary's previous answer to which this questions refers, the first and third cases listed concerned forms of repetitive strain injury. The second case concerned burns sustained at an embassy function.

Dayton Accords

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions (a) Ministers and (b) officials have had on the renewal of the Dayton accords; and if he will make a statement. [33925]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: There is no requirement to renew the Dayton/Paris accords and there have been no discussions on this issue including UK officials or Ministers. Representatives of the main Bosnian political parties have been involved in talks, facilitated by former deputy high representative Donald Hays, about possible changes to Bosnia and Herzegovina's constitution, which was established by the Dayton accords.

As Bosnia and Herzegovina draws closer to the EU, it may need to make changes to enable it to function more effectively as a state. However, the Dayton accords make clear that any changes to Bosnia and Herzegovina's constitution require the consent of all three constituent peoples.

Democratic Republic of the Congo

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Congolese authorities regarding the allegations of serious corruption affecting the funding of the army; and what plans he has to address this issue with the UN mission in that country. [33861]

Ian Pearson: The UK continues to press the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC) to implement the European Union's Security Sector Reform Mission recommendations, which aim to create a sustainable and transparent financing and administrative system for the whole army, ensuring that salaries reach soldiers on the ground. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for International Development reinforced this message to the President and other Government leaders during his visit to the DRC from 30 October to 1 November.

Addressing corruption within the armed forces is an integral part of the security sector reform programme which we are helping to implement. We continue to work together with the UN peacekeeping force (MONUC) and other partners to achieve that end.

Departmental Staff

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many (a) consultants and (b) special advisers were employed by his Department in each year since 1997; what the cost of each was in each year; and if he will make a statement. [27410]

Mr. Straw: The numbers of special advisers employed by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) since 1997 are set out in the following table. We are not able to release personal information on individual remuneration, but all have been employed within the authorised salary scales for special advisers.

Financial year	Number
1997–98	1
1998–99	0
1999–2000	1
2000–01	1
2001–02	2
2002–03	2
2003–04	2
2004–05	2

The number of consultants working for the FCO is not held centrally. I refer the hon. member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Cheltenham (Martin Horwood) on 22 November 2005, Official Report, column 1897W for information on costs.

End-use Monitoring

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions his Department has had (a) with US counterparts regarding end-use monitoring of the State Department Blue Lantern programme and the Department of Defence Golden Sentry programme and (b) EU counterparts regarding an EU-wide verification system of end-use monitoring. [34177]

Dr. Howells: Representatives of the United States Government have made presentations on both the Blue Lantern and Golden Sentry programmes to the relevant EU working parties, who found the presentations informative. EU member states each have their own policy and procedures on end-user checks and have not reached any collective conclusions on the applicability, or otherwise, of these or similar programmes to existing national arrangements.

Equal Opportunities

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 21 November 2005, Official Report, columns 1584–85W, on equal opportunities, if he will make a statement on the development of role models. [34392]

Ian Pearson: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) recognise the importance of role models, especially for staff from under-represented groups. Current activities aimed at highlighting and developing role models in the FCO include:

- Organising informal lunches with guest speakers from under-represented groups;
- Publicising exceptional achievements by staff in the FCO News magazine;
- Providing targeted training for under-represented groups, including mentoring and coaching;
- Encouraging declaration of disability, particularly at more senior levels;
- Publicising the work of the staff advisory groups and encouraging members to become more visible.

However, the FCO encourage staff to drive their own careers, and recognises that some members of under-represented groups may not wish to be high profile role models.

Ethiopia/Eritrea

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment he has made of (a) human rights and (b) governance in Ethiopia; and if he will make a statement. [34059]

Ian Pearson: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office assessment of and actions to promote human rights in Ethiopia are set out in our Annual Report on Human Rights, which was presented to Parliament in July 2005.

Since then, we have been gravely concerned and saddened by the post-election events in Ethiopia. We condemned in particular the use of live ammunition by security forces to quell demonstrations, which resulted in many deaths and injuries, and the arrest of Opposition leaders. We have urged that these events be investigated fully and impartially and that those arrested be charged and tried fairly or released. We have urged both the Government and Opposition in Ethiopia to reconcile their differences and create an effective Parliament as the principal forum for political debate in Ethiopia. We continue to monitor the situation closely.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Ethiopian Government concerning the killing of 46 demonstrators by security forces in the first week of November; and if he will make a statement. [34060]

Ian Pearson: My noble Friend, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office Minister for Africa, Lord Triesman of Tottenham, summoned the Ethiopian Charge d'Affaires on 1 November to register our concerns about the situation in Ethiopia. On 6 November, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for International Development also raised the issue when he spoke to Prime Minister Meles. On 6 November, in our capacity as EU presidency, we also issued a statement on the situation in Ethiopia. Our ambassador in Ethiopia has also raised our concerns with Prime Minister Meles, the Ethiopian Foreign Minister and other Government Ministers. We continue to raise our concerns at every suitable opportunity.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Ethiopian Government following the detention without charge of (a) Hailu Shawel, (b) Professor Mesfin Woldemariam, (c) Dr. Yacob Hailemarian, (d) Ms Birtukan Mideksa, (e) Dr. Berhanu Negga and (f) others; what representations he has made about the possibility that they will be charged with treason following demonstrations in Addis Ababa; and if he will make a statement. [34061]

Ian Pearson: My noble Friend, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office Minister for Africa, Lord Triesman of Tottenham, summoned the Ethiopian Charge d'Affaires on 1 November to register our concerns about the situation in Ethiopia, including the issue of detainees. On 6 November, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for International Development also raised the issue when he spoke to Prime Minister Meles. On 6 November, in our capacity as EU presidency, we also issued a statement on the situation in Ethiopia, which included reference to our concerns regarding detainees. Our ambassador in Ethiopia has also raised our concerns with Prime Minister Meles, the Ethiopian Foreign Minister and other Government Ministers. We continue to call for the immediate release of all political detainees, for those individuals not charged under due process to be released immediately, and for access to those detained for their families, legal counsel and representatives of the International Committee of the Red Cross or other appropriate representatives of the international community.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Ethiopian and Eritrean Governments concerning tensions along their mutual border; and if he will make a statement. [34058]

Ian Pearson: We remain very concerned about the current situation. Ministers and senior officials have regularly raised this with the Governments of Eritrea and Ethiopia. Most recently, my noble Friend, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office Minister for Africa, Lord Triesman of Tottenham, raised the issue with the Eritrean ambassador on 18 October. He will also raise the issue with the Ethiopian ambassador on 6 December. In our capacity as EU presidency, Lord Triesman intends to visit the region later this month and will make further representations during that visit. In the Security Council, we supported United Nations Security Council Resolution 1640 (2005) adopted on 23 November, which expressed concern about developments at the border and outlined the way forward.

Falkland Islands

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will take steps to encourage more flights to Mount Pleasant airport in the Falkland Islands. [33863]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: External air links with the Falkland Islands currently consist of a weekly flight ran by LAN Chile between Santiago and Mount Pleasant airport, and the airbridge ran three times every fortnight by the Ministry of Defence (MOD) between Mount Pleasant and RAF Brize Norton via Ascension Island.

Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) and MOD officials keep air links between the Falkland Islands and the UK under review. The FCO hopes to explore alternative options for flights with the Government of the Falkland Islands soon.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps are being taken to promote tourism to the Falkland Islands. [33865]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: Falkland Islands Tourist Board is actively promoting the Falklands as a cruise and land based visitor destination. This is done by representation at international travel fairs and by direct promotion with international tourism companies. This is reflected in the numbers of approximately 40,000 cruise visitors and 1,000 land based visitors who are expected for the coming season.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the drilling for oil and gas around the Falkland Islands. [33866]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: Exploration for offshore hydrocarbons is currently being undertaken by companies holding licences issued by the Falkland Islands Government, in areas to the north and the south east of the Falkland Islands. Exploration is at an early stage and has not yet led to any commercial discoveries, but seismic surveys are underway with a view to exploratory drilling in due course. The Government are fully committed to the offshore prospecting policy pursued by the Falkland Islands Government, which is entirely consistent with the United Kingdom's sovereign rights over the Falkland Islands.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had regarding the promotion of the export of meat from the Falklands since the recent outbreak of foot and mouth in Brazil, with particular reference to beef; and if he will make a statement. [33900]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The promotion of the export of meat from the Falkland Islands is a matter for the Falkland Islands Government. The Falkland Islands do not currently export beef—production is for the local market only. The Sand Bay abattoir is only certified by the EU for the export of sheep meat.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which Royal Navy ships have been operating near the Falkland Islands in each of the last five years; and what activities have been undertaken by them. [33901]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: From 2000 to 2005 the following HM ships have patrolled near the Falkland Islands as the Atlantic Patrol Task South:

HMS Somerset	December 1999 to February 2000
HMS Southampton	February to May 2000
HMS Argyll	July to October 2000
HMS Iron Duke	October 2000 to February 2001
HMS Glasgow	March to July 2001
HMS Edinburgh	July to October 2001
HMS Montrose	November 2001 to March 2002
HMS Newcastle	March to August 2002
HMS Westminster	September 2002 to April 2003
HMS Lancaster	May to November 2003
HMS Glasgow	November 2003 to April 2004
HMS Cardiff	April to September 2004
HMS Iron Duke	September to December 2004
HMS Gloucester	December 2004 to March 2005
HMS Portland	March to September 2005
HMS Southampton	September 2005 to January 2006

HMS Leeds Castle and HMS Dumbarton Castle—Falkland Islands Patrol Vessel—one of the two has been permanently deployed to the islands.

HMS Endurance visits the Falkland Islands as part of her South Atlantic and Antarctic austral summer deployments each year.

Royal Fleet Auxiliary:

Black Rover, Grey Rover and Gold Rover have all spent time in the Falklands over the last five years.

We do not comment on submarine movements.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent actions have been taken to dissuade the Argentine Government from attempting to gain sovereignty of the Falkland Islands. [33902]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The Government consistently tell the Argentine Government that we have no doubts about the sovereignty of the Islands and there will be no negotiations unless and until the Falkland islanders agree.

The presence of British Forces South Atlantic Islands in the islands, our consistent rejection of Argentine protests over sovereignty and the activities of the Falkland Islands Government reaffirm our stance on sovereignty. Successive democratic Argentine Governments have said publicly that they intend to pursue their claim to the Falkland Islands peacefully.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the UK Government have had any discussions with the Argentine Government concerning the sovereignty of the Falkland Islands since 1997. [33903]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The UK has not had any discussions concerning sovereignty of the Falklands with Argentina since 1997. However, we consistently make clear that we have no doubts about the sovereignty of the Islands and there will be no negotiations unless and until the Falkland Islanders agree.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what visits to the Falkland Islands by members of the royal family are planned. [33904]

Ian Pearson: The forward programme of visits by members of the royal family to the Falkland Islands has not been finalised. For security reasons, royal visits overseas are not generally announced until a matter of weeks before a visit takes place.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to visit the Falkland Islands. [33906]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: My right. hon. Friend, the Foreign Secretary, has no current plans to visit the Falkland Islands.

However, Ministers take every opportunity to meet with councillors from the Falkland Islands when they visit the UK, during which a whole range of issues are discussed. My noble Friend, the Parliamentary Under-Secretary at the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, Lord Triesman of Tottenham, recently met with councillors from the Falklands in October, when chairing the Overseas Territories Consultative Council.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many people have been injured by land mines in the Falkland Islands in each year since 1993. [33908]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: There have been no injuries caused by land mines in the Falkland Islands since 1993.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps are being taken to encourage the Falklands to increase its exports to the UK. [33909]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The Falkland Islands Government are responsible for encouraging the increase in exports to the UK. The combining of the Falkland Islands Company shipping service with the Falkland Islands re-supply service will both increase frequency and introduce some medium term rate stability for farmers shipping wool to the UK.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many UK residents have taken up residence in the Falkland Islands in the last 10 years. [33910]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The Falkland Islands Government do not keep statistics on UK residents who have taken up residence in the Falkland Islands in the last 10 years. However, census figures identify people physically present in the Falkland Islands on the day of the census by country of birth. The figures for those born in the United Kingdom from the last four censuses are as follows:

	Number
1986	465
1991	664
1996	640
2001	704

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on comments made by the Cuban Alternate Permanent Representative at the United Nations at the General Assembly's 4th Commission on Special Policies and Decolonisation in October regarding Cuba's support for the right of Argentina in the dispute over sovereignty of the Falkland Islands. [33898]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The UK's position on this issue is well known, and was last set out in detail by the UK's Permanent Representative to the United Nations, Sir Emyr Jones Parry, in a written right of reply to the statement by His Excellency President Nestor Carlos Kirchner of the Republic of Argentina, in the high-level plenary session of the General Assembly on 14 September 2005.

The United Kingdom has no doubts about its sovereignty over the Falkland Islands. There can be no negotiations on the sovereignty of the Falkland Islands unless and until such time as the islanders so wish.

HIV/AIDS

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations to the South African Health Minister on offering appropriate treatment to those suffering from HIV/AIDS. [34141]

Ian Pearson: HIV and AIDS is a top priority for the UK bilateral development programme in South Africa. The Department for International Development funded a £30 million multisectoral programme in 2003. The programme works with partners in Government at national, e.g. Departments of Health, Social Development and Defence and provincial, e.g. in Eastern Cape, Limpopo and KwaZulu-Natal levels. However, while the Government are happy to assist South Africa if requested, the implementation of healthcare policy, including that on HIV/AIDS, is within the South African Government's remit.

India

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations to (a) the Indian Government and (b) the Chief Minister of Orissa state about the burning down of houses belonging to members of the Christian community in Gandahati village, Gajapati district, Orissa. [34366]

Dr. Howells: Our high commission in New Delhi has looked into media reports alleging this attack against Christians in Orissa but has been unable to verify these. We condemn all instances where individuals are persecuted because of their faith or belief, wherever they happen and whatever the religion of the individual or group concerned. Our high commission in New Delhi continues to monitor the issue of religious freedom, with staff making regular calls on the appropriate Indian authorities to flag up our concern about incidents of religious intolerance. We will continue to insist that the right to freedom of religion is upheld, and that those responsible for attacks against people on grounds of their religion are brought to justice.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations to (a) the Indian Government and (b) the Chief Minister of Orissa state about the continuing activities of militant Hindu groups in Orissa state and several other states in India. [34367]

Dr. Howells: We are aware of the alleged involvement of Hindu extremist organisations in attacks against Christians in India. We condemn all instances where individuals are persecuted because of their faith or belief, wherever they happen and whatever the religion of the individual or group concerned. Our high commission in New Delhi continues to monitor the issue of religious freedom, with staff making regular calls on the appropriate Indian authorities, to flag up our concern about incidents of religious intolerance. We will continue to insist that the right to freedom of religion is upheld, and that those responsible for attacks against people on grounds of their religion are brought to justice.

Iran

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the United Kingdom's relations with Iran. [34327]

Dr. Howells: We have serious concerns about Iran's position on a number of issues. At the International Atomic Energy Agency Board meeting on 24 November we made clear our growing concerns about Iran's nuclear and ballistic missile programmes. We have also expressed our concerns about Iran's attitude towards terrorism; its lack of respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms; and its unhelpful approach to the Middle East Peace Process and to Iraq. Progress in our relations with Iran will depend on action by Iran to address these concerns.

Iraq

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs under what legal jurisdiction British subjects are working in Iraq if employed by (a) the UK Government and (b) the US Administration; and if he will make a statement. [34996]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 6 December 2005]: British diplomatic and consular staff working in Iraq are required under the Vienna conventions on diplomatic and consular relations to respect the laws of the host state, but in most cases they are immune from its jurisdiction, although such immunity can be waived by the sending state.

All non-Iraqi contractors working in Iraq for the US and UK Governments are required to respect the laws of Iraq, except that by virtue of Coalition Provision Authority (CPA) Order No 17 (Revised) they are not subject to Iraqi laws or regulations in matter relating to the terms and conditions of their contracts. Such contractors are immune from the jurisdiction of the Iraqi courts with respect to acts performed pursuant to the terms and conditions of their contract, but this immunity may be waived by the state which has employed the contractor.

CPA Order 17 also confers immunity from Iraqi jurisdiction on non-Iraqi nationals employed by the US and UK Governments as consultants to the Government of Iraq and on military personnel forming part of the Multi-National Force in Iraq. Such persons are, however, required to respect the laws of Iraq and their immunity may be waived by the sending state.

If a contractor of British nationality, or a British diplomat or consultant, were to commit a criminal offence in Iraq, it is possible that in some circumstances he could be prosecuted in this country. This will depend on whether extra-territorial jurisdiction exists for the offence under English law. Members of the British armed forces remain subject to military law and the criminal law of England and Wales at all times.

Opposition Spokespersons (Formal Visits)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the formal visits (a) undertaken by and (b) participated in by official Opposition spokespersons which were funded by his Department in the last two years. [35211]

Ian Pearson: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) funded the visit of the official Opposition Shadow Minister for Defence, the hon. Member for Blaby (Mr. Robathan), to Iraq in 2005.

In 2004 two official Opposition Whips, the hon. Member for Bexhill and Battle and the hon. Member for Bury St. Edmunds, participated in an FCO funded cross-party visit to the United Nations in New York.

Records show visits by official Opposition spokespersons who received briefings, hospitality or accommodation from our posts as:

Shadow Foreign Secretary, the hon. Member for Woodspring (Dr. Fox)—Turkey, South Africa, Namibia, Israel, Jordan, United States of America, India.

Shadow Chief Secretary to the Treasury, the hon. Member for Tatton (Mr. Osborne)—China, Estonia.

Shadow Secretary of State for Defence, the right hon. and learned Member for Devizes (Mr. Ancram)—Egypt, Israel,Jordan.

Shadow Minister for Home Affairs, the hon. Member for Chesham and Amersham (Mrs. Gillan)—NATO parliamentary assembly.

Shadow Minister for Homeland Security, the hon. Member for Newark(Patrick Mercer)—Pakistan

Shadow Minister for the Treasury, the hon. Member for West Suffolk (Mr. Spring)—Bahrain

Shadow Minister for the Olympics and Sport, the hon. Member for Faversham and Mid Kent (Hugh Robertson)—Singapore.

South Asian Association for Regional Co-operation

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the outcome of the recent South Asian Association for Regional Co-operation summit. [33923]

Dr. Howells: The UK warmly welcomes the progress made at the 13th South Asian Association for Regional Co-operation (SAARC) Summit in Dhaka towards achieving closer South Asian regional integration. We were particularly pleased to note the milestone decision taken by SAARC Heads of State to invite Afghanistan to join this organisation, and the moves made towards granting observer status to others. An effective and strong SAARC, working with South Asia's friends, can only benefit the people of the region.

We also welcome the movement towards concluding the South Asian Free Trade Area Agreement (SAFTA), following the recent deliberations of the Committee of Experts on SAFTA. We understand that SAFTA is now scheduled to come into force on 1 January 2006 and is expected to be fully operational by 2016. This will create a free trade zone bringing the benefits of closer regional economic integration to an area covering over 1.4 billion people.

Special Advisers

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the special advisers in post in his Department, broken down by pay band; and what the total budgeted cost to his Department of special advisers is for 2005–06. [29410]

Mr. Straw: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Hemel Hempstead (Mike Penning) today (UIN 27410).

Information relating to costs for 2005–06 will be published after the end of the current financial year.

Syria

Sir Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations (a) he and (b) his officials have made to the Government of Syria regarding the safety, proper treatment and fair trial of Dr. Kamal al-Labwani; and if he will make a statement. [33935]

Dr. Howells: Neither I nor my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary have raised the case of Dr. al-Labwani with the Syrian Government. However, our ambassador in Damascus has raised Dr. Labwani's case with the Syrian authorities, and, in our capacity as Presidency of the EU, led calls for his early release. We will continue to monitor developments closely.

Taiwan

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the Government's policy is on Taiwan's application to join the World Health Organisation; and if he will make a statement. [25924]

Ian Pearson: There are difficulties over Taiwanese involvement in a UN forum where statehood is a prerequisite for full membership. We hope that the World Health Organisation (WHO) secretariat, and others organising meetings and working groups under WHO auspices, will show flexibility in finding mechanisms to allow Taiwanese medical and public health officials to participate in these activities.

The WHO secretariat and China recently signed a memorandum of understanding on technical exchanges with Taiwan. We understand that the WHO and Taiwan already share information on an informal basis.

Turkey

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the recent unrest in south-east Turkey. [33922]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: Terrorist incidents in south-east Turkey have increased during 2004–05 and Turkish military operations against the Partiya Karkeren Kurdistan (PKK) continue. The Turkish Prime Minister visited the region on 12 August, and spoke of the need to address its political, economic and cultural problems.

There have been allegations of security force involvement in a number of terrorist incidents in the south east, including a grenade attack on 9 November on a bookshop in Semdinli. The Turkish Government have promised a full investigation, and Prime Minister Erdogan visited Semdinli on 21 November to demonstrate his commitment to this.

UK Arms Exports

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the issuing of end use certificates for UK arms exports. [34175]

Dr. Howells: In the export licensing process, end user certificates are provided by the body which is purchasing strategic goods for which a licence is being sought. They state who the end user is, whether the goods are for military purposes and what end use the goods are intended for.

UN Small Arms Review Conference

Sir Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made towards securing non-European support for the adoption at the United Nations small arms review conference in July 2006 of universal criteria governing the international transfer of small arms. [33934]

Dr. Howells: The UK has made good progress in building widespread support for agreement at the 2006 UN Small Arms and Light Weapons Programme of Action Review Conference of minimum common criteria to underpin controls on transfers of Small Arms and Light Weapons controls, including import, export and transhipment. The UK has already secured substantial non-European support especially in Africa, Latin America and the Caribbean and is working to match this in other regions including Asia.

HEALTH

A&E Departments (Paediatric Care)

Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what risk assessment she has undertaken of major accident and emergency departments functioning without the back-up of a paediatrics department on same site. [31889]

Mr. Byrne: Assessment and resuscitation procedures for children are available in all major accident and emergency units. Where children requiring hospital admission attend an accident and emergency unit that does not have a paediatrics department on site, the unit will initiate care and arrange transfer to an appropriate department. This procedure addresses risks associated with failing to achieve best outcome, where staff might otherwise undertake specialised paediatric interventions with which they are unfamiliar.

There is a consultation currently in progress, "The acutely or critically sick or injured child in the district general hospital", which is accessible on the Department's website at http://www.dh.gov.uk/Consultations/fs/en. The consultation document makes explicit recommendations about the competencies needed in a paediatric resuscitation team and those needed for stabilisation of the critically ill or injured child.

Alcohol-related Diseases

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many admission episodes for alcohol-related diseases there were in each primary care trust in each of the last five years; and if she will make a statement. [31379]

Caroline Flint: Information on admission episodes for alcohol-related diseases in each primary care trust in each of the last five years has been placed in the Library.

Ambulance Trusts

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 31 October 2005, Official Report, column 832W, on ambulance trusts, what the evidential basis was for deciding that 11 ambulance trusts are the most effective; and what plans she has to commission further research on the effectiveness of reorganising ambulance trusts. [26070]

Mr. Byrne: The consultation document due to be issued shortly will outline the criteria that we have used to arrive at the proposal of 11 ambulance trusts for the future. These criteria include ensuring the new organisations are operationally fit for purpose, fit with other national health service boundaries and with other Government boundaries. The results from the consultation will be a key factor in taking the final decisions.

"Taking Healthcare to the Patient: Transforming NHS Ambulance Services" sets out the vision and recommendations for the ambulance service in the future, for the local NHS to take forward. If the reconfiguration proposals are accepted following consultation, all new trusts will be judged on the extent to which they effectively implement the review's recommendations to successfully build on existing good practice and high performance to provide efficient, effective, locally responsive ambulance trusts that best meet patient need. The proposed new ambulance organisations would also still be required to achieve national performance requirements, for example on response times.

Asylum Seekers

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what role (a) the NHS and (b) primary care trusts play in providing medical and healthcare services in detention centres for asylum seekers; and how the standard of health services provided in detention centres is monitored. [31737]

Caroline Flint: On site primary healthcare services in Immigration Service removal centres are the responsibility of the Home Office, and are provided under contract by the Prison Service in directly managed centres and by private providers in contracted-out centres. Detainees held at the centres will access local national health service secondary care and other services as appropriate, including accident and emergency, maternity and in-patient mental healthcare. The on-site services are subject to monitoring by on-site Home Office Contract Monitors and are included in Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Prisons' inspections of individual centres. In addition, initial discussions have taken place with the Healthcare Commission with a view to the possible registration of the private contractors who provide these services, which would bring them within the Commission's oversight and inspection programme.

BCG Inoculation

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the cost of a BCG inoculation per person. [32489]

Caroline Flint: Bacillus Calmette-Guerin (BCG) vaccination is provided free of charge to any individual defined as at increased risk of tuberculosis in the chief medical officer's letter of 6 July 2005.

Bed Utilisation

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average percentage level of bed utilisation was in acute hospitals in the Cheshire and Merseyside strategic health authority area, including Southport and Ormskirk Hospital Trust in the last year for which figures are available. [26374]

Mr. Byrne: The information is not available in the format requested. The table shows data on average bed occupancy rates for all providers in the Cheshire and Merseyside strategic health authority (SHA) area with beds open overnight.

Cancer Drugs

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will ensure that NHS trusts give priority to the funding of licensed cancer drugs for the next financial year. [33036]

Jane Kennedy: We are already putting record amounts of new investment into the national health service, between 2003 and 2008 NHS expenditure in England will increase on average by 7.5 per cent. each year. It is for primary care trusts to decide how best to spend these resources taking into account local circumstances.

PCTs have many competing priorities but cancer is a national and local priority. Every PCT will have a sizeable number of people in their area who will be diagnosed with the disease, live with the disease and who die from the disease each year. PCTs will need to ensure they allocate sufficient resource to meet their local contribution to tackling cancer care or other areas.

Castle Hill Hospital

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the (a) capital value of and (b) total expected repayment to the private finance initiative contractor is for phase 5 of the Castle Hill Hospital. [32975]

Mr. Byrne: The capital value of the phase 5 project is around £8.8 million. The Hull and East Yorkshire Hospitals National Health Service Trust will make monthly unitary payments to the phase 5 private finance initiative consortium totalling approximately £48.1 million (this figure includes an estimate for annual retail price index uplift) over the duration of the 30-year contract. This amount includes the provision of radiology medical equipment service by Phillips Medical Systems for the first 10 years, including lifecycle replacement and maintenance. The private finance initiative consortium is also providing the hard facilities management service (maintenance) for the building including full lifecycle replacement over the 30-year contract.

Cheshire and Mersey Strategic Health Authority

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much the work being done by McKinseys on the reconfiguration of services across Cheshire and Mersey Strategic Health Authority is expected to cost; and when it is expected to be (a) completed and (b) reported to hon. Members. [32819]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not held centrally. Cheshire and Merseyside Strategic Health Authority (SHA) expects to consider the outcome of this work in the new year. The process of informing local stakeholders, including hon. Members, falls within the remit of the SHA.

Child Protection

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) designated doctors and (b) designated nurses for the protection of children from abuse and neglect are employed by primary care trusts in England. [26897]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Creatine

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how long the Food Standards Agency was given to respond to the European Commission's recent proposal to amend the Annexes of Directive 2001/15/EC in relation to creatine; what steps she has taken to satisfy herself that the Commission's consultation processes were (a) in accordance with best practice and (b) involved all key industry stakeholders; when she expects the relevant Council Standing Committee to consider the proposal in question; what her objectives are for this proposal; and if she will make a statement. [34619]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 5 December 2005]: The European Commission informed the United Kingdom and all other EC member states in late October that an amendment to the Directive would be discussed and possibly voted upon at the beginning of December. As a result of the Food Standards Agency (FSA) consulting stakeholders about the proposal, an unintended issue over the status of creatine was brought to its attention. The FSA consequently contacted the Commission and a vote on this aspect has been postponed. The FSA has pointed out to the Commission that its own consultation procedures did not appear to have reached the sector concerned in this case and that these should therefore be reviewed.

Interested parties in this country will be informed and consulted on any revised proposal concerning creatine.

Criminal Records Bureau Checks

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the impact on health professionals decisions on whether to work as locums rather than permanent trust staff of the time taken to process enhanced Criminal Records Bureau checks; and if she will make a statement. [25925]

Mr. Byrne: We are not aware of any impact of Criminal Record Bureau checks on decisions of health professionals to work as locums or permanent staff.

Cystic Fibrosis

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will take steps to reduce prescription charges for young cystic fibrosis sufferers who want to take up employment. [32981]

Jane Kennedy: We have no plans to extend the existing list of medical conditions that give exemption from prescription charges. The list has been reviewed on a number of occasions but no clear-cut case for extending it has emerged. There is no consensus on what additional conditions might be included in any revised list of medical exemptions, or how distinctions could be drawn between one condition and another.

The extensive exemption and change remission arrangements mean that 87 per cent. of prescriptions are dispensed free-of-charge. As a result, many people with medical conditions not on the exempt list already get free prescriptions on other grounds. Anyone in work may claim help through the NHS low income scheme.

Departmental Staff

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many staff were employed in communications roles in her Department on 1 October (a) 2003, (b) 2004 and (c) 2005; and if she will make a statement. [32632]

Jane Kennedy: The Department routinely carries out an audit at the end of each financial year on the numbers of communications staff employed by the Communications Directorate, the result of which (in relation to "Press Officers") is placed in the Library. For each of the periods requested the numbers are as follows:

	Press officers	Other communication staff
2002–03	24	110
2003–04	26	102
2004–05	30	98

The Special Advisers Code of conduct sets out the sort of work a special adviser may undertake on behalf of their Minister. This includes communications activity. This activity has not been identified within the above figures.

The Department does not hold any figures for the numbers of staff on the actual dates quoted, as its audit is scheduled around the end of the financial year.

These figures are for the Department's Communications Directorate only.

Departmental Consultation

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will list the consultation exercises undertaken by her Department in the last two years, indicating (a) how many consultation responses were received, (b) how many stakeholders were engaged in the consultation, (c) what the total cost of each consultation exercise was and (d) what the cost per participant of the consultation was; [26382]

(2) how many stakeholders have been engaged in the Government's Your Health, Your Care, Your Say consultation exercise; and if she will make a statement. [26385]

Mr. Byrne: A total of 254 people attended the four regional events in Gateshead, Leicester, London and Plymouth and 998 people attended the citizen's summit in Birmingham on 29 October.

When the consultation closed on 4 November, 147 feedback forms had been received from local deliberative consultation events. In addition, over 18,000 on-line questionnaires have been completed and approximately 15,500 hard copies of the questionnaire have been returned. Over 60 letters have also been received from interested stakeholders in response to the consultation.

Representatives from over 60 statutory and non-statutory bodies were involved in five policy taskforces. A series of five academic seminars were also held, involving over 40 individuals from a variety of organisations. In addition, Ministers and officials met representatives of a wide range of stakeholder organisations at specially arranged and routine meetings to inform them about the exercise and to hear their views.

Around 750 organisations were contacted and invited to register with a website which enabled interested stakeholders to keep up to date with the consultation, access key documents for holding consultation events and enable an exchange of views and ideas with other organisers of local events. Contact was maintained through a regular newsletter.

Representatives from around 150 organisations attended a workshop on 19 July to discuss the best ways of involving stakeholders in the consultation and the resources required to make it a success. Around a further 120 organisations attended a briefing event about the consultation process and the website on 8 September.

A number of stakeholder organisations have put information about the consultation on their websites and some have put links through to the "Your Health, Your Care, Your Say" questionnaire.

Departmental Website

Stephen Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many complaints regarding the operation of her Department's website were received in 2004–05; and how many of these were responded to within (a) one working day, (b) five working days and (c) longer than five working days. [31493]

Jane Kennedy: The Department's central web team manages all inquiries relating to the operation of the Department's website. All such inquiries are logged and responded to within five working days. Complaints are not logged or dealt with separately from general inquiries.

Prior to July 2004, website-related inquiries were not collated by topic. Therefore, we are only able to provide total numbers of inquiries dealt with per month from April to June 2004. From July 2004, website-related inquiries have been broken down into categories as shown in the table.

Doctors

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the current rate is of under-employment among trained doctors. [27954]

Mr. Byrne: Information on the current rate of under-employment among trained doctors is not held centrally.

Flu Vaccines

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps have been taken in co-operation with industry to increase the capacity available to produce vaccine to counter a pandemic of a human variant of avian influenza. [34994]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 6 December 2005]: We are meeting with the manufacturers of ordinary flu vaccine to explore how we can work with industry to develop pandemic flu vaccines as quickly as possible after the virus is isolated. We are actively exploring a range of preparatory steps with manufacturers in order to improve the prospects of early delivery of pandemic influenza vaccines.

We are working with the National Institute for Biological Standards and Control (NIBSC) and others to see how to rationalise the testing process, which ensures that a safe vaccine is produced. We are working with NIBSC to develop a library of reference strains, which may help accelerate the vaccine development process.

FSA (Salt Campaign)

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the total cost is of the Food Standard Agency's television campaign on salt; and if she will make a statement. [33197]

Caroline Flint: The Food Standards Agency committed £3.6 million to a seven and a half week advertising campaign, which ran between 10 October to 30 November.

General Medical Services Contract

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to amend the time at which the out-of-hours period (a) begins and (b) ends in the General Medical Services contract. [32331]

Mr. Byrne: One of the major themes coming out of the 'Your Health, Your Care, Your Say' public consultation is that people would prefer general practices to offer extended opening hours. The Department will be working with general practitioners, nurses, practice managers and stakeholder groups like the British Medical Association on how best to achieve this and proposals will be set out in the forthcoming White Paper on improving community health and care.

Hammersmith Hospitals NHS Trust

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent discussions she has had with relevant NHS organisations on the future configuration of hospital services in the Hammersmith hospitals NHS Trust. [31886]

Jane Kennedy: The Secretary of State for Health has had no discussions recently with any relevant national health service organisation on the future configuration of hospital services in the Hammersmith hospitals NHS trust.

Health and Social Care

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the operation of sections (a) 113 and (b) 114 of the Health and Social Care (Community Health and Standards) Act 2003. [28198]

Jane Kennedy: The Health and Social Care (Community Health and Standards) Act 2003 made provision for changes to the national health service and the social services complaints procedures.

The Department is reviewing the operation of both complaints procedures. Any changes will be aimed at improving the patient experience and the service provided by making the systems simpler, faster and more closely integrated. It is important also for both systems to focus on improvement in service delivery by learning from mistakes.

We recognise that strong links are needed across health and social care and we have already announced the merger of the Commission for Social Care Inspection and the Healthcare Commission. This is a key initiative in the drive towards a system which aims to deliver patient and user centred services.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how much has been allocated by each strategic health authority to fund the secondment of health care assistants who wish to train as nurses in each year since the scheme began; [22139]

(2) how many health care assistants have been seconded to train as nurses by each NHS Trust in each year since the scheme began; [22140]

(3) what information is collected by her Department on the number of health care assistants who have requested secondments for nursing training and had that request refused; [22141]

(4) what recent discussions she has had on the current scheme for the secondment of health care assistants to nurse training; and if she will make a statement. [22142]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 27 October 2005]: The secondment scheme for health care assistants (HCAs) began in 1998–99. Up to 2003–04, the money for this scheme was routed through the former regional health authorities and regional offices who took local decisions on how much and which education consortia received funding. Therefore, we are only able to provide figures for the number of HCAs seconded in 2003–04, 2004–05 and expenditure for 2003–04, 2004–05 and 2005–06. This is shown in the table.

[1] Planned.

Officials keep the scheme under regular review and I am satisfied that it has provided significant help in supporting HCAs who wish to become nurses. Indeed, the number of HCAs participating has exceeded our expectations.

In 1998–99, £50 million was allocated to widening access initiatives and the majority was spent on HCA secondments. In 2003–04, the student nurse population was around 63,000 and of these over 6,900 were HCAs. In 2004–05, £164 million was allocated to strategic health authority workforce directorates to fund tuition fees and salary support for HCA's pre-registration training for an increased HCA population of over 9,400 (18 percent. of the population). In 2005–06, the planned spend is around £185 million and the number of HCAs entering pre-registration nurse training is expected to rise to over 13,500 (18 percent. of the student population).

We do not hold centrally the number of applications accepted or rejected by national health service trusts nor the number of NHS trusts who do not offer secondments. The number of HCAs seconded to train as nurses is a matter for local decision and it is for individual employers to decide their policy on offering such secondments.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health addressed the Healthcare Assistants' Conference in July 2005 where she praised the outstanding care that healthcare assistants deliver on a daily basis. She made a commitment to continue to invest and reform the training and development opportunities for all in the NHS.

Health Services (North Yorkshire)

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on structural changes to health services in North Yorkshire. [30651]

Mr. Byrne: Strategic health authorities (SHAs) have recently submitted their proposals for the reconfiguration of primary care trusts (PCTs), which set out how they intend to strengthen their commissioning function. These proposals have been assessed by an independent external panel drawn from and representing a wide range of stakeholder interests, to determine whether the SHA proposals meet the criteria stipulated in "Commissioning a Patient-Led NHS", (July 2005). Where the criteria are judged to have been met the proposals will go forward to a three-month public consultation. No decisions on the reorganisation of PCTs will be taken until this process has been completed.

HIV

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the number of individuals staying in the UK illegally in each year since 1997–98 who were eligible for continuing care for HIV because they had stayed in the UK for longer than 12 months until the NHS (Charges to Overseas Visitors) Regulations were amended. [32075]

Jane Kennedy: Successive Governments have not required the national health service to provide statistics on the number or nationality of overseas visitors treated under the provisions of the NHS (Charges to Overseas Visitors) Regulations 1989, as amended, or on the costs of treatment.

Home Office estimates of the amount of people in the United Kingdom (UK) illegally do not separately identify those who have stayed in the UK for 12 months or more and there is no evidence on which an estimate on the proportion of such people who are HIV positive could be based.

It is therefore not possible to provide the information requested.

Hospital Admissions

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) pursuant to her answer of 17 October 2005, Official Report, columns 761–62W, concerning admissions, if she will break down the information by (a) region, (b) strategic health authority and (c) NHS trust; [20726]

(2) pursuant to the answer of 17 October 2005, Official Report, column 762W, on emergency re-admissions, if she will provide equivalent figures for (a) quarter 4 of 2004–05, (b) quarter 1 of 2005–06 and (c) each quarter since January 2001, broken down by NHS trust. [29552]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, similar information on annual trends in readmission rates, by age group, broken down by Government regional office and by strategic health authority is available at www.nchod.nhs.uk.

Hospitals (Catering/Parking)

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidelines she has given to hospitals about the provision of parking spaces for (a) staff and (b) visitors; and if she will make a statement. [32545]

Jane Kennedy: In 1996, NHS Estates, an Executive agency of the Department, published "Car Parking, Health Facilities Note 21", which provided advice and guidance on issues surrounding the optimum provision of car parking facilities for health care premises. This has been placed in the Library.

The Department is currently finalising a new guidance document, "Transport Management and Car Parking: best practice guidance for NHS Trusts in England", which looks at what measures trusts can adopt when developing travel plans. In addition, it can be used to facilitate discussions with local planning authorities.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the Steamplicity catering pilot at the Charing Cross hospital. [33133]

Jane Kennedy: No assessment of the Steamplicity catering pilot at Charing Cross hospital has been made by the Department of Health. The pilot scheme is being undertaken via the hospital's external contract provider of facilities services and a cost-benefit assessment is due to be published by them in the near future.

Hull and East Yorkshire Hospitals Trust

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many agency staff were employed by the Hull and East Yorkshire Hospitals Trust in each of the last three years, broken down by type of job; and what the cost was in each year. [32950]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not available in the format requested. The following table shows the number of bank and locum staff employed within the Hull and East Yorkshire Hospitals National Health Service Trust in the last three years.

Hull Royal Infirmary

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the (a) average and (b) longest wait for urgent breast cancer referrals at the Hull Royal Infirmary was in the latest period for which figures are available. [32952]

Mr. Byrne: Information is not available in the format requested. In the period April to June 2005 100 per cent. of urgent breast cancer referrals to Hull and East Yorkshire Hospitals National Health Service Trust were seen within two weeks of the referral by the general practitioner.

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many complaints were made against the Hull Royal Infirmary in each year since 1997; and how many related to (a) clinical negligence, (b) waiting times, (c) tidiness/repair of hospital facilities, (d) staff and (e) other matters. [32954]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not available in the format requested. Complaints statistics for 2002–03 and 2003–04 are available at trust level and can be accessed through the Department's website at: www.performance.doh.gov.uk/hospitalactivity/data_requests/nhs_complaints.htm.

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients have (a) contracted and (b) died from hospital acquired infections at the Hull Royal Infirmary in each year since figures have been available. [32956]

Mr. Byrne: The information is not available in the format requested. The table shows the number of methicillin resistant Staphylococcus aureus (MRSA) bacteraemia reports from April 2001 to March 2005[1] for the Hull and East Yorkshire Hospitals National Health Service Trust.

Data for years prior to 2001 on the trust's MRSA bacteraemia rates (by number of reports and rate per 1,000 bed days) are available on the Department's website at:

www.dh.gov.uk/PublicationsAndStatistics.

It is not possible to give reliable figures on the number of deaths involving hospital-acquired infections at the Hull and East Yorkshire Hospital NHS Trust from routinely collected mortality data. This is because, as elsewhere, information on where the infection was acquired may not be available to the doctor certifying the death.

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many private patients have been treated at Hull Royal Infirmary in each year since 1997. [32961]

Mr. Byrne: The information for the Hull and East Yorkshire Hospitals National Health Service Trust and its preceding organisations is shown in the table.

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the target patient transport times are at the Hull Royal Infirmary in relation to children's intensive care; and whether the target was met in the last period for which figures are available. [32970]

Mr. Byrne: The Hull and East Yorkshire Hospitals National Health Service Trust is part of the regional paediatric intensive care unit (PICU) based at Leeds. The Hull Royal Infirmary has two intensive care unit (ICU) beds for children and therefore does not transfer children to the regional unit at Leeds. As such, there is no target patient transfer time for this group of patients.
